The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Acting Attorney-General, submitting a list of the attorneys employed by the Government in the case of the United States against the Bell Telephone Company; which was referred to the Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Justice, and ordered to be printed.

PAY OF ASSISTANT UNITED STATES DISTRICT ATTORNEYS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Attorney-General, with inclosures, in relation to the estimates for compensation of assistant United States district attorneys; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

COMMITTEE ON LABOR.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. I submitted yesterday a resolution and moved its reference to the Committee on Labor, and I understood, at the time, the resolution was so referred. I subsequently learned, however, on reading the resolution the Speaker referred it to a different committee. If I had been aware of the intention to refer it to any other committee I would have taken the sense of the House and asked that it be referred to the Committee on Labor, my object being, as that committee will be reached in the next three or four days, to give the House an opportunity of having, during the coming month of March, some day or days designated for the consideration of the business coming from that committee. I now ask the privilege to make the motion referring the resolution to the Committee on Labor.

The SPEAKER. When the resolution was sent up by the gentleman from Missouri yesterday, the Chair announced that it went to the Committee on Labor. Immediately afterwards, on looking at the resolution, the Chair discovered it was a resolution which in reference to other committees had been sent to the Committee on Rules, and therefore it was so referred. No advantage should be taken of the gentleman, and the Chair hopes the House will allow him now to submit the motion for reference to the Committee on Labor.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. I make that motion.

The motion was agreed to, and the resolution was referred to the Committee on Labor.

STATISTICAL ABSTRACT.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I am directed by the Committee on Printing to submit the following privileged report.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the House concurrent resolution to print 15,000 additional copies of Statistical Abstract for 1887, direct me to return the same with the recommendation that it do pass.

Estimated cost for printing, $1,283.65. The approximate cost of the amount of printing previously estimated upon for Congress within the present fiscal year is $737,407.90.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed 15,000 additional copies of the Statistical Abstract of the United States for the year 1887, of which 5,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate and 10,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I demand the previous question on the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. OATES. Of what value are these documents?

Mr. RICHARDSON. They are a compilation or abstract of the statistics scattered through the documents of the various Departments. It is a volume of easy reference, and contains most valuable information for the use of the officers of the Government. Instead of having this information scattered through many volumes, it is embraced in one volume. We only order the usual number of copies during preceding years. I demand the previous question.

The previous question was ordered, and under the operation thereof the resolution was adopted.

Mr. RICHARDSON moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

CATTLE AND DAIRY FARMING.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I have a resolution here which is not a question of privilege, but I will ask for its consideration at this time.

The SPEAKER. The regular order has been called for by several gentlemen.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I have been requested by so many members on both sides of the House to report this resolution back, I will do it at this time, and take the sense of the House on the subject.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES, February 6, 1888.

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed 7,000 additional copies of Executive Document 51, first session Forty-ninth Congress, on the subject of cattle and dairy farming; 2,000 copies for the use of the Senate, 4,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 1,000 copies for the Department of State.

Attest:

ANSON G. McCOOK, Secretary.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Permit me to make a statement for one moment. This resolution which has been passed by the Senate provides for the printing of 7,000 copies of this document. Resolutions have been introduced by members on each side of the House directing a larger number of copies to be printed, but the cost is so great the Committee on Printing do not feel authorized to recommend more than 7,000 copies to be printed. The cost is $2.60 a copy, and for 7,000 copies it would be an expense of some $17,000 or $18,000. We were not willing to go beyond that, and therefore the resolution of the Senate is before the House simply with the recommendation that it be concurred in.

Mr. HATCH. I would like to have a minute, with the consent of the House.

The SPEAKER. The first question is, Will the House consent now to consider the resolution?

Mr. BLOUNT. I would like to know before giving consent if this is likely to produce any debate.

Mr. HATCH. I only want a minute.

Mr. BLOUNT. I have no objection to that.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

Mr. BLOUNT. I do not want to object to the gentleman from Missouri having a minute if he needs it; but I want to reserve the right to object if this is to lead to prolonged debate and delay the consideration of the deficiency bill.

Mr. HATCH. I want to say to the House, and emphasize what I have no doubt every member or nearly every member will indorse, that this is the most valuable publication that has ever been made by the Government of the United States within the last twenty years.

Mr. MORGAN. And there is more demand for it.

Mr. HATCH. There is more demand from every agricultural district of this Union for this book than for all the other Government publications combined which can be obtained from the folding-room. It is the most important work to the farmers of the country that has been published in the last quarter of a century; and instead of 7,000 copies I want the privilege of moving to amend this resolution by making it 25,000.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. That is right.

Mr. O'FERRALL. I had in view a similar amendment. I have a hundred letters at least on my desk now asking for a copy of this book, and I hope the gentleman will make his amendment 50,000. I would rather see that amount published than a less number.

A MEMBER. What is this work?

Mr. HATCH. It is the concentrated information from every cattle-producing district in the world. It is the best work upon cattle and cattle-breeding that has ever been published in the English language, and it should be in every township and neighborhood in the United States. The mere cost of two dollars and fifty or sixty cents a volume is simply insignificant in proportion to the great value of the work.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. BLOUNT. I hope the House will take the responsibility of this increased expenditure and not charge it to the Public Printer.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will again ask if there is objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

There was no objection.

Mr. HATCH. I now offer the amendment I send to the desk.

Mr. TAULBEE. I wish also to offer an amendment.

Mr. MARTIN. This is the best book ever published by this Government or by any other in the world. It ought to be in the hands of every farmer and every dairyman in this country. All persons interested in cattle-breeding and the products of the farm should be furnished with a copy. I hope the number of copies will be increased.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment of the gentleman from Missouri.

The Clerk read as follows:

It is proposed in the second line to strike out "seven" and insert "twenty-five," making it read, "twenty-five thousand additional copies."

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. What proportion will be for the House and what for the Senate?

Mr. HATCH. I was going to move to strike out "two thousand" for the Senate and insert "six thousand," and strike out "four thousand" for the House and insert "eighteen thousand."

Mr. RICHARDSON. It is the custom to provide only double the number for the House as for the Senate, and I think the Senate will not consent to any other division.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Then let any difference be settled in conference.

Mr. HATCH. I have no objection to making it 25,000 copies and dividing it upon the same basis as now provided in the resolution.

Mr. FARQUHAR. That is right.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I wish to submit an amendment to the amendment of the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. TAULBEE. I want to send up, to be pending when it is in order, an amendment also.

The SPEAKER. There is an amendment now pending.

Mr. TAULBEE. This is an independent amendment.

The SPEAKER. The Chair can decide at once, then, that it is not now in order.

Mr. TAULBEE. I simply wanted it left with the Clerk to be pending.

The SPEAKER. It will not be pending until offered in the House. The Chair will recognize the gentleman to offer it at the proper time.

Mr. HATCH. I have reduced my amendment to writing.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out in the second line of the resolution the word "seven" and insert "twenty-five."
Strike out "two thousand" in the fifth line and insert "eight thousand."
Strike out "four thousand" in the same line and insert "sixteen thousand."

So that it will read:

That there be printed 25,000 additional copies of Executive Document No. 51, first session Forty-ninth Congress, on the subject of cattle and dairy farming; 8,000 copies for the use of the Senate, 16,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 1,000 copies for the Department of State.

Mr. WILKINS and others. That is right.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I offer an amendment to the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

And that there be hereby appropriated out of the Treasury the sum of $62,500, or so much thereof as may be necessary, out of any money not otherwise appropriated, to pay for the same.

Mr. BUCHANAN. That is right.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I desire to say that this is a publication for which there have been more calls upon the Committee on Printing of this House, and I believe upon individual members of the House, than perhaps any other document heretofore printed by Congress.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Tennessee that this is not a joint resolution in which money can be appropriated out of the Treasury, but is a concurrent resolution, which does not go to the President for his signature, and does not become a law.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Then I will move to amend the concurrent resolution so as to make it a joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. There is an amendment now pending, and until that is disposed of the proposition of the gentleman from Tennessee is not in order.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I will ask unanimous consent that the resolution be changed to a joint resolution.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HATCH].

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. I desire to make a suggestion to the gentleman from Missouri. Every gentleman who has been favored with a copy of this most excellent book knows that in the form in which it is now published it is most unwieldy. I suggest that the resolution should provide that it be published in two volumes.

Mr. HATCH. I understood from the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. RICHARDSON] that if the book should be republished it would be divided into two volumes. It certainly ought to be. I agree with the gentleman from Indiana that in its present form it is unwieldy and too large to be conveniently handled. The change would not materially increase the cost.

Mr. MCMILLIN. It will cost more in two volumes than it will in one, and that additional cost should be provided for.

Mr. RICHARDSON. If the House will indulge me for a moment, I will state that the estimated cost of this book, as I have already stated, is about $2.45 or $2.50 per copy, if bound in one volume. If bound in two volumes the aggregate cost will be $2,000 or $2,500 more than if bound in one volume. I think the $62,500 provided in my amendment will cover the cost of the book whether bound in one volume or bound in two.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HATCH].

Mr. RICHARDSON. Is not the question first on my amendment?

The SPEAKER. It is not. The amendment of the gentleman from Tennessee is not an amendment to the amendment.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I do not object to the amendment of the gentleman from Missouri; but I do not think it should be agreed to unless the House shall first appropriate the money necessary or signify its willingness to do so instead of taking the cost of this book out of the amount annually appropriated for printing.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. There will be no trouble about that.

The amendment offered by Mr. HATCH was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. RICHARDSON] will now be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add to the joint resolution the following:
"And that there is hereby appropriated out of the Treasury the sum of $62,500, or so much thereof as may be necessary, out of any money not otherwise appropriated, to pay for the same."

Mr. HATCH. Does the gentleman from Tennessee say that it will require $2,500 more if the book is bound in two volumes?

Mr. RICHARDSON. No, sir. I think the amount named in my amendment will cover the whole cost.

The amendment offered by Mr. RICHARDSON was agreed to

Mr. TAULBEE. I desire to have my amendment read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add to the resolution the following:
"Provided, The apportionment among the members of the House of Representatives shall be made with regard to former distribution."

Mr. FELTON. I would like to know what that means.

Mr. TAULBEE. That simply means this, that if in the former distribution of this same report some members of this House have had more than was due to them other members have had less. This amendment to the resolution provides that the deficit shall be made up out of the volumes to be distributed.

Mr. CUTCHEON. Will the gentleman please explain what he refers to?

Mr. TAULBEE. Some time heretofore, perhaps two weeks ago or more, I introduced a resolution into this House calling for an investigation of this same matter and had it referred to the Committee on Printing. What disposition has been made of the resolution I presume the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. RICHARDSON] will be able to state. That books have been put to the credit of members which they have been unable to procure is a fact which I know and which is demonstrated by the letter from the Doorkeeper of the House of Representatives which I had referred to the Committee on Printing.

Mr. MORGAN. That has no business in this resolution.

Mr. TAULBEE. It has business in this resolution. This is one of the most valuable books to be printed under resolution of Congress, and it is one in which my constituents feel an interest as well as the constituents of every other member on this floor. I do not think any member can object to my amendment. If such discriminations have not been made, this amendment is certainly void. If such discriminations have been made, gentlemen must certainly see the fairness of this proposition.

Mr. HATCH. Is not the gentleman from Kentucky falling into an error? This book was distributed to members of the Forty-ninth Congress. The members of the Fiftieth Congress have not received from the State Department any copies at all. This resolution provides that they shall be distributed to members of the Fiftieth Congress.

Mr. BLAND. Will the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE] yield to me for a moment?

Mr. TAULBEE. Certainly.

Mr. BLAND. It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that this amendment would place the Doorkeeper of the House in a very embarrassing position, if it required him to ascertain what members have heretofore had books in excess of their quota and what members have not had their share. Certainly the Doorkeeper of the House has no right to investigate the administration of former Doorkeepers, and I think this amendment would impose upon him a very onerous and disagreeable duty.

Mr. TAULBEE. Mr. Speaker, I think this matter is perfectly clear to any one who understands the fact that in the distribution of these books the records of the Doorkeeper's office show who has received them and how they have been distributed. With reference to the objection urged by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HATCH] to my amendment——

Mr. ENLOE. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE] has the floor.

Mr. TAULBEE. I will yield to the gentleman if he desires to make a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. ENLOE. I desire to ask, Mr. Speaker, whether the gentleman's amendment is germane to the resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it is. It relates to the distribution of these documents the printing of which is provided for in the resolution. The resolution itself provides for distribution and the amendment proposes to change the method of distribution. That is all.

A MEMBER. I call for the regular order.

The SPEAKER. This is the regular order. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE] will proceed.

Mr. TAULBEE. Mr. Speaker, if I understand the objection of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HATCH] to this amendment, it consists in this, that whatever inequalities may have existed heretofore in the distribution of books relates to a former Congress and not to this. I understand that the distribution of books under the resolution of this House relates not so much to the members of the House as to the constituents they represent.

Mr. MACDONALD. I want to say to the gentleman that we do not understand his remarks from the fact that we did not hear his amendment read.

Mr. TAULBEE. Then, Mr. Speaker, for the benefit of the gentlemen who did not hear it, I will ask the Clerk to read my amendment again in my time.

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided, That apportionment among the members of the House of Representatives shall be made with regard to former distribution.

Mr. MILLIKEN. Will the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE] permit a question?

Mr. TAULBEE. Yes, sir; I will yield for a question.

Mr. MILLIKEN. I would like to have the gentleman state a little more explicitly to what he refers. I desire to vote intelligently upon this resolution if I vote at all, and I am seeking information. I do not know how much of a deficit there has been in these books. If the House has 16,000 books or documents, and they are to be distributed equally among the members, I know pretty nearly what share I am going to get; but if a portion of them are to be taken out to make up for some prior deficit, then I do not know how much I am going to get until I know how large the deficit is. There was similar trouble in regard to the book on fish and fisheries. Some members found that they did not have half their quota, and the excuse given was that upon a recount it was found that the first apportionment allowed too many books to each member. If the gentleman is correct in what he says about the distribution of books, I think it is high time there was an investigation, so that the House may know what is being done in such cases and whether there is a fair distribution or not. If the gentleman will state the facts that he refers to, I shall be exceedingly glad to hear his statement.

Mr. TAULBEE. That is a very difficult question to answer. In fact it covers so much ground that I do not know just what it relates to.

Mr. MILLIKEN. I want to know how large a deficit there has been, who the members are that have got more than their share, and who they are that have not received the books due them.

Mr. TAULBEE. I am unable to speak authoritatively with reference to this matter, from the simple fact that my efforts to ascertain the facts have proved fruitless, by reason, I suppose, of the inaction of the Committee on Printing. From what outside knowledge I have of the inequality of the distribution of books, it has arisen from the miscalculations of those who have made the apportionment among members. I have made a somewhat thorough personal investigation of the matter, and I am unable to conclude that there has been any gross fault on the part of any of the officers whose duty it is to make the distribution. My amendment simply provides that my constituents shall be entitled to as many books in the aggregate as the constituents of any other member, and that the constituents of a new member of the Fiftieth Congress shall be entitled to indemnity for whatever they may have suffered by reason of any prior misappropriation or misapportionment.

Mr. HATCH. How many books were placed to the credit of the gentleman in the folding-room?

Mr. TAULBEE. I am unable to answer from memory.

Several MEMBERS. Five.

Mr. HATCH. Five. There is no member who has received more than five—none that I have heard of.

Mr. TAULBEE. I am not so well posted with reference to these matters as I would have been had the resolution which I introduced been reported to the House by those charged with its consideration. I am unwilling to anticipate such an investigation.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I ask the gentleman to yield to me a moment. He has referred several times to an investigation——

Mr. TAULBEE. Certainly I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. RICHARDSON. The gentleman has referred several times to the fact that there was referred to the Committee on Printing a resolution directing some inquiry to be made as to the reasons why members could not obtain certain books placed to their credit in the Doorkeeper's room.

Mr. TAULBEE. If the gentleman will allow me, I will explain to him that the conclusion to which he is drifting is incorrect. I was going to state that a subsequent resolution——

Mr. RICHARDSON. I think I can obviate the speech the gentleman is going to deliver. [Laughter.]

Mr. HATCH. I rise to a point of order. I desire that the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE] shall have time enough to explain his amendment, but I make the point of order that he is speaking to an amendment after the main resolution has already been disposed of. And I submit the gentleman is entitled to only five minutes under the rule.

Mr. TAULBEE. I would like a word under that point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky, under the rules, is entitled to the floor for one hour. [Laughter.]

Mr. TAULBEE. I have no purpose to occupy the floor for one hour, but only long enough to say with reference to the resolution which I introduced that I have had an understanding that this investigation merged into a broader investigation which is to be carried on by a special Committee on Printing.

Mr. RICHARDSON. It does not touch that at all.

Mr. TAULBEE. Then, Mr. Speaker, I say that prior to this time the House was entitled to a report from the committee having that resolution under consideration, a report which would have given us a better opportunity to understand the evils intended to be remedied by my amendment.

With reference to the point raised by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HATCH] that my amendment is not to be regarded as a part of this resolution, I am unable to see how one amendment can be so regarded and not another.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has decided that question.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. I would like to ask the gentleman from Kentucky a question.

Mr. TAULBEE. Certainly, I am willing to yield to the gentleman for that purpose; but I am ready to surrender the floor so soon as I have answered questions which gentlemen may desire to ask. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. I ask the gentleman to state explicitly how many of these documents each member is entitled to; and I put this question for the reason that the document is a very important one and very greatly sought for in all parts of the country—in the cities as well as in the country districts. I want it explicitly stated how many volumes each member is entitled to receive, so that the people may know we have very few copies to distribute. And I wish to make a remark here—not exactly upon this subject——

Mr. TAULBEE. Then I object, if it is not on this subject. I do not yield any further.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. It does relate to this general question.

Mr. TAULBEE. Answering as briefly as I can the question asked by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. O'NEILL], I will say that his question involves a simple arithmetical calculation in long division, and he has as much time to make the calculation as I have.

Mr. HATCH. Now I ask the gentleman from Kentucky to yield to me.

Mr. TAULBEE. For a question?

Mr. HATCH. No. I ask the gentleman to yield me the floor.

Mr. TAULBEE. I want a vote. But first I will yield for a question to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. MCMILLIN].

Mr. MCMILLIN. I wish to say to the gentleman from Kentucky that his amendment, being in these words, "Provided, The apportionment among the members of the House of Representatives shall be made with regard to former distributions," leaves the matter so uncertain that the officer charged with the duty of distributing these documents or placing them to the credit of members would be unable to correct the evil of which the gentleman complains.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. That is true.

Mr. TAULBEE. The amendment may be liable to some objection in that respect; but I shall not oppose any modification which may be suggested for the purpose of rendering my proposition more definite.

Mr. HATCH. I hope the gentleman from Kentucky will now demand the previous question.

Mr. TAULBEE. I demand the previous question.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Having submitted this report, I would like to offer an amendment, and I think, according to custom, the right to call the previous question would belong to me. I ask the gentleman from Kentucky to withdraw his demand for the previous question.

Mr. TAULBEE. I do so, and yield to the gentleman fron Tennessee [Mr. RICHARDSON].

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, the House seems to desire that this document shall be published in two volumes. The resolution has not so provided. I will therefore move the previous question upon the pending amendment and upon agreeing to the resolution, first yielding to the gentleman from Tennessee, who has an amendment to print the document in two volumes.

Mr. TAULBEE. I make the point of order that the proposed amendment is not in order.

The SPEAKER. No new amendment is in order until the pending amendment has been disposed of.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. We can dispose of that quickly enough. [Cries of "Vote!" Vote!"]

The question recurred on Mr. TAULBEE'S amendment, and it was disagreed to.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add to the resolution the following words:
"Said work shall be bound in two volumes."

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. RICHARDSON moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. There being no objection, the title of the resolution will be amended to conform to the amendments made to the body of the joint resolution, and it will be changed from a concurrent resolution to a joint resolution.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

BRIDGE ACROSS ROCK CREEK.

The SPEAKER. The regular order of business is the consideration of the bill (H. R. 1184) to authorize the construction of a bridge across Rock Creek at the Woodley Lane road, in the District of Columbia, which comes over as the unfinished business from yesterday. The pending question is on the passage of the bill, upon which the previous question has been ordered. At the adjournment the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HENDERSON] had asked for the reading of the engrossed bill, which will now be read.

The Clerk proceeded to read the engrossed bill.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. I withdraw the demand for the reading of the bill.

The bill was passed.

Mr. HEMPHILL moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

FICTITIOUS TRANSACTIONS IN PRODUCE.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. Speaker, yesterday I introduced a bill (H. R. 7051) to prohibit fictitious and gambling transactions on the price of articles produced by American farm industry, and asked it be referred to the Committee on Agriculture. I understood at the time the Chair ordered its reference to that committee.

The SPEAKER. No, the Chair referred it to the Committee on the Judiciary. It changes the criminal law of the United States. It creates new crimes and provides for their punishment.

Mr. HATCH. The subject-matter embraced in the bill related to farm products alone.

The SPEAKER. It does not relate to agriculture. It changes the criminal law of the United States. It creates new crimes and provides for their punishment.

Mr. HATCH. I did not hear the Chair, but was under the impression that the bill had been referred to the Committee on Agriculture.

The SPEAKER. The Chair sent it to the Committee on the Judiciary. By reference to the rules it will be seen that the Committee on the Judiciary has charge of all proposed legislation relating to judicial proceedings and civil and criminal law.

Mr. HATCH. I move to change the reference of the bill, and move its reference to the Committee on Agriculture.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Is that a privileged motion?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman claims there has been an erroneous reference without the action of the House, and under the circumstances the Chair thinks the question should be submitted.

Mr. HATCH. I would have submitted it yesterday if I had understood at the time the reference had been changed to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. We do not know what it is. Let the bill be read.

The title of the bill was again read.

Mr. OATES. Let the bill be read.

The SPEAKER. The bill has passed from the possession of the clerks of the House.

Mr. HATCH. The bill is in the hands of the printers.

The SPEAKER. The consideration of the bill will be passed over for the present.

ADDITIONAL MESSENGERS.

Mr. COX, by unanimous consent, submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Accounts:

Resolved, That the Doorkeeper of the House be authorized to appoint one additional messenger, at a salary of $75 a month, during the remainder of this session, and one night watchman, at a salary of $60 per month, during the remainder of this session, both of whom shall be assigned to duty with the committees of the House of Representatives located in the Butler building, and both of whom shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BURNES. I move to dispense with the morning hour for to-day.

Mr. LANHAM. I object, and demand the regular order of business.

Mr. BURNES. If gentlemen have more important business than the consideration of an appropriation bill I will yield.

The SPEAKER. The regular order of business is the call of committees for reports.

PURCHASE OF UNITED STATES BONDS.

Mr. MILLS, from the Committee on Ways and Means, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 5034) for the purchase of United States bonds by the Secretary of the Treasury; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

AMENDMENT TO CONSTITUTION.

Mr. COLLINS, from the Committee on the Judiciary (by Mr. ROGERS), reported back favorably joint resolution S. R. 13, proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JURISDICTION OF UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURTS.

Mr. GLOVER, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported as a substitute for the bill (H. R. 1600) to determine the jurisdiction of circuit courts of the United States, a bill (H. R. 7216) of the same title; which was read a first and second time, referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

The bill H. R. 1600 and the resolution of January 5, 1888, bearing upon the same subject, referred to the committee, were ordered to lie on the table.

IMPORTATION OF BREEDING STOCK.

Mr. CASWELL, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported back favorably the bill (S. 1564) for the relief of importers of animals for breeding purposes in certain cases; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ADVERSE REPORT.

Mr. OATES, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported back adversely the bill (H. R. 1846) for the appointment of a commission to inquire into and report to Congress what, if any, legislation is necessary to improve the administration of justice in the courts of the United States; which was ordered to lie upon the table, and the accompanying report printed.

SECTION 905, REVISED STATUTES.

Mr. OATES also, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 5666) to amend section 905 of the Revised Statutes; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

BRIDGE ON FLINT RIVER, GEORGIA.

Mr. CRISP, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 5096) authorizing the construction of a bridge over Flint River, in the State of Georgia; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

BRIDGES IN ARKANSAS.

Mr. CRISP also, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 4759) authorizing the Little Rock and Alexandria Railway Company to build certain bridges in the State of Arkansas; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House of the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

BRIDGES, ST. MARY'S AND OTHER RIVERS, GEORGIA AND FLORIDA.

Mr. CRISP also, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 3470) to authorize the construction of bridges on the rivers St. Mary's, Satella, Little Satella, and Crooked, in the States of Georgia and Florida; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

BRIDGE ON OCMULGEE RIVER, GEORGIA.

Mr. CRISP also, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 5095) authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Ocmulgee River, in the State of Georgia, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

BRIDGE ON THE COLUMBIA RIVER.

Mr. CRISP also, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 2807) authorizing the Columbia River Bridge Company to construct a bridge across the Columbia River between the State of Oregon and the Territory of Washington; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

QUARANTINE STATION, SHIP ISLAND.

Mr. DUNHAM, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 1588) to authorize the removal of the quarantine station from Ship Island, Mississippi; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

BRIDGES ON RED RIVER.

Mr. DUNHAM also, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 2528) to authorize the construction of a railroad bridge across the Red River of the North by the North Dakota and Pacific Railway Company; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

Mr. DUNHAM also, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 2527) authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Red River of the North by the Duluth, Rainy Lake River and Southwestern Railway Company; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

BRIDGE ON MISSOURI RIVER, CLINTON, IOWA.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Iowa, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 6610) to authorize the construction of a railroad, wagon, and foot-passenger bridge across the Missouri River at or near Clinton, Iowa; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

CREW OF AMERICAN BARK CASHMERE.

Mr. MORROW, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, reported back favorably the joint resolution (H. Res. 95) to enable the President of the United States to extend to certain inhabitants of Japan a suitable recognition of their humane treatment of the survivors of the crew of the American bark Cashmere; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

WILLIAM G. GALLOWAY.

Mr. YODER, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 3508) for the relief of William G. Galloway, late captain, Fifteenth United States Army; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ADVERSE REPORTS.

Mr. GEAR, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back with an adverse recommendation the petition of W. H. Hardin; also, the bill (H. R. 136) for the relief of William Bassett; which were severally ordered to be laid on the table and the accompanying reports printed.

KANSAS VALLEY RAILROAD COMPANY.

Mr. LAIRD, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 1438) authorizing the Kansas Valley Railroad Company to construct and operate a railway through the Fort Riley military reservation, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

BENJAMIN R. WALLER.

Mr. LAIRD also, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 289) for the relief of Benjamin R. Waller; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOHN M'CORMICK.

Mr. LAIRD also, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 2857) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of John McCormick; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MINING DÉBRIS QUESTION.

Mr. O'FERRALL, from the Committee on Mines and Mining, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 1216) for the investigation of the mining débris question in the State of California; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the amendments and accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

SITES OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

Mr. DIBBLE, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 6153) to authorize the condemnation of land for sites of public buildings; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the amendments and accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT CHARLESTON, W. VA.

Mr. HOGG, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 3253) appropriating the sum of $52,000 for the enlargement and improvement of the United States public building at Charleston, W. Va.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT ALLENTOWN, PA.

Mr. SOWDEN, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 4357) to erect a public building at Allentown, Pa.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the amendments and accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT LANCASTER, PA.

Mr. SOWDEN also, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 1788) for the erection of a public building in Lancaster, Pa.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the amendments and accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT LOWELL, MASS.

Mr. SOWDEN also, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported, as a substitute for the bill H. R. 1546, a bill (H. R. 7217) for the erection of a public building at Lowell, Mass.; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

The bill H. R. 1546 was laid on the table.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

Mr. BANKHEAD, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 5062) for the erection of a public building at Birmingham, Ala.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the amendments and accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

GOVERNMENT OFFICES AT COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA.

Mr. NEWTON, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 1394) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase additional ground for the accommodation of Government offices in Council Bluffs, Iowa; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT DULUTH, MINN.

Mr. NEWTON also, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported, as a substitute for the bill H. R. 1583, a bill (H. R. 7218) to provide for the erection of a public building in the city of Duluth, State of Minnesota; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

The bill H. R. 1583 was laid on the table.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT NEWARK, N. J.

Mr. LEHLBACH, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported, as a substitute for the bill H. R. 1649, a bill (H. R. 7219) for the extension and repair of the public building at Newark, N. J., and for the purchase of additional land; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

The bill H. R. 1649 was laid on the table.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT CHATTANOOGA, TENN.

Mr. NEAL, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported, as a substitute for the bill H. R. 6159, a bill (H. R. 7220) to amend an act entitled "An act for the erection of a public building at Chattanooga, Tenn.," approved February 25, 1885, and the act amendatory thereof, approved February 21, 1887; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

The bill H. R. 6159 was laid on the table.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT BUFFALO, N. Y.

Mr. NEAL also, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 1678) to authorize the purchase of a site for a public building at Buffalo, N. Y.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the amendments and accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT OMAHA, NEBR.

Mr. McSHANE, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (S. 182) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon, at Omaha, Nebr.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

LICENSING CONDUCTORS.

Mr. BURNETT, from the Committee on Labor, reported back with an adverse recommendation the bill (H. R. 4289) to provide for licensing conductors on certain railroads within the United States; which was laid on the table, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

MARY J. FRANCIS.

Mr. MATSON, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 4655) granting a pension to Mary J. Francis; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ADVERSE REPORTS.

Mr. MATSON, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back adversely bills of the following titles; which were severally laid on the table, and the accompanying reports ordered to be printed:

A bill (H. R. 132) granting a pension to Hamilton R. Harper; and

A bill (H. R. 135) granting a pension to Dallas Miller.

Mr. CHIPMAN, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back adversely bills of the following titles; which were severally laid on the table, and the accompanying reports ordered to be printed:

A bill (H. R. 870) granting a pension to Isaac Kimball; and

A bill (H. R. 415) granting a pension to Henrietta Bowers.

THOMAS H. AULLS.

Mr. CHIPMAN also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 416) granting a pension to Thomas Aulls; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

G. W. BURKHART.

Mr. CHIPMAN also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 407) granting a pension to G. W. Burkhart; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOHN BISBEY.

Mr. CHIPMAN also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 2491) granting a pension to John Bisbey; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ALONZO HIGLEY.

Mr. CHIPMAN also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with an amendment the bill (H. R. 2498) granting a pension to Alonzo Higley; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

J. MILLER RAUB.

Mr. CHIPMAN also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 2514) granting a pension to J. Miller Raub; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MARY PENFIELD.

Mr. CHIPMAN also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 6071) for the relief of Mary Penfield; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

DAVID STRUNK.

Mr. CHIPMAN also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 417) granting a pension to David Strunk; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JAMES H. REEVE.

Mr. CHIPMAN also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 3898) granting an increase of pension to James H. Reeve; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

REBECCA H. CLARK.

Mr. MORRILL, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with an amendment the bill (H. R. 183) granting a pension to Rebecca H. Clark; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ADVERSE REPORTS.

Mr. MORRILL, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, also reported back adversely bills of the following titles; which were severally laid on the table, and the accompanying reports ordered to be printed:

A bill (H. R. 2266) for the relief of William Watson;

A bill (H. R. 2521) granting a pension to Morgan Johnson;

A bill (H. R. 433) granting a pension to Lydia A. Train; and

A bill (H. R. 2520) granting a pension to Jacob Niebels.

W. F. RANDOLPH.

Mr. PIDCOCK, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 5233) granting a pension to William F. Randolph; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MRS. E. B. ANDERSON.

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 754) to increase the pension of Mrs. Eliza B. Anderson; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ADVERSE REPORTS.

Mr. GALLINGER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back adversely bills of the following titles; which were severally laid on the table, and the accompanying reports ordered to be printed:

A bill (H. R. 3163) granting a pension to Clarissa Shorey;

A bill (H. R. 4890) granting arrears of pension to George Andrews;

A bill (H. R. 3909) granting a pension to George Cox;

A bill (H. R. 4733) for the relief of Phebe S. Robinson; and

A bill (H. R. 4109) granting a pension to Richard Hinch.

IDA B. LINTHICUM.

Mr. LANE, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 97) granting a pension to Ida B. Linthicum; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

BRIDGET O'RILEY.

Mr. LANE also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back adversely the bill (H. R. 3564) for the relief of Bridget O'Riley; which was laid on the table, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

JOHN GODSON.

Mr. STRUBLE, from the Committee on Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 5246) granting a pension to John Godson; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOHN D. THOMPSON.

Mr. LANHAM, from the Committee on Claims, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 2746) for the relief of John D. Thompson; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

C. B. WILSON.

Mr. LANHAM also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 5080) for the relief of C. B. Wilson; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

R. S. STANLEY.

Mr. LANHAM also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 6291) for the relief of R. S. Stanley, postmaster at Booneville, Miss.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

A. B. NORTON.

Mr. LANHAM also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 4805) for the relief of A. B. Norton; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

W. W. SCREWS.

Mr. LANHAM also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 6562) for the relief of W. W. Screws; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

LESLIE E. BROOKS.

Mr. LANHAM also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 4256) for the relief of Leslie E. Brooks; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF PORTLAND, OREGON.

Mr. TAULBEE, from the Committee on Claims, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 1761) for the relief of the First National Bank of Portland, Oregon, for money advanced the Oregon Iron Works, the contractor in building the United States revenue cutter Thomas Corwin; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

HEIRS OF SOLOMON SPITZER.

Mr. TIMOTHY J. CAMPBELL, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 2699) for the relief of the heirs of the late Solomon Spitzer; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. McCOOK, its Secretary, announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

A bill (S. 20) to provide for the construction of a public building at Portland, Oregon;

A bill (S. 416) for the relief of Mrs. Harriet H. Robinson;

A bill (S. 424) relating to lands in Colorado lately occupied by the Uncompahgre and White River Ute Indians;

A bill (S. 601) to authorize the purchase of additional ground in Newark, N. J., adjoining the custom-house and post-office building, and for the improvement of the building thereon and the erection of additions thereto; and

A bill (S. 1071) for the relief of A. B. Norton.

L. J. WORDEN.

Mr. LAIDLAW, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 2265) for the relief L. J. Worden; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying papers, ordered to be printed.

ESTATE OF WILLIAM STOTESBURY.

Mr. LAIDLAW also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 933) to open and set aside an order of the Court of Claims canceling a portion of a judgment against the United States, remitted through mistake as to the facts in regard to the same by claimant to the United States, and to refer the matter to the Court of Claims for such further action as such court shall find to be just and equitable; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

LOUIS JACOBSON.

Mr. LAIDLAW also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 1158) for the relief of Louis Jacobson; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

CHARLES H. MASON.

Mr. LAIDLAW also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 2160) for the relief of Charles H. Mason; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

NEHEMIAH OSBURN.

Mr. LAIDLAW also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 464) for the relief of Nehemiah Osburn; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

DANIEL B. WASHBURN.

Mr. KERR, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 3750) for the relief of Daniel B. Washburn; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

AMERICAN GROCER ASSOCIATION, NEW YORK.

Mr. KERR also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 5248) for the relief of the American Grocer Association of the city of New York; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

G. W. M'ADAMS.

Mr. KERR also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 4765) for the relief of G. W. McAdams; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

JOHN J. CROOKE.

Mr. KERR also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 2696) for the relief of John J. Crooke; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

ACCOUNTS OF EDWIN A. MERRITT.

Mr. KERR also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 4573) to provide for the adjustment of the accounts of Edwin A. Merritt; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

HEIRS OF JOHN R. TRENTLEN.

Mr. KERR also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 2896) for the relief of the heirs of John R. Trentlen; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

MARIAN F. HAYNIE.

Mr. McCULLOGH, from the Committee on Claims, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 67) for the relief of Marian F. Haynie; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

MRS. CARRIE E. HOPKINS.

Mr. McCULLOGH also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 3907) for the relief of Mrs. Carrie E. Hopkins, widow of Moses A. Hopkins; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

S. DILLINGER & SONS.

Mr. McCULLOGH also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 6591) for the relief of S. Dillinger & Sons; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

L. B. TOWNSEND AND OTHERS.

Mr. LAIDLAW, from the Committee on Claims, reported the bill (S. 388) for the relief of L. B. Townsend and others; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

CLAIMS REPORTED BY ACCOUNTING OFFICERS, TREASURY.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 6514) for the allowance of certain claims reported by the accounting officers of the United States Treasury Department; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

HEIRS OF WILLIAM PITCHER, ETC.

Mr. BROWER, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 787) for the relief of the heirs of William Pitcher and Axel Hayford, and Samuel Otis and George B. Fergusson; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

C. T. DILLINGHAM.

Mr. BROWER also, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 6242) for the relief of C. T. Dillingham; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

MRS. MARY F. COFFEY.

Mr. BROWER also, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 6244) for the relief of Mrs. Mary F. Coffey; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

ELIZABETH JONES.

Mr. BROWER also, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 483) for the relief of Elizabeth Jones, widow of John Jones, deceased, and to place the name of said John Jones on the muster-rolls of Company B, Second Regiment North Carolina Mounted Infantry; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

CONRAD CLAYCOMB.

Mr. BROWER also, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 6243) for the relief of Conrad Claycomb; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

JOHN SULLIVAN.

Mr. LAWLER, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 3493) for the relief of John Sullivan; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

JAMES C. NEWMAN, ADMINISTRATOR.

Mr. STOCKDALE, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 831) for the relief of James C. Newman, administrator; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

REUBEN RAGLAND.

Mr. GAINES, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 6351) for the relief of Reuben Ragland; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

CLAIMS FOR ADDITIONAL BOUNTY.

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 1413) to extend the time for filing claims for additional bounty under the act of July 28, 1866, which expired by limitation upon July 1, 1880, until July 1, 1890; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOHN F. ALSUP.

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin, also, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 3494) for the relief of John F. Alsup; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

HIRAM SOMERVILLE.

Mr. O'NEALL, of Indiana, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 5524) for the relief of Hiram Somerville; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOHN S. FILLMORE.

Mr. WASHINGTON, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 671) for the relief of the heirs of John S. Fillmore, deceased; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

REPRINT OF UNITED STATES MAPS.

Mr. RICHARDSON, from the Committee on Printing, reported back favorably the joint resolution (S. R. 17) to print additional copies of the United States map of the edition of 1886, prepared by the Commissioner of Public Lands; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ADVERSE REPORTS.

Mr. RICHARDSON also, from the Committee on Printing, reported back with adverse recommendation bills and resolutions of the following titles; which were severally ordered to be laid on the table, and the accompanying reports printed, namely:

A bill (H. R. 5688) to disseminate Congressional current legislation among the people;

House resolution directing the Public Printer to publish monthly a consolidated index of the proceedings of Congress, etc.;

House resolution to reduce the price of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD to $1.50 for the long session and to $1 for the short session; and Joint resolution (H. Res. 31) to print in RECORD form additional copies of the President's message.

ALFRED HEDBERG.

Mr. MAISH, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 3435) for the relief of Alfred Hedberg; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PROTECTION OF MECHANICS AND LABORERS IN THEIR WAGES.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri, from the Committee on Labor, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 3405) to protect mechanics, laborers, and servants in their wages; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

EMPLOYMENT OF ENLISTED MEN IN COMPETITION WITH CIVILIANS.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri, also, from the Committee on Labor, reported back favorably the joint resolution (H. Res. 99) in reference to the employment of enlisted men in competition with local civilians; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

COMMITTEE SERVICE.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. COX] asks to be excused from further service on the Committee on the Territories, and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE] from further service on the Select Committee on the Eleventh Census. If there be no objection, these gentlemen will be excused, as requested; and the Chair will appoint the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE] to serve as a member of the Committee on the Territories in place of Mr. COX.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

CLAIMS FOR REMUSTER.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I am directed by the Committee on Military Affairs to submit a privileged report, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the following resolution, having considered the same, report it back, and recommend its adoption:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be requested to advise this House what progress has been made in the examination and adjudication of claims for remuster of officers of the volunteer forces under the act of June 3, 1884, or under said act as amended by the act of February 3, 1887; what is the whole number of claims filed under the said acts respectively; what number remained to be examined and adjudicated, and how long it will be before the consideration of said claims can be completed with the present clerical force of the Adjutant-General's Office.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. CUTCHEON moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BURNES. I move to dispense with the morning hour.

The SPEAKER. The morning hour has been occupied.

Mr. BURNES. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of general appropriation bills.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, Mr. BLOUNT in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole for the purpose of considering general appropriation bills. The Clerk will report the first general appropriation bill on the Calendar.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 5445) making appropriations for the payment of invalid and other pensions of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889, and for other purposes.

Mr. WEAVER. I wish to make an inquiry of the gentleman who is in charge of the bill as to the time to be allowed for debate. I think I may require some time myself.

Mr. BURNES. I ask unanimous consent to lay aside the pension appropriation bill.

There was no objection.

URGENT DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next appropriation bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 6437) to provide for certain of the most urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888, and for other purposes.

Mr. BURNES. I ask that the first and formal reading of the bill be dispensed with.

There was no objection.

Mr. PETERS. I desire to state to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES] that I am requested by the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads to ask that that committee be allowed to present the legal features of the bill that was before the House on last Thursday. I would like very much if the gentleman would yield to that committee time enough to have those legal questions presented so that the views of the committee upon them may be before the House. If this is agreed to it will facilitate the final disposition of this bill.

Mr. BURNES. I ask unanimous consent to limit general debate upon the pending bill to two hours, so as to allow one hour to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PETERS], and half an hour to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WEAVER].

Mr. ROGERS. Do I understand that the two hours to which general debate is to be limited will be devoted to the discussion of the post-office bill?

Mr. BURNES. I understand the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PETERS] will discuss the Pacific telegraph bill.

Mr. ROGERS. On this deficiency bill?

Mr. BURNES. Not exactly on this bill, but while this bill is under consideration.

Mr. ROGERS. I do not want to consent to that mode of procedure. This is an urgent deficiency bill, and should be considered in the light of a deficiency bill, and not in the light of a railroad or telegraph bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Arkansas object to the request that general debate be limited to two hours?

Mr. ROGERS. I want to use a portion of the time myself.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands that the gentleman from Arkansas objects to the arrangement.

Mr. ROGERS. I do not object to limiting the debate to two hours if we are to occupy that time in discussing this bill; but if gentlemen are to discuss the telegraph bill under this arrangement, I do object.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands the gentleman from Arkansas to object.

Mr. PETERS. I will say to the gentleman from Arkansas that we are now in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and the gentleman who gets the floor has the right to discuss any matter, whether the pending bill or any other.

Mr. ROGERS. I want thirty or forty minutes myself.

Mr. BURNES. You shall have that time.

Mr. ROGERS. How can I have that time if the general debate is to be limited to two hours?

Mr. BURNES. You can have thirty minutes.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, with the understanding that I will have thirty minutes of the time on this side, I withdraw any objection I may have made to the proposition.

Mr. HOOKER. I desire to make a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HOOKER. I want to know whether, in this assignment of time, it is designated who shall occupy that time. I understand that in Committee of the Whole any gentleman who obtains the floor has a right to occupy it.

The CHAIRMAN. No arrangement of this kind can be made except by unanimous consent. The Chair will submit the request for unanimous consent to limit debate to the time indicated.

Mr. HOOKER. I understand that under the rules operating in Committee of the Whole debate is in order on the sections of the bill seriatim by any gentleman who gets the floor.

Mr. RYAN. That is under the five-minute rule.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now is as to the general debate, and not as to the five-minute debate.

Mr. PETERS. If the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES] will allow me to be recognized, I will proceed.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair does not understand that any agreement has been reached as to the limitation of debate.

Mr. BURNES. I understood the agreement was made.

The CHAIRMAN. There was some conversation between gentlemen on the floor, but it was not followed by any request on the part of the gentleman from Missouri, and there was no submission of the question to the committee.

Mr. BURNES. I will withdraw the request and let matters take their course.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES] is entitled to the floor.

Mr. BURNES. This bill carries appropriations for $4,083,342.57. If amendments which the committee has authorized to be offered are agreed to by this Committee of the Whole House, the amount will be increased a little over $1,000,000. No general debate, I presume, is desired by any one. The bill has been printed and in the hands of members for the last ten days, so that all are presumed to be acquainted with its various provisions.

The most important items of appropriation by this bill are those relating to—

1. Repairs of light-stations.
2. Expenses of collecting customs revenue.
3. Completion of water supply for District of Columbia.
4. Military establishment.
5. Signal Service.
6. Increase of the Navy and completion of the steel cruisers Chicago and Boston.
7. Clerical assistance to surveyors-general.
8. The public-land service.
9. Post-Office Department.
10. Department of Justice.
11. Fees of jurors and witnesses in United States courts.
12. Pay of bailiffs, etc., in United States courts.
13. Fees and expenses of marshals in United States courts.
14. Fees of commissioners.
15. Miscellaneous expenses of United States courts.
16. Judgments of Court of Claims.
17. Claims certified by the Sixth Auditor under the act of March 3, 1883.
18. Claims certified by Second Auditor and Second Comptroller.
19. Refunding to States expenses of raising volunteers.
20. Claims certified by Third Auditor (lost horses, etc.).

These are the principal items of this bill, sir. I apprehend that no general debate is necessary on the merits of the bill itself. None has been deemed necessary by the members of the Appropriations Committee, and unless circumstances require it, we shall, as soon as possible, move to proceed to the consideration of the bill by sections. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, I do not think I need make any excuse for calling the attention of the House to the bill which was under consideration on last Thursday, because the interest manifested in that measure by the House at that time is certainly a sufficient justification for the desire of the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads to ask attention to the questions presented at any time when, under our rules, an opportunity can be obtained.

I propose now to present for the information of the House such facts as have come to my knowledge, together with such law bearing upon the subject as I have been able to cull from the general statutes and from the authorities, with the desire and hope that all those who have not given attention to this subject will, from this time forward, consider the questions involved, so as to be ready to act upon the bill proposed by the committee. I do not think that a more important bill has been presented for the consideration of this House during the present session than the one which proposes to have the land-grant railroads resume their telegraphic franchises and operate their telegraph lines in obedience to the laws that created those corporations. I shall proceed now to discuss the questions involved in the bill in as systematic order as I can, and for this purpose I will call attention, first, to the wrongs that have grown up under the legislation that has been enacted in respect to these land-grant roads; secondly, to the power of Congress to regulate or control the roads and to remedy these wrongs; and third, I shall very briefly ask the attention of the House to the remedy itself.

The wrongs complained of are in their nature threefold, and can all be grouped under three heads namely, destruction of competition, discrimination against individuals and other corporations, and the diversion of the effects or results of public aid to private aggrandizement. I think that all of the wrongs complained of before the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, when they had this matter under investigation during the last Congress, can be brought in under one or other of these three heads, to which I shall now address myself in the order I have stated them, and as briefly as possible.

First, a brief recital of history in relation to the land-grant legislation as it affects the bill in question. June 16, 1860, a bill was passed for the purpose of promoting communication between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts by means of the electric telegraph. Mark, the bill was passed June 16, 1860, and under it the first overland telegraph was constructed by two different companies. The provisions of the original grant gave $40,000 of Government business to this line annually for the period of ten years. That is, the Government agreed that it would do $40,000 of business over the line yearly, or if it did not, it would in any event pay that amount annually for ten years. It further agreed to give this telegraph company the use of a quarter-section of land for every 15 miles of the entire route traversed by the line, a route of about 2,000 miles. It further agreed to give this telegraph company the right of way over the public domain, and, in addition to this, one of the companies that built the original line received nearly $100,000 from the State of California; which made the aggregate money consideration received for the construction of this original telegraph line $400,000 from the Government and $100,000 from the State of California, together with the use of about 25,600 acres of land and the right of way over the public domain. Under the provisions of this bill, as I have stated, the original line was constructed by the Pacific Telegraph Company and the Overland Telegraph Company.

The Pacific Telegraph Company was chartered by the State of Nebraska and was capitalized at $1,000,000. The California State Company was incorporated by the State of California, and it entered into an agreement to construct the line eastward as far as Ogden or Utah. The Overland Company was organized under a charter granted by California with a capital of $1,250,000, for the purpose of carrying out the obligation of the California State Company to construct the line east as far as Utah, and these two telegraph companies, the Pacific, chartered by Nebraska, and the Overland, chartered by California, virtually built this line. It was built in four months and eleven days, and was completed in October, 1861. The entire cost of the construction of this telegraph line from the Missouri River to San Francisco did not exceed, according to the best estimates and information I can obtain, $400,000, which was the amount contributed to its construction in money by the Government of the United States alone. I think that in this estimate I have exceeded at least $50,000 the actual cost of the construction of this original telegraph line.

Next in historical order comes the act of July 1, 1862, which provided for the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and went on to prescribe certain rules and regulations as well as to set out the object and purposes of the construction of this line of railroad and telegraph. This, as I have said, was the first and original Pacific railroad act; and I will therefore use it for the purpose of illustration and argument, because nearly all the land-grant charters are almost identical with this one, differing somewhat in detail as to the names of the corporators, etc., but being in all their general features similar to the act passed in favor of the Union Pacific Railroad, and the act amendatory thereof. Thus, when I discuss the features of this act, my remarks apply to all the land-grant railroads.

Now, in this act of July 1, 1862, there was a reservation of power by the Government. I know it has sometimes been said in discussion that there was in this act no reservation of power to the Government; but the eighteenth section not only reserves this power, but in language remarkably strong calls attention to the objects of the passage of this grant itself. At this point, in connection with this historical review, I wish to read a portion of the eighteenth section of the act of July 1, 1862:

And the better to accomplish the object of this act—

That is to promote the public interest and welfare. How?

by the construction of said railroad and telegraph line and keeping the same in working order, and to secure to the Government at all times, but particularly in time of war, the use and benefits of the same for postal, military, and other purposes, Congress may at any time add to, alter, amend, or repeal this act.

I wish to call attention to this reservation of power by the Government to repeal, alter, or in any way amend this original act granting aid for the construction of a line of railroad and telegraph between the Missouri River and the Pacific Ocean.

I might also add right here that in the act of June 16, 1860, which provided for the construction of a line of telegraph, there was also a reservation of power by the Government, but that reservation did not go to the extent of permitting the Government to repeal the act; it only went so far as to allow the Government to alter and amend the act.

Next in historical order comes the act of July 2, 1864, which was amendatory of the act of July 1, 1862. Why was this amendatory act enacted? Simply because under the act of July 1, 1862, no capital could be secured for undertaking the construction of this great railroad. Hence, the amendatory act of July 2, 1864, increased the subsidies which were granted to the railroad, not only with reference to the amount of money allowed per mile, but with reference also to the amount of the land grant. In this act also the power of the Government to amend, alter, or repeal was reserved.

Allow me now to call attention to the fifteenth and twenty-second sections of this amendatory act. Section 15 provides—

That the several railroad companies authorized to construct the aforesaid roads are hereby required to operate and use said roads and telegraph for all purposes of communication, travel, and transportation, so far as the public and the Government are concerned, as one continuous line; and in such operation and use to afford and secure to each equal advantages and facilities as to rates, time, and transportation, without any discrimination of any kind in favor of the road or business of any or either of said companies, or adverse to the road or business of any or either of the others, and it shall not be lawful for the proprietors of any line of telegraph authorized by this act, or the act amended by this act, to refuse or fail to convey for all persons requiring the transmission of news and messages of like character, on pain of forfeiting to the person injured for each offense the sum of $100 and such other damage as he may have suffered on account of said refusal or failure, to be sued for and recovered in any court of the United States, or of any State or Territory of competent jurisdiction.

Then section 22 of this act provides that "Congress may at any time amend, alter, or repeal this act."

The next act, in chronological order, affecting the question is the act of July 24, 1866, commonly known in the Revised Statutes as Title LXV, and which provides in the first section as follows:

SEC. 5263. Any telegraph company now organized, or which may hereafter be organized, under the laws of any State, shall have the right to construct, maintain, and operate lines of telegraph through and over any portion of the public domain of the United States, over and along any of the military or post roads of the United States which have been or may hereafter be declared such by law, and over, under, or across the navigable streams or waters of the United States; but such lines of telegraph shall be so constructed and maintained as not to obstruct the navigation of such streams and waters or interfere with the ordinary travel on such military or post roads.

What was one of the objects of the laws of 1862 and 1864? It was so that any telegraph line, any telegraph company that stretched out its arms and reached the termini of any of these land-grant telegraph companies might have the right to connect with them, and might also have the right to use those lines as a continuous line between the East and the West.

This law of 1866 gave to any telegraph company then organized, or any to be organized after that, the right to go on the right of way of any of these land-grant companies and construct its line of telegraph, and only prohibiting them to this extent, that they should not interfere with the business management and operation of the railroad on that right of way.

Next in order is the contract of the Western Union Telegraph Company with the Union Pacific Railroad, entered into on July 1, 1881. This contract of the Western Union with the Union Pacific Railroad is a remarkable contract. I will not take your time now to refer in detail to that contract, but I will do so hereafter when I come to discuss some of the legal questions involved.

Having thus brought up the history of the question to the time when the Western Union received from the Union Pacific the control of the telegraph line upon that road, I now proceed to call attention, Mr. Chairman, more definitely and more in detail to the wrongs which I have enumerated, and first to the destruction of competition, which was the practical result of the contract made by the Western Union with the Union Pacific Railroad Company. I need not go into any lengthy argument to show that one of the objects of the passage of these land-grant acts was to secure competition.

I know many may say that the object of our legislators at the time of the passage of these acts was to secure speedy communication between the East and the West. But that was not all the object. Any one who will turn to the debates in Congress at the time this original act of July 1, 1862, was under consideration will find that this question of competition was then considered and declared to be one of the objects to be attained, not only in railroad transportation, but also in the transmission of messages between the East and West.

I will not take time to read but from one portion of the debate that took place in the Senate on the 17th of June, 1862. But perhaps before I do that I had better call attention to the nineteenth section of the act of July 1, 1862.

It reads as follows:

And be it further enacted, That the several railroad companies herein named are authorized to enter into an arrangement with the Pacific Telegraph Company, the Overland Telegraph Company, and the California State Telegraph Company, so that the present line of telegraph between the Missouri River and San Francisco may be moved upon or along the line of said railroad and branches as fast as said roads and branches are built; and if said arrangement be entered into, and the transfer of said telegraph line be made in accordance therewith to the line of said railroad and branches, such transfer shall, for all purposes of this act, be held and considered a fulfillment on the part of said railroad companies of the provisions of the act in regard to the construction of said line of telegraph. And, in case of disagreement, said telegraph companies are authorized to remove their line of telegraph along and upon the line of railroad herein contemplated, without prejudice to the rights of said railroad companies named herein.

On the 17th of June, 1862, an amendment was presented which, besides what I have read as section 19, adds these words:

And the railroad company's telegraph shall be confined to the business of the railroad company and the transmission of messages for the Government of the United States, and shall not enter into any competition for the commercial business, provided such telegraph company shall furnish sufficient facilities for the transaction of its business.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. Give the page.

Mr. PETERS. I have read from the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE of June 17, 1862, second session Thirty-seventh Congress.

There was a proposition which expressly confined the telegraph business to the land-grant railroad business and messages of the Government, excluding all other business, but this amendment was defeated and the section as found in the law of July 1, 1862, adopted in its place.

And now, in the argument that took place upon that amendment we can readily see what object was sought after and why this was done.

Mr. Doolittle says, referring to these telegraph lines constructed under the act of June 16, 1860:

The line has only recently been completed, and so far, I understand, the stockholders have received but one return from the receipts of this route. I remember that when the bill was before the Senate I struggled to put a limitation upon the company, and I did succeed in putting on a limitation that they should not charge more than $3 for a dispatch across the continent, because I was afraid of the monopoly at the time; but when the privilege has been granted, and you have given them a monopoly of the business for ten years, when you are creating another great monopoly, a great overshadowing monopoly, the greatest ever conceived in this country, and with powers greater than any other monopoly ever had in this country, will you give them the power also to wipe out the existing telegraph company which has been constructed, for that will be the effect of your amendment.

Then Mr. Latham, of California, says:

I do not know exactly the order to be pursued, but I am opposed to the latter part of that section, commencing after the word "herein"—

Which is that portion of the section I have read in addition to what is section 19 of the original act—in line 17, and I move to amend the amendment by striking out all after said word. The Senate will observe by glancing at the section that it vests a somewhat extraordinary power in the present telegraph company, a power that I am unwilling to see it possess. It puts it in their power to dictate to the railroad company the terms and conditions on which they shall use the present telegraph line; and if they do not accept their terms the railroad telegraph is limited in the use of their line to their own messages and such messages as the Government may desire to send over the wires.

I will not read further; it is unnecessary; but any gentleman who feels an interest in following this debate will readily come to the conclusion that one of the main objects that was supposed to be accomplished and secured by the act of July, 1862, was that there might be competition in the telegraph business between the East and the West.

One of the wrongs that has grown up out of the contract made between the Western Union and the Pacific Railroad Company is the destruction of competition in this branch of service between the East and the West; and this leads me to call the attention of the committee somewhat more in detail to that contract which was entered into between the Western Union and the Union Pacific Railroad Company. I would like to read some of the "whereases" appended to that contract, but I notice that my time is going very fast, and I will simply call your attention to a few paragraphs, or certain portions of them, which have a tendency in their operation to destroy competition in the telegraph business. I will read this paragraph:

Third. The railway company, so far as it legally may, hereby grants and agrees to assure to the telegraph company the exclusive right of way on, along, upon, and under the line, lands, and bridges of the railway company, and any extensions and branches thereof, for the construction, maintenance, operation, and use of lines of poles and wires, or either of them, or underground or other system of communication for commercial or public uses or business, with the right to put up from time to time, or cause to be put up or constructed under the provisions of this agreement, such additional wires on its own or the railway company's poles or such additional lines of poles and wires, or either, as well on its bridges as on its right of way, or to construct such underground lines as the telegraph company may deem expedient, doing as little damage and causing as little inconvenience to the railway company as is practicable.

I want to call your particular attention to what follows:

And the railway company will not transport men or material for the construction or operation of a line of poles and wire or wires or underground or other system of communication in competition with the lines of the telegraph company party hereto, except at and for the railway company's regular local rates, nor will it furnish for any competing line any facilities or assistance that it may lawfully withhold, nor stop its trains, nor distribute material therefor other than at regular stations.

Any one who can understand the force of the English language and the meaning of words will see at once that the Union Pacific Railroad Company, giant as it was, permitted itself to be bound hand and foot by this contract with the telegraph company so that it could not transport poles, wires, or any other material needed for the purpose of constructing any telegraph line that may want to be constructed over its right of way, unless, as shown by this, such company paid local rates and unless it would receive all material at regular stations.

That, Mr. Chairman, is virtually a prohibition against the construction of any competing line which might desire, under the provisions of the act of July 24, 1866, to construct a line of telegraph over the right of way of any of these land-grant railroads. This Union Pacific Railroad Company, under that contract, bound itself to reject any and all offers that might be made by any other telegraph company desiring to go upon this right of way to construct a continuous telegraph line between the West and the East. That contract virtually forbade the Union Pacific Railroad Company to accommodate any person or company, except the Western Union, by hauling poles, or wires, or material, or distributing them along the line of road, or extending to them any facilities to construct a competing line. In other words, the possibility of constructing another line was throttled by this agreement, so that no line could thereafter be built against their wish, whether by a company which was then in existence or to be organized thereafter, to transfer messages between the East and the West.

So that, I repeat, one of the great wrongs complained of, one of the wrongs that grows out of this transaction, is, that there was an absolute throttling of competition between the Missouri River and the West in relation to this service.

Mr. Chairman, in the investigation before the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads it was shown that when the Baltimore and Ohio Telegraph Company, one of the strongest telegraph lines outside of the Western Union that ever had existence in this country—when that company tried to secure some of the rights by which it could connect with the telegraph lines upon these land-grant railroads, and thereby secure a continuous service between the East and the West, it was delayed in its correspondence in this connection time and again, and for more than six months, and was then virtually told that under the provisions of the contract between the Union Pacific and the Western Union Telegraph Company the Union Pacific Railroad could not offer any facilities to the Baltimore and Ohio.

They were told after the Union Pacific people were brought up to the point—and it required a great deal of questioning to bring them up to that point—the Baltimore and Ohio Telegraph people were told they could have rights over the Union Pacific Road as individuals or the same as those which could be had by any individual, but that they could have no business arrangements with that land-grant railroad line, because prohibited by their contract with the Western Union from extending such privileges.

Then there is another wrong to which I wish to call attention in connection with this contract, and that is its discrimination. In the act of July 1, 1862, one of the objects was "to subserve the public interest and public welfare, and to afford equal facilities to all companies and to all individuals" not only in relation to railroads but in relation to telegraphs by carrying messages without discrimination. And yet in the investigation before the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads it was shown beyond question, and not denied by the Western Union Telegraph Company, that when the Baltimore and Ohio Telegraph Company desired to send a message from Baltimore to San Francisco, it could send it to the end of its line in Kansas City or Omaha, and then if it desired any further transmission of that message, it was required to pay an excess of from 30 to 50 cents for the transmission of that message of ten words. Here was a discrimination made by the Western Union Telegraph Company against the Baltimore and Ohio Telegraph Company.

I know it may be said that that telegraph company has now been absorbed; that it is out of the way; that it has been put upon the shelf; that it is ended. I remember now in connection with that fact one remarkable statement that was made by Mr. J. C. Reiff in that investigation. He appeared before the committee as one of the representatives of the Baltimore and Ohio Telegraph Company, and he said that that company had behind it the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company and sufficient capital, so much, that the Western Union could not absorb it. And yet in less than one year after that declaration was made the Baltimore and Ohio Telegraph Company was absorbed by and taken into the fold of the Western Union.

I know it is said also that there are no telegraph companies that are reaching out and connecting with these land-grant railroads. That is another mistaken idea. I have here a telegram which was sent to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DOCKERY] by the president of the Pacific Mutual Telegraph Company, which I want to read as bearing upon this question. It will show whether there is not some other company besides the Western Union Telegraph Company in the United States that has connection with the telegraph lines upon these land-grant railroads. This telegram is sent from Kansas City, Mo., and the body of it reads as follows:

Is it too late for me to appear before the committee having in charge the Anderson bill requiring the Union and Central Pacific Railroads to operate and maintain independent telegraph lines over their systems for the use of the public and connecting lines? The Pacific Mutual Telegraph lines extend from St. Louis to Sioux City, via Sedalia, Kansas City, St. Joseph, Atchison, Leavenworth, Lincoln, and Omaha, Nebr., and intermediate points. We are barred from exchanging business over the land-grant railroads on account of their failure to comply with their charters in this respect, and we think the Anderson bill should be passed by all means, thus giving independent telegraph lines other than the Western Union an opportunity to exchange business with the land-grant lines in the same manner that the railroads interchange upon an equitable basis.

Please reply.

E. S. MARTIN,
President Pacific Mutual Telegraph Company.

So that we have to-day a telegraph company that connects with the telegraph lines upon these land-grant railroads—that is, comes up to the termini of those land-grant railroads—and has the right under the charter of 1862 that was granted to the Union Pacific Railroad Company, to make a connection of its telegraph lines, and send messages between the East and the West; and yet, by virtue of this contract with the Western Union, the Union Pacific has tied itself hand and foot, so that it can not comply with the requirements of this act of July 1, 1862, and the act of July 2, 1864.

So there is a discrimination; and what kind of a discrimination is it? Why, gentlemen, it is a discrimination that virtually nullifies the act of July 24, 1866, which provides that any telegraph company organized or thereafter to be organized shall be allowed to connect and transmit its messages upon the lines of these land-grant railroads—that it shall be allowed to go upon the right of way of these land-grant railroads.

The Western Union Telegraph Company prevented the Baltimore and Ohio, and prevents the Pacific Mutual Telegraph Company, from constructing any line of telegraph over the right of way of the Union Pacific. Why? Because, as you all know, gentlemen, if the Pacific Mutual Telegraph Company had to haul the poles over the Union Pacific and pay local rates, and then only have its poles and wires delivered at regular stations, the cost of construction would be so great that it would never undertake it. Therefore this contract made by the Union Pacific Railroad Company, leading to this wrong and discrimination, goes to the extent of nullifying the act of July 24, 1866.

But I want to call attention to another wrong, and that is the diversion of the results of the public aid that was granted to this railroad company for the purpose of building up private corporations.

It is a well-known provision of law that where public aid is given it implies a public trust. Public aid can not be given in the interest of anything that is private in its nature. Public aid can be given, under the law and under the decisions of the courts, only for public objects. Here, then, in this grant of 1862 public aid was given for the construction of this Union Pacific Telegraph, and I ask you to mark the connection that is maintained in all these acts between the telegraph and railroad. I will not take time to read them, but every member can read them for himself, and he will find that every single one of these acts couples the telegraph with the railroad. The acts do not provide for the construction of a railroad line alone, but every one of them provides for the construction of a railroad and a telegraph line. The telegraph line is not made subsidiary to the railroad; it is not supplemental to it; it is of equal dignity with the railroad itself and can not be alienated any more than the railroad can be alienated.

All this discrimination, all of this destruction of competition was and is in the interest of the Western Union. The very year this contract referred to was made, namely, 1881, the capital stock of this company was increased from forty to eighty million of dollars, at least twenty millions of which increase was a stock dividend.

This brings me to consider the legal effect of the reservation of power in all these acts. In every one of the acts referred to there is reserved to Congress the power to alter and amend, as was the case in the original telegraph bill, and in the land-grant acts the power to alter, amend, or repeal. The act of 1864, amendatory of the prior act, was passed because under the original act this enterprise would not be undertaken. The act of 1864 was signed by that President whose name and fame have become as immortal as time. I mean Abraham Lincoln. It was signed just two days before, by his presence and his utterances, he consecrated and hallowed the battle-ground of the greatest battle in ancient or in modern times. [Applause.] The very fact that this act was passed at that time, in 1864, shows that nothing had been done under the act of July 1, 1862, and therefore that no rights could have accrued under it. As nothing was done under the original act nobody could have acquired any rights under it.

Under the act of July 2, 1864, there was an express, unequivocal, unconditional reservation of the power of Congress to alter, amend, or repeal. Now, I want to call attention to the decisions of the courts as to what is included in that power. I refer first to the sinking-fund cases, which are familiar to all the lawyers of the House. I will read from the decisions of Chief-Justice Waite, 99 United States Reports, 719. Speaking of one of the land-grant companies, he says:

This corporation is a creature of the United States. It is a private corporation, created for the public purposes, and its property is to a large extent devoted to public uses. It is therefore subject to legislative control so far as its business affects the public interests. It is unnecessary to decide what power Congress would have had over the charter if the right of amendment had not been reserved, for, as we think, that reservation has been made. In the act of 1862, section 18, it was accompanied by an explanatory statement, saying that this had been done the "better to accomplish the object of this act, namely, to promote the public interest and public welfare by the construction of said railroad and telegraph line and keeping the same in working order, and to secure to the Government at all times, but especially in time of war, the use and benefits of the same for postal, military, and other purposes, and by an injunction that it should be used with due regard for the rights of said companies." In the act of 1864, however, there is nothing except the simple words that "Congress may at any time alter, amend, or repeal this act." Taking both acts together and giving the explanatory statement in that of 1862, all the effect it can be entitled to, we are of the opinion that Congress not only retains, but has given special notice of its intention to retain, full and complete power to make such alterations and amendments to the charter as come within the just scope of legislative power. That this power is limited no one can doubt. All agree that it can not be used to take away property already acquired under the operation of the charter, or to deprive the corporation of the fruits, actually reduced to possession, of contracts lawfully made; but, as was said by this court, through Mr. Justice Clifford, in Miller vs. The State, 14 Wallace, 498, it may be safely affirmed that the reserved power may be exercised—that the reserved power may be exercised to almost any extent to carry into effect the original purposes of the grant, or to secure the due administration of its affairs so as to protect the rights of stockholders and of creditors.

I call attention to this language—

Now, I want to call attention to the language of Mr. Justice Miller, because considerable has been said about a decision that he made in one of these cases. I want to call attention to the language of Justice Miller in the case of Greenwood vs. The Freight Company, to be found in 105 United States Reports, page 17.

In treating of acts which reserved the legislative authority to alter, amend, or repeal, Justice Miller says:

It would be difficult to supply language more comprehensive or expressive than this. Such an act may be amended; that is, it may be changed by addition to its terms or by qualifications of the same. It may be altered by the same power; and it may be repealed. What is it that may be repealed? It is the act of incorporation, it is this organic law on which the corporate existence of the company depends, which may be repealed, so that it shall cease to be a law. And the legislature may adopt the milder course of amending the law in matters which need amendment, or altering it when it needs substantial change. All this may be done at the pleasure of the legislature.

I will not take time to read further; but it seems to me that these two decisions—one expressed in the language of Chief-Justice Waite, the other in that of Associate Justice Miller—establish conclusively that whatever would be within the legislative power has been reserved by these acts. And this brings me to the legal question, what can be done by the legislative power in relation to these land-grant corporations? What is the power of Congress in relation to these land-grant corporations under the reservation as contained in these acts?

And here I want to step aside a moment and utter a word of commendation in favor of those statesmen who passed these acts of 1862 and 1864. I commend with earnest admiration the sublime statesmanship which in the midst of the perils of war, in the midst of imminent national danger, at the very time when the Empire of France was thundering at the gates of Mexico in order to obtain a footing from which to wage a war of conquest over our Pacific coast—at that very time, with all these dangers, these men who passed these acts, could do it, with so much deliberation, so much careful attention to detail, that every power, every right, was reserved to the Government itself, to be made use of by future Congresses. [Applause.]

Now, going on with my legal argument, we have power as Congress to legislate, and this power is unlimited in favor of such legislation as will accomplish the objects and purposes of these grants. You may talk about "vested rights;" you may talk about the "sacredness of contracts;" there can be no "vested right" acquired by any corporation or individual that in any manner contravenes or interferes with the carrying out of the objects and purposes of these grants. Why? Because any contract that interferes with carrying out the objects and purposes of the grant is ultra vires and void. There is no question about that. That proposition seems to me beyond dispute, even if we had not decisions to sustain it. The object and purposes of the grant! Think of it for a moment. Here was a land-grant company that received aid from the Government—large aid, for a purpose, for an object—to furnish communication between the East and West, to connect the eastern and western shores of this continent, to bind the country together, to make it a united country.

Not only this, but to subserve the public interest and welfare. And now any contract, however great its consideration may have been, which in any way contravenes or interferes with the carrying out of this object is absolutely void and unlawful. Hence, in view of the decisions, I say that the contract between the Western Union and the Union Pacific, in so far as it contravenes the original objects and purposes of this grant, is absolutely void and unlawful. I have said that I have some authority on this subject. My time has so nearly expired that I can not do more than refer to it. I refer to a case reported in 1 Federal Reporter, in which Judge McCrary, of the United States circuit court, sitting in Kansas, decided that a contract similar in its terms to this—a contract made between a telegraph company and the Union Pacific Railroad—was ultra vires.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. What is the name of the case?

Mr. PETERS. The title of the case is Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Company vs. The Union Pacific Railroad Company. The part of the decision to which I refer is to be found on pages 748–751. I would be very glad if I could read from this decision and comment upon it; but I see I have not the time. Any lawyer, however, who examines this decision will come to the conclusion that any contract which in any manner interferes with the objects and purposes of these grants is ultra vires, is null and void, is unlawful.

Much stress has been placed on a decision rendered by Justice Miller, and to that I want to call attention. It was a decision in one of these telegraph cases, and is to be found in 3 Federal Reporter—I do not remember the page. The decision, however, of Justice Miller is embraced in the report of the committee.

It is claimed that this decision of Justice Miller establishes the validity of this contract between the Western Union and the Union Pacific. I say that Justice Miller did not so decide; that the question of the validity of the contract between the Western Union and the Union Pacific was not before Judge Miller except in an incidental way. This was a case which came up on motion to dissolve an injunction which had been granted by a probate judge in Kansas—a temporary injunction granted by a probate judge—and this decision was on a motion to dissolve that temporary order of injunction.

Let me read first from that decision:

The act of 1864, which we have just referred to, concerning the United States Telegraph Company, was clearly designed to give it a similar privilege, and if the arrangement was made and that company should build or transfer its line to the line of the railroad company, the railroad company in like manner was released from the obligation to construct and build another line. I hold it, therefore, to be very clear that if the present telegraph line, as it is now operated and run by the Western Union Telegraph Company, can be traced to the authority of that act of 1864, and the Western Union Telegraph Company in making that contract exercised rightfully the powers conferred upon the United States Telegraph Company, that the contract is valid, although it forbids the railroad company to convey commercial messages over the single wire which it has the right to control for its own business.

Any one will see, by reading that decision, that Justice Miller said, if so and so prove to be the facts in the case, then the contract might be valid, but afterwards he modified even that expression.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Are not all these conditions disputed and claimed not to exist, except by the Western Union Telegraph Company and its followers?

Mr. PETERS. And even the Western Union Company does not claim it now. Every single fact assumed by Justice Miller, as a condition, not only does not exist, but even the Western Union Company itself does not claim that any one of them does exist.

What are these facts? First, it is assumed an arrangement was made between the telegraph company and the Union Pacific, whereby, under section 19 of the original act, the telegraph companies transferred their lines to the Union Pacific right of way. No such arrangement ever was made between the Union Pacific and any telegraph company.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. Does not that apply to a special condition which existed with the Kansas Pacific Railroad Company before this contract with the Union Pacific—was not that condition made in reference to the Kansas Pacific?

Mr. PETERS. No; it was not. It was not, although it was assumed and agreed to, at the time this case was heard, that an arrangement had been made between the Kansas Pacific and these lines whereby its construction of a telegraph line was waived, yet——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. PETERS. I would like to have five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair hears no objection, and the gentleman will proceed for five minutes longer.

Mr. PETERS. I will say that notwithstanding that was assumed, yet it proved not to be the fact, for there was no arrangement between the Kansas Pacific and any telegraph line whereby the telegraph line could be moved on to the right of way of the Pacific Railroad, which would be in lieu of the construction of the telegraph line called for in their charters. What does Justice Miller further say:

I am not prepared to say with any degree of assurance that if this case comes to a final hearing, and no more complete evidence is then given of the corporate existence of the first United States Telegraph Company of New York, and of the transfer of the powers granted to it by the act of Congress of 1864 to the Western Union Telegraph Company, than has been presented on this hearing, that that contract can be sustained under the act of 1864. But I am prepared to hold that there is no such clear case made against the right of the Western Union Telegraph Company to all the franchises and privileges of the original United States Telegraph Company as to justify me in totally dissolving the present injunction, in view of the consequences which would follow such action, which will be hereafter considered.

But the facts assumed there are found by our committee not to have existed. First, no arrangement was made—and that was the strongest—and, second, these telegraph companies did not move on to the line in accordance with any such arrangement.

If these original telegraph companies moved on the line of the Union Pacific, or the line of the Kansas Pacific, they did it under the second clause of section 19, which allowed any telegraph company to move on the right of way, but not to interfere with the railroad.

Mr. DOCKERY. That was to be in the event of a failure to make the "arrangement" provided for in the nineteenth section of the act of July 1, 1862.

Mr. PETERS. Yes, sir; I will turn to that provision and read it:

And if said arrangement be entered into, and the transfer of said telegraph line be made in accordance therewith to the line of said railroad and branches, such transfer shall, for all purposes of this act, be held and considered a fulfillment on the part of the said railroad company of the provisions of this act in regard to the construction of said line of telegraph.

Not construction and operation, you will observe. There is not one iota of law that authorizes any of these land-grant railroad companies to transfer or alienate the operation of their telegraph franchises. All that could be accomplished under the "arrangement" here specified, if made at all, was to be in lieu of the construction of the telegraph line. But the railroad companies must, under the provisions of their charter, go on and operate the telegraph lines just the same as though they had constructed them themselves.

Mr. DOCKERY. Now read the second provision, under which they did remove their lines of telegraph to the right of way of the Pacific Railroad, under this same section of the act of July 1, 1862.

Mr. PETERS. That is in the following words:

And in case of disagreement said telegraph companies are authorized to remove their line of telegraph along and upon the line of railroad herein contemplated without prejudice to the rights of said railroad companies named herein.

It was under that second provision that all the telegraphs constructed under the provisions of the act of June 16, 1860, to which I have referred, moved onto the line of route of the Central and Union Pacific companies. What right did that provision give them? The right of occupation merely. They have nothing under that act but what every other telegraph company in the country under Title LXV of the Revised Statutes may have and has now. The Western Union, if it is the successor of the California State and the Overland and Pacific Companies—if, I say, it is the successor of these companies, it has no right in the premises except that of occupation alone. [Applause.]

[Here the hammer fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. PETERS. If I can trespass for three minutes longer upon the time of my friend from Arkansas, I shall be under many obligations.

Mr. ROGERS. Very well.

Mr. PETERS. I wanted just three minutes to call the attention of this committee to this remedy. I think I have shown, Mr. Chairman, conclusively that Congress has the power.

But there is a mistaken opinion as to what is the remedy proposed by the committee. It does not contemplate doing away with a single vested right that anybody or any company or any corporation now has. It does not contemplate removing a single pole of the Western Union Company, or taking down a single foot of its wires. It does not contemplate the closing of one single office, or stopping the ticking of one single instrument of that company. It allows the Western Union to remain just where it is. It does not interfere in any way with the Western Union, except that the remedy proposed will allow competition in the telegraph business over land-grant railroad lines of the United States.

That is all. It simply puts an end to this monopoly by the Western Union from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean in the telegraph business.

I know, from the expression of sentiment we have heard, that you would suppose this interfered wonderfully with the Western Union Company, and yet I have given you the provisions, and all of the provisions, relating to the subject, which show that it does not interfere with the Western Union's rights at all, except that it breaks up this monopoly. But I want to say in conclusion that it is about time that we taught by proper legislation a lesson on this subject. The fault was not with the legislators who enacted the legislation in 1862 and 1864. The fault lies at our own door. We have the power, we have the right, to legislate upon the subject, and we should step forward and legislate in the interest of the people and for the purposes for which these grants were manifestly made.

I tell you, Mr. Chairman, that the sixty millions of people in this country to-day, bound hand and foot as they are, crushed beneath the power of the Western Union with its eighty millions of capital stock, fifty millions of which is watered, are incensed against this thing to such an extent that if a remedy is not supplied we will have a rebellion that will tear down this monster corporation, despoil it of its usurped strength and power, and erect upon its ruins a postal telegraph system that will subserve the public interests and the public welfare. [Great applause.]

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, I would like to bring the committee back to the bill under consideration, and I ask their attention to such observations as I intend now to submit concerning the bill. As the basis of the remarks I intend to make I shall ask permission to print in the RECORD without reading that portion of the report of the committee which is found on pages 4 and 5, under the head of "Expenses of the United States courts."

EXPENSES UNITED STATES COURTS.

There are recommended in the bill, appropriations, on estimates submitted by the Department of Justice, for balance of the current fiscal year as follows:

For fees of jurors	$150,000
For fees of witnesses	300,000
For pay of bailiffs, etc	75,000

The estimates, appropriations, and deficiencies for jurors and witnesses for the fiscal years 1886 to 1888, and the estimates submitted for 1889, are as follows

Years.	For jurors.			For witnesses.
	Appropriations.	Estimates.	Deficiency.	Appropriations.	Estimates.	Deficiency.
1885	$400,000	$500,000	$50,000	$500,000	$610,000	$121,408.74
1886	450,000	500,000	90,000	550,000	610,000	237,150.00
1887	450,000	450,000	50,000	550,000	550,000	200,000.00
1888	450,000	500,000	150,000	550,000	550,000	300,000.00
1889		450,000			550,000

The ever-recurring deficiencies both in annual estimates and appropriations for the "expenses of United States courts" are entitled to the grave and thoughtful consideration of Congress. The real cause of them may be found—

1. In the system of allotment of appropriations by the Department, which is inherently bad; as, necessarily, no wisdom or judgment can prevent the giving of too much money to some courts and too little to others, thereby tempting the former to extravagance and compelling the latter in many instances to suspend proceedings.

2. In the power of appointment of clerks and certain other officers and employés of United States courts by the district judge, who too frequently gathers around him in official positions or employment those who by blood or marriage constitute his personal family.

3. In the want of a different system of disbursing the money appropriated for these expenses, the present system of payment through the marshals being unsatisfactory and demoralizing.

At the place where a United States court is held a disbursing officer might well be appointed under existing law, who, being wholly disinterested and under the law and strict regulations of the Treasury Department, could make the court disbursements without loss, delay, or irregularity, and at all times be ready to report the balance on hand. The cost of disbursement would not be thereby increased, and the great reform would be that the self-created creditor of the United States would not be the custodian of the money out of which he is to become paymaster to himself and associates.

It will be observed that in 1885 the expenditure for jurors was $450,000, which amount was $50,000 less than the estimates for that year. In 1886 the expenditures exceeded the estimates to the amount of $40,000; in 1887 the expenditures exceeded the estimates to the amount of $50,000; and in 1888, if the appropriation in this bill is made, the expenditures will exceed the estimates $100,000. Thus year by year there is a steady increase of expenditures over estimates, so that some remedy must be interposed if a due regard for the public money is to be observed.

In 1885 the expenditures for witnesses were $11,408.74 in excess of the estimates; in 1886 the expenditures were in excess of the estimates to the amount of $177,150; in 1887 the expenditures were in excess of the estimates to the amount of $200,000; in 1888 the expenditures, if the appropriation in this bill is made, will be in excess of the estimates to the amount of $300,000. How long will it be before the excess of expenditures over estimates or appropriations will be more than the amount estimated or appropriated for this service?

But the most painful and deplorable part of this subject has relation to the wrongs and outrages perpetrated, under the forms of law, upon poor and ofttimes ignorant men by deputy United States marshals and others, because of some mere technical or imaginary petty misdemeanor, in order that a color of right may appear for retaining money of the United States for extraordinary expenses of witnesses and others. If the prodigal waste under this head were only the loss of money to the United States the injury would be inconsiderable as compared with the personal wrongs upon individual citizens perpetrated merely as a basis for large expenditures. The system now and for years existing pays a premium for cupidity and encourages assaults upon the body of the people.

I proceed now to discuss such provisions of the report as have enlisted my attention. The Committee on Appropriations in the draughting of this report seem to have been struck with a sort of nightmare in connection with the increase of deficiencies and the increase of estimates and appropriations for the expenses of the United States courts. It is my purpose, as far as I may be able to do so, to demonstrate to the House, if I can, that in view of legislation in Congress and in view of the increased litigation growing out of other causes, the increase of expenses is in no wise commensurate with the increase of the business dispatched by the courts of the country. In doing so I have no criticism to make upon the Committee on Appropriations beyond that which affects the policy which has been pursued by the committee and the House of Representatives with reference to the mode and methods of making appropriations in the past.

In their report the committee say there are three inherent defects in our present system of estimates and appropriations. They say:

The ever-recurring deficiencies both in annual estimates and appropriations for the "expenses of United States courts" are entitled to the grave and thoughtful consideration of Congress. The real cause of them may be found—

1. In the system of allotment of appropriations by the Department, which is inherently bad; as, necessarily, no wisdom or judgment can prevent the giving of too much money to some courts and too little to others, thereby tempting the former to extravagance and compelling the latter in many instances to suspend proceedings.

I am not advised by this paragraph that I have just read whether this alleged defect exists in the Department of Justice or in the Department of the Treasury. Under the law, if it exists at all, it is in the Department of the Treasury. No one is left in doubt when considering the paragraph itself as to what the committee intended. I think I may judge from what has occurred on the floor of the House before in this Congress what is meant by this paragraph. On two previous occasions I have undertaken to demonstrate that the Committee on Appropriations in making that charge of an inherent defect in the method of appropriations did so without foundation in fact. I propose now authoritatively, as far as I may do so, to silence that suggestion in the future if I can.

When I read this report I went to the First Comptroller of the Treasury and requested of him the basis which had been given to the Committee on Appropriations in 1886, and which authorized them in their judgment to make a statement of this kind, either upon the floor of the House or in their report. In response to that request he furnished me with a letter addressed to the Attorney-General, dated July 23, 1886, and from that letter I shall have read a paragraph bearing upon this subject. I will send it to the Clerk's desk and let him read the whole letter, that it may go to the country just as it is.

The Clerk read as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, FIRST COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., July 23, 1886.

SIR: Referring to the matter of advances of public funds to United States marshals, about which I spoke to you this morning, I beg to say that, although a marshal is a disbursing officer, pure and simple, so far as his connection with the appropriations for fees of jurors, fees of witnesses, support of prisoners, and miscellaneous expenses of United States courts are concerned, I do not conceive that such a relation at all exists between him and the appropriation for fees and expenses of marshals. I do not, therefore, perceive the propriety of allowing a marshal, under this appropriation, to carry balances for the United States during the whole of the fiscal year. Under the former appropriations a marshal should, of course, be furnished with the necessary money, otherwise he could not be expected to pay the demands against the United States that are presented to him for payment.

The evil effect of the practice that has heretofore obtained, of treating the appropriation for fees and expenses of marshals very much as though it were a disbursing fund, to be handled by marshals, is seen in the fact that Congress is applied to at this session for appropriations to the amount of $65,750.60 to pay fees and expenses of marshals in 1885 and prior years (and this amount is provided for in the general deficiency bill now pending), when the books of the Treasury Department show that there is, at this time, due from marshals for 1885 and prior years, under that appropriation, $129,157.03. In other words, the appropriations already made for the above purpose are more than sufficient by $63,406.43; and yet, by reason of the erroneous manner of dealing with it, we have now to go to Congress and ask a further appropriation of $65,750.60.

I see no impropriety in making small advances from this appropriation to defray the actual expenses of travel, etc.; but it occurs to me that the appropriation should principally be called on to pay balances found due marshals on an examination of their accounts. Of course, they can render accounts as frequently as they have occasion. In this way the appropriation would simply be called on to the extent that marshals' fee and expense accounts had been approved by the proper accounting officers.

I write the foregoing that you may know the considerations that will influence me in my recommendations as to advances of money to marshals on their requisitions.

I send statement of the Register as to state of accounts indicated herein.

Very respectfully, yours,

M. J. DURHAM, Comptroller.

Hon. A. H. GARLAND, Attorney-General.

Mr. ROGERS. Now, Mr. Chairman, this letter suggests two considerations. First, the deficiency spoken of here preceded the 23d day of July, 1886. This letter having been written about a year after the present administration began and covering the fees in the hands of marshals for previous years, it suggests another consideration; and that consideration is that except in so far as these distributions may have taken place during the first year previous to the writing of this letter the present administration are in no sense responsible for them.

And finally it suggests another consideration, which is this, and in regard to which the Committee on Appropriations have seemed to be always under a misapprehension of fact when discussing these court expenses. Is is that if these moneys, the amount of which now outstanding, as shown by this letter, is about $65,000, are to be recovered, they are not to be added to the appropriations for the current fiscal year, but on the contrary are covered into the Treasury and placed with the general fund, subject to any appropriations made hereafter, and not to be used for the expenses of the United States courts for the current fiscal year.

But, Mr. Chairman, the more important letter of the two has yet to be read. I requested in person that I should be furnished with a statement of the courts and marshals, and the States in which they are located, and the amounts in their hands which had not been properly disbursed; and this is the answer I received.

Mr. SAYERS. What is the date of the letter?

Mr. ROGERS. February 4, 1888. It is as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, FIRST COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., February 4, 1888.

SIR: Referring to your verbal request of this morning to be furnished with certain information as to the status of marshals with the appropriation for "Fees and expenses of marshals," I inclose herewith copy of a letter which I addressed to the Attorney-General on the 23d of July, 1886, showing the status at that time as to 1885 and prior years. The amount so outstanding as to 1886 and 1887 would be found to be quite small as compared with former years. It would require so much time and labor to overhaul the figures, etc., of the various marshals of the country to give you the information in detail that I make this general statement, thinking that perhaps it will answer your purpose. I understand that you wanted the information on Monday.

Very respectfully,

M. J. DURHAM, Comptroller.

Hon. JOHN H. ROGERS, M. C.,
House of Representatives.

I think, Mr. Chairman, that this ought to dispose of two propositions. First, it ought to show that "the method of disbursement," which the report says is "inherently bad," was always a thing that was under the control of the First Comptroller, and, secondly, that under the administration of the present Comptroller the abuses which grew up in former administrations, mulcting the Government to the extent of some $65,000 in former years, have been practically corrected.

Mr. SAYERS. Will the gentleman yield to me for a moment?

Mr. ROGERS. With pleasure.

Mr. SAYERS. I understood you to say that this bill only covers deficiencies for 1885 and prior years?

Mr. ROGERS. Not at all. I did not make any statement about the bill. I spoke of the letter of the First Comptroller.

The next proposition to which I desire for the moment to address my attention is found in the second ground upon which fault is found by the committee with the present method of transacting this business. It is stated to be in "the power of appointment of clerks and certain other officers and employés of United States courts by the district judge, who too frequently gathers around him in official positions or employment those who, by blood or marriage, constitute his personal family." It is sufficient to say, Mr. Chairman, that I concur fully with the Committee on Appropriations on that point in so far as it applies to former years, but the force of their statement is completely broken when the fact is made known that Congress at the last session prohibited by public law any United States judge from appointing any relative of his as an officer of his court. So that, in the line of reform and retrenchment, in the line of dissipating these abuses which have created in the minds of the Committee on Appropriations this nightmare, a Democratic Congress have corrected this evil so that it can no longer exist in our country.

The third objection, as stated by the committee, consists—in the want of a different system of disbursing the money appropriated for these expenses——

Mr. SAYERS. I wish to ask the gentleman a question. Was the effect of that law of which he speaks to turn out the sons and nephews that were already in office?

Mr. ROGERS. No. The Committee on the Judiciary did not undertake to interfere with that which had been already done; they simply attempted, as far as possible, to correct or prevent similar evils which might otherwise exist in the future.

The third objection, as stated by the committee, consists—

in the want of a different system of disbursing the money appropriated for these expenses, the present system of payment through the marshals being unsatisfactory and demoralizing.

And they say that—

At the place where a United States court is held a disbursing officer might well be appointed under existing law who, being wholly disinterested, and under the law and strict regulations of the Treasury Department, could make the court disbursements without loss, delay, or irregularity, and at all times be ready to report the balance on hand. The cost of disbursement would not be thereby increased, and the great reform would be that the self-created creditor of the United States would not be the custodian of the money out of which he is to become paymaster to himself and associates.

I propose to discuss the propriety of legislation of that sort, and to show, in the first place, that the Committee on Appropriations are in error, as I believe, as to the facts; and secondly, that the policy which they suggest to the House would be an unwise one. It is said in the report that these disbursing officers could be appointed under existing law, but I understand from private consultation with my friend from Missouri [Mr. BURNES], who prepared this report, that he did not mean to say that the appointments could be made under any law now existing, but that the law could be and should be amended so that these appointments could be made. Therefore I waive that point, simply remarking that there is no existing law of which I am cognizant that would authorize the appointment of any disbursing officer at any of these courts. If I am in error as to that, I should be glad indeed to be corrected.

What, then, would be the effect if we undertake to change the existing law so as to place a disbursing officer at every United States court throughout the country? If some gentleman more familiar than myself with the judiciary system could tell me just how many courts we have, I could then indicate how many officers would be required to be located at these courts in addition to those we now have. But I do not know any better way of indicating the error of the policy suggested than to show, by way of illustration, the effect of it with reference to the court with the details of which I am more familiar than those of any other.

The marshal of the western district of Arkansas, as the report of the Attorney-General will show, has for a number of years earned about $8,000 a year. Embraced in this amount is the 2 per cent. for the disbursement of the moneys of the Government under existing law. Now, if you place a disbursing officer there, the maximum compensation of the marshal is not thereby curtailed in the slightest degree, because he earns his $6,000 over and above the 2 per cent. commission; or, if that is not true in this particular case, it would be the fact in many courts throughout the country. Assuming the case to be as I have supposed, you would have the marshal receiving the maximum compensation under the law, $6,000, and you would have in addition a disbursing officer who would get the 2 per cent. on all funds disbursed in that court. Thus, instead of economizing the expenditures of the Government in the administration of the law in the courts of the United States, you would simply have throughout the country additional officers to be paid from the Treasury of the Government.

This would not be true of all the courts, because in many places the marshals do not earn $6,000; and in those cases there would simply be a distribution of whatever earnings they do make between two separate and distinct offices.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, the marshals of the United States disburse moneys which I classify into two funds. One is for the marshal and his deputies. This is advanced to him under the direction of the Comptroller of the Treasury. It is true that the requisitions pass through the Department of Justice; but the statutes give the Comptroller of the Treasury control over the requisition, and he may at his pleasure reduce the sum allowed in accordance with what he conceives to be the proper requirements of the court. I will state, by way of parenthesis, that the letter I have just read indicates that under the present administration the system is not involved in any abuses worthy of mention.

The second class of funds controlled by the marshal embraces fees of jurors and witnesses, and this expenditure, I will state to the Appropriations Committee (and if they think I am in error I will cite the statute), is under the absolute control, not of the marshal, not of the Attorney-General, not of the Treasury Department, but of the United States courts themselves, by orders which are made a part of the public record of the respective courts.

Mr. SAYERS. Will the gentleman allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. ROGERS. Certainly.

Mr. SAYERS. Does not the gentleman know that the Comptroller of the Treasury pays no attention whatever to the order of the court allowing these fees unless it suits him to do so? He does not consider the order of the court as absolute and conclusive.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, I will answer the gentleman's question. I do not know what the Comptroller of the Treasury does in every instance, but I undertake to state what the law is on this subject—not as interpreted by me, but as found in the statute-books. I send to the Clerk's desk to be read section 846 of the Revised Statutes.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 846. The accounts of district attorneys, clerks, marshals, and commissioners of circuit courts shall be examined and certified by the district judge of the district for which they are appointed, before they are presented to the accounting officers of the Treasury Department for settlement. They shall then be subject to revision upon their merits by said accounting officers, as in case of other public accounts: Provided, That no accounts of fees or costs paid to any witness or juror, upon the order of any judge or commissioner, shall be so re-examined as to charge any marshal for an erroneous taxation of such fees or cost; that where the ministerial officers of the United States have or shall incur extraordinary expense in executing the laws thereof, the payment of which is not specifically provided for, the President of the United States is authorized to allow the payment thereof under the special taxation of the district or circuit court of the district in which the said services have been or shall be rendered, to be paid from the appropriation for defraying the expenses of the judiciary.

Mr. ROGERS. It will be seen, Mr. Chairman, that this provision of the law gives the accounting officers of the Treasury control over the accounts of the clerks of the courts, the district attorneys, the marshals and their deputies; but it will likewise be seen that by express provision of the statute the fees of witnesses and jurors (which I was discussing at the time I was interrupted) are under the absolute control of the court. It is provided that—

No accounts of fees or costs paid to any witness or juror, upon the order of any judge or commissioner, shall be so re-examined as to charge any marshal for an erroneous taxation of such fees or costs.

So that, by the very terms of the statute, the power of the accounting officers of the Treasury is to this extent expressly restricted. Neither the Comptroller of the Currency nor any other officer under the Government has control of these expenditures after they have received the approval of the court. It is true, following that is the provision of the statute which enables the President, in case of extraordinary expenses, to make allowance for expenses of that character.

Now, Mr. Chairman, that brings me to the conclusion that in so far as the marshals are disbursing officers for themselves, their deputies or clerks, and district attorneys, the auditing officer of the Government is the Secretary of the Treasury himself—or, in other words, is the Comptroller of the Treasury, to whom this work is assigned under the organization of the Department—and if in the exercise of the proper care and judgment on the part of the First Comptroller unnecessary sums of money are kept out of the hands of these officers under the law, he has the absolute control of adjusting these accounts as he may see fit; and to that other conclusion, that in so far as the marshal is a disbursing officer for jurors and witnesses the power is not in the marshal or the Department of Justice or the Department of the Treasury, but absolutely in the courts of the land. So I think when the Committee on Appropriations suggests a reform by appointing disbursing officers, it must have been in the dark as to the correct management or the disbursement of these funds.

There is another provision of this report to which I might refer, but I do not care, not being very familiar with it, to indulge in any criticism except as to one particular point, and that is that in all these districts throughout the country where the internal-revenue system prevails, where liquor is manufactured and tobacco is grown and manufactured, where the laws in reference to the internal-revenue system apply, if the courts would assume the responsibility of controlling and managing, as they have the power and right to do, they could stop these petty prosecutions of which the report of the committee complains. I do not know any better way of illustrating how they can do it than by stating the method or plan of the district court judge in the western district of the State of Arkansas.

Whenever a new marshal comes in for that court and his deputies are appointed, the judge summons him and his deputies to the presence of the court and signifies to them his condemnation of the arrest of persons in that district for mere technical violations of the internal-revenue or intercourse law. The effect of that proceeding has been a wholesome one throughout that district; and every other judge throughout the United States who has the public interest more at heart than that of his judicial family can bring about the same reform if he will only do it.

Many years ago in that district a large number of the most petty, insignificant, and trifling prosecutions were set on foot under a former judge, but now with a proper organization of the court they have been completely and absolutely broken up, and you will find on the dockets of that court scarcely a single case of violation of the internal-revenue law which is not a substantial violation of the law and not merely technical in its character. It is so with reference to entries of cases of violation of the intercourse law, which law makes liquor contraband in the Indian country.

I turn now to another branch of this subject—the statement that the ever-recurring deficiencies are entitled to the grave and thoughtful consideration of Congress. That statement, Mr. Chairman, is well put, for deficiencies under any proper system ought always to receive the grave and careful consideration of Congress. But what has been the practice and experience in Congress in making these appropriations? My information is for twenty years Congress instead of granting to the Departments the amount estimated for them undertake to make such appropriations as they deem necessary and afterwards make up the balance by deficiencies; in some cases the deficiencies amounting almost to the original appropriation. I do not know but one or two instances during my experience when appropriations were granted in conformity to the request of the Department of the Government. One instance was last year when the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads gave every dollar that was estimated for.

There was a full appropriation made for the requirements of the United States courts. In one instance at least, in the cases of jurors, we granted in the year 1887 the exact sum asked for. In that year the appropriations were $450,000, while the estimates were the same, and in 1887 and 1888 the appropriations for witnesses was $550,000, while the estimates were the same. With these two exceptions during my whole experience in Congress I do not know of a single instance where the appropriations asked for were granted in full. There may be other instances, but they do not occur to me now, and I know it has not been the practice.

The Departments make the estimates as best they can, only approximating what the needs will be. They do it in pursuance of law, and they should do it with the same responsibility that we act here, but we assume to do what we please, and then complain if the money does not hold out. There are exceptions, of course, but this is the rule.

But, Mr. Chairman, there are instances where, even when all that has been asked for has been granted by Congress, deficiencies have occurred, and hence I say in that class of cases particularly is it true that "they should enlist the grave and thoughtful consideration of Congress."

What are deficiencies, and in what light are they to be considered? Deficiencies are for actually ascertained expenses for which no money is available, or an ascertained certainty of expenses that must be incurred in excess of the appropriation. When the full amount has been granted that has been estimated for, one of two things is true: either that the sum estimated for was not sufficient to meet the requirements of the service, or if it was sufficient and the appropriation was granted, that appropriation was improperly disbursed. In either case, I repeat, it requires "the thoughtful consideration of Congress."

Mr. RANDALL. In both the cases you mention, however, there were deficiencies.

Mr. ROGERS. Yes, I am aware of that; it so appears in the report.

Now, Mr. Chairman, on the subject, more particularly on the subject of the expenses of the United States courts, let me invite your attention to another fact. It may be found substantially presented in the report of the committee, which furnishes a statement of the expenses of the courts and a list of the deficiencies in the appropriations forten consecutive years, from 1878 down to 1888, and I will ask at this point to have printed in the RECORD this table for the information of those who have not examined it. It is as follows:

Statement of appropriations for expenses of United States courts.

[Including items in the deficiency bill already passed and the accompanying bill.]

	1878.	1879.	1880.	1881.	1882.	1883.	1884.	1885.	1886.	1887.	1888.
Expenses of U. S. courts:
Annual appropriation.	$2,650,000.00	$2,750,000.00
Deficiencies	286,000.00	425,000.00
Claims	19,481.57	66,520.49
Total	2,955,481.57	3,241,520.49
Fees and expenses of marshals:
Annual appropriation.			$600,000.00	$650,000.00	$600,000.00	$600,000.00	$600,000.00	$600,000.00	$675,000.00	$675,000	$675,000
Deficiencies			30,000.00	60,000.00	50,000.00	150,000.00	91,724.67	127,155.03	30,000.00
Claims				32,243.37	2,058.55	30,549.96	786.30
Total			630,000.00	742,243.37	652,058.55	780,549.96	692,510.97	727,155.03	705,000.00	675,000	675,000
Fees of district attorneys:
Annual appropriation.			300,000.00	350,000.00	325,000.00	325,000.00	325,000.00	325,000.00	350,000.00	350,000	325,000
Deficiencies			25,000.00	20,000.00	87,370.37	119,500.00	80,000.00	40,000.00	25,568.81
Claims				2,417.06	3,067.05	3,228.33	175.60
Total			325,000.00	372,417.06	415,437.42	447,728.33	405,175.60	365,000.00	375,568.81	350,00	325,000
Pay of assistant attorneys:											100,000
Annual appropriation.
Fees of clerks:
Annual appropriation.			160,000.00	160,000.00	150,000.00	160,000.00	160,000.00	160,000.00	175,000.00	175,000	175,000
Deficiencies			25,000.00	45,000.00	5?,000.00	60,000.00	50,000.00	54,744.50	8,465.87
Claims				1,257.65	65.49	1,283.20	38.00
Total			185,000.00	206,257.65	205,065.49	221,283.20	210,038.00	214,744.50	183,465.87	175,000	175,000
Fees of commissioners:
Annual appropriation.			140,000.00	140,000.00	100,000.00	130,000.00	130,000.00	100,000.00	100,000.00	100,000	50,000
Deficiencies			230.90	16,000.00	55,000.00	20,000.00	5,000.00	46,056.22	60,000.00
Claims				3,119.80	780.95	488.93	131.85
Total			140,230.90	159,119.80	155,780.95	150,488.93	135,131.85	146,056.22	160,000.00	100,000	50,000
Fees of jurors:
Annual appropriation.			400,000.00	400,000.00	450,000.00	450,000.00	450,000.00	400,000.00	450,000.00	450,000	450,000
Deficiencies			40,756.35	40,000.00	20,000.00		60,000.00	50,000.00	90,000.00	50,000	150,000
Claims				2,154.65	62.20	87.70	80.20
Total			440,756.35	442,154.65	470,062.20	450,087.70	510,080.20	450,000.00	540,000.00	500,000	600,000
Fees of witnesses:
Annual appropriation.			550,000.00	550,000.00	600,000.00	600,000.00	600,000.00	500,000.00	550,000.00	550,000	550,000
Deficiencies			60,497.14	30,000.00	70,000.00	6,080.00	60,321.50	121,408.74	237,150.00	200,000	300,000
Claims				6,185.83	247.55	3,171.66	98.80
Total			610,497.14	586,185.83	670,247.55	609,251.66	660,420.30	621,408.74	787,150.00	750,000	850,000
Support of prisoners:
Annual appropriation			193,000.00	200,000.00	325,000.00	325,000.00	300,000.00	300,000.00	250,000.00	240,000	250,000
Deficiencies			128,972.13	100,000.00					11,740.68	40,000
Claims				3,657.93	3,804.50	5,678.53	263.00
Total			321,972.13	303,657.93	328,804.50	330,678.53	300,263.00	300,000.00	261,740.68	280,000	250,000
Rent of court-rooms:
Annual appropriation			67,000.00	75,000.00	75,000.00	70,000.00	50,000.00	50,000.00	50,000.00	50,000	60,000
Deficiencies			360.00				5,559.40	7,409.90	8,628.03	13,500
Claims					750.00
Total			67,360.00	75,000.00	75,750.00	70,000.00	55,559.40	57,409.90	58,628.03	63,500	60,000
Pay of bailiffs, etc.:
Annual appropriation.											100,000
Deficiencies											75,000
Total											175,000
Miscellaneous expenses:
Annual appropriation.			280,000.00	300,000.00	325,000.00	325,000.00	310,000.00	325,000.00	300,000.00	314,400	214,400
Deficiencies			26,608.04				15,000.00		13,361.53	20,000
Claims				6,858.91	1,418.90	949.93	2,021.50
Total			306,608.04	306,858.91	326,418.90	325,949.93	327,021.50	325,000.00	313,361.53	334,400	214,400
Total by years...	2,955,481.57	3,241,520.49	3,027,424.56	3,193,895.20	3,299,625.56	3,386,018.24	3,296,200.82	3,206,774.39	3,384,914.92	3,227,900	3,374,400

Mr. McCOMAS. Allow me to interrupt the gentleman there for a moment, to state that if he wants to publish with his remarks the table of expenditures given here, in order to make it correct it should include also the deficiencies for the years 1886 and 1887 in this very bill, and give the detailed expenditures for those years, which show them to be greater than for prior years.

Mr. BURNES. The table does include them.

Mr. McCOMAS. No.

Mr. ROGERS. I do not know whether the table includes it or not; but if it is important to have given the exact amount, it should be included in the table by the gentleman who prepared it. I have not examined to ascertain whether it is included or not.

But from 1878 to 1888 the increase of expenses in the Department of Justice runs from $2,955,000 up to $3,374,000. Here is an increase of only about $319,000 in a decade, in a country growing and developing and increasing in population, in wealth, in courts, in States and Territories as rapidly as this.

Mr. LONG. Let me ask if that includes also the deficiencies for 1886 and 1887?

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. You mean for 1887 and 1888.

Mr. RANDALL. We have not got through with 1888 yet.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. I had that table prepared and it does not contain the deficiencies for 1887 and 1888. What they are I do not know.

Mr. LONG. You will want your statement to go out exactly correct?

Mr. ROGERS. Undoubtedly; and I intend that it shall so go out. I have not examined to see whether the deficiencies the gentleman refers to are in the report or not.

Mr. LONG. But if that is more than $319,000, that fact ought to go out.

Mr. ROGERS. Yes, sir; I notice in 1887 a deficiency of $20,000 in miscellaneous expenses, but in 1888 there are no deficiencies whatever. So much I have gathered from the table, having taken the time to ascertain that. Of course there are deficiencies provided for in the bill now under consideration. I do not know what they are. The bill will show that.

So that, Mr. Chairman, we have this significant fact, that, beginning with 1878 and running to 1888, the deficiencies and the appropriations for the Department of Justice for the United States courts throughout the country have ranged from $2,900,000 to $3,300,000, in round numbers. In other words, the expenses have fallen a little below or risen a little above $3,000,000 annually; and yet, after having carefully or critically examined the table, I undertake to say that there has not been a single year of the ten for which deficiencies have not been appropriated for. This settles the fact that the House of Representatives or the Congress of the United States ought to bring it down closer.

The Committee on Appropriations, with the knowledge before their eyes of the fact that the appropriations must approximate either a little below or a little above $3,000,000, continue upon the system of making the appropriation less than $3,000,000, and following it up by making appropriations to supply deficiencies thereafter, so that instead of meeting fairly and squarely, as we should, the necessary expenses of the Government in our annual appropriation bills, we have affected another policy, which I shall undertake to demonstrate is neither wise nor economical—that is, to appropriate less than the estimates and then bring them up to the required amount by deficiencies afterwards.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Your reflection should go further than that, or rather in a different direction; for it will be found, if you examine, that the attempts we have in many cases made to give the full amount of the estimates by the Department of Justice have resulted after all in deficiencies to meet the expenses.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, these gentlemen simply run faster than it is possible for me to do. I had stated that fact, however, before, in certain cases, but not generally by any means.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. I did not hear the gentleman, as I happened to be out.

Mr. ROGERS. I am now discussing the origin of these deficiencies of which the Appropriations Committee now complain; and I am discussing the policy which we are warranted and authorized in stating has been adopted by the House of Representatives in reference to deficiencies, which is simply to appropriate too little, and when you have exceeded the appropriation make it up by deficiencies; which, as I have stated, I will undertake to demonstrate and which I believe to be unwise and not economical.

Mr. SAYERS. Will the gentleman from Arkansas permit me to interrupt him?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Arkansas yield to the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. ROGERS. Yes, sir: if he does not consume too much time.

Mr. SAYERS. I read this paragraph:

For fees of witnesses in United States courts, 1885 and prior years, $3,163.83.

Mr. ROGERS. What is the gentleman reading from?

Mr. SAYERS. From the pending bill.

Mr. ROGERS. The gentleman from Texas is trying to confine my argument to the present bill. I am not criticising the present bill.

Mr. SAYERS. If you do not criticise the present bill, all right; then go ahead.

Mr. ROGERS. I will be candid enough to say that I have not examined the present bill. I have read it, but have not examined it critically.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I go on to say that the policy which has been pursued and which is the policy established now by the practice of the Appropriations Committee with reference to appropriations is not a wise one.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Is it an honest one?

Mr. ROGERS. Well, Mr. Chairman, I do not like to put it so strongly as that. It may sometimes operate harshly, tyrannically, and unjustly, and I did say on one occasion that it was not an honest policy. But I did not intend to go so far as that now. It is not necessary for my purpose.

Let me give the House now, for a moment, the results of this policy. In passing the appropriation bill for the fiscal year 1887 there was a deficiency, as in all the former years, for the expenses of the United States courts, and unfortunately—I find no fault on that subject now; it is not necessary—unfortunately the deficiency bill failed. And now what was the result and effect upon the country of the failure of that deficiency bill? All will concede that there would have been no result if the appropriation had been originally made sufficiently ample to meet the current expenses of the Government. But it was not so made. That bill failed, and what was the result? In order that gentlemen may understand the effect of that, I send to the Clerk's desk this estimate, which has been made by the clerk in the district in which I reside, showing what it cost the Government to suspend the proceedings of that court from some time, I believe, in May to July. I am not certain as to dates.

The Clerk read as follows:

FORT SMITH, ARK., December 8, 1887.

All criminal business in the United States court for the western district of Arkansas was suspended for want of funds to pay witnesses, with criminal cases on the docket for trial as follows:

Murder	17
Assault to kill	23
Larceny	31
Other crimes	37
Total	108

If money had been available at that time to pay witnesses and proceed with the business of the court in the regular way, these cases could have been tried at a cost for witnesses of not exceeding $20,000; whereas the fees now paid to witnesses in these cases amount to about $55,000, and the estimated amount of increase of expenses on account of overcrowding the docket is $25,000; making a total unnecessary expense for witnesses on account of failure of appropriations of about $60,000. Estimated increase of cost of keeping, feeding, etc., prisoners, $300 per month, for each year, $3,600.

I believe the foregoing statement to be a low estimate of the increase of expenses in this district on account of failure of appropriations last year. I have given the matter a good deal of attention, and if the exact figures could be ascertained I believe they would exceed the above.

STEPHEN WHEELER,
Clerk of the United States District Court, Western District Arkansas.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, this letter was sent to me by the clerk in obedience to the directions of the judge of that court, and is, of course, only an approximate estimate of what losses the Government sustained by virtue of the failure on the part of Congress to make the proper appropriations for that fiscal year. And I have in my hand now a paper giving me the estimate of the Department of Justice upon the same subject; and that bears upon the question that my friend from Texas [Mr. SAYERS] invites my attention to, namely, the deficiency of $300,000 for witnesses' fees during the fiscal year; because whatever this loss to the Government was, it was brought over from a former fiscal year by crowding the business of the courts from one year into another year, and must be subtracted from the deficiency which you now have embraced in your bill for the current fiscal year.

The estimates submitted in the urgent deficiency bill for jurors and witnesses for the current fiscal year are expenses exclusively under the control of the court. These expenses in a large measure do not properly belong to this fiscal year, but have been passed over from the last fiscal year from the want of appropriations for the expenses of that fiscal year. It is a reasonable estimate that at least $60,000 of this deficiency arises from that source.

Mr. SAYERS. Does not the gentleman from Arkansas know that Congress gave to the Department of Justice for that particular expense all that the Department of Justice asked?

Mr. ROGERS. I do not know it.

Mr. SAYERS. Then I call your attention to that.

Mr. ROGERS. That does not touch the question if it did; but I do not know whether it did or did not.

Mr. SAYERS. It did.

Mr. ROGERS. I will state to my friend that I am now trying to show that it don't pay to stop the courts, and Congress had notice of the deficiency in ample time to have made provision for it. It knew, moreover, by at least ten consecutive years' experience that it required about $3,000,000 annually to run the courts. Very rarely has it been the case that the sums estimated for have been appropriated.

Let us go another step in this matter.

Mr. RANDALL. Will the gentleman yield to me for a moment?

Mr. ROGERS. Certainly.

Mr. RANDALL. Before the gentleman proceeds further, I would like to make a suggestion that bears on no particular year, but has relation to each year's appropriation; and that is, that in the annual appropriations for marshals and their deputies the amount is given in advance for the coming year, and the deficiency is uniformly given during the year for which at a prior date the appropriation had been made, so that there should not be really any inconvenience.

The practice is to make the annual appropriations prior to the beginning of the fiscal year; that is, they are made for the coming fiscal year. Deficiency appropriations, however, are made for the current year; so that in effect the annual appropriation which is made before entering upon the fiscal year and the deficiency appropriation which is made for that year, before its expiration, taken together are almost always sufficient to meet the necessities of the year.

Mr. O'FERRALL. Will the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. RANDALL. Certainly.

Mr. O'FERRALL. I understand that there is $450,000 appropriated in the last appropriation bills for the purpose of paying fees, etc., and running the United States courts.

Mr. RANDALL. Six hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars.

Mr. O'FERRALL. Six hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars altogether.

Mr. RANDALL. No, sir, for fees of United States marshals, etc.

Mr. O'FERRALL. How much is provided in this deficiency bill?

Mr. ROGERS. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. O'FERRALL] is consuming my time, which is limited.

Mr. O'FERRALL. I simply want to say, as supplemental to what has been said by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS] that in Virginia during the last year the courts were suspended time after time for want of funds, and there are now hundreds of witnesses who were summoned before those courts but whose fees were not paid, because there was no money for that purpose.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS] has expired.

Mr. ROGERS. I trust that I shall be allowed to complete my statement, as I have been so often interrupted.

Mr. RANDALL. How much time does the gentleman desire?

Mr. ROGERS. Probably twenty minutes will be sufficient.

Mr. BURNES. Mr. Chairman, I trust that the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS] will be allowed twenty minutes more.

Mr. RANDALL. If the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES] will allow me to take the floor, I will give the gentleman from Arkansas the twenty minutes.

Mr. BURNES. I yield twenty minutes to the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, I did not perhaps precisely understand the force of the suggestion made by the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANDALL], but I want to call his attention to what I conceive to be a complete answer to it if I did comprehend him. He seems to think that because the appropriations that are made for marshals are made in advance, that ought to obviate all inconvenience.

Mr. RANDALL. No; I say that all appropriations of every kind are made in advance. This is what I say: We make annual appropriations prior to the beginning of the fiscal year for which they are made. Then in the middle, as it were, of the year for which the annual appropriations are made—that is, in the middle of the current year—we provide a deficiency, and those two appropriations taken together, the general appropriation and the deficiency appropriation, should be sufficient to "run" the Government for the year if the money is properly handled.

Mr. GROSVENOR. And if the original appropriation was large enough.

Mr. ROGERS. Understanding now the suggestion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania I must beg leave to differ with him on that point. He says it ought to be sufficient. My only answer to that is that it is not sufficient and that it never has been sufficient, or rarely so. The courts are stopped now for want of funds.

Mr. LONG. He means sufficient with prudence.

Mr. ROGERS. Where is the imprudence? I have undertaken to demonstrate that these funds have been disbursed as carefully, as cautiously, as prudently as they could be disbursed. We can not legislate upon the theory that public officers are public scoundrels. They must be assumed to be honest men. I pass now to another consideration.

Now, Mr. Chairman, what took place in the last fiscal year is in operation again. I hold in my hand an exhibit of the condition of the docket to which I have just alluded, some time about the 20th of December last, when the operations of the court were suspended. I send this document to the Clerk's desk to be read that members may see what is the practical operation of this system.

The Clerk read as follows:

COURT AND COMMISSIONERS.

Docket, December 21, 1887.

Murder:
In jail	34
On bond	9
Total	43
Rape:
In jail	1
Assault, etc.:
In jail	11
On bond	11
Total	22
Arson:
In jail	2
On bond	1
Total	3
Larceny:
In jail	24
On bond	21
Total	45
Introducing and selling liquor:
In jail	27
On bond	8
Total	35
Embezzlement:
On bond	1
Receiving stolen goods:
On bond	1
Cutting Government timber:
On bond	3
Unlawful distilling:
On bond	2
Wholesale dealers in oleomargarine:
On bond	1
Perjury:
On bond	4
Total	161
In jail	99
On bond	62

Mr. ROGERS. Thus, Mr. Chairman, we see that without any failure of the deficiency bill for this year we have the court exercising jurisdiction over the Indian Territory suspended somewhere about the 20th of December, with 161 prisoners charged with criminal offenses untried, 43 being charged with murder and the rest with various other felonies and misdemeanors. Proceeding upon the estimates of the Department of Justice, as well as the clerk of that court, as to the losses sustained by the Government on account of the failure of the deficiency bill in a former year, we may readily estimate that the Government loses, by reason of want of appropriation to run the court for the first six months of the present year, from $30,000 to $60,000. What the losses elsewhere will be I have no means of knowing or estimating. Who will say that this is economy?

Mr. SAYERS. I will ask the gentleman whether it is not the habit in that court to bring witnesses to Fort Smith, Ark., and keep them there on pay two, three, and four months?

Mr. ROGERS. I answer that question distinctly and emphatically in the negative.

When the deficiency bill failed the year before last, the effect was to crowd the business of the last quarter of one fiscal year into the first quarter of the next, keeping witnesses in attendance upon the court from one week to four and five weeks consecutively; and the business of the court which belonged to one period of six months was crowded into the succeeding term, to be transacted along with the current business coming in from time to time from the Territory. The effect of suspending court on the 20th of last December will be again to force the business of the first quarter into the second quarter; and instead of the court being able, in the exercise of its executive ability, to distribute these cases so as not to incur any unnecessary expense, the nature of the circumstances is such, by reason of the absence of railroad, telegraphic, and postal facilities, etc., that the court is unable to do anything except let witnesses come and stay until the cases can be tried. This fact of itself is an unanswerable argument against pursuing any course that withholds from the court sufficient money to administer the law over that Territory, which is almost God-forsaken, as the state of this docket shows.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Is it not the fact that a similar state of affairs exists in numbers of other courts of the United States?

Mr. ROGERS. I am unable to answer that question.

Mr. BUCHANAN. It is the fact; and especially so in my own State, where to my knowledge the officers are careful, prudent, and honest.

Mr. ROGERS. Turning to another branch of this case, let me suggest that as early as 1879 the annual expenses of the United States courts were $3,241,000, while at present they are $3,374,000—an increase of between $100,000 and $200,000 in the course of nine years. In this connection another point requires investigation. What has Congress done in the way of making increased appropriations necessary? What have the natural development and growth of the country done in increasing the expenditures for United States courts? Let us look at this for a moment. Within the last few years we have created, in obedience to the demands of the States and Territories, United States courts at Peoria, Ill.; St. Joseph, Hannibal, and Springfield, Mo.; Texarkana, Ark.; Scranton, Pa.; Bay City, Mich.; Aberdeen, Miss.; Sitka, Alaska; Shreveport and Monroe, La.; Waco, Graham, Jefferson, and El Paso, Tex.; Macon, Ga.; Los Angeles, Cal.; Chattanooga, Tenn.; Sioux City and Fort Dodge, Iowa; Birmingham, Ala.; Wichita, Kans., and Eau Claire, Wis.

These courts have been created in addition to those which were supported when $3,000,000 was annually paid for court expenses. These additional courts necessarily increase the expenses of the Government in this direction. Now, I believe from what I know of these courts that every one of them is essential for the proper administration of the law. Why, in some of these Territories alone, when the last census was taken, they had 40,000 population, and they now have 1,250,000. Are they to go on with the same judicial system they had ten years ago, or are they to keep pace with the progress and development of the country? And should we not furnish proper appropriations to meet the necessary expenses of the courts?

But there is another and more significant matter in regard to the thing to which I wish to invite your attention, and which, I think, is scarcely understood. We are not only developing and growing as a people and a country, taking in and absorbing new States and Territories, but at the same time, Mr. Chairman, we are creating new crimes and embarking in new legislation of a character which was unknown to us until within the last decade. We have on the statute-book a law in reference to the sale of oleomargarine, with provisions against the violation of that law, and since its passage there have been instituted forty-two new criminal prosecutions, not to speak of the large number of cases which have been compromised. We have under the Edmunds act created new offenses for all of the Territories, the statistics of the prosecutions under which I have been unable to get. In Idaho we have prosecuted two hundred and eleven cases for illegal cohabitation, not to speak of those in the Territory of Utah, or in the Territory of Montana, or in the other Territories. I do not know what these prosecutions are in number, as I have not been able to get the information.

Then, sir, we have passed laws providing for the protection of the public domain which have also increased very largely the business of our courts. Up to March 4, 1885, there were two thousand eight hundred and fifty-two prosecutions for unlawful inclosures and timber depredations alone. The Democratic party in its policy to recover back the public domain has passed penal statutes against these inclosures, unlawfully made, and against fraudulent entries, etc., and under those acts nearly three thousand cases have been instituted in the effort to recover the public domain.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I have it officially from the Department that two thousand six hundred and ninety-one cases have been instituted against the bonds of defaulting officers of preceding administrations alone, not including the bonds of distillers; not including the bonds of internal-revenue officers, nor embracing warehouse bonds, distillers' bonds, and exporters' bonds. I have been unable to get information as to how many suits have been instituted in those cases, although I have called for the information.

Mr. CANNON. Can the gentleman inform me what amount of money the Government has recovered in these prosecutions?

Mr. ROGERS. I will take great pleasure in answering the gentleman's question as far as I am able to do so. The sum total of these prosecutions, which embrace new legislation, with the exception of suits on bonds of defaulting officers, is five thousand seven hundred and ninety-six.

But the gentleman from Illinois asks me a pertinent question, to furnish him with information of the amount of money recovered by the United States in these several prosecutions.

Mr. CANNON. Right there let me ask the gentleman——

Mr. ROGERS. Let me answer the question which the gentleman has already put, and then I will hear what he has to ask further.

Mr. CANNON. The appropriations for the Department of Justice this year——

Mr. ROGERS. Do not say "the Department of Justice;" it is the United States courts. The Department of Justice does not have the disbursement of this money.

Mr. CANNON. Does not the gentleman know that the $3,374,000 include not only the appropriations in this bill but the appropriations in the original bill for this year, but does not include other deficiencies yet to be provided for in the general deficiency bill, which will increase the amount in the aggregate some $400,000, making in round numbers a total of $3,800,000 as expenditures for the courts this year, instead of the amount stated by the gentleman of $3,374,000?

Mr. ROGERS. I must take that statement cum grano salis. Whenever a man comes to deal with the Committee on Appropriations under the idea that he is going to get what he has estimated for, he is certain to get left—dead certain to be left.

Mr. CANNON rose.

Mr. ROGERS. Now, I do not want the gentleman from Illinois, with that left finger of his, to keep me away from answering the question he has already put. The Department of Justice for this year has received in judgments and in fines, penalties, and forfeitures $2,127,034.53. The amount of money realized from the same sources during that period was $251,213.72. In addition to this, $274,153 were realized in judgments recovered, and on fines, forfeitures, and penalties imposed in former years, and in other civil suits. I ought to state, Mr. Chairman, that these suits have been instituted on the defaulting bonds of officers, amounting to 2,691, by authority of the Solicitor of the Treasury, of some of which suits I have myself personally cognizance.

Mr. CANNON. In view of the fact that the statute of limitations does not run against the Government, have you any additional information as to when these defaults were made?

Mr. ROGERS. No, sir.

Mr. CANNON. Because I know of some myself for defaults twenty, twenty-five, or thirty years ago.

Mr. ROGERS. There need not be any dodging about this matter. I do not suppose the Solicitor of the Treasury is authorizing suits on bonds executed or causes of action which originated twenty-five, thirty, or a hundred years ago. They are more recent. But I will give the gentleman the information I have, for I want him to have it correctly.

Since March 4, 1885, there have been 2,852 prosecutions in connection with fraudulent trespasses or entries upon the public lands; and since March 5, 1885, there have been 3,685 suits which have been entered by the Solicitor of the Treasury on bonds other than those connected with the internal-revenue bonds. I went in person to inquire, for I wanted information personally upon the subject, whether that covered suits originating under the present administration, and was told that they referred exclusively to defaults during former administrations. And I find from an examination of the report of the Attorney-General of the United States, which I commend to the country and to the examination of gentlemen on both sides as being the most full, the most complete, the most exact, and, I trust, the most accurate that ever came from that Department, that 12,905 criminal prosecutions were terminated in the courts in the last year.

With this evidence, this testimony, which is, I think, exact, which challenges contradiction, is there ground or is there reason why the present Committee on Appropriations should come into the House and with their hands upheld in holy horror ask the country how long this thing is to continue, and say, to use their own language:

The ever-recurring deficiencies, both in annual estimates and appropriations, for the expenses of the United States courts are entitled to the grave and thoughtful consideration of Congress.

And again:

How long will it be before the excess of expenditures over estimates or appropriations will be more than the amount estimated or appropriated for this service?

I think, sir, in view of what Congress has done, in view of the development and growth of this country, and in view of the fact that we have been balancing the books and settling the accounts, in view of the fact that there has been no sort of increase of appropriations for this purpose commensurate with the growth, the development, the strength, and the increase of the country, that we have sincere grounds for congratulation rather than to take the contrary view, because we are slowly but gradually increasing the expenses for the United States courts. Nothing but increase will meet the demands of a growing and developing country like ours, and nothing else can be reasonably hoped for by sane men.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. BURNES. I shall not attempt to close this debate to-night, and will move that the committee now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and Mr. HOLMAN having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, Mr. BLOUNT reported that the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, having had under consideration the bill making appropriation to supply certain of the most urgent deficiencies for the service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888, and for other purposes, had come to no resolution thereon.

CORPS OF CHAPLAINS, UNITED STATES ARMY.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. 7221) to establish a corps of chaplains for the Army and to provide for appointments and promotions on examination therein; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

AGRICULTURAL-EXPERIMENT STATIONS.

Mr. BLOUNT, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. 7222) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish agricultural stations in connection with the colleges established in the several States under the provisions of the act approved July 1, 1862, and of the acts supplementary thereto;" which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Agriculture, and ordered to be printed.

ANALYSIS OF BEER, DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

Mr. ROMEIS, by unanimous consent, introduced a resolution calling on the Commissioner of Agriculture for his reasons for withholding certain information regarding the analysis of certain articles of beer by the Department of Agriculture; which was referred to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

DUTY ON IRON ORE.

Mr. MOFFITT. Mr. Speaker, I have a short memorial from the Eastern Iron-Ore Association, protesting against any reduction from the present duty on iron ore, which I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD, and referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The memorial is as follows:

Memorial to the honorable Senators and Representatives of the Congress of the United States.

The Eastern Iron-Ore Association would most respectfully protest to you against any reduction from the present duty of 75 cents per ton on iron ore. This association represesents an annual output of over 2,500,000 tons, and upon this industry are dependent for their subsistence not less than seventy-five thousand people and millions of invested capital.

The territory embraced, lying between the Appalachian chain of mountains and the Atlantic Ocean, is peculiarly exposed from its very location to foreign competition. The mines of Canada lie to the north of it, while those of Spain, Greece, and Africa can be laid down at a very low cost almost anywhere along its coast line. The miners have to compete in wages with the nominally paid barbarian labor of the above countries in the eastern hemisphere, and to reduce the duty would be to threaten the annihilation of the labor and capital above referred to. From Maine to Alabama there is hardly a State in which large bodies of iron ore do not exist, especially in the South, yet the dread of a reduced duty and the fact that, notwithstanding the present duty, over 1,300,000 tons of foreign ore was imported in 1887, stands as a constant menace against obtaining capital to develop these sections. This association would also protest against the demand made in certain quarters that ore should be placed on the free-list as being a "raw material." If iron ore be considered a raw material, so must other products requiring a like proportion of labor to put them into commercial conditions be so called. The ore may be considered as a "raw material" when in the ground, but the labor put upon it to mine and prepare it for the market certainly constitutes it a "product." Nor is the argument in favor of free raw materials a reliable one when analyzed, for by admitting iron ore, for instance, free, we will undoubtedly close the majority of our domestic mines and put ourselves at the mercy of foreign producers, whose ores are likely to be of uncertain supply in case of wars or excessive vessel rates, and when our mines have been nearly all closed they are likely to increase the price, so little can be gained to consumers. To properly equip an iron mine requires a large outlay of capital, and our wiser policy would seem to be to still more encourage the development of our own mines, and in that way, by increasing our own output, we shall be enabled to produce cheaper and better ores than by surrendering our market up to foreigners. Therefore this association would again most respectfully protest to you against any reduction from the present duty of 75 cents per ton.

EASTERN IRON-ORE ASSOCIATION,
By F. S. WITHERBEE, President.

PORT HENRY, N. Y., January 20, 1888.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

By unanimous consent, leave was granted to Mr. HOUK to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, papers in the case of Mrs. E. C. Abbott.

MONTANA, KANSAS AND TEXAS RAILROAD COMPANY.

Mr. TURNER, of Kansas, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. 7223) to grant the right of way through the Public Land Strip, Indian Territory, to the Montana, Kansas and Texas Railroad Company, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. MCCOOK, its Secretary, informed the House that the Senate had passed a joint resolution and bills of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

Joint resolution (S. R. 35) appropriating $10,000 for the subtropical exposition, at Jacksonville, Fla.;

A bill (S. 1103) to provide for an Indian school at Carson City, Nev.; and

A bill (S. 937) for the relief of David L. Brainard and others.

MEXICAN WAR PENSIONS, ETC.

Mr. GAY, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. 7224) to extend to certain volunteers in the Mexican war the benefit of the act of January 29, 1887, granting pensions to soldiers and sailors of the Mexican war, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

INTERNAL-REVENUE TAXES, ETC.

Mr. GAY also, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. 7225) for the repeal of all existing internal-revenue taxation and for the enactment of certain taxes, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Ways and Means, and ordered to be printed.

CLAIM OF NEW YORK CITY.

Mr. COX, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. 7226) to provide for the payment of the claim of the mayor, aldermen, and commonalty of New York City; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

On motion of Mr. TAULBEE, by unanimous consent, leave was given to withdraw from the files of the House the papers in the case of John Hogan.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS AT LINCOLN, NEBR.

Mr. MCSHANE, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. 7227) authorizing the expenditure of $10,000 for improving the post-office site and public grounds and paving and grading streets at Lincoln, Nebr.; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

INSPECTOR-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. 7228) to increase the efficiency of the Inspector-General's Department; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

FOURTH-CLASS POSTMASTERS.

Mr. GAINES, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. 7229) to provide for the better compensation of postmasters of fourth-class post-offices of the United States; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, and ordered to be printed.

APPEALS FROM TERRITORIAL SUPREME COURTS.

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. 7230) relative to appeals from supreme courts in the Territories; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Territories, and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT ROME, GA.

Mr. CLEMENTS, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. 7231) for the erection of a public building at Rome, Ga., which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. MCMILLIN. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 2 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

PRIVATE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED AND REFERRED.

Under the rule private bills and joint resolutions of the following titles were introduced and referred as indicated below:

By Mr. ABBOTT: A bill (H. R. 7232) for the relief of C. L. Wilson—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. BACON (by request): A bill (H. R. 7233) granting a pension to Hiram Beach—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BURNES: A bill (H. R. 7234) to grant a pension to John P. Bedwell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CARUTH: A bill (H. R. 7235) for the relief of Benjamin Parker, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. CHEADLE: A bill (H. R. 7236) granting a pension to Otis S. Stafford—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CLARK: A bill (H. R. 7237) granting a pension to Clarissa Harvey—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7238) for the relief of John D. Ham—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. FLOOD: A bill (H. R. 7239) for the relief of R. R. R. Dumars—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. GIFFORD: A bill (H. R. 7240) granting a pension to Albert W. Keeny—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HARMER: A bill (H. R. 7241) for the relief of George S. Thompson and Archibald Campbell—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. HAYES: A bill (H. R. 7242) granting a pension to William White—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HITT: A bill (H. R. 7243) to relieve Joseph S. Hurst from the charge of desertion—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7244) for the relief of Abram A. Lutz—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. S. I. HOPKINS: A bill (H. R. 7245) for the relief of Romantus Lake—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HOWARD: A bill (H. R. 7246) for the relief of Ephraim Smallwood, George Smallwood, Jesse M. Browning, Allen Goss, and Frank Varney—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MAISH: A bill (H. R. 7247) to increase the pension of Mary A. Gibson, widow of Commander William Gibson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MANSUR: A bill (H. R. 7248) to grant a pension to C. J. J. Martyr—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MCCREARY: A bill (H. R. 7249) for the relief of Santford Alcorn—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7250) for the relief of Santford Alcorn—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MONTGOMERY: A bill (H. R. 7251) for the relief of Mary West, administratrix of Charles West—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MORROW: A bill (H. R. 7252) granting a pension to Robert Harrison—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. NELSON: A bill (H. R. 7253) granting a pension to the widow of Samuel Clary—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PEEL: A bill (H. R. 7254) granting a pension to James C. Garrison—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PHELPS: A bill (H. R. 7255) for the relief of A. B. Tyan—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. C. A. RUSSELL: A bill (H. R. 7256) to provide for the payment of the passage of General de Lafayette and family from France to the United States in 1824 as the "guest of the nation," etc.—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. SCULL: A bill (H. R. 7257) for the relief of John W. Gummo—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. G. M. THOMAS: A bill (H. R. 7258) for the relief of Thomas Mattingly—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. TRACEY: A bill (H. R. 7259) for the removal of the charge of desertion from the military record of Jacob Wyant—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WALKER: A bill (H. R. 7260) for the relief of B. M. Horrell—to the Committee on War Claims.

Changes in the reference of bills improperly referred were made in the following cases, namely:

A bill (H. R. 2529) granting a pension to Mary Monti—from the Committee on Invalid Pensions to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 2530) granting a pension to John C. Wagoner—from the Committee on Invalid Pensions to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 2531) granting a pension to Frederick W. Travis—from the Committee on Invalid Pensions to the Committee on Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk, under the rule, and referred as follows:

By Mr. BELDEN: Petition of the faculty of Syracuse University, Syracuse, N. Y., favoring the reduction of the tariff on the importation of scientific works—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BINGHAM: Petition of the United American Clay Tobacco-Pipe Employers and Employés' Association, for a revision of the tariff laws on manufactured clay pipes imported from Europe—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BLOUNT: Papers and petitions in the claims of Martha Price; of James Trice, administrator of William Trice; of Mary Willmaker; of James A. Carden; of John E. Elam; of Susan Carrier; of Benjamin F. Reaves; of James M. Middlebrook; of William R. Welborn; of Christian Whele; of John Cox; of F. F. Matthews; of Nicholas Rawlings; of Sabina Morton; of Thomas G. Scott, administrator of Easley Cleveland; of John Ficken; of George F. Pander; of Martin Wendleken; of Peter Lynch; of Thomas J. Walsh; of Elizabeth Wright; of Thomas Clements; of Tillman Niblett; of Margaret Bloodworth; of Abraham M. Weaver; of Larkin Wilcher; of Jordan Lyons; of Mattie A. D. Vaughan, widow of M. B. D. Vaughan; of Susan Davis; of Dr. Solomon Shiftall; of William Rutherford; of James Trice; of Henry Fields; of Asa Braswell; of William Goddard; of Jackson Burt; of William J. Willis; of Josiah R. Chambers, administrator of Josiah Chambers; of Zadock C. Baker; of George Von Waldner; of Simeon L. Morton; of Richard Butler; of William H. Parker; of Ballenger Gravely; of John P. Davidson; of Shelton H. Campbell; of Abraham Shiftall; of John M. Nace; of J. H. Bray; of Rebecca D. Fulton; of Thomas W. Quarterman; of Gabriel Parks; of Jane A. Head; of Allen J. Veal; of William C. Battle; of Mrs. E. B. D. Vaughn; of Tilman Nibbett; of G. H. Elliott; of Hiram Howe; of Benjamin Haygood; of Pinkney Persons; of Jane Edge; of Margaret Bloodworth; of Martin Wendelkin; of J. B. Rogers and O. L. Wyley, heirs of Lowery Williams; of Thomas G. Verdine; of Levi N. Middlebrook; of Wilkins W. Jackson; and of Matthew T. Farley, all of the State of Georgia—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky: Petition of the administratrix of Michael McAllister, of Henry County, Kentucky, for reference of his case to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BREWER: Petition of Merritt Lewis, for increase of pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BUNNELL: Resolutions of Beech Flats Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, of East Canton, Bradford County, Pennsylvania, protesting against the repeal of the oleomargarine law—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. BURNETT (by request): Petition for general appropriations to build post-offices in all towns of over 3,000 inhabitants—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. CARUTH: Paper in relation to the bill for the relief of the estate of Benjamin Parker—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. CLEMENTS: A bill to appropriate $97,000 to complete the improvements of the Coosa River, in Georgia and Alabama—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, a bill to appropriate $500,000 for the improvement of the Coosa River, in Georgia and Alabama—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, a bill to appropriate $20,000 to improve the Oostenaula and Coosawattee Rivers, in Georgia—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. COX: Petition of Burger & Lee and 47 other firms and individuals in New York City, for the removal of the duty on tin-plate—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CROUSE: Resolutions of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union—to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. DINGLEY: Petition of Gideon L. Pease, for pensions for soldiers of the Black Hawk war—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. DOCKERY: Petition of Dr. M. Mansur, for a pension—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. ELLIOTT: Petition of citizens of Sumter and of Mayesville, S. C., for the improvement of Winyaw Bay Bar—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. ENLOE: Petition of E. T. McGill and of R. H. Hall, of Carroll County, Tenn., for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of Margaret E. Price, of Dunbar, and of Nancy R. Price, of Scott's Hill, Tenn., for pensions. Also, affidavit of James G. Montgomery, of Decatur County, Tennessee, in support of their applications—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ERMENTROUT: Memorial of William Schaus, for removal of duty on works of sculpture and painting—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, memorial of C. L. Gibbs, of Pennsylvania, for low postal rates on seeds, etc.—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. FINLEY: Petition of Nathan Warren, of D. M. Williams, of William F. Warren, of W. E. Waller, of Andrew Walters, of William Wells, of John G. Smith, of P. M. Smith, of Lucy S. Stark, of Isaac Smith, of Silas Redford, of Robert Richardson, of Jesse S. Pedigo, of Antoynette Pace, of J. W. Pace, of James A. Powell, of J. H. Poynter, of Franklin Overstreet, of Thomas J. Owen, of W. D. Owen, of B. W. Nuchols, of J. R. Maddox, of James Merry, of J. B. Marshall, and of C. A. Milligan, of Kentucky, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. GALLINGER: Papers in the case of Emanuel Mason—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. GEAR: Resolution of the General Assembly of Iowa, in regard to liens of judgments of the Federal courts being filed in the counties and indexed by the clerk of the court—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. GIFFORD: Petition of John Alelan, and 46 others of Dickinson, Dak., for the relief of George Auld, late postmaster at said place—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. GROUT: Petition of 124 citizens of Jay, Vt., for a pension for Edna M. Hildreth—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, proof in support of Laura D. Pierce's claim for a pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HARMER: Petition of Thompson S. Campbell, for extension of letters patent—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. HAYES: Petition of William White, for a pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. D. B. HENDERSON: Joint resolution of the General Assembly of Iowa in regard to the liens of judgments in the United States courts—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. S. I. HOPKINS (by request): Petition of miners and others of Caperton and of Stone Cliff, W. Va., protesting against the removal of duties on coal, coke, and ores—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LAFFOON: Petition of 3,500 citizens, and of B. C. Courts and 206 other citizens, and of John W. Belt and 202 other citizens, living on Green River, Kentucky, for the purchase by the Government of the franchise of the Green and Barren River Navigation Company, in Kentucky, and opening said rivers to commerce—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, a bill authorizing and directing the purchase of the lease owned by the Green and Barren River Navigation Company on said rivers, and appropriating money for that purpose—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition of citizens of Evansville, Ind., in favor of opening the Green and Barren Rivers, in Kentucky, to navigation—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. LEE: Petition of Jane Dulaney, for increase of pension—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. LYNCH: Petition of Rosalie Bleecker, widow of John Van B. Bleecker, for increase of pension—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. McCLAMMY: Papers in the claims of Richard W. Johnson, of Elijah Parker, of Esidore Cohn, of Nathaniel K. Thornton, of Frederick Mathis, of Hector McMillan, of Margaret Duffy, of William R. Clark, of Ezekiel Stevens, and of Theopolus Weaver, of North Carolina—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. McCREARY: Petitions of John Kincaid, of William McCarley, of Clementina Kincaid, of Jeff McGinniss, of Samuel G. Moore, of George W. Mitchell, of Jesse Peter, of S. M. Pipes, of Thomas C. Prewitt, of John T. Russell, of Lytle R. Schooler, of John G. Wade, of Ann S. Tadlock, of Richard Surratt, of Noah Hundley, of John W. Isham, of Mary Hope, of Susan A. French, of Jane H. Davis, of T. J. Dillehay, of Cooper Dunn, of Charles Clark, of John W. Huguely, of estate of Green Bottom, of Henry P. Bottom, of James A. Bottom, of Thompson M. Arnold, and of Marcus H. Garnet, of Kentueky, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MATSON: Petition of W. Y. Beller, for arrears of pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MOFFITT: Petition of Joseph Laport and Isaac L. Rock, and of John Houghron and William H. Gordon and others, relative to arrears of pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. OATES: Petition of P. M. Calloway, sr., and 52 others, of Newton, Dale County, and of T. A. Beard and 25 others, of County Line, Ala.

By Mr. O'FERRALL: Petition of William H. Anderson, of Frederick County, Virginia, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. CHARLES O'NEILL: Joint memorial of the Board of Trade, the Commercial, Maritime, and Drug Exchanges, and Vessel-Owners and Captains' Association of Philadelphia, for the passage of an act for an international maritime conference, for the purpose of promoting the safety of life and property on the high seas—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of the councils of Philadelphia, favoring the removal of Smith's, Windmill, and Petty's Island in the Delaware River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. PARKER: Petition of citizens of Houndfield, Jefferson County, New York, in favor of an equalization of pensions—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PERKINS: Resolutions of the Board of Trade of Atchison,

Kans., for an immediate appropriation to keep the Missouri River open to navigation, and to protect important property interests now threatened by the washing of the river at that city—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, memorial of the Board of Trade of Kansas City, Kans., for a public building in keeping with the necessities of the post-office and the growth and importance of the city—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. PERRY: Petition of citizens of Columbia, S. C., for an appropriation for the improvement of the Congaree River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. RANDALL: Petition of A. G. P. Brown and others, for increase of the pension for total or partial deafness—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SCULL: Papers in the claim of B. F. Jameson, for relief—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SHAW: Petition of Mary C. Correll, widow of Christian Correll, of Carroll County, Maryland, for reference of her claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of Richard T. Howard, Company A, Eleventh Maryland Volunteer Infantry, and of William Otley, father of Robert Y. Otley, for pensions—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SNYDER: Resolutions of miners and laborers at Crown Hill, Kanawha County, West Virginia—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. STAHLNECKER: Petition of the United American Tobacco-Pipe Employers and Employés' Association, for protection to clay-pipe industries—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. STRUBLE: Joint resolution of the General Assembly of Iowa, for a law providing that judgments of the United States courts shall become liens on real estate only on the filing of transcripts of the same by the clerks of the courts in the counties where the real estate is situated—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. TAULBEE: Petition of John Brumley, of Company B, Forty-seventh Regiment Kentucky Infantry Volunteers—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. G. M. THOMAS: Petition of Thomas Mattingley, for relief—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of William Preston, of Johnson County, Kentucky, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WEST: Petition of the letter-carriers of Schenectady, N. Y., for an increase of salary—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. WHEELER: A bill to improve the navigation of the Tennessee River at Colbert and Bee Tree Shoals—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition of Nancy Dulaney, widow of William Dulaney, of Jackson County, and of Ben. Mansell, of Franklin County, Alabama, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, papers in the claim of Benjamin Mansell, of Franklin County, and of William Dulaney, of Jackson County, Alabama—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WHITTHORNE: Petition of William A. Baugh, of Giles County, Tennessee, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WICKHAM: Memorial of the authorities of Elyria, Ohio, for a general appropriation bill to erect post-office buildings in cities and towns of 3,000 inhabitants or over—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. YOST: Petition of Sarah W. Brown, of Alleghany County, Virginia, for reference of her claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

The following petitions for an increase of compensation of fourth-class postmasters were severally referred to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads:

By Mr. BINGHAM: Of citizens of Kenwood, Indiana County, Pennsylvania.

By Mr. CARLTON: Of W. H. Mealloy, A. V. Johnson, and others, of Elbert County, Georgia.

By Mr. YARDLEY: Of 125 citizens of Montgomery County, Pennsylvania.

The following petitions, praying for the enactment of a law providing temporary aid for common schools, to be disbursed on the basis of illiteracy, were severally referred to the Committee on Education:

By Mr. DARLINGTON: Of 374 citizens of Chester County, Pennsylvania.

By Mr. DINGLEY: Of 118 citizens of Sagadahoc County, Maine.

By Mr. MOFFITT: Of citizens of Peru, Clinton County, New York.

By Mr. YARDLEY: Of 638 citizens of Montgomery County, Pennsylvania.

The following petitions, asking for the passage of the bill prohibiting the manufacture, sale, and importation of all alcoholic beverages in the District of Columbia, were severally referred to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic:

By Mr. MCRAE (by request): Of 202 citizens of the District of Columbia.

By Mr. C. H. ALLEN: Of Rev. Edwin Smith and 108 citizens of the Eighth district of Massachusetts.

By Mr. BAKER: Of 99 citizens of the Thirtieth and Thirty-first districts of New York, and of 300 women of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of Rochester, N. Y.

By Mr. PERKINS: Of J. B. Cook, E. D. Bates, and 88 others, citizens of the Third district of Kansas.

SENATE.

WEDNESDAY, February 15, 1888.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. J. G. BUTLER, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

STATISTICAL ABSTRACT.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution received yesterday from the House of Representatives; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, February 14, 1888.

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed 15,000 additional copies of the Statistical Abstract of the United States for the year 1887, of which 5,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate and 10,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives.

CATTLE AND DAIRY FARMING.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the concurrent resolution of the Senate of February 6, 1888, for printing 7,000 additional copies of Executive Document No. 51, first session Forty-ninth Congress, on the subject of cattle and dairy farming; which were referred to the Committee on Printing.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a memorial of Knights of Labor of South Amboy, N. J., remonstrating against the proposed change in the plans of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad bridge across the Arthur Kill near Elizabethport, N. J.; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented a petition of citizens of the District of Columbia, praying that an appropriation be made to keep the channel of the Potomac River free from ice during the winter season; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. GRAY presented the memorial of Thomas E. Records and 32 other citizens of Lewes, Del., remonstrating against the passage of the educational bill; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. PAYNE presented a petition of 233 citizens of the Eighth, Eleventh, Fourteenth, Seventeenth, and Twenty-first Congressional districts of Ohio, praying for prohibition in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a petition of the board of directors of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, praying for legislation against the importation of adulterated articles of food under any other names than those which legitimately pertain to the same; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. SAWYER presented a petition of 119 citizens of the Third, Sixth, and Eighth Congressional districts of Wisconsin, praying for prohibition in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. VANCE presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of North Carolina, officially signed, representing 1,000 members, praying for the repeal of the internal-revenue tax on all alcoholic liquors; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. BUTLER. I present the petition of L. G. Johnson, M. L. McCormack, W. E. Dodge, Granville G. Bennett, and other citizens of the Territory of Dakota, praying for the passage of an enabling act for the Territory of Dakota. As the bill upon that subject has been reported, I move that the petition lie on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. DAWES presented the petition of H. L. Newhall and other citizens of Middlesex County, Massachusetts, praying for a proper revision and amendment of the wool and woolen schedule of the existing tariff; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. FARWELL presented the petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Illinois, praying for such legislation as shall provide for the adequate punishment of crimes against women and girls; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. PALMER presented a petition of 144 citizens of the Third and Ninth Congressional districts of Michigan, praying for prohibition in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. HAWLEY presented the petition of the president and faculty of the Wesleyan University at Middletown, Conn., praying for the speedy enactment of an international copyright law; which was referred to the Committee on Patents.

Mr. HAMPTON presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of South Carolina, officially signed, praying for the repeal of the internal-revenue tax on all alcoholic liquors; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. HOAR presented the petition of C. A. and S. M. Wheelock and other citizens of Worcester County, Massachusetts, praying for a reduction of the duties on wool; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. CHANDLER presented the petition of Rev. William W. Livingston, Rev. R. S. Mitchell, Mrs. S. Garfield, and the other officers of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and 20 others, of Jaffrey, N. H.; Rev. William H. Stewart, Rev. E. A. Read, and 52 others, of Hinsdale, N. H.; Dr. L. J. Graves, D. W. O'Neil, P. P. Coburn, Ira Colby, Charles N. Freeman, Herbert Bailey, and 36 others, of Claremont, N. H.; Mrs. George Woodbury, president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Rev. E. L. House, Rev. A. W. L. Nelson, and 40 others, of Salem, N. H., praying for the passage of the bill to prohibit the manufacture, sale, and importation of alcoholic beverages in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. TURPIE presented a petition of ex-Union soldiers of Indiana, praying for the passage of the pension rated service bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. BOWEN presented a petition of citizens of La Plata County, Colorado, praying for the removal of the Southern Ute Indians from their present location; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. PLUMB presented a petition of 126 citizens of the First, Second, and Fifth Congressional districts of Kansas, praying for prohibition in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. COCKRELL. I present a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Missouri, officially signed, praying for the enactment of such statutes as shall provide for the adequate punishment of crimes against women and girls. The petition seems to pray for legislation to be applied all over the United States, and not simply to the District of Columbia.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. To what committee shall the petition be referred?

Mr. COCKRELL. I suppose it ought to go to the Committee on Education and Labor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be so referred.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. FRYE, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1528) to reward the Esquimaux natives of the Asiatic coast of the Arctic Ocean for acts of humanity to shipwrecked seamen, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1851) to provide for an international marine conference for securing greater safety for life and property at sea, reported it with amendments.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 623) to promote the political progress and commercial prosperity of the American nations, reported it with amendments.

Mr. HALE, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the memorial of Evansville (Ind.) Business Men's Association, praying for the establishment and maintenance of a marine hospital at that place, asked to be discharged from its further consideration, and that it be referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds; which was agreed to.

He also, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1975) to increase the pension of the widow of the late Naval Constructor Edward Hartt, asked to be discharged from its further consideration, and that it be referred to the Committee on Pensions; which was agreed to.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (S. 622) to amend section 2805 of the Revised Statutes of the United States so as to allow oaths to be administered by notaries public, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. PASCO, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 525) for the relief of Samuel A. B. Woodford, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. TURPIE, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1007) granting a pension to John S. Coleman, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 765) granting an increase of pension to Edward Durant, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom were referred the following bills, submitted adverse reports thereon, and the bills were severally postponed indefinitely:

A bill (S. 859) granting an increase of pension to James H. Thomas;

A bill (S. 740) granting a pension to Eleanor I. Armstrong;

A bill (S. 914) to grant increase of pension to Joseph P. Owen; and

A bill (S. 471) granting a pension to Richard W. Isbell.

Mr. SPOONER, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1732) for the relief of H. P. Wells, asked to be discharged from its further consideration, and that it be referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs; which was agreed to.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 316) for the relief of Edward Fitzgerald, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. MITCHELL, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 402) for the relief of George F. Roberts, administrator of the estate of William B. Thayer, deceased, surviving partner of Thayer Brothers, and others, submitted an adverse report thereon; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom the subject was referred, submitted a report, accompanied by a bill (S. 2001) for the relief of George F. Roberts, administrator of the estate of William B. Thayer, deceased, surviving partner of Thayer Brothers, and others; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. SAWYER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 901) for the relief of Sophia W. Wright;

A bill (S. 899) for the relief of Mary M. Briggs;

A bill (S. 1096) granting a pension to James Lucas;

A bill (S. 1717) granting a pension to Emma Von Bernewitz; and

A bill (S. 830) granting a pension to David Williams.

Mr. SAWYER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 811) granting a pension to Lydia D. Holtz, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of Margaret Callanan, widow of Eugene Callanan, late private in Company F, Second Regiment New Jersey Volunteers, praying for the passage of a special act of Congress granting her a supplemental pension from March 18, 1864, to July 6, 1886, submitted an adverse report thereon, which was agreed to; and the committee were discharged from the further consideration of the petition.

Mr. SAWYER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, submitted adverse reports thereon; and they were severally postponed indefinitely:

A bill (S. 1411) for the relief of Margaret Engenock;

A bill (S. 1332) granting a pension to Peter James;

A bill (S. 1546) granting an increase of pension to James H. Harold;

A bill (S. 910) granting a pension to George Faulk; and

A bill (S. 989) for the relief of Margaret Madden.

Mr. WILSON, of Maryland, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 11) for the relief of Warren Mitchell, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I submit a report to accompany the bill (S. 931) to incorporate the Washington Cable Electric Railway of the District of Columbia. On account of amendments to the bill the report has been withheld to this time to conform to those amendments.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be printed with the bill.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. BLACKBURN introduced a bill (S. 2002) for the relief of A. H. Sympson; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. DOLPH introduced a bill (S. 2003) to grant to the city of The Dalles, in the State of Oregon, certain lands for the purpose of a public park; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. DAWES introduced a bill (S. 2004) to amend the ninth section of an act entitled "An act making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, for the year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1885; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. PLUMB introduced a bill (S. 2005) to provide for the disposal of the Fort Wallace military reservation in Kansas; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2006) granting a pension to Mary E. Noll, widow of Philip Noll; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2007) granting a pension to N. J. Myers; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2008) granting a pension to Cyrus Tuttle; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. TELLER introduced a bill (S. 2009) to restore the homestead right of M. F. Vance, of Akron, Colo.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. BECK introduced a bill (S. 2010) to reimburse the several States for interest on moneys expended by them on account of raising troops employed in aiding the United States in suppressing the late rebellion; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. HARRIS (by request) introduced a bill (S. 2011) for the relief of Gilbert Thompson, Veronica Ulke, Julia F. Laskey, and F. G. Barbadoes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. BECK introduced a bill (S. 2012) granting an increase of pension to Marcus D. Raymond; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. BLODGETT introduced a bill (S. 2013) for the relief of Forman Mathews and David Stout Parker; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2014) granting a pension to John Farlow; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. DAVIS introduced a bill (S. 2015) for the relief of H. K. Belding; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. SAWYER (by request) introduced a bill (S. 2016) for the relief of William Wolff; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. PALMER introduced a bill (S. 2017) providing for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building at Saginaw, Mich.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

AID TO COMMON SCHOOLS.

Mr. HALE. I ask that the Senate proceed now to the consideration of the unfinished business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maine moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the unfinished business, being the bill (S. 371) to aid in the establishment and temporary support of common schools.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The pending amendment, submitted by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PLUMB] will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to strike out section 2 of the bill, and in lieu thereof to insert:

SEC. 2. That such money shall annually be divided among and paid out in the several States and Territories and in the District of Columbia, in proportion to their population, respectively, according to the census of 1880: Provided, That all of said money remaining undistributed at the date of the publication of the returns of population as shown by the census of 1890 shall be divided as aforesaid in proportion to the population according to said census of 1890.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, the history of this bill and the discussions attend ant upon its consideration by the Senate are most interesting.

Unlike other measures, which by their inherent merit constantly gain in strength until at last opposition disappears, this bill has raised new doubts as to the wisdom of its provisions and has developed opposition at every stage of its consideration.

In the Forty-eighth Congress, when it first passed the Senate, the opposition to it largely came from Senators whose strict construction of the Constitution led them to the belief that the bill violated fundamental propositions of that great instrument.

In the Forty-ninth Congress the method of distribution of the vast fund provided by the bill was assailed. The debate in this Chamber during the last month has shown that other practical considerations are moving in Senators' minds, and we are brought face to face with wider and deeper defects in the whole scheme which has been so earnestly and faithfully urged forward by the Senator from New Hampshire, who has charge of the bill. It is the hard fortune of this measure, Mr. President, that, as time goes on, there are seen to be more reasons arising against its passage and fewer reasons are shown for its necessity as a great public measure. Not only is this apparent in the Senate, but it is clearly discernible outside of Congress, among the people at large.

The bill is philanthropic in its nature and appeals naturally to the liberality of sentiment which has always distinguished the American people, and which is apt to raise little question as to the cost in money of any great effort which is put forth for the removal of a great public evil. But the whole subject is so vast and so important that as the years have gone by the attention of thoughtful men, both in the North and the South, has been more and more directed to it, and especially in the last two years has this attention resulted in new investigation as to the real condition in the South and a new scrutiny into the history and methods of the great school systems in the Northern States. Increased correspondence and communication with school officials and leading educators at the South have brought to Congress and to the public much new information as to the extent of the common-school system in the Southern States, and the participation in the benefits of that school system by the colored population of the school age.

In addition to this, as has been disclosed by the debate here, Senators realize more clearly that, in the mass of illiteracy at the South, which every good citizen desires to see removed or lessened, there is a large portion of that mass which we must needs leave entirely out of the question. Neither by enactment nor appropriation here, nor by any school system maintained by the States, can that great body of illiteracy in the South, comprising all its colored population above the age of twenty years, be affected. This class embraces nearly three millions of colored illiterates.

Painful as it is, we must acknowledge the existence of this profound mass of illiteracy, and must bear with it and endure it until the tooth of time shall eat it away. So far as legislation goes it is dense, impenetrable, immovable.

To do what is wisest and best for the illiterates of a tender age, who can be sent to the common schools, who can be provided with books and teachers, and to whom intelligence can be communicated through the read and the written word, is the task to which the practical legislator should now give close attention. And, Mr. President, whatever may be the fate of this bill, whether it shall at length pass into law and the experiment involved in its provisions shall be fairly tried out at the South, or whether it shall, for one reason or another, come to wreck in its passage, I congratulate the Senator from New Hampshire, whose zeal and competency in its cause have never been questioned, upon the great good which has already been accomplished and is now going forward not wholly without being advanced by the discussion and interest which this measure has aroused.

The progress in the common-school system at the South, its increased importance as an element in the life of Southern people, the enlarged appropriation of money, the lengthening of the school terms, the encouragement and wages paid to teachers, the building of school-houses, and, in short, all the things which go to make a successful common-school system, such as we and our ancestors have witnessed at the North, are indeed most gratifying, and to many of us, who had not until lately looked closely into the subject, surprising.

For myself, Mr. President, I have never yet seen my way clear to vote for the passage of this bill, and I am free to say that the awakened public interest at the North, showing an approval of the vote which my colleague and myself gave against it in the last Congress, has not been unwelcome.

An editorial in the Portland Press, a leading Republican paper in the State which he and I represent on this floor, sets forth some of the reasons for this awakening of public sentiment. I read the significant portion of this article:

Mr. A. P. Marble, for many years superintendent of the Worcester schools, and a gentleman well known in Maine, writes to the New York Evening Post a letter in opposition to the Blair educational bill. When the matter of Federal aid to Southern schools was first broached Mr. Marble was inclined to favor it. But reflection and a study of the results of analogous experiments have changed his mind. He urges four reasons why the Blair measure should not become a law. In the first place he thinks the Southern people need no stimulus of this sort. "They have awakened," he says, "to the necessity of public education; and are actively and successfully at work in the right direction." Secondly, the South does not need the aid. It is as well and better able to establish and maintain proper schools than the border States of the West. Thirdly, a good deal of the money would be frittered away in distribution, and would never be applied to the use for which it was intended. Lastly, Mr. Marble believes the duty of taking care of schools is one that belongs to the people and not to the Government.

"If," says Mr. Marble, "the people can not take care of themselves, and if the Government must take care of them, we reduce ourselves to an absurdity, since the Government is nothing but the expression of the people's will." Mr. Marble says that nobody has a right to say that Massachusetts teachers are in favor of the Blair bill. Several associations have apparently declared for it, but these declarations can not be said to be a fair expression of the sentiment of the members of these associations, inasmuch as they have emanated from a minority and without a full discussion. It is quite evident to the most casual observer that discussion has not helped the bill in public favor. At first a great many assumed without much examination that the measure was going to promote education in the South, and for that reason favored it. Examination has cast suspicion on the correctness of this assumption, and consequently weakened public confidence in the bill as an educational measure.

To the same end, Mr. President, I also read a letter from a distinguished gentleman whose services in the cause of education entitle him to the everlasting gratitude of the American people.

General S. C. Armstrong, of the Indian Industrial School at Hampton, Va., whose intelligence and interest in the subject of education will be questioned by no one, has, within the last two weeks, written the following letter upon this subject:

To the Editor of the Evening Post:

SIR: As to our position towards the Blair bill, events seem to have pretty clearly defined it for us. From 1870 to 1884 we, with others, worked for Government aid for Southern schools, urging Senator Hoar's bill, which failed to pass the House, and accepting the "Blair bill" when it appeared as the best thing we were likely to get. But we never regarded it as a bill which a true educator would have framed, both because it granted too much aid in too short a time, and because there was danger of a final reaction when its bounty should cease.

As then the marvelous and, we confess, unexpected growth and strength of the Southern school system made themselves manifest, and we began to study the causes to which these were due, we found that a change of base was forced upon us. The justification for this change I find in the vigor of sentiment existing in the South in favor of the public-school system; in the impartial devotion to it of many ex-Confederate slaveholders, which I have personally witnessed; in the fact that it is hopeless and fatal for any politician, whatever his standing, to oppose it (the negro vote finding its chief excuse in the solidity with which it goes for "free schools"); in the surprising development of Southern resources; in the evident ability of the so-called border States to educate in a reasonable time all their children; in the great school endowment of Texas and the growing wealth of Georgia and Alabama; and in the progress of schools in Florida, Arkansas, and other States, which provide in all, it is estimated, 15,000 negro schools alone, of which Virginia has 1,600.

From our own standpoint we can say nothing stronger than that in the midst of our struggle to secure from charity the means to support the Hampton School, we would not accept aid from State or people were it offered on the plan of the Blair bill, being conscious that in the end it would do us more harm than good. For here it is not merely education that we seek to give, but education through self-help. Take out the self-help and the rest is not worth much. Apply the Blair bill to the Southern school system and it will check the growth of the best thing in Southern life, the effort of the people to educate themselves. One-third of the Southern children of school age have to-day probably no chance for education; twenty years ago almost none had it; twenty years hence I believe all will have it.

Furthermore, as I see how far we are from securing the application of the rules of civil-service reform to our Indian work, a sweeping change of officers being in order at the opening of every political change, I feel less confidence that Government bounty to Southern schools could be applied to the best advantage, while on the other hand the use of funds from local taxation is carefully watched and abuses are fought with vigor.

Above all things, educational work ought to be wholly free from party interests. Its foundations must be sure and permanent, not spasmodic and shifting, and for these reasons I have come gradually to the conclusion that national aid, at least as provided by the Blair bill, is unwise and undesirable.

S. C. ARMSTRONG.

HAMPTON, VA., January 30.

I also read a very clear letter from President Hyde, of Bowdoin College, in Maine:

FROM PRESIDENT HYDE, OF BOWDOIN COLLEGE.

To the Editor of the Evening Post:

SIR: A sound and permanent school system must rest on the interest, the conviction, and the self-sacrifice of the local community. Federal aid would destroy these roots, from which a permanent system of common-school education must draw its life.

The support of the bill seems to be of two kinds. In so far as it is honest, it is based on the mischievous fallacy that it is the proper function of the Federal Government to do anything and everything that is in itself desirable. The other kind of support is due to the obvious availability of the bill as a channel through which the overflow in the Treasury can be drained off. Were it compelled to appeal directly to taxation for the money it proposes to expend, its defeat would be inevitable. To take advantage of the surplus for purposes outside of the legitimate objects of Federal taxation is simply a device for obscuring the fact that we are imposing on ourselves an absurd and anomalous burden of taxation.

At the head of a petition in favor of the Blair bill, which has been circulated industriously in these parts, the fact that there is a surplus in the Treasury was placed prominent among the reasons why the petition should be signed.

These, in brief outline, are my reasons for opposing the Blair bill, and I think it was owing to similar reasons that only one signature to the petition mentioned above was obtained from the college faculty.

Very truly, yours,

WM. DE W. HYDE.

BOWDOIN COLLEGE, BRUNSWICK, ME., February 8.

Also from President Angell, of the University of Michigan:

FROM PRESIDENT ANGELL, OF MICHIGAN.

To the Editor of the Evening Post:

SIR: In reply to your request for my opinion of the so-called Blair bill, now before the Senate, I beg leave to say that, while appreciating the high motives of those who are seeking the more general diffusion of education in the South, I am not able to favor the passage of the bill which Senator BLAIR and others are advocating.

Yours, truly,

JAMES B. ANGELL,
President of the University of Michigan.

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 10.

And from President Barnard, of Columbia College, and from President Robinson, of Brown University:

FROM PRESIDENT BARNARD, OF COLUMBIA.

To the Editor of the Evening Post:

SIR: I am already publicly on record in opposition to the measure proposed and advocated by Senator BLAIR, which has become generally and very properly known as "A bill to promote mendicancy." My objections are founded not only on the consideration that it is a bill to promote mendicancy, but also upon the higher consideration that it is totally without justification in the Constitution of the United States. There is not only in the Constitution no direct grant of power to Congress to do a thing of this kind, but the spirit of the provision in regard to the power of taxation is violated when it is proposed to distribute money among the States, not in proportion to the entire population, but in proportion to a particular class; and inasmuch as the distribution of these large sums of money has a manifest tendency to discourage the honorable spirit of self-help in the subsidized States, it is manifestly doing harm rather than good, and hence can not find even a poor pretext at justification under the much-abused "general-welfare" clause of section 8 of the Constitution.

It is very gratifying to observe the sweeping change of opinion which has taken place in regard to this bill since its first introduction, and the prospect now that it can be defeated even in the Senate is one which must be hailed with high satisfaction by all sensible men. I am sure that there are few New Yorkers who will not regard with surprise and pain the fact that this miserably unwise measure has found an advocate in the senior Senator from this State.

Respectfully, yours,

F. A. P. BARNARD.

COLUMBIA COLLEGE, NEW YORK,
President's Room, February 9.

FROM PRESIDENT ROBINSON, OF BROWN.

To the Editor of the Evening Post:

SIR: Ten years ago I was very strongly in favor of Federal aid to education in the Southern States. But the time for such aid has passed. My decided conviction now is that it is not only unnecessary, but would prove positively mischievous. It would work directly to the hinderance of the very object it aims to promote.

Yours, very truly,

E. G. ROBINSON.

BROWN UNIVERSITY, PROVIDENCE, R. I., February 7.

The considerations suggested by General Armstrong touching the profound importance of "education through self-help" can not fail to be appreciated, especially by any New England Senator who has seen the practical operation of the common-school system in New England as illustrated in the smaller towns and districts.

Bearing upon the necessity at the present time for the appropriations of money involved by this bill, which mainly are intended to re-enforce the common-school systems of the Southern States, I desire to give some facts and figures showing the comparison which can be made between the resources and condition of the common schools in Maine and some of the Southern States which it is claimed will be most benefited by this bill.

I start first, Mr. President, by assuming that the fundamental proposition of the advocates of this measure lies in the assertion that its object is to remove illiteracy and to thereby secure law and order and better citizenship. In touching upon the school statistics of Maine I begin by a statement, not boastfully made, but taken from the census statistics of 1880, in which are found carefully compiled tables showing the number of persons in each State who are unable to read in every 1,000 of its inhabitants. In this list it is gratifying to see that the State of Maine holds the third place, only Iowa and Nebraska leading her in this record. Out of every 1,000 inhabitants in Iowa only 24 were found in 1880 who were unable to read; in Nebraska, 25 out of every 1,000; and in Maine out of every 1,000 but 35 were found who were unable to read. Other States follow closely after, but none are so high in this scale as the three which I have given.

I can not speak for the other two States, but I know that in Maine it is the common-school system, which has been illustrated in her towns and villages, on her rocky hillsides, and by her weather-beaten shores, that has thus done its perfect work; and I should be less a lover of the State than I am if I did not point with gratification and pride to this record.

It would be a hard task, Mr. President, in all that great portion of the State of Maine which lies outside of its larger towns and cities, to find a man, woman, or child above the age of ten years who can not read or write. Illiteracy has been banished by the common-school system, which is maintained by the State, and by the State alone.

The Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST], in the carefully prepared speech which he delivered here several weeks since, gave some statistics showing the enrollment of children of school age in Maine, with the average daily attendance and length of school year in days; but his figures were taken from reports made up no later than to the year 1870.

Not content with that, I have procured the reports of our State superintendent of common schools, a most faithful and competent officer, running down to and including his last report, which covers the condition of the public schools of Maine for the year 1885–'86. The annual report for 1886–'87 has not yet been published.

By this report I find that the whole number of scholars in the State, being children of school age, was 213,571. Of this number 68 per cent. are enrolled. The percentage of average attendance per year to the whole number of scholars in the State is 47. The average length of schools for the year is 20 weeks and 4 days, or, reckoning 5 school days to the week, an aggregate of 104 days.

I give the corresponding figures for some of the Southern States, as shown by the last reports of their superintendents of common schools:

States.	Percentage of enrolled schools.	Average daily attendance.	Length of school year in days.
Alabama	56	62	83
Mississippi	60	58	77½
South Carolina	63	69	70
North Carolina	56	62	62
Georgia	57	66	65
Kentucky	49	63	102
Tennessee	61	59	78
Florida	93	73	90
Missouri	68	75	100
Virginia	52	57	120
Texas	79	.....	100

Considering that the entire domestic institutions of the South were destroyed by war, and that in the restoring period which followed but little could be done in the ten years succeeding, it is most remarkable, Mr. President, that the disparity shown by these figures between Maine and old Southern slave States is no greater. In some of these slave States the length of the school year, it will be perceived, is in excess of that of the State of Maine.

Mr. BLAIR. If the Senator will permit me, I will say to him that the late returns do not justify his assumption.

Mr. HALE. I do not know what later information the Senator from New Hampshire has. He refers to the State of Florida, but the figures that I have given purport to come, and I suppose they do come, from the authorities.

This record, Mr. President, must be most gratifying to every good citizen and patriot. It shows what was not demonstrated by the census taken nearly ten years ago, that the advantages of common-school education for all the people and the necessity for a well-sustained common-school system have of late been appreciated in the Southern States.

The increase in fifteen years, in some of these States, of children attending school is shown as follows:

In 1869 only 108,074 attended school in Virginia. In 1884–'85 the number had increased to 303,343.

In Florida the number of scholars nearly doubled, the increase being from 38,315 to 62,327.

In Arkansas the increase from 1882–'83 to 1883–'84 was from 112,233 to 153,216.

In Alabama the common schools have grown in number, in four years, from 4,624 schools, with 177,428 pupils, to 5,595 schools, with 252,967 pupils.

In Georgia the increase in four years has been from 244,197 scholars to 309,594.

The increase in appropriations and expenditures for schools has been in the same proportion. In Alabama, in four years, the fund has increased from $392,904 to $523,353.

In Arkansas the increase in three years has been from $479,471 to $866,892.

In Georgia, in four years, the increase has been from $498,533 to $723,161.

In Florida the increase in four years has been from $133,260 to $400,000.

At this rate of increase, under present conditions, States having the same population as Maine or less will in a few years be spending more money for common schools than Maine, and the attendance of children at school and the length of the school year in days will be much greater.

The figures that I have given from the State of Maine, upon which has been built up her common-school system that has resulted in placing her almost at the head of the roll of States upon the comparison of illiteracy, show clearly three things:

First, that intelligence may be diffused and illiteracy disappear through the operation of its common-school system in a State which has in its borders no great cities nor very great accumulation of individual wealth, and which has received nothing from the General Government with which to increase its common-school fund. All the money in Maine expended upon common schools is derived from State or municipal taxation.

Secondly, these statistics show that it is not merely the amount of money expended nor the average length of the school year, in days, which gives life to an educational system. Something more than this is needed. It is what General Armstrong calls the "education that comes from self-help." Nowhere is this more plainly illustrated than in the State of Maine.

I turn, with pleasure, Mr. President, to the contemplation of the "self-help" that is given, especially in the smaller towns of the State of Maine, in the management of their schools and their school funds. In the annual March meetings of these towns, often held before the inclemency of the winter season has passed, all the voters of the town assemble to consider the subjects which shall, for the coming year, touch most closely their every-day life and the prosperity of the households which go to make up its population.

Mr. BUTLER. May I ask my friend, as a matter of information, how often those meetings occur?

Mr. HALE. I have referred to them as the annual meetings in the State of Maine. They are a most distinguishing feature in the life of New England people.

Mr. BUTLER. What is the geographical area represented by those meetings—townships or towns?

Mr. HALE. We call them towns in New England. The regular town, as laid out in the planning and plotting by different surveyors under different proprietorships, was generally 6 miles square. Some of the towns are a little larger and some are smaller, and from all the neighborhoods in this large territory come the farmers and the mechanics and the professional men, the doctors and the lawyers and the ministers, not clamoring for national aid or for outside support, but giving by their presence and their interest the self-help which has built up our New England towns and has made intelligence therein as diffusive as the air we breathe.

There is no subject which is discussed in these meetings that is not fully considered as a business matter, and which does not have the "self-help" of every man who has property to be protected and a family to be cared for. Roads and bridges, the care of the poor, the finances of the town, and, above all, the support which is to be given to the common schools, the money to pay for which shall be taxed upon the property of the town, are most fully discussed and decided upon.

If, as is not infrequently the case, the number of children enrolled in the schools is decreasing because of emigration from the State and the lessening of the numbers in families, the advantages of the shorter time to the boys and girls who attend such school are all the more appreciated.

Under this system illiteracy never shows its head. You may search such a town from corner to corner and no man, woman, or child above the age of ten years will be found in its borders who can not write an intelligible letter, or who can not, on Sunday morning, read a chapter in the New Testament.

I doubt, Mr. President, whether, if the General Government had added to the common-school fund of Maine the sum of half a million of dollars yearly during the last fifty years, a better condition of the population of that State, upon the test of illiteracy, would be shown to-day. The habit of home management, of home interest, of home support, which I have so imperfectly described, would have been seriously interfered with and might have had its ennobling foundation sapped and mined by such benefaction.

It is not, I say again, a question alone of money. The irrigation which any system of education needs to prevent its becoming dry and lifeless does not come alone in such ways. Only so much water can be poured through the pipe which at last gives the moistening and reviving effect of the constant supply. All the rest wastes and is worse than useless.

The third thing that is shown by the comparison which I have given between Maine and other States, is that, if it is determined that, from the redundant revenues of the Government, some aid should be given to public schools in the different States, under a bill so carefully guarded in its provisions that the appropriation shall be an incentive to work at home, rather than an excuse for such work ceasing, then the State of Maine, instead of being taxed for the benefit of other States, should receive its share according to population, which is indicated in the amendment offered by the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. President, every Senator should take satisfaction and encouragement in the condition of the South, as shown by the facts which have been brought to our notice within these last few years, relating to common schools. The system is by no means perfect in these States; but enough has been shown to make it clear that the material development in that section, which is one of the wonders of the present decade, has been accompanied by corresponding attention to and advancement in the work of education.

The next census will, I hope, disclose a condition there, both of material prosperity and advancing education, gratifying to every lover of his country, and will furnish statistics of illiteracy, as applied to age and to color, upon which, if need be, we can more intelligently legislate.

That the Southern States are no longer poor and unable to support common schools has already been settled.

I have never felt that in the destruction of slavery, and in giving freedom to the colored man, the Southern people, as a whole, lost in property. Emancipation did not destroy property, so far as the State and the public condition are concerned. Individuals lost, but the community gained. The sum of human endeavor, human enterprise, and human thrift was increased, and these make property. You might as well declare because Great Britain lost her greatest American colony in the war of the Revolution that thereby the world had lost, when everybody knows to the contrary.

Mr. BLAIR. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. HALE. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLAIR. Conceding that what the Senator says is true, that the South as a whole was not impoverished by the liberation of the slaves, does he not recognize that the burden of education was increased by the fact that the slave population previously under individual control by law, have now become a free population of American citizens, requiring education and yet having no property of their own wherewith to obtain it?

Mr. HALE. I do not admit the last part of the Senator's proposition. From some investigation that I have been able to make I do not believe it to be true that the colored man in the South to-day is without property. One of the things that the colored man set himself to do after his emancipation, and after he passed through that fire of persecution that he endured afterwards, was to become interested in the soil, to acquire land, and he has been acquiring it ever since, and it is to me a good test as to his advancement that he has done so. All over the South the next census will show this remarkable capacity of the colored man for sustaining himself and acquiring property in addition to sustaining himself, and all these go as factors in making up a population that is able to support common schools.

I am impressed, Mr. President, by the consideration which has been presented of the gradual decline of State interest and aid to common schools when the General Government has taken upon itself a part of this burden. All experience shows that in any field occupied jointly by the Federal and the State governments, the absorption and aggression are in one direction. The Federal interest increases and the Federal control increases, and it is the State interest that yields and grows indifferent and slothful; but I will spend no further time upon this.

Mr. President, if I could see my way clear to vote for this bill I should be glad to do so. I recognize the patriotism, the zeal, and persistency with which its authors and supporters have urged and pressed its consideration.

The object which is sought is a noble one. To uplift that prostrate race, to communicate to its masses of children the light of intelligence, and thereby promote order and good citizenship, is a work to inspire the faintest and most flagging heart; but I do not find, and I am sure that other Senators do not find, in the measure before us that which will accomplish these most desirable objects. I am sure that, upon this floor, many Senators, who in other Congresses have been willing to support the bill and to make the experiment which its provisions contemplate, are beset by new doubts and new fears.

As I said in beginning, it is the fate of the bill, as time goes on, that less necessity is seen for its enactment, and more and more objections arise to its provisions. It "drags at each remove a lengthening chain."

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President, the very important constitutional question which is presented by this bill prompted me to consult some gentlemen whose opinions I value very highly upon constitutional questions, because they are men who have made diligent search and comparison of contemporaneous construction, and I have a reply to a letter that I wrote to one of these gentlemen, in whose opinion I have very great confidence, which I will read to the Senate as part of the argument, and I will submit no further remarks than merely to introduce this letter. The letter is dated February 5, 1888.

WASHINGTON D. C. February 5, 1888

HON. JOHN T. MORGAN,
United States Senate

MY DEAR SIR: In reference to the constitutionality of the Blair bill, and particularly as to the meaning and effect of the general-welfare clause of "The power of Taxation," I answer with great deference, because many Senators believe the bill to be constitutional. And I beg leave to confine myself to the federal instrument as written, its history, and the statements of those who were most efficient in devising and defending it.

Mr. BLAIR. I should like to ask the Senator from whom he is reading?

Mr. MORGAN. I am reading from an able constitutional lawyer.

The Senators alluded to base themselves on what they call the "power" "to provide for the common defence and general welfare;" and claim wide discretion under "the sovereignty of the national government." Not only is there no such "power," but the very phrase in which it is said to be couched, was actually considered by the convention of 1787, to refer alone to the purposes for which the "power" was to be delegated. And the Journal proves this statement; while the Federalist, and Jefferson and Madison always so stated the matter, as I shall proceed to show

I will begin by quoting, from the original constitution in the Secretary of State's office, "the power of taxation," as the Convention in its proceedings characterized it

"Section 8. The Congress shall have Power To lay and collect Taxes, Duties, Imposts and Excises, to pay the Debts and provide for the common Defence and general Welfare of the United States; but all Duties, Imposts and Excises shall be uniform throughout the United States;

To borrow Money on the credit of the United States;
To regulate Commerce * * *;
To establish an uniform rule of Naturalization * * *;
To coin money * * *"

Here is an ocular demonstration that "to pay the debts," and "to provide for" "defence" and "welfare" were understood as purposes, for which the power of taxation was delegated. The paragraph opens and closes with "the power of taxation," and the rest is, so to speak in parenthentical relation to it. Noscitur a sociis. Special authority for such purposes was not needed, for all the specified powers were intended to effect them.

Now let us see how the matter appears in Madison's "Journal of the Debates of the Convention;" and in the official "Journal of the Convention."

On August 5, 1787, the committee on detail reported the constitution, with eighteen specified powers delegated to the legislature, the first being "to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises" [V Ell. Deb. 378]

On August 25, Mr. Sherman moved to add these words: "for the payment of said debts, and for defraying the expenses that shall be incurred for the common defence and general welfare" [Ibid 476; also I Ell. Deb. 264]. The addition was then deemed unnecessary; but on September 4, Mr. Brearly, from the committee of eleven, reported the section with the suggestion of Mr. Sherman added [Ibid 506] with a slight change of phraseology, and none of meaning.

And finally, the Convention, on the 14th of September, near the close of its work, removed all possible doubt as follows:

"Article I, sect. 8. The words 'but all such duties, imposts and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States,' were unanimously annexed to THE POWER OF TAXATION." [Ibid 543; also I. Ell. Deb. 311.]

The phrase under consideration, then, merely states the purpose and use of the revenue to be raised, but gives no hint of delegating power [Ibid 560]. Now after the Convention has characterized the authority delegated as "the power of taxation," can there be right, or propriety, or truth in calling it a power of defence and welfare, especially as there is no ambiguity or doubt in the language, justifying a resort to construction?

It is this very idea that Madison signally refuted in No. 41 of the Federalist—an idea that was then a charge by foes to defeat the constitution, and it was so treated by Madison, Hamilton, Jay. He treats of the so-called construction thus: "It has been urged and echoed that the power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises, to pay the debts and provide for the common defence and general welfare of the United States, amounts to an unlimited commission to exercise every power which may be alleged to be necessary for the common defence or general welfare. No stronger proof could be given of the distress under which these writers labor for objections, than their stooping to such a misconstruction. Had no other enumeration or definition of the powers of the Congress been found in the constitution than the general expressions just cited, the authors of the objection might have some color for it. * * * But what color can the objection have, when a specification of the objects alluded to by these general terms immediately follows; and is not even separated by a longer pause than a semi-colon. * * * For what purpose could the enumeration of particular powers be inserted, if these and all others were meant to be included in the preceding general power? Nothing is more natural or common than, first to use a general phrase, and then to explain or qualify it by a recital of particulars."

He winds up by characterizing as an "absurdity" this assumption or pretended construction, so suspiciously agreed on by ancient foes and modern friends.

It has been intimated that Mr. Madison's views were afterwards modified; but this can not be so, because, late in life, while preparing his "Debates in the Federal Convention" for publishing, he reiterated the same view, and supported it by citations [see V Ell. Deb. 560 foot note—very important].

A single sentence from Jefferson will suffice: "To consider the phrase 'to provide for the general welfare,' as giving a distinct and independent power to Congress to do any act it pleases, which might be for the good of the union, would render all the preceding and subsequent enumerated powers completely useless." See the whole passage in Jefferson's Works Vol. 4, p. 525.

I conclude then, that as the words and ideas of the defence-and-welfare phrase equally suit each and all of the eighteen specified powers, the relation, meaning and intent of them (the intent being the vital point) can be best shown by a slight change of the collocation of the phrase, while keeping the words and punctuation without change. It is thus made to read as follows:

Section 8. The Congress, to pay the debts and provide for the common defence and general welfare of the United States, shall have power

To lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises; but all duties, imposts, and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States;

To borrow money * * * ;
To regulate commerce * * * ;
* * * * * * *

The argument is factual—made up of historical truths and records, and in no-wise doctrinal; and I am confident that this statement exhibits the belief of all the original friends and defenders of the Constitution, so far as they reflected on the special point. For example, Jefferson thus expressed himself: "Certainly no such universal power was meant to be given them. It was intended to lace them up straitly within the enumerated powers, and those, without which, as means, these powers could not be carried into effect." [4 J's Works 525.]

Fortunately the advocates of this bill show how unlimited for mischief such Congressional action can be. They claim that in taxing the people and spending the revenues, they act by virtue of "the sovereignty of the government"; and have no other limit in expenditure than their judgment of "the common defence and general welfare." Jefferson said, as to this alarming claim, "they reduce the whole instrument to a single phrase, that of instituting a Congress with power to do whatever would be for the good of the United States, and as they would be the sole judges of the good or evil, it would also be a power to do whatever evil they pleased"

Note now Senator Evarts's expression: "It is constitutional to devote every dollar in the Treasury to the purposes of this bill; and then it is constitutional, by your next taxation, to raise the money" "to supply the void" "thus created"

And Senator Edmunds says, the clause which prohibits the drawing of money from the Treasury except "BY LAW," (which phrase means, of course, constitutional law), does not limit the power of appropriation, or confine it to the specified powers and purposes of the Constitution

These gentlemen and their coadjutors all seem to agree, that they can vote federal money out of the Treasury for purposes which the people have actually kept out of the Constitution, and assigned to other agents; and they all seem to forget that their sovereigns and masters have premonished them that all "powers not delegated * * * are reserved," i. e. kept back for other disposal

Moreover they seem not to consider what that plenary right of government, called sovereignty, is, and where it is. Daniel Webster said: "Sovereignty in government is unknown in North America. It dwells in the people." Said James Wilson, the greatest statesman of Pennsylvania: "The supreme, absolute, and uncontrollable power is in the people after, as well as before, a constitution is made. It never leaves them." No eminent "father" ever said or thought otherwise, because our form is entirely republican

These Senators hold and wield "powers," not sovereignty; and they hold them in trust to use for the people. The single phrase of Article I, "All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested," etc., taken with the fact that the said powers can but be "delegated," should show them that the sovereignty is above them, and in their masters, the people; that they never do, or can, hold and wield it; that they are always subject to it as agents; and, finally, that their authority is always derivative and never inherent.

The Bills of Rights of New Hampshire and Massachusetts, which are made up of universally accepted and everlasting principles, show the status of all whom the people choose for service, to be "substitutes and agents," as Messrs. Blair and Hoar can inform them. And they can read in John Jay's Address to the people of New York in 1788, that they have "business to manage" as "agents and overseers for the people." And the great triumvirate, Madison, Hamilton, and Jay, cap the climax in the Federalist, [No. 45], by saying that "the federal and state governments are different agents and trustees of the people"

Finally, the onus of proving the "power" rests on these Senators. If it exist they can show it. If they leave it in doubt they fail, for no president can approve, or court sustain the statute, because the doubt must be solved for the sovereign

This is to me a painful subject. As one of the people who never held or desired office, I protest against "undue administration," and the use of "powers" we have withheld; and I pray for the federal union and strict construction, considering them as vital to American institutional liberty

With great respect
Yours truly

B. J. SAGE.

I thought it was proper to place in the RECORD this exposition, which, I think, by its reference to the contemporaneous opinion and construction placed upon the power claimed under this bill, shows that it can not possibly exist. I think it makes a very clear and very exact statement of the history and of the facts attending the adoption of this feature of the Constitution and of the text of the Constitution itself. I thought I would take the liberty of placing it in the RECORD for the purpose of removing some of the difficulties created by very able and astute arguments made by Senators on the other side.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, I do not rise for the purpose of discussing this bill—I have done that on a previous occasion—but to correct a misstatement, of course made unintentionally, by the Senator from Florida [Mr. CALL], to which I called his attention the other day, and which I was very much in hopes he himself would correct. In discussing this bill on the 8th of February he used this language:

But I want to allude to an act to promote the education of the blind, approved March 3, 1879. I do not know how my friend from Texas voted on that.

And then he makes a quotation from that act, and goes on:

Let us see what the vote was on that bill.
"Bailey, Bayard, Butler"—

Then he says:

I am surprised—
"Cameron of Pennsylvania, Cameron of Wisconsin, Chandler, Coke"—
I am again surprised.

And he then goes on with the further discussion of the bill. I find by reference to the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of that date that the list of yeas and nays read by the Senator from Florida as relating to the measure for the education of the blind at Louisville, Ky., related to a question of concurring in the report of the committee of conference on the sundry civil appropriation bill, on which the yeas and nays had been demanded. So my friend was clearly out of the way in citing my vote as having been cast for the educational bill for the blind. On that measure I find that I am recorded as absent and not voting at all. The explanation of that is, as I now recall it, that this vote having been taken on the 3d of March I had left for home, and therefore was not here to vote. On that educational bill for the blind the yeas were 40, the nays 7, and the absentees 29.

So the Senator was clearly and entirely mistaken in saying that I voted for the bill. I suppose his object was to convict me and those who oppose this bill of inconsistency. We have sins of commission enough to answer for without being called to account for those for which we are not responsible. I simply desire to make this correction that it may appear in the RECORD.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President, the RECORD is as follows after what the Senator from South Carolina has read:

Mr. BUTLER. What is the provision of that law, may I ask my friend?
Mr. CALL. I have already read it. I will read the list again.

And there comes a list of the real vote as given on the bill for the education of the blind.

Mr. BUTLER. My name is not on that list.

Mr. CALL. No; the Senator's name is not on that list, but the Senator proceeded to say:

That money was not thrust into all the States as this bill proposes to do; it was confined to a single institution, national in its character; and if I were put upon my voir dire, I would say that that was a straining of the Constitution somewhat, though I voted for it.

I had the Senator's statement for his vote, but I did not have the record.

Mr. BUTLER. I took the Senator's statement, supposing that he had examined the RECORD and quoted it correctly; but it seems that he had not. Of course I can not remember every vote I may have cast.

Mr. CALL. The real vote was given by me, and it happened by accident that at first the vote on the wrong bill was given, but it was corrected and the correct vote was given, and the Senator is the only one of the persons named who did not vote for the bill.

Mr. SAULSBURY. Mr. President, I had not intended to make any remarks on this bill at this time, as I have stated my objections to it on a former occasion. The more I have reflected upon it, however, the stronger has become my conviction that there never was a more indefensible measure proposed in the Senate of the United States. What is it? A proposition to take out of the Treasury of the United States $79,000,000 and pay it out to the States upon certain conditions to educate the children in public schools, and to distribute that money, not by any equitable or recognized principle of distribution, but upon a principle that has never before been applied in this country or any other country. It is not to be apportioned according to population or representation in Congress, but to be paid on the ratio of the ignorance of the people in the several States.

I shall not enter into the constitutional discussion of this question. I expressed my views when the bill was before the Senate at a former time somewhat at length, and argued the constitutional power of Congress to pass this bill. That question has been so ably discussed in this debate by those with whom I concur that I think it would be a work of supererogation to attempt to supplement their very conclusive arguments by any argument of my own now on that very important question.

The Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST], who opened the discussion, presented a very clear and logical argument on the constitutional points involved. The Senators from Texas [Mr. REAGAN and Mr. COKE], my colleague, the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY], and the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] also ably discussed the constitutional questions, and I take it upon myself to say that their arguments in reference to the want of constitutional power were perfect and conclusive. There never was a mathematical problem more perfectly demonstrated than was the position which those gentlemen took in reference to the want of constitutional power to pass this measure. The same view was presented yesterday by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY], who argued the question of want of authority in a manner that was unanswerable.

Whatever may be the fate of this bill, if it shall be passed or defeated, the Senators who oppose the measure have placed their opposition upon a foundation which can not be shaken.

I have listened, too, with a good deal of attention and interest to the argument made here in favor of the bill by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. PUGH], who sits on my left. I was pleased with the ingenuity which he displayed in trying to find a shelter, a place of refuge for the untenable position which he had taken in reference to this question. The great ability and ingenuity of that argument won my attention, as I have no doubt it attracted the attention of every member of the Senate; but how does he meet the argument against the authority to pass the bill? After a careful hunt through the Constitution for some authority on which to base the bill, he wound up by declaring that the power was in the discretion of Congress under the provision of the Constitution relating to the general welfare. Well, Mr. President, if the discretion of Congress is such that a bill like this can secure votes in the Senate, the discretion of Congress will justly be considered a very unsafe depository of power by the people of this country.

In the course of this debate I have heard the name of General Jackson cited as an authority in favor of an appropriation of this kind, and I have heard the name of John C. Calhoun also quoted in favor of such appropriation. Some years ago I took occasion to refer to the debates upon the distribution of the surplus funds in 1836, and I found the opinions of these gentlemen in connection with that subject, and as they have been cited now as authorities in favor of this bill I will call attention again to the views expressed by General Jackson on that subject, and also the views of Mr. Calhoun.

It will be remembered that General Jackson, as early as 1829, in his first annual message to Congress after his election, foreseeing that the public debt would soon be paid and that the revenues of the country would be piling up in the Federal Treasury, called the attention of Congress to the fact that the public debt would soon be extinguished, and under the then revenue system of the country there would accumulate in the public Treasury a large surplus, and he deprecated what he supposed would be the effect of a large surplus in the Treasury—that it would lead to wasteful legislation—and he urged Congress to make some provision whereby this anticipated surplus might be got rid of when it accumulated. I have an extract from that message, which I will read, in which he suggested that there might be a want of constitutional power to distribute it among the States, and suggested the propriety of a constitutional amendment for that purpose. I will read from his message:

After the extinction of the public debt it is not probable that any adjustment of the tariff, upon principles satisfactory to the people of the Union, will, until a remote period, if ever, leave the Government without a considerable surplus in the Treasury, beyond what may be required for its current service. As then the period approaches when the application of the revenue to the payment of debt will cease, the disposition of the surplus will present a subject for the serious deliberation of Congress, and it may be fortunate for the country that it is yet to be decided. Considered in connection with the difficulties which have heretofore attended appropriations for purposes of internal improvement, and with those which this experience tells us will certainly arise, whenever power over such subjects may be exercised by the General Government, it is hoped that it may lead to the adoption of some plan which may reconcile the diversified interests of the States and strengthen the bonds which unite them. Every member of the Union, in peace and in war, will be benefited by the improvement of inland navigation and the construction of highways in the several States. Let us then endeavor to attain this benefit in a mode which will be satisfactory to all. That hitherto adopted has, by many of our fellow-citizens, been deprecated as an infraction of the Constitution, while by others it has been viewed as inexpedient. All feel that it has been employed at the expense of harmony in the legislative councils.

To avoid these evils, it appears to me that the most safe, just, and federal disposition which could be made of the surplus revenue would be its apportionment among the several States according to their ratio of representation, and should this measure not be found warranted by the Constitution, that it would be expedient to propose to the States an amendment authorizing it. I regard an appeal to the source of power, in cases of real doubt, and where its exercise is deemed indispensable to the general welfare, as among the most sacred of all our obligations.

That was the view of General Jackson. Subsequent to that period Mr. Calhoun, after the surplus began to accumulate, brought in a resolution for the distribution of that money. It was referred to a select committee. It was a resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution authorizing the distribution of this money among the several States according to the ratio of representation in Congress.

That resolution was referred to a select committee. That committee, however, came to the conclusion that owing to the change in the tariff system made in 1832 no plethora would arise, and failed to act upon it. Subsequently, when the surplus arose, Mr. Calhoun again introduced the subject of the distribution of the surplus then in the Treasury, and the surplus that should arise up to the year 1842, among the several States of the Union according to their ratio of representation in Congress. He referred to his former opinion that a constitutional amendment was necessary to meet the emergency, if time would allow.

Mr. Webster moved to strike out that provision which referred to the distribution of surplus yet to arise. I have not examined what his reasons for it were, but I suppose they were the same reasons which induced the committee to which it was referred to strike it out, because there was no constitutional power to distribute a fund in any way which had not arisen.

Mr. Calhoun's bill, the bill to which I have just alluded, was referred to a select committee. That committee acceded to the proposition of Mr. Webster to strike out the provision for the distribution of any surplus which should thereafter arise, and changed the bill from a bill of distribution to a bill to deposit with the States the money, and that was the bill which passed Congress afterwards.

The committee reported that bill and it was adopted, making a loan, a deposit with the States upon a certificate given by the State authorities to return the money whenever it should be required. Even that proposition was amended, because under that the Secretary of the Treasury, as the committee had reported it, would have been compelled to have gone to Congress for authority to use those certificates of deposit. Mr. Tallmadge, of New York, moved to make them assignable by the Secretary of the Treasury, and that was done; so that those certificates remain now in the public Treasury, assignable by the Secretary of the Treasury whenever the exigencies of the Government require it to realize the money from the certificates of the States.

I cite these instances in order to answer the allegation that General Jackson and Mr. Calhoun were in favor of such a distribution or appropriation as is proposed in this bill. They were in favor of distributing the surplus in the Treasury if the constitutional power existed, General Jackson in his message suggesting the want of Federal power and recommending a resort back to the sources of power, to the people, by an amendment to the Constitution, to enable them to distribute the surplus money in the Treasury.

Mr. President, I do not intend to occupy much of the time of the Senate; but let me ask, if Congress has power to pass the bill, where is there any limitation to the power of Congress? The only authority claimed is under the provision of the Constitution in reference to the general welfare. As I before remarked, my friend from Alabama found the power lodged in that provision of the Constitution, and in the conclusion of his argument, as I understood it, admitted that the exercise of the power and the determination of what the general welfare required rested in the discretion of Congress. I again remark that the people of this country will consider the discretion of Congress a very unsafe depository of Federal power if this bill should pass.

But if you have authority to pass this bill, where, I ask again, is the limitation upon your authority? Can you not clothe the children under the same power just as well as to pay the tuition? Can you not feed the children who are to go to school just as legally and constitutionally as you can provide for the application of money to their education? And is there not the same necessity for such an application of public funds as to their education? How many children in the land to-day are starving for want of something to eat, who are unable to go to school because they have not anything which they can take with them to subsist upon. How many are to-day not clad sufficiently to go to school.

Mr. CALL. We are feeding them in this District.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I admit the power of Congress over this District, but there is a distinction between the power of Congress over the District of Columbia and the States of the Federal Union. It is not only these ill-fed and illy-clad children, but there are hundreds of thousands of people of all ages in the country to-day who are destitute of the means of proper subsistence, who are neither fed nor clad as they ought to be, and who are suffering to-day, as well as starving in cellars and in garrets for want of coal or other fuel to keep them warm.

If you have the power to pass this bill, you have the power to do anything you please, because it rests simply in the discretion of Congress to consider what will promote the general welfare. Would it not promote the general welfare just as much to feed the hungry and starving populations of your large cities, where women are making pantaloons for 7 cents apiece and other garments at mere starving prices, where they work on Sunday as well as every day and night in the week? The tramps who fill your land are but the representatives of a large class of people to-day who are suffering for want of something to eat and something to wear. If you have the power over the funds in the Federal Treasury that is claimed for the purpose of passing this bill, why not extend the benevolent hand of the Government and feed and clothe those people? Sir, you would perform as great a public service to the country as to pass this bill, and would perhaps save hundreds and thousands of men and women from the paths of vice and bring them up to be useful citizens, and you have just as much power to do that as you have to pass this measure.

It is claimed as one of the excuses for this bill that the Southern people are not able to educate the colored people. I deny it. I say here, and say it deliberately, upon reflection, that I have no question but that the Southern people are as able to educate the children in their midst as the people of any portion of this country. What are the resources of all the Southern States? Have you ever thought of it? Why, sir, to-day the evidences of wealth exist there to an extent that they do not exist in some other portions of this country. Look at their vast cotton crop, more than $300,000,000 annually produced from cotton alone. Look at their vast tobacco crop. I do not know the amount of tobacco raised, but I suppose from one to two hundred million dollars' worth at least of tobacco is raised in the Southern States annually.

Look at the fruit crop in the States represented by my friends, the Senators from Florida and Louisiana. Look at the rice and the sugar crop. Take up your papers and consult the markets in your nearest city, the city of Baltimore, and one of the first items that strikes you in the markets is the price of Southern wheat and Southern corn. They are raising a vast amount of cereals as well as other things. Besides that they have an untold amount of mineral wealth, iron and coal. I say the natural elements of wealth exist to-day as abundantly in the Southern States as in any other portion of this country.

Then there is one other point which might be taken into consideration. Their system of labor is the cheapest system of labor in the United States. There is no other section of this country which procures its labor at anything like the rates paid for labor in the Southern States. I venture the assertion to-day that the difference between the price of labor in the Northern and Western States and in the Southern States is fully equal to all the money expended in the South for educational purposes. I believe that the difference in the cost of labor in the Northern and Southern sections of this country would amount to as much money as is expended for educational purposes in those States.

Mr. GRAY. The cost of living?

Mr. SAULSBURY. Independently of that, I refer to the cost of labor itself to produce the cotton crop, the tobacco crop, the rice crop, the sugar crop. The difference in cost of all the varied crops which are produced would fully pay for the education of every child in the Southern States.

Mr. President, the plea that it is a matter of necessity, that the Southern people are too poor to educate their children, is all a delusion; there is no truth in it. As was said by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY] yesterday, it may be that they have not yet realized the necessity for it as much as in some other sections of the country, but the ability of the Southern people is ample to meet this or any other emergency upon them.

Mr. President, I sincerely wish the bill could be defeated. There is no necessity for it, in my opinion, in any portion of this country; but if there was no other objection whatever, if there was perfect constitutional warrant to pass the bill, I should vote against it in the interests of education itself. The remarks which were made by the Senator from Connecticut yesterday were very appropriate, and must have commended themselves to the sound judgment of every member of the Senate. The moment that you remove the obligation which nature has put upon the parent and transfer it to the General Government, that moment you weaken the interest of the parent and of the local community in the education of the children therein, and they are turned over to the tender mercies of the General Government, deprived of the paternal and local interest felt in their education, so essential to their success.

I recall the days of my boyhood, when we had no free-school system in my State, where the parents of the children met and employed their teacher, saw that their children went to school, and gave personal attention and supervision to their education. That was the best system, so far as obtaining profitable results from education were concerned, of any that I have ever seen. Education might not have been so generally diffused; that I admit is true; but those who were educated under that system, under the immediate supervision of their parents, and of teachers employed by their parents, were better educated than they are in the common schools of the country to-day. Education may not have been so generally disseminated and diffused, but that system illustrated the interest of the parent and of the local community in the schools; and the moment you destroy that interest you inflict a greater injury upon the cause of education than all the money which is proposed by this bill will be worth.

Sir, for one I am sorry that this bill is to pass, as I believe it will pass the Senate, but I want to record my vote against it. I represent in part on this floor one of the smallest States in this Union, small in the extent of her territory and limited in her resources, with few natural advantages, few natural elements of wealth, with no mineral wealth within her borders, with no coal or iron, dependent to a very large extent for her sources of revenue upon taxation imposed upon her people.

But I am sure that the State, which was the first to adopt the Constitution and enter this Union, and by that act agreed to give up a part of her sovereign power to the General Government, but expressly reserved in the same instrument her control over her own domestic institutions, would not willingly surrender those reserved rights for all the money which she could derive under this bill.

I am certain of another thing, sir, that though she may be small in territory, small in resources, she is proud of the self-reliance of her own citizens, and will never barter away the reserved rights which she has under the Constitution, nor reach forth the hand of a mendicant to ask the charity of the Federal Government.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President, I wish to say only one word. I wish to call attention to a fact of record here before the debate closes.

The Senators who deny the power of Congress to make this appropriation every day vote against their own declarations and in favor of the power claimed in the bill. I call attention to the fact that within a few days they have voted to refund nearly $20,000,000 of taxes paid half a century ago, when it is manifest upon their propositions that they can find no enumerated power in the Constitution to refund taxes which have been paid for the legitimate purposes of Government.

I wish further, without making any speech upon this subject, to call attention to the fact that there have been appropriated, with full consent and by the votes of those very Senators, more than a quarter of a million dollars in the shape of public lands of the United States for the very purpose which they declare now will emasculate the people of the States and destroy the State governments.

Mr. BLAIR. Mr. President, in the few remarks that I desire to make in closing the debate upon this bill I wish first to recall the attention of the Senate to the issue. Much that has been said has been entirely wide, as I conceive, of the true question of fact and of the parties who are in court to-day. The debate has proceeded as though it were a question between the country at large and the grown people who make up the communities in the various States. On the part of many Senators there seems to be altogether a misapprehension upon this, which is the vital and most serious point and the real issue of the whole debate.

It is of very little consequence relatively what becomes of the present generation. What we are, we are, and are likely to be; but it is of great consequence what shall be the fate of the future, which depends so largely upon the conduct of the present. The real question is whether this generation, with matured powers for the control of the destiny of the country for the time being, is to make that provision for the generation to come which has been made for the generation existing by those who have preceded it; whether this generation, so far as it has the capacity to do so, is to make better preparation for the discharge of its duties on the part of the coming generation, so far as it should be made, than was made by those who preceded us.

That is the real question between the present generation and the coming generations, between the matured people of this great nation and the children of this country; and when we are told that to assist the cause of education is to destroy the principle of self-help we are merely listening to the uttermost absurdity. What coming generation ever educated itself? What Senator on this floor, what citizen of the United States ever was educated without receiving as much or more assistance from outside himself than it is proposed to give by the provisions of this bill, supplemented by the already great contributions of the country at large to the cause of common schools and higher education as well? What man now upon the arena of active life ever furnished the schoolhouse or qualified the teacher who gave to him instruction, provided himself with his own books, taught himself the alphabet, contributed in any way to his own education, without having supplied to him everything that it is proposed by this bill to give?

And yet we are told that to make this provision for the South, to furnish suitable conveniences and facilities for common-school education, for learning to read and to write, and to remove the two million of voters from our country who are now unable to read their ballots, and to prevent a substitution of a still larger number as the coming generation approaches—we are told that to do this, which was done for us by our fathers, is to destroy the principle of self-help; and college professors come here and college presidents come here and General Armstrong comes here after years of advocacy for the principles of this measure, and they declare now that to enact this bill into law is to destroy the great principle of self-help, and they stigmatize it as a bill for the promotion of mendicancy, of beggary. Why, Mr. President, are not the greatest beggars upon the face of God's earth the presidents of the colleges of the United States, and General Armstrong the superior of the whole? It is because they have been such accomplished and successful beggars that in this country to-day we have on the whole a higher education, superior to that of any other people on the face of the earth. It is largely because great beggars and successful beggars have succeeded, as General Armstrong has, in establishing an institution at Hampton which is the glory of the State and of the country. If they were not beggars they would be useless in the high vocation to which they have been called.

Why, Mr. President, I believe some have called this a bill for the promotion of mendicity. It has been so styled by the New York Post and the Washington Post and other organs of Jesuitism in this country, for this is a great fight initiating and already outlining itself for the future between the common schools of the United States and those influences which would subvert this great system. I tell you, sir, that upon this very floor, soon after we had passed this bill two years ago, and while it was in the hands of a packed committee of the House of Representatives, where it was finally strangled—on this very floor a Senator showed me, and I read it with my own eyes, the original letter of a Jesuit priest, in which he begged a member of Congress to oppose this bill and to kill it, saying that they had organized all over the country for its destruction, that they succeeded in the committee of the House, and they would destroy the bill inevitably, and if they had only known it early enough they could have prevented its passage through the Senate. They have begun in season this time, but they will not destroy this bill.

Twelve years ago when I was a member of the House of Representatives, and when we were undertaking to enact a constitutional amendment, which was to prevent the appropriation of the public money to the support of sectarian schools in this country, a friend of mine pointed out to me upon that floor nine Jesuits who were there log-rolling against that proposed amendment of the Constitution. I did not know them. He claimed to know them; and he pointed them out, nine at one time. They were not the Catholic Church, thank God! Within the sound of my voice sleep the remains of John Carroll and of Charles Carroll of Carrollton, men who were devoted to civil rights and to true religion; and against the memory of those men and against the great Catholic organization of this country, I say nothing, for I venerate their memories, and I venerate that great organization which, subject to my reverence for the faith of my fathers, is, in my belief, a true exemplar of Christianity. I care not how far it exerts, or how widely it extends its power; but within that organization is a Jesuit organization which has set out to control this country, which has been repudiated by every free country, Catholic and Protestant, in the Old World, and they have come to our borders and they are among us to-day, and they understand that they are to secure the control of this continent by destroying the public-school system of America. They are engaged in that nefarious and wicked work. And as Jesuits have been expelled from the Old World, let me say that the time is soon coming when the Jesuits will be looked upon as more the enemy of this country than is the Anarchist to-day. And the process either of their expulsion or of their conversion will be one in which the American people will some time be engaged, unless the order change their programme and their work.

Mr. President, I said that they began in season or attempted to, so far as the Senate is concerned, in this Congress, and I told the truth, and I have nothing more to say upon that point.

It is claimed here that the necessity of national aid to common schools has passed away, and all through the North the press has been so asserting, I know not under what influence. In this debate the point has been by irrefragable proof overwhelmingly met. I read here for three or four days demonstrations from every State in the South of the falsehood of this allegation that aid was no longer needed, demonstrations, I say, from the highest authorities and most reliable men that it was still a necessity and as much so as ever.

As the influence to which I have alluded found its way to the North great papers which a few years ago were advocating this measure changed their ground. The Chicago Tribune, which for years advocated even the extraordinary appropriation suggested by our revered and deceased associate, General Logan, which carried $80,000,000 in a year to the school system of this country, a sum exceeding the whole amount proposed in this bill to be appropriated for eight years, is now against this bill, and denounces it as a bill for the promotion of mendicity! What has produced that change? The Boston Herald was for years an advocate of this measure, but abandoned it in the last Congress about half-way through the discussion; then sitting conveniently for a short time on the fence, looking first one way and then the other, it finally concluded that on the whole perhaps the bill had better not pass, and ever since then it has been an opponent. The Boston Advertiser, the New York Times—the Times for years an advocate of this bill, and changing when there was no pretense that the necessity had passed away—are now against the bill. Why is this? Why, sir, upon the staff of every great paper of this country to-day is a Jesuit, and the business of that man is to see that a blow is struck whenever there is an opportunity to strike at the common-school system of America; and the further investigation there is in this direction the more patent will this appear.

I have here newspapers, the organs of these men, in which the bill is denounced and I am personally assailed, which show sufficiently, if there were any question about where this organization is.

There is another power which is against this bill. I have never seen it assailed by that power until this Congress; but it is awake to the idea that the general diffusion of intelligence through our common schools will result in less drunkenness and less consumption of intoxicating drinks; and the Sentinel, of this city, the organ of the power of which I now speak, recognized as the organ of that power for years—and there is not a Senator who does not know that it is so—comes out very recently in a violent assault upon this school bill, which had passed the Senate by a three-fourths vote on more than one occasion, which has been indorsed by the most eminent constitutional lawyers of the country and of the Senate, and in this Senate there are constitutional lawyers whose superiors are nowhere.

It is a bill which is petitioned for by the Chief-Justice of the Supreme Court, in favor of which one of the strongest speeches ever made on this floor was made demonstrating its constitutionality, if a demonstration on such a subject is a possible thing, by Mr. Justice Lamar. This bill as unconstitutional and undemocratic is denounced fiercely by these papers, but not so much because it is unconstitutional as because it is a bribe to the States and is an assault on the liberties of the people.

But I will use my time otherwise. I am going too far in these directions. I make these suggestions and leave that branch of the subject.

The Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE] says this bill has fallen off in public favor. I say that whenever this bill has failed to increase its popularity, to take hold on the public judgment and public conscience, it is because it has been lied about and persistently lied about, and when the lies have been exposed, the exposure has not been spread through the country as it ought to have been by a faithful press. Why, sir, I have not known a popular discussion on this bill anywhere that the bill did not come out stronger; and if the truth were stated upon this bill North or South, I would be willing to submit its fate to a three-fourths vote of the people, the number necessary to pass an amendment to the Constitution of the country.

Let me refresh the memory of Senators a little. This is no new idea. As soon as the war had destroyed the institution of slavery, the Republican party, which had been the instrumentality in the hands of God to accomplish the great work of the war, recognized its duty to give intelligence where it had given suffrage, and the great leaders of the party urged the accomplishment of this work upon the party at large. I have here the earnest recommendation of every President that the Republican party has ever elevated to power since this issue could properly be before the public mind; I have here views taken from the speeches of twenty-eight of the Senators who have expressed themselves on this floor, only about one-half of the number who have actually given their opinions by their votes on this question, not merely indorsing the constitutionality of the measure, but also saying that it was a public necessity and an act of justice and of right. I can not take the time of the Senate in reading them; but by reason of the continual assumption which is made notwithstanding the exposure and the demonstration to the contrary that the South is increasing in good and increasing in capacity to endure taxation, and that illiteracy is disappearing in consequence of a better condition at the South and greater interest in public schools and an actual appropriation of the necessary funds—by reason, I say, of the continual iteration of this wrong proposition, I am obliged in these few closing moments to call the attention of the Senate again to some of that proof which is already in the RECORD of the Senate, but which I am conscious has failed to reach the ears of Senators.

Mr. President, here is one great fact to which I call attention; it is a large fact; it is not intermixed with the politics or the statistics of a single State or of communities in single States, but it is an admitted fact and nobody will undertake to contradict it. It was placed before the Senate in the beginning of this debate, and nobody has assailed it, and nobody can assail it. It is this, that the Southern States (leaving out Delaware, which is almost a Northern State, and Maryland which is close by us and a wealthy State, and Missouri, which has a school fund of some four or five million dollars), comprising almost one-third of our population to-day, some 18,000,000 at least of our population, and by reason of the greater fecundity of the two races in that portion of the country containing at least one-third of the educable population of the country in that portion of the Union, are now expending in the support of schools but about $11,000,000, while for the whole country the expenditure, according to the returns as I have them in the last printed report of the Commissioner of Education, was in the year 1885–'86 $111,000,000. That is to say, one-third of the school population of this country is actually receiving to-day only one-tenth of the school funds which are being applied upon the school population of the entire Union.

And it will be remembered, in addition to this, that whatsoever money is expended there is expended to far less advantage than it is in the Northern States; and why? I have the demonstration here by a careful calculation showing that it would require to-day the expenditure of $36,000,000 in these Southern States to give them the school plant and the school advantages which abound in the North—the facilities for giving instruction, I mean to say; $36,000,000, almost half the amount which it is proposed by this bill to give during the whole term of eight years. The sort of school-houses used there has been described, hundreds of them log houses without windows: In a single county, as I read to you, where there were nineteen school-houses, the superintendent of schools in that county returns that the value of school furniture does not average $1 per school-house.

In the State of Kentucky, with one hundred and fifty counties, when an attempt was made to have a State assemblage of the teachers, to hold a teachers' convention, there was a representation from but one-third of the counties, and a responsible lady who writes to me, and whose name and letter I have given in the RECORD, says there are whole counties in that State where there is no school whatever. But the point is, that where they do have school facilities they are of such inferior quality that the money actually expended is expended at great disadvantage. Any one can see that. And yet here in these States, laboring under these tremendous disadvantages as to the provision for education, the means of utilizing the efforts of teachers in the imparting of intelligence in these States, where there is one-third of the population and only about one-half the school population in any school whatever, they used only $11,000,000 of the $111,000,000 expended in the whole country. There is a fact of great significance. I do not know anybody who will dispute it unless he would dispute the shining sun.

I ask Senators to contemplate just that one fact, without putting me to the trouble of demonstrating it by an examination which bears out the general assertion in the various States at large. I have here the last report, the report of 1885–'86, and it shows in the State of Florida—which has been held up to admiration on this floor as a new El Dorado and something superior to anything we have seen before, and she is a glorious State in natural resources—that of the children between six and sixteen years of age, the very narrowest limit of the school age, some 48 per cent. attend schools. In the various Southern States the actual attendance upon schools is from 46, 48, 50 to 51, 52, 53, and 54 per cent. of the children between six and sixteen years of age. Nobody denies that. We have these statistics in the New York Post in its attacks upon this plea for mendicity, if that be the expression—beggary—which Senators are asked to believe, and every essential statement in its attacks I assert to be a falsehood exposed over and over again, and yet reiterated and reiterated with knowledge that it is false, and to the misleading of the great Northern mind.

I tell you, Mr. President, the time is not far ahead when the Northern people will understand this jugglery; they will know the facts; and they will be aroused to this deception, and the American people will have the truth from that gallery on which I now gaze.

I commend to anybody who doubts the necessity of aid to the Southern States, whoever may be complained of for its existence, an honest and careful perusal of the last report of our own officer, the Commissioner of Education; and I commend to such people, too, a perusal of the contents of the RECORD, so far as they relate to the question of the necessity of aid in these Southern States for further education. The highest authorities there say that on the whole illiteracy is increasing, and there is no question of the fact that illiteracy is in the aggregate increasing. The only question is as to whether it is increasing relatively, whether population and wealth are increasing more rapidly than illiteracy; but where there were two millions of men who could not read their ballots in the year 1880 there are as many or more who can not read their ballots to-day.

That is the stubborn fact which still exists, and the question arises whether it is to continue to exist. It is an evasion of the real issue to come here and say that the Southern people do not educate their children, and yet that they are able to do so. The fact is that these children are not educated, and it is of no consequence, relatively, where the blame lies. They are American children; they are a part of this great nation; they hold its destiny in their hands as much as do the children of Boston, or of Chicago, or of San Francisco. Are they to be educated?

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY] said yesterday that the question of education was a local question; and assuming that false premise he went on to argue that this bill is unconstitutional. I say "that false premise"—not false in the sense that it implies any fault on his part, but an untrue premise. Is education a local matter? Is it in New Hampshire? Is it of no consequence to my friend who represents California, that I or my children may be barbarians and grow up a race of savages? Is this Union, composed of those whose citizenship covers this whole country, to have no interest in its several parts? Is it of no consequence to the parent in New Hampshire whether the child in Alabama be educated? Who of the fathers and of the really great men of this country or of any country, who have had the good of human nature and of human beings at heart, has ever failed to assert affirmatively, not to assert evasively or doubtfully, but affirmatively, that education is the grand basis of republican institutions? Who does not know that knowledge is power, and that there is no power but knowledge; that mind is superior to matter, and that the education of the child alone qualifies that child for citizenship?

I do not speak of education in the narrow and restricted sense of merely learning to read and write and cipher, or of intellectual education carried to any extent. I do not speak of that alone. I speak of the development, the education of the whole man; and the first necessity that a child may receive education in all the three great departments of its nature is that intellectual education, the training of the senses, an acquisition of the power to acquire knowledge—knowledge of the very elements of ordinary learning, the art of reading and of writing, the basis of the whole. And that is all that this bill undertakes to do, all that this bill undertakes to impart. It undertakes to carry that wherever it is needed, within the limits of the appropriation, and bases it upon the necessity as measured by the census—the only truthful and mathematical measure which is available to us as yet. It undertakes, I say, to carry within the limits of the amount covered by this bill, to every part of the country, the means of acquiring a common-school education by every child; and that is all it undertakes to do. It undertakes to give us uniform and homogeneous American citizenship; that all shall be elevated to one common level in order that each may have a fair chance in the race of life. That is all it undertakes to do.

It is a bill of beggary, is it? How is this generation to pay the debt owed by it to the last? Certainly we can not in any way compensate our fathers; but is it not our duty, are we not simply repaying a debt which we owe to those who have preceded us and who have given us the opportunity of working out this grand destiny of ours? Do we not, I say, owe to them that we transmit to others the great blessings which we have received? How is this nation to be made perpetual? How is this great people to be made perpetual unless it be that the citizenship be instructed and be made competent to understand its rights and to defend them?

Sir, the war liberated a race which by the last census had attained to the number of 6,580,000, poor, worked by hard taskmasters for two hundred and fifty years as slaves, the title to whom was vested in citizens of the South, but it was one common crime if it were a crime. The North grew rich out of the labor of the slave and his transportation to this country; it fattened on his labor while he was a slave in this country. We availed ourselves of his commercial value as well as did the people of the South. The war came and slavery was destroyed—destroyed by Northern power—and the Union was maintained intact, and we made these men citizens. We left them ignorant. We found them worth perhaps a dollar apiece, and within the last quarter of a century nearly, after diligent labor, they have come to be worth perhaps $15 apiece. I remember that the Senator from Georgia [Mr. BROWN], when this bill was discussed three or four years ago in this Chamber, stated that the colored people of the South had taxable property to the amount of $6,000,000. There were then a half million of them in that State. By statistics which have recently come to my knowledge and which I think are substantially correct, the colored people of this country own, by their own estimates, some $250,000,000. Nine million dollars of that is owned by colored people in the city of New York.

I believe it to be a fact that there are now at least 8,000,000, probably 8,500,000, colored people in this country. If they have increased since the last census as they did from 1870 to 1880, there must be 8,500,000 of them now. I do not suppose that the entire number living at the South are in possession of $125,000,000, or at most $150,000,000 of property to-day, and of taxable property I do not believe they have $100,000,000. The wealth of the United States to-day I can not, of course, tell exactly, but the Senator from Nevada estimated it at $75,000,000,000 only a few days ago here in debate. Assuming that the taxable property of the country is $35,000,000,000 or $40,000,000,000 to-day, that of the South is not over $4,000,000,000 in the whole. That portion of the American people upon whom devolves the education of at least one-third of the children of this great country are not to-day worth for the purposes of taxation more than one-tenth of the property of the other two-thirds, and the colored people whom we are endeavoring to reach mainly are the poorest of the whole. Perhaps the poor whites are not much better off; but take from the colored population the two or three millions who represent what was the dominant element before the war, and both white and colored, I doubt whether they average $30 apiece to-day, and the colored man at the South, I do not believe, is worth $10.

What does this signify? These are the people who have the children, these are the men who in mountains and valleys and hamlets and glens have the generation in charge that is to come, and that is rapidly becoming the nation to-day. What, I say, is the significance of these figures so far as the power to maintain schools is concerned? Do we not know that the power to raise money and to appropriate it to any purpose outside of the provision of the necessaries of life depends upon a surplus on the part of the individual? He must first provide shelter; he must provide clothing; he must provide food for his family. Actual existence must first be secured; and what taxable property has he left beyond that? To-day if the wealthy white population of the South did not pay far beyond what any like population pays anywhere else in proportion to the entire wealth of the whole, neither the poor white nor the colored man's child would be receiving any education at all. As it is, it hardly applies for three months in the year.

The Senator from Kansas [Mr. PLUMB], whom I respect and love as I know he loves me—though he never said so, I see it in his eye and in the sweep of his arm—says that the people of Kansas are taxing themselves and enduring greater burdens than the people of the South, and it is because these people of the South fail to do their duty that their children are not educated. Grant it for the moment, what of it? We are dealing with the child and with the future; with the fate of the Northern citizen and the Southern citizen, as my friend and myself know, in the time that is to come. We are not dealing with our friends who are supposed to be derelict in their duty. The fact, and the only fact that is essential, is that the education is not being received, and that the child is helpless to acquire it or provide it for himself, Dr. Eliot and other college presidents to the contrary notwithstanding.

In regard to the people of Kansas, they were Northern people; they were trained in the common school; they knew the institution; they comprehended that knowledge was power, and they went to that great country and conquered the wilderness and made it to blossom as the rose; and they have sent such men as you, Mr. President [Mr. INGALLS], and my friend here [Mr. PLUMB] to represent them on this floor, and they have done it by universal suffrage. The sovereignty is in the poorest man in Kansas as much as it is in the richest; and why is it there? Because he knows as much; and understanding the common school, knowing that it was a primary necessity, he established it in Kansas, and he has come to have the average proportion of wealth. The citizenship of Kansas, as a whole, can endure its taxation and maintain its schools, because wealth is there distributed.

It is not so at the South, and it never will be so at the South until the common school is the common institution of that country. My friend knows that; but he brings in his table here and he undertakes to show that we are robbing the State of New Hampshire and the State of Kansas by this proposed contribution to the necessity of the child of the South, saying nothing about the parents and the masters of the present time. He says we are robbing the child of the North. Let us see. I do not understand it that way. He has undertaken to show how much each State receives and how much each State will pay out in the form of taxation in this proposed contribution of $77,000,000. Could anything be more misleading or misguiding than the table which he introduces for the second time? He presented it in his former speech, and the inaccuracy and misleading tendency of it he could not but know, for it was fully exposed at that time.

He estimates that the taxation of the country is equally distributed per capita throughout the United States. He understands about the tariff, and that it is mainly levied on the luxuries of the country. He knows that the internal revenue comes from whisky and tobacco and a few other things which no man consumes unless he sees fit to do so. I take it that the people of Kansas do not wear the imported luxuries to any great extent or consume from the imported luxuries to any great extent. I know that the common people in my State do not; and so far as those personal habits are concerned upon which depends the consumption of articles taxed under the internal-revenue system, no man contributes unless he sees fit to do so. And so it seems to be the fact that no State pays more than she chooses, and the most of the people pay but very little of the actual taxation that gets into the Treasury of the United States either in the way of duties on imports or by internal revenue.

But even if it were so, I do not think the people of Kansas have very much to complain of. I have here the last report of the Postmaster-General, and it seems that my poor people in New Hampshire, starving to death on the summit of Mount Washington, battling with the hardships of the climate, have to assist the people of Kansas. It seems that the State of New Hampshire is actually contributing to the postal necessities of Kansas and various other States the amount of near $50,000 a year and has done so for a long time. In New Hampshire there was $56,411 last year excess of postal receipts over expenditures. Massachusetts contributes to the postal system of the Western States $1,074,577. The State of New York contributes almost $3,000,000—$2,922,000. Here is another State, Illinois, which contributes $426,629, and so on. I do not complain of that. We are helping to educate the West, for the postal system is a great educating system. It is advocated by those who are taking these revenues from New Hampshire, New York, and Massachusetts, on the ground that it educates the people. So it does, and I would be willing, my people would be willing, to give even more than they do beyond what is necessary to pay the expenses of the system in their own State.

Now, another illustration. Every year when there is not a veto we are called upon to contribute for the improvement of the rivers and harbors of the country. New Hampshire has a harbor to which there is no contribution of any consequence ever made, nothing in proportion to our taxation. We get but little. The interior States get next to nothing, yet all pay their tax; and can any one say it is a matter of indifference to me whether New York Harbor is improved, whether the coast shall be fortified and defended, whether anything necessary for the general welfare of this great country of ours be done? I have not learned my politics in this narrow and to my mind contemptible school. We shall not hold this country together another decade if the ideas which have been advanced on this floor for the defeat of this bill are to prevail.

I have no sympathy, Mr. President, with denunciation of the South. If the spirit is wanting, that is the greatest calamity of all; but, sir, the spirit is not wanting. How do we act with the heathen? Do we withhold our missionaries and our means of enlightenment because the people do not want them? Nay, verily, Mr. President, we pursue just the opposite course for that very reason. If we were, as it is assumed here that we are, dealing with a heathen population at the South, for that reason pour in the money, pour it in from the national Treasury, pour it there in self-defense; it is cheaper than another war.

Do you expect to hold this country together for twenty-five years longer upon the doctrines which have been advanced by Southern Senators upon this floor, who have advocated the very principles of secession to which they gave the best part of their lives? I tell you, Mr. President, that if the war did not accomplish the destruction of the doctrine which has been advocated here, there is another one coming. We shall never reach this elemental difficulty until we give education to the masses of the people there, for I tell you to-day, whatever her Senators may say, a majority of the people of Texas want this bill. A majority of the people of Kentucky would vote to-day for this bill. Wherever you give free suffrage, white or black, and show them this bill in any Southern State, in any State where their school privileges are lacking, they will vote for it.

Let this bill prevail in its provisions to such an extent as to give a thoroughly vitalized and fully extended system of common schools throughout the South; let it prevail for ten years and the old hide-bound aristocracy which owned land and man alike before the war will disappear forever from the face of the earth. One-half those Senators today are for this bill. They comprehend the signs of the times. They know that it is meant to accomplish something. They understand that universal intelligence is to be the indispensable condition of universal citizenship in the future. Those men lead their people. For them there is in the future a full assurance of hope.

But I tell you, Mr. President, that the other men who fight this bill on this floor are fighting for self-preservation and for a condition of things that is passing away. It received its first great death blow in the war, and this is but an indispensable and necessary and logical result of the war, for it makes free indeed those who, as the result of the war, were declared free under the constitutional and statutory enactments of the land.

There will be a universally diffused sovereignty one of these days, and there will be freedom at the South as well as at the North. That is why certain men oppose the common schools, and to-day all through the South they are the class of men who are opposing them, not only the contributions which we are attempting to get here, but opposing them in their actual establishment there.

But, Mr. President, it is no use to fight against the stars. Destiny is fixed. You may defeat this bill; you may do it by direction, or you may do it by indirection, but the principles of the bill will prevail. The great force of national defense will vest itself in the results of common-school education at the South as well as at the North.

I ought to speak of General Armstrong, but I have not the time; it is no use, for the hour for the vote is almost at hand. I saw a moment or two ago the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY] here. The first meeting ever held in this city for the promotion of this bill was at General HAWLEY'S house, and I was more surprised than anybody else when I found him its enemy. I would dwell more upon that if the Senator from Connecticut were here.

Mr. FRYE. He is here now.

Mr. BLAIR. General Armstrong was long a friend of the bill. I do not know what has affected his mind. Only last year in his report to the people of Virginia he spoke of the great necessity of assistance in the education of the people of the South. I have heard that he is sick; I do not know whether he is or not. I do know that this bill has been in the clutches—it was in the last Congress—not of an adverse majority, but in the clutches of the leaders of an adverse minority, and that his institution depends upon appropriations; that he comes here and begs for them, and that he goes to Virginia and begs for them; and I do know, or I do think, that there must have been operating upon his mind, and operating upon the minds of others through his representations at the North who have been misled, some kind of motive that I can not explain, or if I can I am not going to do it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore (at 3 o'clock p. m.). Unanimous consent was given on Wednesday last that at this hour debate on the bill should cease.

Mr. BLAIR. I can not ask for an extension of time. I have yielded the floor; I have said my say. I ask leave to print a letter just received from a professor at the head of a school, the senior principal of the Bryant School, at Roslyn, Long Island, New York, which has been drawn from him, dated February 13, by reason of this unaccountable performance of the educated and the cultivated, cold-blooded college professors and beggars of the North.

The letter referred to is as follows:

BRYANT SCHOOL, ROSLYN, LONG ISLAND, February 13, 1888.

DEAR SIR: My attention having been called to certain letters in Saturday's Evening Post, adverse to the Blair bill, I have something to say in the way of criticism. President Barnard says the bill is "totally without justification in the Constitution of the United States." Congress has granted millions of acres of land to the States for educational purposes, and, as the land was worth millions of dollars, has in effect granted millions of dollars already for the same object proposed by the Blair bill. President Barnard must therefore hold that Congress has been most unconstitutionally granting large values almost ever since the organization of the Government. And further, as President Barnard holds that such grants do great injury to communities by discouraging self-help, self-sacrifice, etc., therefore, according to the learned president, what an incalculable amount of harm Congress has already done! Look at Kansas, Minnesota, and other States which have been the recipients, the "mendicants" which have had the misfortune to get several millions in this way from grants of Congress for educational purposes!

If President Barnard's logic is good, these States must be suffering from a most deplorable lack of self-reliance, and the push, energy, and enterprise that proceed from self-reliance, as well as far behind in education compared with what they would have been if Congress had not most unconstitutionally inflicted upon them these grants of school lands! President Barnard also makes a fling at the "general-welfare" clause of the Constitution and says it is "much abused." President Barnard may regret, but he can not ignore the fact, that the "general-welfare" clause is in the Constitution, and in the very first paragraph, conferring powers upon Congress, and that Congress is just as much bound by it to provide for the "general-welfare" as it is to provide for the "common defense." I would ask the distinguished president, then, when and how this clause has been "abused"? Has Congress provided for the "general welfare" too much or too little? Has Congress overdone its duty in this respect or underdone it? Have we had a surfeit of welfare through Congressional zeal? I protest against the attempt to belittle this particular provision of the Constitution while laying extra stress upon others. The "general-welfare" clause is not second in dignity, importance, or mandatory authority to any clause of the Constitution.

Not only President Barnard, but several other college presidents, object to the Blair bill on the ground that it is a "bill to encourage mendicity," or, putting it into Anglo-Saxon, they call it a "bill to encourage beggary." Now, I would like to ask, What institutions have done more "begging" than colleges? If these presidents are logical and believe what they say, they should instantly insist that all the millions they have derived from bequests and State appropriations should be paid back, and that the colleges should be run in future on the "self-help" and "self-reliance" principle exclusively—they can not have too much of such a good thing.

I am not discussing the details of the bill; they may be objectionable in many ways. Experience has shown how unsafe it is to intrust large sums of money to State Legislatures. I have nothing to say on that subject, as the writers of the letters I allude to say nothing. I wish to comment upon one other remark, or objection, of President Barnard's. It is this: He objects very emphatically that the money is not to be distributed pro rata, according to population. I reply that it is just as important to me that the constituents of a Mississippi Representative or Senator be made intelligent by education as that the constituents of the New York Representatives and Senators should be, because they alike make laws that I must obey, and that the narrow, local self-government argument will not apply here so long as that is the fact. We appropriate money for improvement of rivers and harbors, not in proportion to population, but in proportion to the wants of the rivers and harbors. On the same principle the Blair bill appropriates money where most needed by the uneducated condition of the people, as the "general welfare" demands that American citizens everywhere be sufficiently intelligent to know and perform their duties.

E. HINDS.

Senator BLAIR.

Mr. PLUMB. The pending question is on my amendment to the second section.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be read.

Mr. PLUMB. I ask leave to modify it so as to read according to the copy which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator has a right to modify his own amendment, the yeas and nays not having been ordered.

Mr. HARRIS. Before proceeding to vote on the amendment, I wish to give notice that at the proper time I shall move to amend the title so as to conform it to my own view as to what would be a proper title to the pending bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Tennessee desire to have it read now?

Mr. HARRIS. Yes, sir.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The proposed amendment to the title will be read.

Mr. BLAIR. I did not hear the remark of the Senator from Tennessee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Tennessee proposes to amend the title, and asks that his suggestion may be now read.

Mr. HARRIS. I give notice that I shall move it at the proper time.

Mr. BLAIR. In regard to this amendment, I may be permitted to say what I designed to say or ought to have said: If amendments are offered here which we can not discuss, I hope that the friends of the measure will stand by it just as it was reported, and just as it was passed at the last Congress; and if the bill shall go to the other House we can depend upon that body to make such modifications in secondary matters as should be made.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chief Clerk will read the amendment to the title proposed by the Senator from Tennessee.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to strike out the title and insert:

A bill offering a bribe to the States to relinquish the rights of local self-government.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chief Clerk will read the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PLUMB].

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to strike out section 2 of the bill and insert:

SEC. 2. That such money shall annually be divided among and paid out in the several States and Territories and in the District of Columbia in proportion to their population, respectively, between the ages of ten and twenty-one years, according to the census of 1880: Provided, That all of said money remaining undistributed at the date of the publication of the returns of population according to the census of 1890 shall be divided, as aforesaid, in proportion to the population between the ages of ten and twenty-one years, according to said census.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senate agree to this amendment?

Mr. PLUMB. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BLAIR. If the Chair will excuse me, my attention was diverted, and I do not know the pending question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The pending question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PLUMB].

Mr. BLAIR. Which proposes to distribute the fund on the basis of population.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment has just been read, and the yeas and nays have been ordered upon it. The Secretary will call the roll.

Mr. BLAIR. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The roll-call will not proceed until order is restored in the Chamber. It is impossible to hear the responses while so much conversation continues.

Mr. BLAIR. The Senator from Kansas has modified his amendment, he tells me.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment has been read at the desk.

Mr. BLAIR. Can it be read again?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It can, if the Senator desires.

Mr. BLAIR. I should be glad to hear it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be again read.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to strike out section 2 and insert:

SEC. 2. That such money shall annually be divided among and paid out in the several States and Territories and in the District of Columbia, in proportion to their population, respectively, between the ages of ten and twenty-one years, according to the census of 1880: Provided, That all of said money remaining undistributed at the date of the publication of the returns of population according to the census of 1890 shall be divided as aforesaid in proportion to the population between the ages of ten and twenty-one years according to said census.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. VEST (when the name of Mr. EDMUNDS was called). I have received a message from the Senator from Vermont [Mr. EDMUNDS] stating that he is confined to his house by sickness, and asking me to pair with him on this bill. He is a friend to the measure, and I assume would vote against this amendment. I am opposed to the measure in every sense of the term, and I therefore announce the pair.

Mr. MCPHERSON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. PADDOCK]. If he were here he would vote for the amendment, and I should vote against it.

Mr. VEST (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. EDMUNDS].

The roll-call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 22, nays 48; as follows:

YEAS—22.

Aldrich,	Cullom,	Hawley,	Plumb,
Allison,	Dawes,	Hiscock,	Sabin,
Beck,	Farwell,	Ingalls,	Teller,
Butler,	Frye,	Jones of Nevada,	Wilson of Md.
Chace,	Gorman,	Manderson,
Cockrell,	Hale,	Morgan,

NAYS—48.

Bate,	Daniel,	Jones of Arkansas,	Riddleberger,
Berry,	Davis,	Kenna,	Saulsbury,
Blackburn,	Dolph,	Mitchell,	Sawyer,
Blair,	Eustis,	Morrill,	Spooner,
Blodgett,	Evarts,	Palmer,	Stanford,
Bowen,	Faulkner,	Pasco,	Stewart,
Brown,	George,	Payne,	Stockbridge,
Call,	Gray,	Platt,	Turpie,
Cameron,	Hampton,	Pugh,	Vance,
Chandler,	Harris,	Quay,	Voorhees,
Coke,	Hearst,	Ransom,	Walthall,
Colquitt,	Hoar,	Reagan,	Wilson of Iowa.

ABSENT—6.

Edmunds,	McPherson,	Sherman,	Vest.
Gibson,	Paddock,

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. BERRY. I move to amend the bill by striking out so much of section 4 as is included from the beginning down to and including the word "term" in line 24.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chief Clerk will report the part proposed to be stricken out.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to strike out all of section 4 from the first part of the section to and including the word "term" in line 24, as follows:

That no State or Territory shall receive any money under this act until the governor thereof shall file with the Secretary of the Interior a statement, certified by him, showing the common-school system in force in such State or Territory; the amount of money expended therein during the last preceding school year in the support of common schools, not including expenditures for the rent, repair, or erection of school-houses; whether any discrimination is made in the raising or distributing of the common-school revenues or in the common-school facilities afforded between the white and colored children therein, and, so far as is practicable, the sources from which such revenues were derived; the manner in which the same were apportioned to the use of the common schools; the number of white and colored children in each county or parish and city between the ages of ten and twenty-one years, both inclusive, as given by the census of 1880, and the number of children, white and colored, of such school age attending school; the number of schools in operation in each county or parish and city, white and colored; the school term for each class; the number of teachers employed, white and colored, male and female, and the average compensation paid such teachers; the average attendance in each class, and the length of the school term.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY].

Mr. BERRY. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MCPHERSON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. PADDOCK]. I do not know how he would vote on this question. If he were here I should vote "nay."

Mr. VEST (when his name was called). I agreed to pair with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. EDMUNDS], if I could secure no other pair for him. I assume that he would vote against this amendment if he were present. I should vote for it.

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. CHACE. I wish to announce that I am paired on this question with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. GIBSON].

The result was announced—yeas 25, nays 44; as follows:

YEAS—25.

Bate,	Coke,	Hawley,	Saulsbury,
Beck,	Daniel,	Hearst,	Vance,
Berry,	Faulkner,	Kenna,	Voorhees,
Blackburn,	Gorman,	Morgan,	Wilson of Md.
Butler,	Gray,	Pasco,
Call,	Hampton,	Ransom,
Cockrell,	Harris,	Reagan,

NAYS—44.

Aldrich,	Dawes,	Jones of Arkansas,	Riddleberger,
Allison,	Dolph,	Jones of Nevada,	Sabin,
Blair,	Eustis,	Manderson,	Sawyer,
Blodgett,	Evarts,	Mitchell,	Spooner,
Bowen,	Farwell,	Morrill,	Stanford,
Brown,	Frye,	Palmer,	Stewart,
Cameron,	George,	Payne,	Stockbridge,
Chandler,	Hale,	Platt,	Teller,
Colquitt,	Hiscock,	Plumb,	Turpie,
Cullom,	Hoar,	Pugh,	Walthall,
Davis,	Ingalls,	Quay,	Wilson of Iowa.

ABSENT—7.

Chace,	Gibson,	Paddock,	Vest.
Edmunds,	McPherson,	Sherman,

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. BERRY. I move to strike out section 12 of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The part proposed to be stricken out will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to strike out section 12, as follows:

SEC. 12. That no second or subsequent allotment shall be made under this act to any State or Territory unless the governor of such State or Territory shall first file with the Secretary of the Interior a statement, certified by him, giving a detailed account of the payments or disbursements made of the school fund apportioned to his State or Territory and received by the State or Territorial treasurer or officer under this act, and of the balance in the hands of such treasurer or officer withheld, unclaimed, or for any cause unpaid or unexpended, and also the amount expended in such State or Territory, as required by section 9 of this act, and also a statement of the number of school districts in such State or Territory, and whether any portion of such State or Territory has not been divided into school districts or other territorial subdivisions for school purposes, and, if so, what portion, and the reasons why the same has not been so subdivided; the number of children of school age in each district, and the relative number of white and colored children in each district, and of the number of public, common, and industrial schools in each district; the number of teachers employed; the rate of wages paid; the total number of children in the State or Territory, and the total number taught during the year and in what branches instructed; the average daily attendance and the relative number of white and colored children; and the number of months in each year schools have been maintained in each school district. And if any State or Territory shall misapply or allow to be misapplied, or in any manner appropriated or used other than for the purposes and in the manner herein required, the funds, or any part thereof, received under the provisions of this act, or shall fail to comply with the conditions herein prescribed, or to report as herein provided, through its proper officers, the disposition thereof, and the other matters herein prescribed to be so reported, such State or Territory shall forfeit its right to any subsequent apportionment by virtue hereof until the full amount so misapplied, lost, or misappropriated shall have been replaced by such State or Territory and applied as herein required, and until such report shall have been made: Provided, That if the public schools in any State admit pupils not within the ages herein specified, it shall not be deemed a failure to comply with the conditions herein. If it shall appear to the Secretary of the Interior that the funds received under this act for the preceding year by the State or Territory have been faithfully applied to the purposes contemplated by this act, and that the conditions thereof have been observed, then, and not otherwise, the Secretary of the Interior shall distribute the next year's appropriation as is hereinbefore provided. And it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Interior to promptly investigate all complaints lodged with him of any misappropriation by or in any State or Territory of any moneys received by such State or Territory under the provisions of this act, or of any discrimination in the use of such moneys; and the said complaints, and all communications received concerning the same, and the evidence taken upon such investigations, shall be preserved by the Secretary of the Interior, and shall be open to public inspection and annually reported to Congress.

Mr. MORGAN. On this question I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. VEST (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. EDMUNDS].

The roll-call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 24, nays 45; as follows:

YEAS—24.

Bate,	Coke,	Harris,	Ransom,
Beck,	Daniel,	Hearst,	Reagan,
Berry,	Faulkner,	Jones of Arkansas,	Saulsbury,
Blackburn,	Gorman,	Kenna,	Vance,
Butler,	Gray,	Morgan,	Voorhees,
Cockrell,	Hampton,	Pasco,	Wilson of Md.

NAYS—45.

Aldrich,	Dawes,	Jones of Nevada,	Sawyer,
Allison,	Dolph,	Manderson,	Spooner,
Blair,	Eustis,	Mitchell,	Stanford,
Blodgett,	Evarts,	Morrill,	Stewart,
Bowen,	Farwell,	Palmer,	Stockbridge,
Brown,	Frye,	Payne,	Teller,
Call,	George,	Platt,	Turpie,
Cameron,	Hale,	Plumb,	Walthall,
Chandler,	Hawley,	Pugh,	Wilson of Iowa.
Colquitt,	Hiscock,	Quay,
Cullom,	Hoar,	Riddleberger,
Davis,	Ingalls,	Sabin,

ABSENT—7.

Chace,	Gibson,	Paddock,	Vest.
Edmunds,	McPherson,	Sherman,

So the amendment was rejected.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole was concurred in.

Mr. BERRY. Mr. President, I desire to ask unanimous consent that I be allowed five minutes in explanation to do myself justice as to my vote. I shall not occupy more than five minutes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Arkansas asks——

Mr. STEWART. I regret to object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senator suspend until the request of the Senator from Arkansas has been stated by the Chair? The Senator from Arkansas asks unanimous consent that he may be allowed five minutes in which to make a statement upon the pending bill.

Mr. STEWART. I shall have to object to granting unanimous consent under the circumstances. I have known it asked and denied in other cases on the ground that if it were granted to one it would have to be granted to another, and so would prolong debate and virtually abrogate the agreement.

Mr. BERRY. If the Senator from Nevada thinks proper to object, of course I recognize that under the agreement he has the right to do so.

Mr. HOAR. May I be permitted to suggest to the Senator from Arkansas that he will have a perfect right to make his personal statement after the vote on the bill?

Mr. BERRY. Of course I recognize the right of Senators to object under the agreement.

Mr. HARRIS. I appeal to the Senator from Nevada. Certainly, in my brief experience on this floor, I have never known an instance where a Senator wanted to make a personal statement that unanimous consent was not given.

Mr. BLAIR. Senators will allow me to suggest that there is not room for any further debate under the agreement heretofore arrived at. Let that be understood——

Mr. MORGAN. I object to debate, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands the Senator from Alabama and the Senator from Nevada to object.

Mr. STEWART. I withdraw my objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Alabama the Chair understood to object.

Mr. MORGAN. I objected to the debate the Senator from New Hampshire was conducting; that was all.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will again submit to the Senate the request of the Senator from Arkansas, who asks that he may be allowed five minutes to make a statement upon the pending bill. Is there objection? [A pause.]

Mr. EVARTS. I understand it is a personal affair, to enable the Senator to make an address at this time. If it is on the bill, I certainly shall object to it.

Mr. BERRY. I will state to the Senator that it is simply a statement, not exceeding five minutes, of the reasons why I cast the vote I shall cast. It is not debate on the bill.

Mr. EVARTS. How is it a personal matter? A matter of debate, why I should or should not vote for a bill, is on the merits.

Mr. BERRY. If the Senator from New York objects, that ends the matter.

Mr. EVARTS. I do not object to a personal explanation. I want to know how it comes to be a personal explanation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Unanimous consent is not recognized by the rules, and the enforcement of it rests wholly with the Senate. Having no power to enforce the agreement that has been made, the Chair asks of the Senate if there is objection to the request made by the Senator from Arkansas. The Chair understood the Senator from New York to make a qualified objection. In case the statement was purely personal he had no objection; but if it was debate he objected. The Chair can not undertake to decide any question of that description. It rests with the Senator from Arkansas and the Senator from New York.

Mr. BUTLER. Well, let us have the vote.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill is still open to amendment in the Senate. If there be no amendment, the question is, Shall the bill be engrossed and read the third time?

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, and was read the third time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Having been read three times, shall the bill pass?

Mr. BUTLER. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CHACE (when his name was called). On the question I am paired with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. GIBSON]. If present I understand he would for this bill, and I should vote against it.

Mr. COCKRELL (when Mr. EDMUNDS'S name was called). The Senator from Vermont [Mr. EDMUNDS] is detained from the Senate Chamber unavoidably, and has requested my colleague [Mr. VEST] to pair with him. I have consented to pair with him. The Senator from Vermont, I understand, if present, would vote for this bill, and I should vote against it with pleasure.

Mr. GORMAN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. MCPHERSON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. PADDOCK]. If he were present, he would vote "yea" and I should vote "nay."

The roll-call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 39, nays 29; as follows:

YEAS—39.

Allison,	Daniel,	Manderson,	Riddleberger,
Berry,	Dawes,	Mitchell,	Sawyer,
Blair,	Dolph,	Morrill,	Stanford,
Bowen,	Eustis,	Palmer,	Stewart,
Brown,	Evarts,	Pasco,	Stockbridge,
Call,	George,	Payne,	Teller,
Cameron,	Hampton,	Platt,	Vance,
Chandler,	Hearst,	Pugh,	Walthall,
Colquitt,	Hoar,	Quay,	Wilson of Iowa
Cullom,	Jones of Arkansas,	Ransom,

NAYS—29.

Aldrich,	Farwell,	Hiscock,	Sabin,
Bate,	Faulkner,	Ingalls,	Saulsbury,
Beck,	Frye,	Jones of Nevada,	Spooner,
Blackburn,	Gray,	Kenna,	Turpie,
Blodgett,	Hale,	Morgan,	Vest,
Butler,	Harris,	Plumb,	Voorhees,
Coke,	Hawley,	Reagan,	Wilson of Md.
Davis,

ABSENT—8.

Chace,	Edmunds,	Gorman,	Paddock,
Cockrell,	Gibson,	McPherson,	Sherman.

So the bill was passed.

[The announcement of the passage of the bill was greeted with applause in the galleries.]

Mr. BERRY. Mr. President, if in order, I will say that I intended to state, when the Senator from New York objected, that in 1883 the Legislature of Arkansas passed a resolution instructing her Senators to vote for Federal aid to common schools. In 1885, four days before I was elected to the place that I now occupy, I stated publicly in an address to the Legislature that I had not been in favor of the passage of the Blair bill, but I would obey that instruction which was given by the Legislature in 1883, I believing the Legislature had a right to instruct. I think that some members of that Legislature voted for me in consequence of that promise. I would not have made it if I had not intended to keep it. I therefore believe that my honor is involved in keeping that promise. I have never made a promise to the people of Arkansas that I have not tried to keep, and I have kept this one. It is due to myself, however, to say that I have always doubted the wisdom of the bill, as I stated when I voted for it two years ago, and but for the legislative instruction and my pledged word I would have voted "nay."

CREDENTIALS.

Mr. DANIEL presented the credentials of John S. Barbour, chosen by the Legislature of Virginia a Senator from that State for the term beginning March 4, 1889; which were read, and ordered to be filed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 1071) for the relief of A. B. Norton.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 1612) to provide for holding terms of the United States district and circuit courts in the State of Nebraska;

A bill (H. R. 2595) for the relief of the widow of John A. S. Tutt, deceased;

A bill (H. R. 3361) to provide for holding terms of the circuit and district courts of the United States for the district of Kentucky at Owensborough, in said district, and for other purposes; and

A bill (H. R. 4375) to create a board of arbitration to settle and determine the controversy between the United States and the State of Texas relating to certain territory by them respectively claimed.

DIVISION SUPERINTENDENTS OF RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE.

Mr. PLATT. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. SAWYER. I ask the Senator from Connecticut to give way for a moment until I can secure the passage of a little bill to authorize the appointment of two additional railway mail superintendents.

Mr. PLATT. The Senator from Wisconsin appeals to me to withhold the motion for a few minutes, that he may call up a bill; but I wish to say that, while I yield to him for that purpose, I will not yield for the calling up of any bill which I think will occasion debate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion to proceed to the consideration of executive business is withdrawn.

Mr. SAWYER. I ask that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 6439, Calendar No. 308.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6439) authorizing the appointment of eleven division superintendents of railway mail service.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads with amendments, in line 9, before the word "division," to strike out "eleven" and insert "two;" and in line 5, after the word "service," to insert "in addition to those heretofore authorized;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Postmaster-General be, and is hereby, authorized to appoint and assign to duty two division superintendents of railway mail service, in addition to those heretofore authorized, who shall each be paid a salary of $2,500 a year.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. SAWYER, the title was amended so as to read:

A bill authorizing the appointment of two additional division superintendents of railway mail service.

R. R. TINSLEY.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I ask unanimous consent of the Senate to take up Senate bill 313.

Mr. DAWES. I hope the Senator will allow us to finish the bill we had up yesterday. It is substantially through.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I am anxious to take up this bill. I do not think it will occupy the attention of the Senate two minutes.

Mr. PLATT. What is the bill?

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. It is a bill for the relief of a postmaster who is charged with a small amount of funds—$119 stolen from him. It is recommended by the Post-Office Department as being just, and they recommend that the amount shall be remitted, but the Postmaster-

General thinks under the law he has no right to credit the postmaster's account without action on the part of Congress. I presume there can be no objection made to the bill. It has been reported favorably twice to the Senate.

Mr. PLATT. If I have the right to do so, I renew my motion at this time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Connecticut moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I was on the floor, and I do not think the Senator from Connecticut had the right to take me off the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands that the Senator from Connecticut had made the motion, and yielded temporarily and informally, as is frequently the case.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I hope the Senator from Connecticut will not be unreasonable about this matter. I ask him to withdraw the motion.

Mr. PLATT. If the Senate will permit a word out of order, if I withdraw the motion for one I shall have to do so for all. I withdraw it absolutely.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Arkansas moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 313) for the relief of R. R. Tinsley.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to direct the Postmaster-General, in his discretion, to credit the accounts of R. R. Tinsley, late postmaster at Nashville, Ark., with $119, lost by a robbery of the mails at or near Hope, Ark., on or about November 30, 1884.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. DAWES. I move that the Senate take up and complete the consideration of Order of Business 30, being the bill (S. 1095) to provide for the compulsory education of Indian children.

Mr. HARRIS. Pending which I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Tennessee moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. DAWES. I think there will be no further debate on this matter if the Senate will only take it up.

Mr. HARRIS. I insist on my motion.

The motion being put, there were, on a division—ayes 33, noes 8.

Mr. SAWYER. I was anxious to get up the pension bills to-day, but to-morrow morning after the morning business is over I will endeavor to get the floor for that purpose.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The count shows 33 in the affirmative and 8 in the negative.

Mr. DAWES. I ask for the yeas and nays. ["No!" "No!"]

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Sergeant-at-Arms will clear the galleries and close the doors of the Senate.

The Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After one hour and twenty-eight minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 20 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Thursday, February 16, 1888, at 12 o'clock m.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate the 15th day of February, 1888.

RECEIVER OF PUBLIC MONEYS.

J. H. Craddock, of Marysville, Cal., to be receiver of public moneys at Marysville, Cal., vice Thomas J. Sherwood, term expired.

REGISTER OF LAND OFFICE.

Lewis C. Granger, of Oroville, Cal., to be register of the land office at Marysville, Cal., vice John C. Bradley, term expired.

ASSISTANT COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS.

Thomas H. Kelly, of New Jersey, as assistant collector of customs for the port of Jersey City, N. J., in the district of New York, to succeed Asa W. Dickinson, whose term of office has expired by limitation.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate February 9, 1888.

UNITED STATES CONSUL.

Henry Vincent Lamantia, of New Orleans, La., to be consul of the United States at Catania.

UNITED STATES MARSHALS.

Andrew H. Dill, of Pennsylvania, to be marshal of the United States for the eastern district of Pennsylvania.

Samuel L. Blaisdell, of Rhode Island, to be marshal of the United States for the district of Rhode Island.

REGISTER OF LAND OFFICE.

Jared A. Van Auken, of Georgetown, Colo., to be register of the land office at Central City, Colo.

INDIAN AGENT.

William W. Dougherty, of Liberty, Mo., to be agent for the Indians of the Warm Springs agency in Oregon.

FOR PROMOTION IN THE ARMY OF THE UNITED STATES.

First Regiment of Artillery.

Capt. William L. Haskin, to be major, August 11, 1887.

First Lieut. Frederic C. Nichols, to be captain, August 11, 1887.

First Lieut. Abner H. Merrill, to be captain, August 14, 1887.

Second Lieut. William C. Rafferty, to be first lieutenant, August 11, 1887.

Second Lieut. John L. Chamberlin, to be first lieutenant, August 14, 1887.

Additional Second Lieut. Oscar I. Straub, to be second lieutenant, August 11, 1887.

Additional Second Lieut. Fremont P. Peek, of the Fourth Artillery, to be second lieutenant, August 14, 1887.

Tenth Regiment of Cavalry.

Second Lieut. Percy E. Trippe, to be first lieutenant, January 17, 1888.

First Regiment of Artillery.

First Lieut. John M. K. Davis, to be captain, January 14, 1888.

Second Lieut. Charles J. Bailey, to be first lieutenant, January 14, 1888.

POSTMASTERS.

Fred Dutton, to be postmaster at Murray, in the county of Shoshone and Territory of Idaho.

J. Guy Hammer, to be postmaster at Hailey, in the county of Alturas and Territory of Idaho.

Joseph J. McBride, to be postmaster at Livingston, in the county of Gallatin and Territory of Montana.

D. O. Corcoran, to be postmaster at Oxford, in the county of Butler and State of Ohio.

Maurice Fitzgerald, to be postmaster at Conneautville, in the county of Crawford and State of Pennsylvania.

George Horton, to be postmaster at Sheffield, in the county of Warren and State of Pennsylvania.

Joseph F. Woodrow, to be postmaster at Havre de Grace, in the county of Harford and State of Maryland.

Charles B. Durland, to be postmaster at Norfolk, in the county of Madison and State of Nebraska.

Charles C. Ellis, to be postmaster at Sterling, in the county of Johnson and State of Nebraska.

William J. Keller, to be postmaster at Sutton, in the county of Clay and State of Nebraska.

Lafayette Myers, to be postmaster at Grand Island, in the county of Hall and State of Nebraska.

Oliver H. Scott, to be postmaster at Hebron, in the county of Thayer and State of Nebraska.

Bertha Kleven, to be postmaster at Culbertson, in the county of Hitchcock and State of Nebraska.

H. Fred Wiley, to be postmaster at Kearney, in the county of Buffalo and State of Nebraska.

George F. Lewis, to be postmaster at Saginaw, in the county of Saginaw and State of Michigan.

Benjamin F. Osgood, to be postmaster at Mendon, in the county of St. Joseph and State of Michigan.

R. B. Henderson, to be postmaster at Henderson, in the county of Vance and State of North Carolina.

Michael E. Lennon, to be postmaster at Hurley, in the county of Ashland and State of Wisconsin.

Joseph W. Goodwin, to be postmaster at Wolfborough, in the county of Carroll and State of New Hampshire.

Jennie B. Hosley, to be postmaster at West Lebanon, in the county of Grafton and State of New Hampshire.

Theodore S. Bassett, to be postmaster at Birmingham, in the county of New Haven and State of Connecticut.

William H. Macartney, to be postmaster at Oakland, in the county of Kennebec and State of Maine.

George R. Smith, to be postmaster at Kennebunk, in the county of York and State of Maine.

William Barton, to be postmaster at Dalton, in the county of Berkshire and State of Massachusetts.

James B. Lowrie, to be postmaster at Portland, in the county of Jay and State of Indiana.

Marion H. Ingrim, to be postmaster at Winamac, in the county of Pulaski and State of Indiana.

Lodah T. Alexander, to be postmaster at Monticello, in the county of Jones and State of Iowa.

Richard Burke, to be postmaster at What Cheer, in the county of Keokuk and State of Iowa.

Sena Gidley, to be postmaster at Malvern, in the county of Mills and State of Iowa.

Hull Hoagland, to be postmaster at Emmetsburgh, in the county of Palo Alto and State of Iowa.

Amos H. Kisner, to be postmaster at Mason City, in the county of Cerro Gordo and State of Iowa.

Thomas C. Medary, to be postmaster at Waukon, in the county of Alamakee and State of Iowa.

Newton S. Noble, to be postmaster at Anamosa, in the county of Jones and State of Iowa.

William C. Swigart, to be postmaster at Maquoketa, in the county of Jackson and State of Iowa.

Henry Slikkerveer, to be postmaster at Orange City, in the county of Sioux and State of Iowa.

Jonathan B. Stutsman, to be postmaster at Harlan, in the county of Shelby and State of Iowa.

Joseph S. Lake, to be postmaster at Marion, in the county of Linn and State of Iowa.

Emory J. Landers, to be postmaster at Imlay City, in the county of Lapeer and State of Michigan.

J. I. McConnell, to be postmaster at Woodland, in the county of Yolo and State of California.

Charles P. Bilderback, to be postmaster at Boisé City, in the county of Ada and Territory of Idaho.

Dennis O'Brien, to be postmaster at Willmar, in the county of Kandiyohi and State of Minnesota.

O. A. Traugh, to be postmaster at Hollidaysburgh, in the county of Blair and State of Pennsylvania.

Charles J. Harrison, to be postmaster at Wahoo, in the county of Saunders and State of Nebraska.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WEDNESDAY, February 15, 1888.

The Clerk, Hon. JOHN B. CLARK, called the House to order and directed the reading of the following letter:

WASHINGTON, February 15, 1888.

Hon. JOHN B. CLARK,
Clerk of House of Representatives:

SIR: Mr. S. S. COX is designated to act as Speaker for this day.

JOHN G. CARLISLE, Speaker.

Hon. S. S. COX took the chair as Speaker pro tempore.

Prayer by Rev. Dr. BRUSH, president of Dakota University.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

BAGADUCE RIVER.

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, a report of the examination and survey of Bagaduce River, Maine; which was referred to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed.

LOTS IN DULUTH.

The SPEAKER pro tempore also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, with inclosures, in relation to the proposed acceptance by the United States of a deed tendered by the city of Duluth of certain lots in that city for purposes of navigation and commerce; which was referred to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed.

SURVEYS OF THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER.

The SPEAKER pro tempore also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, reports of examinations and surveys of the Mississippi River between St. Paul and St. Anthony's Falls, and of the Red River of the North from Morehead to Fergus Falls; which was referred to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING, PORTLAND, OREGON.

The SPEAKER pro tempore also laid before the House the following Senate bills; which were severally referred as follows:

The bill (S. 20) to provide for the construction of a public building at Portland, Oregon—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

The bill (S. 416) for the relief of Mrs. Harriet H. Robinson—to the Committee on Claims.

The bill (S. 424) relating to lands in Colorado lately occupied by the Uncompahgre and White River Ute Indians—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

The bill (S. 601) to authorize purchasing additional ground in Newark, N. J., adjoining the custom-house and post-office building, and for the improvement of the building thereon, and for the erection of additions thereto—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

A. B. NORTON.

The SPEAKER pro tempore also laid before the House a bill (S. 1071) for the relief of A. B. Norton.

Mr. ABBOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that that bill be taken up and put upon its passage. It has been favorably and unanimously reported by the Committee on Claims.

Mr. HOLMAN. I suggest that the bill and the report be read.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to A. B. Norton, late postmaster at Dallas, Tex., the sum of $1,853, being the amount paid by him involuntarily, under protest and moral duress, to the inspectors of the Post-Office Department in the year 1877, on account of certain money-order remittances made by the postmasters at Cleburne and Granbury, Tex.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. HOLMAN. I should like to hear the report read, Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object.

Mr. ABBOTT. I should be pleased to have the report read.

Mr. LANHAM. The report is quite long.

Mr. HOLMAN. If the report is long perhaps the gentleman from Texas had better make a statement of the case.

Mr. ABBOTT. The circumstances of the case are these. During the summer of 1876 Mr. Norton, who was postmaster at Dallas, Tex., obtained leave of absence from the Postmaster-General and was traveling in the North, and during his absence certain registered packages passing through his office were lost—at least one of them was traced to his office; the other two were not. Those packages were lost. The Post-Office inspectors were sent down and they examined into the matter, and Mr. Norton paid over this money to the inspectors, but he made the payment under protest, and he received a receipt which is set forth in the report, and which I shall be glad to have the Clerk read. That receipt shows that the payment was a conditional one.

Mr. LANHAM. In addition to what my colleague has stated, I desire to say that this bill passed the Senate at the last Congress, and was favorably reported from the Committee on Claims in that Congress. It has been unanimously reported by the same committee this Congress. I have very fully and thoroughly investigated the case, and I have no doubt whatever that the bill is a meritorious one.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. ABBOTT moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED.

The SPEAKER pro tempore also laid before the House the following Senate bills; which were severally referred, as follows:

The bill (S. 1103) to provide for an Indian school at Carson City, Nev.—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

The bill (S. 937) for the relief of David L. Brainard and others—to the Committee on Military Affairs; and

The joint resolution (S. 35) appropriating $10,000 for the subtropical exposition at Jacksonville, Fla.—to the Committee on Appropriations.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. CARUTH for five days, on account of important business.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

By unanimous consent, Mr. PHELAN obtained leave to withdraw from the files of the House the papers filed by Mrs. E. E. Carter in connection with the bills H. R. 5493 and 5492, one granting a pension and the other for her relief.

BEET-SUGAR CULTURE IN CALIFORNIA.

Mr. MORROW presented the report of a committee on beet-sugar culture in California, adopted by the Chamber of Commerce of San Francisco; which, by unanimous consent, was ordered to be printed in the RECORD.

It is as follows:

Report of committee on beet-sugar culture in California, adopted by the Chamber of Commerce of San Francisco, in special session, February 2, 1888.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas the public mind is now directed to the possibilities of beet-root sugar production in this country, and confidence is expressed in the adaptability of soil and climate in this State particularly to this culture, and large expectation is excited in respect to the benefits that would accrue by development of this industry, the fact remains that it is still in an experimental stage, and can not therefore be relied on as an ascertained source of sugar supply for immediate requirements, either for local consumption or for shipment; and

Whereas it has been suggested that an appeal to Congress for a bounty on beet-root sugar would tend to largely stimulate beet-root producers and encourage capital to invest in beet-root sugar factories in California and throughout the country; and

Whereas this is a step in the reduction of the duty on importations into the United States of foreign sugar, and therefore points in the direction of free trade, which we regard as dangerous to the best interests of the country at this time, and particularly menacing to the commercial growth of San Francisco, in that it would seriously interfere with the large trade that has been built up between this port and the Hawaiian Kingdom; and

Whereas we believe the introduction of a free-trade policy would be an act of bad faith to the country now enjoying the benefits of a treaty of reciprocity with this country, which has recently been renewed for a period of seven years; and

Whereas the principle of free trade is not in harmony with the sentiment of the best thought of the people of the United States, and would cripple, if not destroy, many important manufacturing industries that have to contend against the underpaid labor of foreign countries; and

Whereas an effort to bestow a bounty on one industry would be opposed by others equally entitled to protection and encouragement, and the effort would therefore result in failure in the one instance or in the granting of a bounty to all, which would for the time unsettle values and work great injury to the commercial and manufacturing interest; and

Whereas the Southern sugar-producing States are equally interested in continuing the present tariff on sugar imported into this country, and are entitled to consideration at the hands of Cougress in the settlement of this vital question; and

Whereas all persons best informed on the beet-sugar question agree that the best possible encouragement this industry can have is a continuance of the present tariff on foreign sugars, and that a reduction of this duty will prevent further development for many years of the beet-sugar industry in California: Therefore,

Be it resolved, That the Chamber of Commerce of San Francisco regards the proposition to fix a bounty on beet-sugar produced in the United States at the present time unnecessary, and strongly urges Congress not to make any change in the present tariff in respect to the article sugar.

Resolved, That the proposition of a bounty, as suggested at this time, is a dangerous one in that it contemplates a policy which is not likely to be permanent enough to give sufficient assurance to capitalists, who are now disposed to invest money in manufactures, to warrant them in making such investments, and in developing manufacturing industries.

Resolved, That we regard it as unwise and dangerous to introduce any policy in the revenue system of the United States which departs so radically from the policy which has made our country one of the strongest nations in the world, politically and financially, and under which a development unknown in the history of nations has been experienced.

Resolved, That the Pacific coast delegation in Congress, and particularly the delegation from this State, be urged to use all possible means to defeat any action in Congress which contemplates a change in the present duty on sugar and the establishment of a bounty system.

Resolved, That the lumber, fruit, wine, wool, and other important interests of the Pacific coast are equally interested in maintaining the present tariff, and are urged to unite with the chamber in a firm and vigorous protest against the reductions suggested, which threaten to destroy these large interests.

IRA P. RANKIN.
FRED A. GIBBS.
W. H. DIMOND.

A true copy.
Attest:

WILLIAM L. MERRY, President.
[SEAL.] THOS. J. HAYNES, Secretary.

UNITED STATES COURTS AT OWENSBOROUGH, KY.

Mr. LAFFOON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Calendar the bill (H. R. 3361) to provide for holding terms of the United States courts at Owensborough, Ky., and to put it upon its passage. The bill does not carry any money.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the territory embraced within the following counties in said district, to wit, Daviess, Henderson, Union, Christian, Todd, Hopkins, Webster, McLean, Muhlenberg, Logan, Butler, Grayson, Ohio, Hancock, and Breckinridge, shall hereafter constitute and be known as the Owensborough division of said district; and regular terms of the circuit and district courts of the United States for said district shall be held semi-annually in the city of Owensborough, in said division, beginning on the —— Monday in —— and the —— Monday in ——, and continuing at each term for —— judicial days, if the business shall require it; and the judges of said courts shall have the same power to call special terms in said division as they may now do under the laws of the United States elsewhere in said district.

SEC. 2. That the said courts so sitting at Owensborough shall have and exercise the same jurisdiction, power, and authority in all civil actions, pleas, or proceedings, and in all prosecutions, informations, indictments, or other criminal or penal proceedings, conferred by general laws on the district and circuit courts of the United States; and where one or more defendants in any civil cause shall reside in said division, and one or more defendants to such cause shall reside out of said division but in said district, then the plaintiff may institute his action either in the court having jurisdiction over the latter or in the said division.

SEC. 3. That in and for said division the clerk of the said district, at Louisville, shall appoint a deputy who shall reside at Owensborough, and in case of the death or removal of said deputy, or from other cause, it becomes necessary, he shall appoint a successor or successors to said deputy in like manner in all respects as by law he may now appoint and remove deputies; and he may require bond of said deputy to himself, with surety for the faithful discharge of his duties and for indemnity in case of breach, on which actions may be maintained in said district court; and said deputy shall keep and preserve the records of the court at Owensborough; issue all writs, precepts, and process, and perform all other duties devolved upon his principal.

SEC. 4. That the marshal of said district shall, by himself or deputy, attend upon the terms of the court in said division; and he may appoint a deputy to reside at Owensborough (and shall do so if ordered by the court), who shall discharge all the duties of marshal; and the marshal may require a bond of indemnity to himself, similar to that referred to in the last section.

SEC. 5. That this act shall not affect the jurisdiction, power, and authority of the court as to actions, prosecutions, and proceedings already begun and pending in said district, but the same will proceed as though this act had not been passed, except that the court shall have power, which it may exercise at discretion, to transfer to the court in said division such of said pending actions, and so forth, as might properly be begun therein under the provisions of this act.

SEC. 6. That until the public building of the United States at Owensborough, the erection whereof has been provided for by an act of the present session of Congress, shall have been completed, the courts herein provided for shall be held at the court-house of Daviess County; and the deputy clerk shall provide himself with an officer at Owensborough, but in no event shall the United States be chargeable with rent or otherwise on account of either.

The Committee on the Judiciary recommended amendments as follows:

Section 1, line 11, insert before the word "Monday" the word "fourth;" same line, after the word "in," insert the word "January;" same line, before the word "Monday," near the end of the line, insert the word "first."

Section 1, line 12, at the beginning of the line, before the word "and," insert the word "June;" same line, before the word "judicial," insert the word "eighteen."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. LAFFOON moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

FEDERAL JUDGMENTS AS LIENS ON REAL ESTATE.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Iowa, presented a joint resolution of the General Assembly of Iowa as to when Federal judgments shall constitute a lien on real estate; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD. It is as follows:

Joint resolution No. 3.

Be it resolved by the General Assembly of the State of Iowa, That our representatives in the Senate and House of Representatives in Congress be requested to use their efforts to secure the passage of a bill which shall require that before judgments rendered in the Federal courts sitting in the State of Iowa shall become liens upon real estate transcripts thereof shall be filed with the clerk of the court in the county where the real estate is located and be properly indexed.

Approved February 9, 1888.

I hereby certify that the foregoing joint resolution passed the senate and the house of representatives of the Twenty-second General Assembly of the State of Iowa.

[SEAL.] FRANK D. JACKSON,
Secretary of State.

PENSIONS.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Iowa, also presented a resolution adopted by the Republican Club of Creston, Union County, Iowa, favoring a measure granting to each Union soldier who served in the war with Mexico or in the war of the rebellion a pension on the sole condition of an honorable discharge; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions, and order to be printed in the RECORD. It is as follows:

Be it resolved by the Republican Club of the city of Creston, Union County, Iowa, That while we recognize the importance of such legislation by our National Congress as shall foster and protect the agricultural, manufactural, and commercial interests of the country, yet, in view of the inestimable services rendered by our citizen soldiers on land and sea to our nation in the hour of her greatest need, we deem it a duty which the nation owes to these her heroic defenders that her Congress now assembled shall enact a measure granting to each Union soldier and sailor who served either in the war with Mexico or in the war of the rebellion a pension upon the sole condition that aid soldier or sailor was honorably discharged from said service.

Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to our representatives in Congress, and they be hereby requested to do all in their power to have such measure passed at this session of Congress.

INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Iowa, also presented the petition of the faculty of Amity College, Page County, Iowa, favoring fuller security to literary property and asking the speedy enactment of an international copyright law; which was referred to the Committee on Patents, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD. It is as follows:

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

We, the undersigned, members of the faculty of Amity College, at College Springs, Iowa, believing that both justice and expediency demand fuller security for literary property, hereby petition your honorable bodies for the speedy enactment of an international copyright law.

T. J. KENNEDY, President,
HENRY AVERY, Professor English Literature,
ELEANOR F. KRAIGER, Didactics and History,
JOHN O. TAYLOR, Mathematics,
C. O. WOODMANSEE, Commercial Department,
S. S. MAXWELL, Natural Science,
EMMA W. NELSON, Music,
All of College Springs, Iowa.

GREER COUNTY, TEXAS.

Mr. LANHAM. I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union be discharged from the further consideration of House bill No. 4375, and that it now be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM] asks unanimons consent to have considered in the House at the present time the bill which will be read.

Mr. REED. I respectfully suggest that recognitions for unanimous consent ought to take place with reference to the different sides of the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair was undertaking to do that.

Mr. REED. I do not see that it has been done.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognized the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. ANDERSON] and then turned to the other side.

Mr. REED. The gentleman from Iowa is not on our side of the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will endeavor to observe fairly the practice in this regard. The Chair will state that on the list of members for recognition the gentleman from California [Mr. FELTON] was next, but the Chair did not see that gentleman on the floor.

Mr. REED. I think that by some accident the rule which has heretofore obtained in the House in regard to this matter has not been very well observed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. There is nothing in the rules on the subject. The Chair will endeavor to be fair.

Mr. FELTON. I did not desire to be recognized this morning.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair understood that the gentleman did wish recognition.

Mr. DORSEY. I was to take the gentleman's place on the list.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair was not aware of that. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM] asks unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill which will be read, the right to object being reserved.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 4375) to create a board of arbitration to settle and determine the controversy between the United States and the State of Texas relating to certain territory by them respectively claimed.

Whereas a controversy exists between the United States and the State of Texas over the title to that territory lying between the North and South Forks of Red River, east of the one hundredth degree of longitude, the same being designated on the maps of Texas as Greer County; and

Whereas all efforts heretofore made by and between the United States and the State of Texas for a settlement of said controversy have failed; and

Whereas it is desirable that said conflicting claims should be finally settled and determined: Therefore,

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That a board of arbitration be, and the same is hereby, created for the purpose of deciding said controversy and finally determining the ownership of said territory.

SEC. 2. That said board of arbitration shall consist of five persons, who shall be learned in the law, two of whom shall be appointed by the President of the United States, two by the governor of Texas, and the fifth, who shall be the chief-justice or governor of some one of the States other than Texas, shall be agreed upon and appointed by the President of the United States and the governor of Texas.

SEC. 3. That said board of arbitration shall meet at such place or places as may be designated by a majority of its members, and shall have full authority to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, and to hear and receive testimony in behalf of the respective claims of the United States and the State of Texas, including any evidence heretofore taken and received by the Joint Boundary Commission, under the act of Congress approved January 31, 1885, and to thoroughly investigate and decide said controversy, to the end that it may be definitely settled and determined whether said territory belongs to the United States or the State of Texas.

SEC. 4. That said board of arbitration shall be appointed and enter upon the work hereby assigned them as early as practicable after the passage of an act of similar import to this by the Legislature of the State of Texas, and shall render their decision as soon as the importance of the issue and a proper investigation thereof will justify, and when said decision is rendered the same shall be by said board of arbitration certified to the President of the United States and the governor of Texas, and shall be recorded in the respective general land offices of the United States and the State of Texas, and said decision shall be final and decisive of said controversy.

SEC. 5. That the sum of $10,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, to defray the expenses and for compensation of those members of said board of arbitration appointed by the President: Provided, That the State of Texas shall pay a sum equal to that paid by the United States as compensation for that member of said board jointly appointed by the President and governor of Texas.

SEC. 6. That this act shall take effect and be in force as soon as the Legislature of Texas shall pass an act in accordance herewith.

The amendments reported by the Committee on the Judiciary were as follows:

In line 2, section 2, strike out "five" and insert "three," and strike out "two" and insert "one."

In line 4, section 2, strike out "two" and insert "one," and strike out "fifth" and insert "third."

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. Speaker, how does this bill come up? Has unanimous consent been given for its consideration?

Mr. LANHAM. I have asked unanimous consent for its consideration.

Mr. ADAMS. Has it been granted?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It has not been. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. ADAMS. I will say to the gentleman from Texas that, while I have no objection to the passage of some measure which shall effect the purpose contemplated by this bill, I would greatly prefer a bill providing for the settlement of this controversy in the Supreme Court of the United States, where I think it ought to be and can properly be settled. When this report was made I reserved the right to dissent, intending, if I had the time (and I did not suppose the bill would be called up so soon), to try to examine the original case of the State of Georgia, which came up before the adoption of the amendment of the Constitution, in order to see whether that might not be a precedent in this regard.

Mr. LANHAM. I will say to the gentleman that there seems to be some doubt whether there is constitutional authority to create a court to decide this question or to confer jurisdiction authorizing the State of Texas to sue the United States or the United States to sue the State. This matter has received careful consideration, I take it, at the hands of the Judiciary Committee. The question is very important, and it is exceedingly desirable that it should be speedily settled. The controversy is one of long standing. In 1886 a commission was appointed by the President which went down to the State of Texas and, co-operating with a commission on the part of the State——

Mr. ADAMS. I am aware of that; and that commission failed simply because it was a commission. We should have had the case settled now if it had gone into the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mr. LANHAM. In the bill, however, now recommended by the Judiciary Committee it is proposed there shall be three arbiters—one to be selected by the President of the United States, another by the governor of Texas, and a third by the President and governor acting jointly. These arbiters are to be men learned in the law——

Mr. ADAMS. I am aware of that.

Mr. LANHAM. And it is believed this measure offers a greater hope of speedy settlement than any other bill that could possibly be draughted. Besides, the matter will go to the Judiciary Committee of the Senate, where it can be further deliberated upon and investigated. It is well known how difficult it is to get consideration of bills here. What we seek to do, so far as Texas is concerned, is to put an end to the controversy as soon as possible. I trust the gentleman from Illinois will not object.

There are some four or five thousand people living in what is known as Greer County, Texas. It is regularly organized as a county, and the civil and judicial machinery of the State government is in operation there. But it is claimed by some on the part of the United States that this county is a part of the Indian Territory, while it is earnestly asserted by Texas that it belongs to that State. We hope, by the creation of this board of arbitration, to have the matter settled fairly and finally.

Mr. ADAMS. Although I have grave doubts whether we ought to pass this bill until it is shown that a better mode of procedure can not be framed, I withdraw my objection, simply because of my unwillingness to object to anything which all the rest of the House agrees to consider.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill in the House?

Mr. REED. It is understood, I believe, that the words "or governor" are to be stricken out.

Mr. LANHAM. In order to obviate one objection, it has been suggested by the gentleman from Maine [Mr. REED] that in line 5 of section 2 the words "or governor" be stricken out. I am disposed to agree to that proposition, so that the umpire will be the chief-justice of some State other than the State of Texas.

Mr. OATES. The Judiciary Committee were not unanimously of opinion that those words should be retained in the bill; hence it would be best, perhaps, that the amendment now suggested be adopted.

Mr. CULBERSON. While I have no authority to speak for the Judiciary Committee on this subject, I have some knowledge of the views of individual members upon the proposition made by the gentleman from Maine; and I think it will meet their approbation if this amendment be adopted.

Mr. LANHAM. Then, Mr. Speaker, let that amendment be made.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill? The Chair hears none. The question is on the amendments.

Mr. LANHAM. Let the question be taken on the amendment just suggested as well as those proposed by the committee.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If there be no objection, the question will be taken on the amendments together.

There was no objection.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. LANHAM moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

REPORTS FROM COMMITTEES.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Committees will now be called for reports.

ANNULMENT OF TEXAS TITLES.

Mr. CULBERSON, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 1887) to annul certain titles to land acquired by judicial proceedings in the courts of the United States in Texas, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

SOUTHWESTERN ARKANSAS AND INDIAN TERRITORY RAILROAD.

Mr. CRISP, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with amendment the bill (S. 322) to authorize the Southwestern Arkansas and Indian Territory Railroad Company to build a bridge across the Ouachita River in Arkansas; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

REVENUE-CUTTER FOR CHARLESTON, S. C.

Mr. PHELAN, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 1818) for construction of a revenue-cutter for Charleston, S. C., in maintenance of the service, to replace the United States revenue-cutter McCulloch; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

BRIDGE ACROSS TENNESSEE RIVER.

Mr. PHELAN also, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 1076) authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Tennessee River at Chattanooga, Tenn.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

BUREAU OF PUBLIC HEALTH.

Mr. DAVIS, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 1526) to prevent the introduction of contagious and infectious diseases into the United States, and to establish a bureau of public health; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

KANSAS CITY AND PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY.

Mr. PERKINS, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 3359) to grant the right of way to the Kansas City and Pacific Railroad Company through the Indian Territory, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

MOORHEAD, LEECH LAKE AND NORTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. NELSON, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, reported back a bill (H. R. 6650) granting the right of way through certain Indian lands in the State of Minnesota to the Moorhead, Leech Lake and Northern Railway Company; which was laid on the table.

Mr. NELSON also, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, reported a bill (H. R. 7261) granting the right of way through certain Indian lands in the State of Minnesota to the Moorhead, Leech Lake and Northern Railway Company; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

SOLDIERS' MONUMENT, ROCKLAND, ME.

Mr. MILLIKEN, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 1495) granting to Edward Libby Post, Grand Army of the Republic, permission to erect a soldiers' monument on vacant land adjoining custom-house at Rockland, Me.; which was referred to the House Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING, BAR HARBOR, ME.

Mr. MILLIKEN also, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 4467) for the erection of a public building at Bar Harbor, in Maine; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

APPRAISERS' WAREHOUSE, NEW YORK.

Mr. DIBBLE, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 1661) for the erection of an appraisers' warehouse in the city of New York, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING, CHARLESTON, S. C.

Mr. DIBBLE also, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 4358) to increase the limit of cost for the public building in course of erection at Charleston, S. C.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING, TEXARKANA.

Mr. DIBBLE also, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back bills of the following titles; which were laid on the table:

A bill (H. R. 1865) providing for the construction of a public building at Texarkana, on or across the boundary line between the States of Texas and Arkansas; and

A bill (H. R. 2010) to provide for a public interstate building at Texarkana.

Mr. DIBBLE also, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported a bill (H. R. 7262) for the erection of a public building at Texarkana, situated on both sides of the line between the States of Arkansas and Texas; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING, INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Mr. NEAL, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 1325) to provide for the purchase of additional ground in the city of Indianapolis, Ind., adjoining the post-office site, for the improvement of the building thereon, and appropriating $125,000 therefor; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING, COLUMBUS, GA.

Mr. BANKHEAD, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 1275) for the erection of a public building at Columbus, Ga., and appropriating money therefor; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING, BAY CITY, MICH.

Mr. NEWTON, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported, as a substitute for H. R. 1568, a bill (H. R. 7263) for the erection of a public building at Bay City, Mich.; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

House bill 1568 was ordered to be laid on the table.

PUBLIC BUILDING, NEWARK, N. J.

Mr. LEHLBACH, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back favorably the bill (S. 601) to authorize the purchase of additional ground in Newark, N. J., adjoining the custom-house and post-office building, and for the improvement of the building thereon, and for the erection of additions thereto; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MARY F. POTTS.

Mr. VANCE, from the Committee on Patents, reported back adversely the bill (H. R. 47) for the relief of Mary F. Potts; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

Mr. VANCE. I understand the minority desire to be heard, and will submit their views hereafter.

PUBLIC BUILDING, MILWAUKEE, WIS.

Mr. POST, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back with amendments the bill (S. 154) for the erection of a public building at Milwaukee, Wis.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

CLAIMS OF THE STATE OF MARYLAND.

Mr. SHAW, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 1521) to provide for paying certain advances made to the United States by the State of Maryland; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

GEORGE F. ROBERTS AND OTHERS.

Mr. SHAW also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 2127) for the relief of George F. Roberts and others; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

GEORGE B. HANSELL.

Mr. SHAW also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 5336) for the relief of George B. Hansell; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

P. GOUGH EDELIN.

Mr. SHAW also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 6753) for the relief of P. Gough Edelin; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

WILLIAM KNOWLAND.

Mr. KERR, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 2686) for the relief of William Knowland; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

W. C. SCANLAND.

Mr. KERR also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 3496) for the relief of W. C. Scanland; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ADVERSE REPORT.

Mr. CROUSE, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back adversely the bill (H. R. 4116) for the relief of Urias Buskirk; which was ordered to be laid on the table, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

CLAIMS FOR BOUNTY.

Mr. ROBERTSON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 1558) to provide for the payment of a bounty of $100 to soldiers enlisted in the military service of the United States under the act of July 22, 1861, and who were discharged by reason of surgeon's certificate for disability, or for promotion, before the expiration of two years, and who have not received $100 bounty; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING, BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

Mr. SOWDEN, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported, as a substitute for House bill 1266, a bill (H. R. 7264) for the erection of a public building at Bridgeport, Conn.; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committtee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

The bill H. R. 1266 was ordered to be laid on the table.

PUBLIC BUILDING, HOBOKEN, N. J.

Mr. SOWDEN also, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported, as a substitute for House bill 4990, a bill (H. R. 7265) for the erection of a public building at Hoboken, N. J.; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

The bill H. R. 4990 was ordered to be laid on the table.

CORRECTION OF CALENDAR.

Mr. BELMONT. I rise to a privileged question.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BELMONT. I desire to correct a clerical error in the Calendar. In the transcribing of the resolution assigning special days to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, the Journal shows correctly that the days fixed are Thursday and Saturday, the 16th and 18th of February. It is here stated in the Calendar as March. It should be February.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state that the Journal is right. The original paper seems to have been wrong. It is no fault of the clerks at the desk.

Mr. BELMONT. The days assigned to the committee were Thursday and Saturday of this week.

LEGATION BUILDING IN JAPAN.

Mr. BELMONT, by unanimous consent, introduced a joint resolution (H. Res. 110) accepting from the Government of Japan the gift of a plat of ground for legation purposes, and making appropriations therefor; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

LEGATION BUILDING AT BANGKOK, SIAM.

Mr. BELMONT also, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. 7266) making appropriation for the repair and improvement of the buildings of the United States legation at Bangkok, Siam; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

ADMISSION OF DAKOTA.

Mr. SPRINGER, by unanimous consent, presented a memorial of the constitutional convention of the State of Dakota, asking for the admission of South Dakota into the Union, and the formation of North Dakota into a Territory; which was referred to the Committee on the Territories, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD.

The memorial is as follows:

To the Congress of the United States:

The constitutional convention of Dakota, elected under the act of the Territorial Legislature approved by the governor March 9, 1885, with power under the act to adjourn from time to time, respectfully represents that it has maintained its organization and existence, and on this 9th day of January, 1888, again convened, pursuant to a previous adjournment, for the purpose of renewing and emphasizing the request of the people of South Dakota for a division of the Territory and their admission to the Union as a State.

That the people of all Dakota, north and south, have, during the past seventeen or eighteen years, contemplated division and the formation of two States you are well aware, and that the buildings and institutions of the Territory have been systematically duplicated, one of each class having been established in each division of the Territory. Nearly every Legislature which has convened in the past eighteen years has either memorialized Congress or taken some action in behalf of a division of the Territory.

The last convention of the Republican party, held at Yankton, in September, 1886, for the nomination of a Delegate to Congress, adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the will of the people of all Dakota in favor of division of the Territory on an east and west line has been so clearly and so often expressed during the past fifteen years that there is no reasonable doubt of the determined purpose of a large majority to hold on steadfastly till this purpose is accomplished, and we earnestly ask Congress to pass such a measure without delay, said division to be on the boundary line of the counties nearest the forty-sixth parallel of north latitude."

The last convention of the Democratic party, which met at Aberdeen in 1886, to put in nomination a Congressional Delegate, adopted a resolution favoring a submission of the question of division to the voters of the Territory.

In accordance with the request of the foregoing resolutions and for the purpose of obtaining an authoritative and final expression of the whole people, the last Legislature submitted the question of division to the people of the Territory, with the result of a decisive majority for division.

South Dakota has a population of more than 360,000 people, and an area of 77,000 square miles, with every requisite of a strong and safe State. Fair men will never claim that the division of Dakota will injure the nation.

Objection has been made to the division of Dakota on the ground that if divided into two States there would not be sufficient resources in each to sustain a population equal to the older States. In reply, this convention would call the attention of Congress to the report of the Hon. L. Q. C. Lamar, Secretary of the Interior, in which the following populations are given in the several Territories seeking admission into the Union: Dakota, 568,400; Montana, 130,000; New Mexico, 160,000; Washington, 142,391. Of this population of Dakota, 208,000 are in North Dakota and 360,000 in South Dakota, showing in the less populous portion from 48,000 to 68,000 more population than either of the other Territories asking admission, and larger than some States. The Dakotas will be agricultural States, whose population never decreases.

But it is now with the people of Dakota not a question whether division is desirable, but whether the majority or the minority of her people shall direct her local affairs. If Congress shall declare that the minority shall prevail, or that the will of the majority shall be ignored, it will be a severe blow to republican institutions. It will establish a precedent which may hereafter work disaster to the country. It is a declaration that the General Government is drifting away from the principles upon which States have heretofore been admitted.

On behalf of the people of South Dakota we invite the attention of Congress to our situation and repeat our request that our long-deferred rights be granted us by the admission of South Dakota to the Union. The people of South Dakota would be false to the cardinal principles of the Republic if they should now accept admission as a whole. We believe they will never do it. If they possess the endurance and courage of men who are fitted for self-government, they can never surrender. We can suffer Territorial government, with all its privations and denials of justice indefinitely if it is forced upon us, but we can not abandon the principle, upon which the States of the Republic are founded, that the legally expressed will of the majority shall prevail.

We further respectfully request that, in pursuance of the vote of the people on November 8 last, the Territory be divided on the seventh standard parallel, instead of the forty-sixth parallel of latitude, as contemplated in the constitution adopted by the people in November, 1885, and that the State be designated as "South Dakota," and the north half of the Territory be permitted to enjoy the name which they undoubtedly desire, "North Dakota.

A. J. EDGERTON, President.

JOHN CAIN, Secretary.

Mr. SPRINGER also, by unanimous consent, presented a memorial of a convention assembled at Aberdeen, Dak., asking the admission of the whole Territory of Dakota as one State; which was referred to the Committee on the Territories, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD.

The memorial is as follows:

Memorial.

To the Congress of the United States:

The people of Dakota Territory, assembled in a delegate convention, respectfully represent that they are desirous of the admission of the Territory of Dakota as a State into the Federal Union. We are possessed of the requisite population to entitle Dakota to representation in the House of Representatives in case of admission. We therefore earnestly petition for the passage by Congress of an enabling act authorizing the election of delegates to a convention for the purpose of preparing a constitution, republican in form, to the end that the constitution so framed may be submitted to a vote of the people of said Territory at the next general election for ratification, and, if ratified, that Dakota Territory be admitted into the Union as the "State of Dakota."

Submitted herewith is the proceedings of the convention of the people of Dakota held at the city of Aberdeen, Dak., December 15, 1887, to all of which we earnestly invite your attention and pray for a favorable consideration.

L. G. JOHNSON, of Brown County.
M. L. McCORMACK, of Grand Forks.
W. E. DODGE, of Cass County.
GRANVILLE G. BENNETT, of Lawrence County.
P. B. McCARTY, of Pennington County.
JOHN L. PENNINGTON, of Yankton County.
ROBERT H. McBRIDE, of Davison County.
W. E. PURCELL, of Richland County.
ANTHONY GARNETT, of Pembina County.
C. H. WINSOR, of Minnehaha County.
F. A. GALE, of Lincoln County.
C. T. McCOY, of Brown County.
J. A. LEE, of Day County.
WILLIAM THOMPSON, of Burleigh County.
J. A. FRYE, of Stutsman County.

TERMS OF COURT IN NEBRASKA.

Mr. DORSEY. I ask unanimous consent to call up from the House Calendar, for consideration at this time, the bill (H. R. 1612) to provide for holding terms of the United States district and circuit courts in the State of Nebraska, which has been reported by the Committee on the Judiciary with amendments.

The bill as proposed to be amended was read, as follows:

[Omit the parts in brackets and insert the parts printed in italics.]

Be it enacted, etc., That the State of Nebraska shall constitute one judicial district, which shall be called the district of Nebraska. For the purpose of trying all issues of fact, triable by jury in the United States circuit and district courts, said district is hereby divided into five divisions, which shall be called the eastern, southern, western, northern, and central divisions of the district of Nebraska. The eastern division shall include the counties of Douglas, Sarpy, Cass, Saunders, Washington, Dodge, Colfax, Platte, Boone, Nance, Merrick, Cuming, Burt, [Keya Paha,] Dakota, and Dixon; the southern division shall include the counties of Lancaster, Otoe, Nemaha, Richardson, Johnson, Pawnee, Gage, [Jefferson,] Butler, Seward, Saline, York, and Polk; the western division shall include the counties of Adams, Fillmore, Jefferson, Hamilton, Clay, Thayer, Nuckolls, Webster, Franklin, Harlan, Furnas, Red Willow, Hitchcock, Dundy, Chase, Perkins, Hayes, Frontier, Gosper, Phelps, and Kearney; the northern division shall include the counties of Madison, Stanton, Wayne, Cedar, Knox, Pierce, Antelope, Holt, Wheeler, Sioux, Brown, Keya Paha, Cherry, Dawes, Garfield, and Sheridan; the central division shall include the counties of Buffalo, Hall, Howard, Greeley, Valley, Sherman, Custer, Dawson, Lincoln, Keith, Cheyenne, Arthur, Grant, McPherson, Thomas, Blaine, Logan, [and] Loup, and Box Butte, and any unorganized territory or counties not herein named.

SEC. 2. That a deputy clerk of the said district and circuit courts shall be appointed at each place in the five divisions of said district where said court is required to be held, each of whom, in the absence of the clerk, may exercise all the official powers of clerk at the place within the division for which he is appointed. The marshal of the said district of Nebraska shall perform the duties of marshal for all the divisions of said district, and shall keep an office at each of the places in the five divisions of said district where the circuit and district courts thereof are required to be held. The district attorney of the district of Nebraska shall perform the duties of district attorney for all the divisions of said district, being allowed such assistants as in the judgment of the Attorney-General may be necessary.

SEC. 3. That the regular terms of the circuit and district courts in said district of Nebraska shall be held at the times and places following: In the eastern division of said district, at Omaha, on the first Tuesday in May and November; in the southern division of said district, at Lincoln, on the first Tuesday in January and October; in the western division of said district, at Hastings, on the first Tuesday in March; in the northern division of said district, at Norfolk, on the first Tuesday in April; in the central division of said district, at Kearney, on the first Tuesday in September.

SEC. 4. That in said district, all suits not of a local nature in the district courts against a single defendant, inhabitant of such State, must be brought in the division of the district where he resides; but if there are two or more defendants residing in different divisions of the district, such suit may be brought in either division and duplicate writs may be sent to the other defendants. The clerk issuing such duplicate writ shall indorse thereon that it is a true copy of a writ sued out of the court in the proper division of the district; and the original and duplicate writs, when executed and returned into the office from which they issue, shall constitute and be proceeded in as one suit. All issues of fact in such suits shall be tried at a term of the court held in the division where the suit is so brought.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. HOLMAN. I did not notice the exact terms of this bill, and wish to inquire of the gentleman from Nebraska whether this bill increases the number of places at which the Federal courts shall be held in Nebraska?

Mr. DORSEY. Certainly. That is the object of the bill.

Mr. HOLMAN. To what extent?

Mr. DORSEY. The bill adds three places.

Mr. HOLMAN. The courts are now held at two places?

Mr. DORSEY. Yes, sir; at Omaha and Lincoln, in the extreme end of the State.

Mr. HOLMAN. And the object is to provide three other places for holding courts?

Mr. DORSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. HOLMAN. The business that goes into the Federal courts is, of course, business connected with the administration of Federal laws alone?

Mr. DORSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. HOLMAN. What public reason is there for the increase of the number of Federal courts in the State of Nebraska?

Mr. DORSEY. In order to answer that question of the gentleman from Indiana, I ask that the report be read. It discloses the necessity for this legislation.

The report by (Mr. FULLER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1612) to provide for holding terms of the United States district and circuit courts in the district of Nebraska, having considered the same, report as follows:

Your committee find that under present law of the United States courts in Nebraska are held at Omaha and Lincoln. These two cities are in the eastern part of the State and not over 50 miles apart. Omaha is on the extreme eastern boundary of the State and Lincoln about 60 miles interior. The State of Nebraska is 400 miles from east to west and 200 from north to south, and has 76,000 square miles. When the present courts were established there were not over 300,000 inhabitants in the State. The present population is estimated at 1,250,000 people.

Litigants, witnesses, and jurors are now obliged to travel from 1 to 400 miles to attend court at great expense to themselves and the Government. Courts should be held at such points in a State as to accommodate the people of the entire State, and as this bill has this purpose in view, we are of the opinion it should pass, with the following amendments:

Strike out the words "Keya Paha" in twelfth line, and the word "Jefferson" where the same appears in fourteenth line. Insert the word "Jefferson" after the word "Fillmore" in the sixteenth line; also insert the word "Perkins" after the word "Chase" in the eighteenth line; also insert the words "Keya Paha" after the word "Brown" in the twenty-first line; also insert the words "and Box Butte" after the word "Loup" in the twenty-fifth line.

Mr. HOLMAN. I regret that the Committee on the Judiciary deem it necessary to so largely create facilities for entering the Federal court. The tendency of all this is to supersede, in a large degree, our State tribunals. We can not expect to secure legislation by which the jurisdiction of Federal courts shall be greatly diminished as long as this policy of increasing the number of Federal courts is continued. In my own State, which has much more reason for a large number of Federal courts than the State of Nebraska—its courts having admiralty business on Lake Michigan and the Ohio—there are courts held at four different places in the State, and a very enlightened Federal judge, one of the best in the country, Judge Gresham, formerly district judge of Indiana, now judge of the circuit, has always expressed the opinion that no public or legitimate purpose justified more than a single place for the holding of the Federal courts in that State. Fully concurring in that view from my own experience, I do not wish, however, to resist the unanimous expression of opinion of the Judiciary Committee; but I express regret, as I have often done before in this House, at this practice of enlarging at every session of Congress the number of Federal courts, and thus diminishing the importance and practical jurisdiction of State tribunals.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROGERS. I think it is due to the Judiciary Committee that I should make a very few observations on this question. If the gentleman from Indiana had devoted his attention as closely to the work of the Judiciary Committee, or had had an opportunity of doing so, as he has to those branches of the public service with which he has been more immediately connected, I think he would have discovered one important fact, and that is that in the Forty-ninth Congress the jurisdiction of the Federal courts was curtailed to a greater extent in a single bill than in all the legislation which has been enacted in the past twenty-five years on that subject. And I undertake to say now that, except in so far as the Congress of the United States has created new penalties or has enacted new provisions under the land laws touching the public domain, in which I am sure the Judiciary Committee have had the hearty co-operation and sympathy of the gentleman from Indiana, he will not find a single instance of an increase of jurisdiction in the Federal courts on the part of the Forty-ninth Congress, and up to this time of the Fiftieth Congress; I mean jurisdiction over the subject matter of suits or the parties to suits. I say, differing, perhaps, from the gentleman from Indiana on that point, that all we have done is that we have tried to locate these courts, so that when citizens of the various States shall be brought unwillingly within the jurisdiction of the Federal courts, they shall not be dragged five or six hundred miles to attend a district court.

Mr. STEWART, of Vermont. And thereby diminishing the expense.

Mr. ROGERS. In that respect it diminishes the expenses of litigants, and to that extent relieves the operation of the laws of their harshest features.

Mr. HOLMAN. But still my friend will not say that it diminishes the expenses of the Federal Government. On the contrary, the discussion which we had here yesterday, in which the gentleman took part with so much ability, showed that the tendency of all these measures is to enormously increase the expenses of the Federal judicial system.

Mr. ROGERS. It does increase to a limited extent the expenditures of the Government, but that is not the question which the gentleman raised. The gentleman said that we were increasing the jurisdiction of the Federal courts and creating new facilities for them to take jurisdiction. That I controvert.

Mr. HOLMAN. I did not say that you were increasing the jurisdiction of the Federal courts, but that you were pursuing a policy which would render it impossible for any real reform to take place in the Federal court system. The effect of all this is to diminish the importance of the local State tribunals and to increase that of the Federal courts; and there has been no legislation, not even that to which my friend refers and of which I highly approve, which has to any large degree restricted the jurisdiction of the Federal courts.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Speaker, it astonishes me to hear so well informed a gentleman make a statement of that kind in so distinguished a presence, because everybody knows who has read what is called the Culberson bill that the curtailment of the jurisdiction of the Federal courts effected by that bill has been larger than by all others that have passed Congress during the last twenty years.

Mr. HOLMAN. That is conceded, of course; but at the same time the bill accomplishes nothing in comparison with what I think ought to be accomplished. I think this tendency to override the local tribunals of the States ought to stop somewhere, and that these facilities of the Federal courts ought to be diminished instead of increased.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Speaker, my whole training has been never to suffer any man who once makes an issue to make a departure. The statement of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] was that we were increasing the facilities for getting into the Federal courts.

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes, that is what I said.

Mr. ROGERS. Now, I want to know how it is possible to increase those facilities unless we increase the jurisdiction of the courts? What we really propose is to increase the facilities for the people to defend themselves in suits brought against them in the Federal courts, but we do not in any way increase the jurisdiction of those courts.

Mr. HOLMAN. You do not increase the jurisdiction directly, but do you not do it by increasing the number of Federal courts? What are all these demands for additional terms of those courts for, if not for the purpose of creating new and enlarged facilities for reaching those tribunals and giving them advantages over the local tribunals, thereby diminishing the relative importance of the local tribunals?

Mr. ROGERS. I now yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

On motion of Mr. DORSEY, the amendments reported by the committee were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. DORSEY moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill as amended was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

TARIFF COMPILATION.

Mr. HUDD, by unanimous consent, introduced a joint resolution (H. Res. 111) to provide for printing 20,000 copies of Senate Report No. 12, first session Forty-eighth Congress, known as the Tariff Compilation; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Printing, and ordered to be printed.

NEW LIBRARY BUILDING.

Mr. RANDALL, from the Committee on Appropriations, submitted the following report:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, February 9, 1888.

Resolved, That the Committee on Appropriations be, and is hereby, instructed to inquire and report to the House what contracts have been made for the construction of the building for the Library of Congress and the amount expended under the same, and for what purpose, and the cause of delay in the progress of the work on the building.

The Committee on Appropriations, to which was referred the accompanying resolution, having considered the same, reports it back with the recommendation that the following be adopted as a substitute therefor:

"Resolved, That a committee of five of this House be appointed by the Speaker to inquire and report to the House what contracts have been made for the construction of the building for the Library of Congress and the amounts expended under the same and for what purpose, and the cause of delay in the progress of the work on the building; and also what persons are now or have been employed and paid from the appropriations made for the purchase of the site for and the construction of said Library building, and the amount or rate of compensation to each of said persons. And finally, said committee shall inquire and report fully as to the construction of said building for the Library of Congress, and are authorized to send for persons and papers and to employ a clerk at $6 per day, to be paid from the contingent fund of the House."

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Appropriations favor the fullest investigation as to the expenditure of the appropriation heretofore made for the erection of the Library building, and desire all information which can possibly bear upon the estimate which has been sent in as the sum required for the coming year—$800,000. But in view of the manifold duties of the committee and their work in other directions, they do not believe that they can do justice either to themselves or to the subject in undertaking this investigation. They have therefore submitted the substitute which proposes a special committee for the purpose of making this inquiry.

Mr. McMILLIN. What objection is there to having this matter investigated by the Committee on the Library instead of appointing a special committee? If the Committee on the Library is not the proper body to investigate a question of this kind, I would like to know for what purpose that committee exists.

Mr. HOLMAN. Or the question might be referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. McMILLIN. Yes, either committee would do. But the Committee on the Library has been specially organized for the purpose of considering questions of this character; and if it is not to take cognizance of such an inquiry as this, I respectfully submit that the performance of a farce in connection with the existence of that committee might very properly cease.

Mr. HOLMAN. The Committee on the Library is, however, a joint committee.

Mr. RANDALL. The Library Committee, as the gentleman from Indiana suggests, is a joint committee, existing under the statute. Therefore the Committee on Appropriations has agreed with unanimity that this subject might properly go to a special committee.

Mr. BLOUNT. Is it not perfectly competent for the Speaker to designate as a portion of this proposed special committee the members of the Committee on the Library on the part of the House?

Mr. RANDALL. Undoubtedly the Speaker would have that power.

Mr. McMILLIN. But neither their knowledge, wisdom, nor means of information would be increased by the new designation.

Mr. HOLMAN. I suggest to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that the three members on the part of the House of the Joint Committee on the Library, with the addition of two other members, might properly be constituted as this special committee. The Committee on the Library have their own clerk, and would be able to transact this business without expense.

Mr. RANDALL. If the objection is to the appointment of a clerk, I think that can be obviated by withdrawing, with the consent of the House, that part of the resolution.

Mr. HOOKER. I will inquire of the gentleman from Pennsylvania whether this subject-matter has not in the Senate been referred to a special committee.

Mr. RANDALL. I so understand.

Mr. McMILLIN. I have no objection to the proposed investigation——

Mr. RANDALL. I think that every public interest warrants the investigation——

Mr. McMILLIN. I have no doubt that the investigation should be made——

Mr. RANDALL. And the investigation would have been undertaken by the Committee on Appropriations or by the subcommittee having jurisdiction of appropriations for the Library, had it not been felt that the regular duties of the committee would not permit them to do full justice to this question.

Mr. DOUGHERTY. Should not this resolution have properly gone, under the rules of the House, to the Committee on Expenditures on Public Buildings?

Mr. RANDALL. The House itself referred the resolution to the Committee on Appropriations—doubtless because it is the duty of that committee to report to the House appropriations for this work. Therefore this resolution, by the assignment of the Speaker, no doubt, or certainly with his concurrence, went to the Committee on Appropriations. But, as I have already said, the members of that committee, while desiring the fullest and most thorough investigation, do not feel that they can do full justice to this inquiry in view of other work incumbent upon them.

The question being taken on agreeing to the substitute reported by the Committee on Appropriations, it was agreed to.

The resolution as amended by the adoption of the substitute was agreed to.

Mr. RANDALL moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

WIDOW OF JOHN A. S. TUTT.

Mr. WARNER. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of a bill now on the Calendar of the Committee of the Whole House—the bill (H. R. 2595) for the relief of the widow of John A. S. Tutt, deceased.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $386 to the widow of John A. S. Tutt, deceased, of La Fayette County, Missouri, in full repayment to her of taxes erroneously assessed upon the salary of said John A. S. Tutt, as judge of the sixth judicial circuit of said State, from the year 1862 to the year 1870, inclusive, which said sum was erroneously collected of him as income tax upon his salary as said State judicial officer.

The amendment reported by the Committee on Claims was read, as follows:

After the word "dollars," in line 6, insert "or so much thereof as shall be shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to have been paid by John A. S. Tutt as tax upon his salary as a State officer."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. McMILLIN. I ask that the gentleman in charge of the bill make some statement of its effect.

Mr. WARNER. The purpose of this bill is to refund to the widow of the late Judge Tutt, of La Fayette County, Missouri, the income tax which was collected upon his salary as circuit judge in the State of Missouri. The amendment reported with the bill has been proposed at the suggestion of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, because the reports in his office, which are not complete, show the payment of only about $200 by Judge Tutt as income tax. The bill as amended will simply authorize the refund of so much of the sum of $386 as may be shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner to have been paid by Judge Tutt as income tax upon his salary. Gentlemen, of course, remember that the income tax as to officers of this class was declared illegal by the Supreme Court of the United States, so that there is no question the amount paid as such tax in this case ought to be refunded to the widow.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. This, as I understand, is a personal claim for the refunding of income tax, and comes here because otherwise the statute of limitations would prevent the repayment of this money. I will inquire, why not pass a general law repealing, in this respect, the statute of limitations and allowing repayment in all cases of this kind? If the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WARNER] assures me that he will assist in securing repayment on the same account for a constituent of mine I will interpose no objection.

Mr. WARNER. I will certainly do so. [Laughter.]

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

The amendment reported by the Committee on Claims was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. WARNER moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

CREDIT TO UNITED STATES REVENUE-CUTTER SERVICE.

Mr. CLARDY, from the Committee on Commerce, reported the bill (H. R. 1240) to credit the revenue service for the transportation home by United States revenue vessels of shipwrecked seamen from the Arctic regions or from the Territory of Alaska; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

COMMITTEE ON EXPENDITURES ON PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

Mr. DOUGHERTY, by unanimous consent, submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Accounts:

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House be directed to rent, during the remainder of this session of Congress, from Hon. B. F. Butler, a room in the building south of the Capitol for the use of the Committee on Expenditures on Public Buildings at a rental not to exceed $50 per month; and that the Clerk of the House be directed to suitably furnish said room at a cost not to exceed $400, which sums are to be paid from the contingent fund of the House.

URGENT DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. BURNES. I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union to resume the consideration of a bill (H. R. 6437) to provide for certain of the most urgent deficiencies in the appropriation for the service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888, and for other purposes.

Mr. DINGLEY. A bill reported from the Committee on Banking and Currency was assigned for consideration for this day. If the gentleman from Missouri will permit me, I will call it up and move that it be postponed.

Mr. BURNES. It is necessary this appropriation bill should pass at once, and I must insist upon my motion. I move that all general debate in committee be limited to thirty minutes.

The motion was agreed to.

The question recurred on the motion to go into committee; and it was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, Mr. BLOUNT in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. By order of the House all general debate on the pending deficiency bill is limited to thirty minutes.

Mr. BURNES. I will yield as much of the thirty minutes to my colleague on the committee from the State of Texas [Mr. SAYERS] as he may see fit to occupy.

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Chairman, I listened with much pleasure on yesterday to the remarks of my friend from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS], and expected to have the greater pleasure of reading them in the RECORD of this morning, but I find that they have not been printed, and therefore, in what I have to say in reply, I will have to rely upon my memory, expecting that he will correct me if I should misquote him.

I understood the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS] to say that he had no complaint to urge against the bill under consideration; that he approved it, and that it met his hearty indorsement.

Mr. ROGERS. My friend states it stronger than I did. I did state that I did not intend to criticise the bill—that I had barely read it, but not critically. I may have amendments to offer to it, but do not know how that will be until we get to it.

Mr. SAYERS. I also understood the gentleman from Arkansas to say that there were unpaid expenses under the control of the United States marshal of the Federal court located at Fort Smith, Ark.—a large amount—as deficiencies for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1887.

Mr. ROGERS. My friend from Texas is singularly unfortunate. No such idea ever entered my head, and it will not be found in my remarks.

Mr. SAYERS. But did not the gentleman say there were unpaid deficiencies for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1887?

Mr. ROGERS. I made no such statement of that character, and you will not find a single, solitary statement of that kind in my remarks. I stated this, if the gentleman will permit me to proceed, that by reason of the failure of the deficiency bill for a former year the business of that year was crowded into the present fiscal year and absorbed a portion of the appropriation for the present fiscal year. Let me remark by way of explanation, in view of the fact that the gentleman is cognizant and knows that I am aware of the fact that the other deficiency bill, which went through, did cover those things, I do not see how he could have fallen into that error.

Mr. SAYERS. The other deficiency bill, passed during the present session, it is true, covers that appropriation; but inasmuch as the gentleman, as I understood him, was referring to the expenses of the courts for the year ending June 30, 1887, I took it, as a matter of course, that the appropriation made in the deficiency bill which failed in the last session of the Forty-ninth Congress, but which has recently passed, covered the deficiency of that year.

But be that as it may, Mr. Chairman, I desire to have read to the committee, for its information, the total appropriations made by Congress for this service during the years 1885, 1886, and 1887.

The Clerk read as follows:

1885—Marshals	$727,155
Jurors	450,000
Witnesses	621,408
Prisoners	300,000
	2,098,563
1886—Marshals	705,000
Jurors	540,000
Witnesses	787,150
Prisoners	250,000
	2,282,150
1887—Marshals	675,000
Jurors	500,000
Witnesses	550,000
Prisoners	240,000
	1,965,000

Mr. SAYERS. In order to show to the committee what proportion of these amounts was expended in the court for the western district of Arkansas, there being but one court, and that located at Fort Smith, I send to the desk a communication and ask that it be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., February 15, 1888.

Hon. J. D. SAYERS:

The expenses of the United States courts in the western district of Arkansas, as paid through the marshal, during the years 1885, 1886, and 1887, are as follows:

1885	$146,564.69
1886	200,746.91
1887	133,602.30

M. J. DURHAM, Comptroller.

Mr. SAYERS. It will be seen, Mr. Chairman, from the figures submitted, and which are official, that for the year 1885, of the total appropriations of this character, about 7 per cent. was paid to the United States marshal at Fort Smith, Ark.; for the year 1886, about 9 per cent., and for the year 1887, about 7 per cent. It should be borne in mind that these appropriations were intended to maintain all of the courts of the United States.

The gentleman from Arkansas, in order to sustain his attack upon the Committee on Appropriations, submitted to this committee on yesterday a statement from the clerk of the Federal court for the western district of Arkansas, and from thence he drew the conclusion that in consequence of the expanse of business throughout the country, of the growth of population, of the extension of settlements to all the western Territories, and of the enactment of new legislation by the Forty-ninth Congress, the expense of the judicial system of the country had been necessarily swollen to an amount much larger than during preceding years.

Now, I have not heard, and I call upon the gentleman to give to-day, or at some other time, a good reason why such expenses of the court at Fort Smith, Ark., should reach from five hundred to six hundred dollars per day during the entire year.

Mr. ROGERS. The time of the gentleman from Texas is very limited, I know, but it will afford me sincere pleasure to show him now the reason, if he will afford me the opportunity.

Mr. SAYERS. I have but a few minutes. The gentleman had an hour and twenty minutes yesterday.

Mr. ROGERS. I am only responding to the gentleman's invitation.

Mr. SAYERS. But not in my time. The gentleman took, as a predicate for his address to the House on yesterday and for his lecture to the Committee on Appropriations, the recommendations which appear in the report of the committee.

The House of Representatives, and especially the Appropriation Committee, are accustomed to receiving lectures from the gentleman from Arkansas. The distinguished gentleman from Indiana was treated to a lecture by him this morning. We all are accustomed to it; but when the gentleman proposes to lecture individuals, or committees, or the Congress he should be sure that he is in a position not to be criticised himself; and I now ask the question, which I hope will ring throughout the country, why is it that the court at the home of the gentleman from Arkansas, which he is defending here so vigorously, has received so large a percentage of the appropriations for the years 1885, 1886, and 1887?

Mr. ROGERS. Will the gentleman allow a brief answer to his inquiry?

Mr. SAYERS. I will yield to the gentleman with pleasure, but the answer must be brief, as I have but a few minutes left.

Mr. ROGERS. I will be very brief. In the first place, I was not undertaking to defend the court at Fort Smith, Ark., but was using the condition of things there merely as an illustration of the effect of a failure on the part of Congress to make the necessary appropriations or to make adequate appropriations to run the Government.

But I read now, to assist the gentleman from Texas along in his argument, what the Attorney-General says in regard to the court at Fort Smith:

The large expenditure for the support of courts in Fort Smith, arising from its jurisdiction over offenses committed in the Indian Territory, has caused the Department to send examiners to that point for the investigation of the conduct of its officers and the management of the court. They have staid there on two separate occasions two or three months, and have made careful reports to the Department. As far as it has been ascertained there does not appear to be ground for charging the court or its officers with neglect of duty or a desire to make fees for themselves. The great expense grows out of the condition of the law respecting the jurisdiction of offenses in the Indian Territory wherein a white man is implicated. This expense has grown and grown yearly, and may be expected to grow under the present legislation.

Very respectfully, A. H. GARLAND, Attorney-General.

And addressed to me, bearing date January 5, 1888.

And the document which I read in regard to the condition of that docket when the court adjourned, about the 20th of December last, shows there were forty-four murder cases on the docket at that time.

Mr. SAYERS. That is all in the gentleman's speech of yesterday.

Mr. ROGERS. I am answering the question which the gentleman addressed to me. Just one word more. I have one more suggestion to make. No fault has been found with the administration of that court, and if it has jurisdiction which it should not exercise it is not the fault of the court, but the fault of the Congress of the United States.

Mr. SAYERS. Now, I should not have alluded to the court at Fort Smith, Ark., but for the reason that the gentleman from Arkansas brought into the House statements from the clerk of that court. He invited the issue. He laid the predicate; and he ought to have come prepared with facts to sustain the predicate and to rebut any contradictory evidence.

I respectfully submit to this committee—there are no politics in this question—that the Committee on Appropriations were right in calling the attention of Congress and of the country to this method of distributing the appropriations. Here are large sums placed in the hands of the Government for disbursement. It is presumed that the disbursements will be made fairly and equitably throughout the country. But, on the contrary, we find staring us in the face the unpleasant fact that 9 per cent. of the appropriations of 1886 went to Fort Smith, Ark., alone, and that 7 per cent. of them for this year went into the same court. It is not surprising that everywhere the marshals and the jurors and the bailiffs are complaining. I have received letter upon letter from marshals in Texas, urging me to assist in procuring appropriations and having them placed on the urgent deficiency bill.

Mr. DOUGHERTY. Will the gentleman from Texas allow me to interrupt him for a moment?

Mr. SAYERS. Yes, sir.

Mr. DOUGHERTY. I wish to state as a fact in the line of the argument which the gentleman from Texas is pursuing, that at the last term of the United States district and circuit courts in the district of Jacksonville, Fla., the jurors and witnesses had to be discharged and the court adjourned because there was no appropriation to carry on the court.

Mr. SAYERS. If we had had the time after the remarks delivered by the gentleman from Arkansas yesterday evening, we would have brought before this committee an itemized statement showing how these large sums of money, placed under the control of the Government, had been distributed among the different courts of this Union.

I could only procure data amply sufficient to demonstrate, beyond contradiction, that Fort Smith, Ark., had received more than its just share. It is no wonder the gentleman from Arkansas is so anxious to defend these courts. It is to his interest to do so. They are at his home.

I do not believe, Mr. Chairman, that insufficient appropriations should be made. Every department of this Government should be supplied by Congress with funds enough to operate it efficiently. But there should be an impartial, economical administration in every branch. The gentleman seemed anxious to attack the Appropriations Committee, and to make it appear to the country that that committee was unwilling to give needful appropriations with which to properly discharge the public duties.

I submit to this committee that the proposition enunciated in the report of the Committee on Appropriations is a true one.

It declares that—

The system of allotment of appropriations by the Department is inherently bad, as, necessarily, no wisdom or judgment can prevent the giving of too much money to some courts and too little to others, thereby tempting the former to extravagance and compelling the latter in many instances to suspend proceedings.

Is this an attack upon the Attorney-General? Is there any intimation in this report from the beginning to the end that the Attorney-General of the United States has been guilty of any impropriety? No, sir; but it denounces the system as bad. It has been bad for years, and it is the duty of Congress to correct this system and remedy the evil, if it be possible to do so.

Who could have more appropriately brought this matter to the attention of Congress than they who have recommended appropriations and have become cognizant of the manner in which the public moneys are distributed throughout the country?

Mr. Chairman, the course of the gentleman from Arkansas reminds me of an anecdote which I heard around the House during the Forty-ninth Congress. It seems that a member on this floor was having a great deal of opposition at home, and that a very active and intelligent opponent who believed in the State-rights doctrine, and especially in confining the operations of the Federal courts within their legitimate and constitutional jurisdiction, was canvassing for the nomination and very bitterly assailed the then Representative because of his well-known friendliness to the Federal court system. On one occasion he made a very strong speech and before a very large audience. It was at the Representative's own home and the excitement was high. This candidate portrayed, in eloquent terms, the abuses that were growing out of this unnecessary, unlawful, and unconstitutional increase of the powers of the Federal judiciary. After he had gotten through, one old gentleman arose and said, "I'm not goin' to vote for you." "Why not, my friend?" inquired the orator; "are you not a Democrat?" "Yes," said the old man, "I am a Democrat, and a good one." "Then why won't you support me in the nominating convention?" "Well," said the old gentleman, "because one Federal court is equal to a second corn crop in this district." [Laughter.] Now, Mr. Chairman, I am willing that the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS] shall have a second corn crop, but I am not willing that he shall have a third and fourth corn crop unless like advantages shall be distributed throughout the country generally. [Renewed laughter.] The sole object of the recommendations in the report of the committee was to induce Congress, if possible, to correct the system out of which the evils complained of have almost necessarily grown. No reflection upon any official was intended.

Mr. BURNES. Mr. Chairman, I deem it my duty to call attention somewhat to the method and manner of making appropriations for the support of the Government. The Committee on Appropriations is periodically subjected to lectures and patronizing attacks, which I think could be most appropriately omitted; but they seem to be always in order, and it appears that when a gentleman can not possibly object to any provisions in a proposed bill, can not object to a single item of appropriations therein suggested, as has been the case with the bill under consideration, he will, finding nothing better to talk about, undertake to discuss even the simple language of recommendation contained in the report which the Committee on Appropriations has seen proper to make. The opposition to the report on this bill stands at this moment upon objections to certain propositions. The first is, that the ever-recurring deficiencies, both in annual estimates and consequently annual appropriations for the "expenses of United States courts," are entitled to the grave and thoughtful consideration of Congress. I will show that deficient estimates for these expenses have annually occurred. But first as to the general subject of appropriations. It is to be borne in mind that the Committee on Appropriations is divested, under the rules of the House, of changing existing law, of reporting appropriations that make such changes, or generally of reporting legislation in an appropriation bill, however necessary and proper it may be.

Therefore, being without any power, as before stated, and required to report appropriations simply, they can only further benefit Congress and the country by calling attention in their report to abuses they are powerless to correct and evils which other committees may never otherwise have called to their attention.

The gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS] attacks us with regard to our methods of appropriation and for the necessity of certain deficiencies therein. We answer, "The trouble comes from deficient estimates," and this fact I shall soon proceed to abundantly show.

But first as to time and manner of appropriations. They are made annually, to commence with the beginning of the fiscal year succeeding that in which they are made.

When those appropriations are being made for the year to come there should be before the Committee on Appropriations accurate and reliable estimates for them by the various Executive Departments. An inaccurate, an unreliable, or a deficient estimate is absolutely abhorrent to good government; a deficient appropriation may be in the line of true economy, and certainly tends to lessen expenditures, and in no event can do any harm.

Estimates should be made in the light of the expenditures of the preceding year, which are, or ought to be, within the knowledge of the person making them. They should be made in the light of experience and observation, which should be sufficient to teach their makers the amounts that will be necessary under each head for expenses of the coming year.

With accurate and reliable estimates before them the Committee on Appropriations can consider with practical discrimination and judgment whether or not it is well to encourage economy by limiting the appropriations in the first instance to any less amount than that which is estimated. The committee can safely do this, for a deficiency in appropriation can be provided for after the lapse of half the year, and when both the Department and committee have the ascertained fact of expenditure for six months, and can more closely judge by comparison the requirements for the half year.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The thirty minutes allowed for general debate have expired. The Clerk will now report the bill by sections.

Mr. BURNES. I ask five minutes more.

Mr. LONG. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Missouri be allowed five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. LONG]?

Mr. ROGERS. Yes; unless we can have an opportunity to reply.

Mr. BURNES. I simply desire to say, Mr. Chairman, that out of my hour I gave the gentleman from Arkansas twenty minutes yesterday.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the objection.

Mr. BURNES. I now call for the reading of the bill by sections.

The Clerk, reading the bill by sections, read as follows:

For Treasury building, Washington, D. C.: For completion of silver vault, $1,000.

For new freight elevator, $2,000.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word, and I yield my time to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. BURNES. Mr. Chairman, I was proceeding a few moments ago to call the attention of the House to the method of appropriating upon the annual estimates. This House meets upon the first Monday in December and proceeds to make appropriations after we have had the experience not only of the expenditures of preceding years and of the judgment of the estimating officers, but also the experience of six months of the year for which the appropriation was made. Now, you will observe that the fiscal year beginning on the 1st of July and Congress meeting on the first Monday in December, if there should have been made a deficient appropriation there is half the year left in which to remedy it by making an additional appropriation. Hence I say that deficient estimates are always to be abhorred, while deficient appropriations, which may be subsequently remedied, if experience shows a remedy to be necessary, are to be encouraged, and are in the line of true economy, tending to diminish the expenditures of the Government.

But, Mr. Chairman, I wish especially to call the attention of this Committee of the Whole to the issue which has been made. It is a little singular that, standing here with my colleague from Texas [Mr. SAYERS], representing the Committee on Appropriations, we are to meet criticism and objections in the house of our friends with regard to items of estimate and appropriation concerning which the Committee on Appropriations is absolutely and unconditionally without fault. Sir, you will find that under the head of judicial expenses for the current year the Department estimated $3,155,000. You will further find that the appropriations made or to be made in this bill will give that Department $3,374,400, making an excess of expenditure over the estimates, not over previous appropriations alone, of $219,400.

Let us consider the estimates and appropriations with regard to pay of jurors. In 1885 the estimate for this item was $500,000. It will be observed that these estimates were made under a Republican administration; and for one, I can say that from the time I began service on this committee under a Republican administration, I have never stopped to consider whether the Departments were governed by Democrats or Republicans. In 1885 the estimate for expenses of jurors was $500,000; the appropriations were $450,000, $50,000 less than the amount estimated. This, we may say, was for the first half year of the Democratic administration and the last half of the Republican administration; and perhaps both parties were endeavoring to curtail expenses. In 1886 the estimates for pay of jurors were $500,000, the expenses $540,000, making in that year the excess of expenditures over estimates $40,000. In 1887 the estimates were $450,000; the appropriations and expenditures were $500,000, an excess of $50,000 over the estimates. In 1888 the estimates were $500,000, the appropriations and expenditures $650,000, an excess of $150,000 in the expenditures over the estimates.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. BURNES. Now, Mr. Chairman, I take the floor in my own right. While upon this subject, let me call attention to a further fact. The gentleman from Arkansas yesterday gave as a reason why these expenses should increase, that population and business are increasing, and that, naturally enough, expenditures should increase. I find, sir, that in the estimates for 1889, the year to come, commencing next July, this same Department which found a deficiency of $40,000 in 1886 and of $50,000 in 1887, comes to us with an estimate of $50,000 less than the estimate for 1888. Does this indicate that that Department is aware of the growth of the country and the increase of business?

But let us come to the pay of witnesses. In 1885 the estimates for this item were $610,000; the appropriations and expenditures were $621,408.74, the excess of expenditures over estimates being only $11,408.74, which was very close work for the year 1885, and very creditable work both on the part of the Department and of Congress so far as estimates on appropriations were concerned. But in 1886 the estimate for pay of witnesses was $610,000 and the expenditures were $778,150, making an excess of expenditures over estimates, mark you, of $177,150 for a single year.

In 1887, in the light of this deficiency of $177,150, the estimates were $550,000—$60,000 less than the estimates for the preceding year. Evidently this Department had not then learned that there was any increase in the business of the country or of the courts, because in the light of an expenditure of $787,150 for the year 1886 the estimates for this service was reduced, not by the Appropriations Committee but by this Department, to $550,000. And what was the result? The appropriations and expenditures for 1887 were $750,000—$200,000 in excess of the estimates of this Department. Yet the business of the country and of the courts, it is said, is annually swelling!

More than that; we come now to 1888, and we find the Department had not yet awakened to the fact that the country was growing and the business of the courts increasing, for this same estimate of $550,000 is gravely submitted to Congress as the amount which will be required for this service. What are the facts? Congress appropriated $550,000, as asked in the estimates, supplemented in this bill by an appropriation of $300,000 more; so that for the current year the excess of expenditures and appropriations over estimates will be, in round numbers, $300,000. We can thus appreciate the wonderful light emanating from the gentleman from Arkansas, but which has not pervaded the Department he has undertaken to defend while he is attacking the Committee on Appropriations.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. I move to amend by striking out the last two words——

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. And I yield my time to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES].

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, if the five-minute rule is to be administered in this manner we had better proceed in the ordinary way, so that there may be fair time for response.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. If I am recognized, I yield my time to the gentleman from Missouri.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks that the arrangement now proposed would not be in accordance with the practice of the House.

Mr. LONG. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Missouri, being in charge of this bill from the Committee on Appropriations, may have ten minutes.

Mr. ROGERS. I think the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. LONG] ought to broaden his motion——

Mr. LONG. I have no objection to allowing the gentleman from Arkansas an opportunity to reply. Shall we renew the general debate?

Mr. BURNES. Not at all. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. ROGERS. I make a point of order before the gentleman goes on. I want this matter settled at this stage of the proceeding.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair holds that the gentleman from Missouri can not proceed further at present. The gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS] is recognized.

Mr. ROGERS. The chairman of the Committee on Appropriations having in charge this bill can hardly afford to be unfair. He ought not, in justice to the truth of the law, as well as to the facts, to undertake now directly what, by virtue of this report, he did indirectly, attack the Department of Justice. I demonstrated yesterday, if I am able to demonstrate anything, that the Department of Justice does not disburse these moneys.

I wish to call attention to the single fact in this report of the gentleman from Missouri in regard to the court expenses. In 1887 the estimates were $550,000; the appropriation was $500,000.

Mr. BURNES. Allow me a minute. I say that it is no part of my purpose, desire, or intention, either in this report or on this floor, to criticise the administration of the Department of Justice. I call attention to the facts, but not for the purpose of criticism.

Mr. ROGERS. I do not know any other mode of criticising anybody justly except by stating the facts. I for one insist that the force of the gentleman's remarks is to reflect upon the Department of Justice. I will not undertake to inquire into his motives at all; but if he proposes to hold the Department of Justice responsible, candor ought to compel him to show the Department of Justice has the disbursement and control of these moneys, and has been derelict in its duties.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania says the "control of the estimates." I return to that subject. The estimates in 1886, for witness fees, were $610,000, and the appropriation $500,000. The deficit was $237,150. So that notice was served at that time on the Committee on Appropriations that for witness fees it took $737,150 to transact the business of that Department. In the succeeding year, under the administration of the same officer, the same estimates were made and like appropriation, and the expenditures fell short $37,000 of the previous year, or, in other words, was $200,000 instead of $237,000.

In that year the deficiency bill failed, and that deficiency bill is to this blessed hour entailing its evil effects. It is not my purpose to discuss whether or not that deficiency bill failed by reason of the misconduct of this House or the other House. I submit that proposition to the gentleman who is chairman of the committee in this end of the Capitol and the gentleman who is the chairman of that committee in the other end of the Capitol.

Mr. RANDALL. I will answer that the Senate is to blame. [Laughter.]

Mr. ROGERS. And the gentleman at the other end of the Capitol will say that the House is to blame. I am not going to undertake to settle between them, but will proceed to speak in reference to the matter now before us.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. McCREARY. I will take the floor and yield my five minutes to the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. ROGERS. Now, Mr. Chairman, in 1888, there came over, by reason of this deficiency as estimated, not by the clerk of the court alone, but by the Department of Justice, as stated in the document procured from the Department of Justice and read yesterday, business sufficient to require the sum of $60,000, and I believe a much larger sum, that had to be paid out of the appropriation for this year; so that the $550,000 appropriated in conformity to the estimates for the year 1888 was reduced $60,000, by having to provide for business of a former fiscal year. The result was a deficiency, and the courts were suspended again in December for want of funds.

In that connection, as constituting absolute demonstration of the fact I am trying to show, I wish to send to the Clerk's desk to be read a letter from the Comptroller of the Treasury. It will show on the part of the several funds to the credit of the United States courts there was ample money for jury purposes, ample funds for all purposes except for witnesses, showing that the appropriation had been absorbed by the business forced upon it because of the suspension of the court in the preceding year.

The Clerk read as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, FIRST COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., December 13, 1887.

SIR: As requested by you this morning when you were at the office, I transmit herewith a statement of the balances now standing upon the books of the Treasury Department to the credit of the following appropriations for the present fiscal year, to wit:

Payment of fees and expenses of United States marshals and deputies	$338,004.00
Fees of jurors	83,346.00
Fees of witnesses	629.93

As you will see, the appropriation for fees of witnesses is virtually exhausted.

Very respectfully,

M. J. DURHAM, Comptroller.

Hon. JOHN H. ROGERS, M. C.,
House of Representatives.

Mr. ROGERS. So that this letter demonstrates two facts: One is, as I have already stated, that we are carrying in this year's appropriation the business of a former fiscal year; and second, if there had not been a failure of the deficiency bill last Congress the courts would not have suspended on the 20th of December last, and there would have been at least $60,000 of this fund, as shown by the Comptroller's letter, to the credit of the witness fund when the courts suspended, to have carried them on until Congress could have met and made provision in the usual course for the balance of the fiscal year.

Now, having said that much, I yield the floor to the gentleman from Missouri, in order that he may answer, if he can.

Mr. BURNES. Mr. Chairman, I ask where the Clerk has left off the reading of the bill?

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk concluded the reading of the second line on page 2.

Mr. BURNES. I ask for the reading of the next section.

The Clerk read as follows:

For repairs to Treasury building, $4,000.

Mr. BURNES. Mr. Chairman, I shall not detain the committee much longer; but I feel it incumbent upon me somewhat to defend this report.

The ever-recurring deficiencies both in annual estimates and appropriations for the "expenses of United States courts" are entitled to the grave and thoughtful consideration of Congress.

What is it that the committee recommend as entitled to the thoughtful and grave consideration of Congress?

Is it any error upon the part of the Department? Is it any attack upon the Administration? No, sir; it is simply calling the attention of this House and this committee to the expenses of the United States courts, of one of which at least the gentleman from Arkansas is a representative. It is to the expenses of the United States courts that we call the attention of the House, and we show that these expenses are gradually increasing year by year, until after a while the estimates will be the smallest part of the account in the transaction. That is to say, the deficiencies in estimates will be greater than the estimates themselves.

I think I have shown you that already with regard to the witnesses, although Congress gave every dollar asked for under this head for the year 1887, there was a deficiency of $200,000; and in the current year, although we gave every dollar asked for, there is a deficiency of $300,000. So you see the deficiencies are growing upon the estimates to such an extent that it has even now reached the proportion of three to five; and it seems to me, in the light of this state of things, that it will be but a question of time, and a short time at that, when the estimates will become a by-word and be entirely disregarded, both in this House and elsewhere.

I quarrel with no one. I am quarreling only with the estimates, and I state but the facts. If the facts which I allege are criticisms upon any individual, whether upon this side of the House or that side, or whether upon my own party or the party upon the other side of the House, so much the worse for either party which is responsible for it. The facts must be stated, and especially so under the great provocation which the Committee on Appropriations have had with regard to this report in connection with this bill.

But, sir, it is said that the Department of Justice has nothing to do with the allotment of the money to the marshals. Granted. That is a matter of no consideration. The Department of the Treasury or the subordinates of the Department of the Treasury send all estimates to this Congress, and it is against these estimates that I am complaining. It is against them, and not against the gentlemen who have not perhaps the time to look into the details of the business of the public. Be that as it may, this system is inherently bad, bad beyond all question.

We appropriated $500,000 to pay witnesses in the United States courts for a year. Somebody will administer upon that sum and divide it out into say sixty-five parts, not equal parts, as we have seen, but whoever has been fleetest of foot, whoever has been smartest in gaining access to, or who has come closest to the throne, has been able to get a very large proportion, sometimes, of this aggregate sum. So that while in some cases, as stated in this letter, where one marshal has more money than he needs, the marshal of my friend from Florida, as he has stated to the committee, has far less than he needs for the transaction of the public business. For this fault who is to blame? It is the fault of Congress, the fault of the law, the fault of legislation.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Missouri falls from his high estate when he drops down into a personal attack upon me by charging that I represent any court. I submit, sir, that that is beneath the dignity of his high position and wholly unworthy of a gentleman who has won a place upon the Appropriations Committee of the House of Representatives.

Mr. BURNES. I ask the gentleman from Arkansas to allow me a moment.

Mr. ROGERS. Certainly.

Mr. BURNES. It has never been my purpose since I have stood upon this floor to criticise any gentleman offensively or harshly. In alluding to the gentleman as representing this court, in the use of language, I meant that there was a court in the district that the gentleman was so ably representing here. I did not propose to state that he was a part of the court, that he personally represented the court, or had anything to do with the details of the business of the court, but only that it was within his district.

Mr. ROGERS. While the gentleman from Missouri is explaining, he ought also to explain, in view of his recent disclaimer of his attack upon the Department of Justice, what he means when he says those marshals who are "swiftest of foot" and "nearest the throne" manage to get the larger proportion of the appropriations.

Mr. BURNES. I answer emphatically, if my friend from Arkansas will allow me, that that is the rule not only of this administration but of all other administrations. It is the rule of human nature. "First come, first served."

Mr. ROGERS. It was not the question of "first come, first served," but it was the question of those "nearest the throne." What is meant by the gentleman from Missouri by that expression? Is it not meant that those officers of the court who reside in the State from which the distinguished Attorney-General comes are the largest beneficiaries in this matter, and that it is because they do reside in that State? I submit that is beneath the dignity of honorable discussion on the floor.

Let me suggest in that connection another thing to the gentleman from Missouri and the country—whether he proposes to stand up here and defend the stoppage of courts in this country with forty-four men in jail awaiting trial on the charge of murder in one court, and impute improper motives to the Attorney-General or the Representative of that district because they advocate that sums sufficiently large shall be granted so that the people in that district shall have the constitutional right of a fair, speedy, and impartial trial under the law.

That is what I undertake to defend. I do not stand up for one court. I stand for the integrity of the whole system from ocean to ocean, and from the lakes to the sea. I stand against this system of doling out in insufficient sums money to run the courts, a system which results in the stoppage of the courts, in the increase of the expense and in the harshest, most tyrannical, and most unconstitutional oppression of the poor unfortunates who are incarcerated in the prisons throughout the land. If I am to be stigmatized for that, I am ready to accept the stigma at the hands of the gentleman from Missouri, or any one else.

I am for the supremacy of the law, in the administration of this Government on high and correct principles, and for such appropriations as will enable it to be administered on such principles. And I stand for one other thing. That is that the Fiftieth Congress of the United States shall lift itself out of the rut of vicious precedents and march forward abreast of the times.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. SAYERS obtained the floor and yielded his time to Mr. BURNES.

Mr. BURNES. I shall not stand here and bandy words with the gentleman from Arkansas, who I suppose, under the rules of the House, has a right to express himself as he pleases. That is his business. I have probably the same right. But I propose not to consider with him in this place what is an honorable or a dishonorable line of debate. This is neither the time nor the occasion for such a consideration.

Now, sir, I am not quarreling with the administration of the Department of Justice, nor with the Attorney-General. My quarrel, if I may use the word, is with the estimates for judicial expenses, and for pay of jurors, witnesses, etc., in United States courts, made, I suppose, in the Department of Justice, which, as I have shown, have been persistently inadequate to cover the expenditures. It is no fault of Congress or of the Committee on Appropriations that courts have suspended, that witnesses and jurors have not been paid, but solely the natural result of deficient estimates, over which the Department of Justice has control. For the time has fully come when this much-misrepresented committee is compelled to give notice that every dollar that has been estimated for has been appropriated, and vastly more each year, as I have shown; and I submit as part of my remarks the report of the committee which has been the innocent object of assault, as follows:

EXPENSES UNITED STATES COURTS.

There are recommended in the bill, appropriations, on estimates submitted by the Department of Justice, for balance of the current fiscal year, as follows:

For fees of jurors	$150,000
For fees of witnesses	300,000
For pay of bailiffs, etc	75,000

The estimates, appropriations, and deficiencies for jurors and witnesses for the fiscal years 1886 to 1888, and the estimates submitted for 1889, are as follows:

Years.	For jurors.			For witnesses.
	Appropriations.	Estimates.	Deficiency.	Appropriations.	Estimates.	Deficiency.
1885	$400,000	$500,000	$50,000	$500,000	$610,000	$121,408.74
1886	450,000	500,000	90,000	550,000	610,000	237,150.00
1887	450,000	450,000	50,000	550,000	550,000	200,000.00
1888	450,000	500,000	150,000	550,000	550,000	300,000.00
1889		450,000			550,000

The ever-recurring deficiencies both in annual estimates and appropriations for the "expenses of United States courts" are entitled to the grave and thoughtful consideration of Congress. The real cause of them may be found—

1. In the system of allotment of appropriations by the Department, which is inherently bad; as, necessarily, no wisdom or judgment can prevent the giving of too much money to some courts and too little to others, thereby tempting the former to extravagance and compelling the latter in many instances to suspend proceedings.

2. In the power of appointment of clerks and certain other officers and employés of United States courts by the district judge, who too frequently gathers around him in official positions or employment those who by blood or marriage constitute his personal family.

3. In the want of a different system of disbursing the money appropriated for these expenses, the present system of payment through the marshals being unsatisfactory and demoralizing.

At the place where a United States court is held a disbursing officer might well be appointed under existing law, who, being wholly disinterested, and under the law and strict regulations of the Treasury Department, could make the court disbursements without loss, delay, or irregularity, and at all times be ready to report the balance on hand. The cost of disbursement would not be thereby increased, and the great reform would be that the self-created creditor of the United States would not be the custodian of the money out of which he is to become paymaster to himself and associates.

It will be observed that in 1885 the expenditure for jurors was $450,000, which amount was $50,000 less than the estimates for that year. In 1886 the expenditures exceeded the estimates to the amount of $40,000; in 1887 the expenditures exceeded the estimates to the amount of $50,000; and in 1888, if the appropriation in this bill is made, the expenditures will exceed the estimates $100,000. Thus year by year there is a steady increase of expenditures over estimates, so that some remedy must be interposed if a due regard for the public money is to be observed.

In 1885 the expenditures for witnesses were $11,408.74 in excess of the estimates; in 1886 the expenditures were in excess of the estimates to the amount of $177,150; in 1887 the expenditures were in excess of the estimates to the amount of $200,000; in 1888 the expenditures, if the appropriation in this bill is made, will be in excess of the estimates to the amount of $300,000. How long will it be before the excess of expenditures over estimates or appropriations will be more than the amount estimated or appropriated for this service?

But the most painful and deplorable part of this subject has relation to the wrongs and outrages perpetrated, under the forms of law, upon poor and oftimes ignorant men, by deputy United States marshals and others because of some mere technical or imaginary petty misdemeanor, in order that a color of right may appear for retaining money of the United States for extraordinary expenses of witnesses and others. If the prodigal waste under this head were only the loss of money to the United States the injury would be inconsiderable as compared with the personal wrongs upon individual citizens perpetrated merely as a basis for large expenditures. The system now, and for years existing, pays a premium for cupidity and encourages assaults upon the body of the people.

If there has been any failure of justice, any stoppage of courts—if there has been any delay or default in the public business of the courts of the country, it has arisen either from the failure of the deficiency bill last year, for which this House was in no sense responsible, or it has come from a failure to make adequate and sufficient estimates of appropriation. This is an answer and these are facts which no sophistry can obscure and no criticism of the Committee on Appropriations can refute.

The Committee on Appropriations have called the attention of the House to only some—a few—of the deficiencies in the estimates of appropriations by the Department of Justice. An additional request has come through the House to the committee within the last two days for an estimated deficiency in the previous estimates for the support of prisoners in the various penitentiaries and in the jails for $90,000. And it is a curious fact that among these prisoners there appears in the report of the Attorney-General a statement that five hundred and one of them are prisoners in the jail at Fort Smith, Ark., now, or if not now, they were there only a short time ago. The cost of supporting these prisoners of the United States has risen from 9 cents a day each, as in my own State, for convicts in the penitentiary, to 47 cents a day.

This Government pays for prisoners confined this 47 cents for a day's boarding for each, when one-half that sum would be ample compensation for everything he gets.

It is due the Department of Justice to add that this increased cost of prisoners has resulted from recent legislation prohibiting them from working under certain conditions, whereby their labor has been lost to the States in whose prisons they are confined.

But that does not apply to the prisoners before conviction, nor to those poor, ignorant men who, for every imaginable petty misdemeanor, are seized and thrown into the jails of the country from one end of the land to another. Read the reports and you will find that thousands of these people are lying in jail unable to give bond, the unfortunate victims of a tyrannical and overbearing system of arrest by deputy marshals and commitment by United States commissioners, dependent upon the system for their fees. These men are supplemented by the jailor, who takes his extravagant fees for his common prison fare, and all of them and all parties connected in any way with the horrible business except the United States Government and the poor, helpless victims of its laws or officers, are cheerful and happy in their gains.

Some poor farmer, after his year's work is done, sells a quarter of a dollar's worth of the agricultural product of his own labor to some one not authorized by law to buy it, a licensed tobacco purchaser, for instance, and for this petty offense a marshal, or usually a deputy, seizes him as a criminal, carries him often a great distance from his home; a commissioner gravely examines into the matter by the aid of witnesses carrying on the industry of earning mileage and per diem for their discoveries, and of course the result is never doubtful. The prisoner is incarcerated, and we are boarding him at the rate of 47 cents a day or more. Five hundred persons in the jail at Fort Smith means an expenditure of about $250 a day. The Government foots the bill, and some people who keep that jail and feed those prisoners are none the poorer.

Mr. ROGERS. I know that the gentleman does not wish to state anything that is not true in fact. Will he tell us where he got his information that five hundred and one prisoners were in jail at Fort Smith at one time? There is not room for them to stand in the jail.

Mr. BURNES. That is the number during the year.

Mr. ROGERS. Oh, I suppose there are about five hundred trials during the year; but you said that there were that number there at one time, and yet you are attacking the court because it does not dispose of more business on less money!

Mr. BURNES. No. I am not attacking the court. I know the judge at Fort Smith. He was one of my respected Republican predecessors in this Hall. I know the judge well and believe him to be honest, and I indorse him as a man and as a judge. I am not complaining of the judge or of any person; I am complaining of this unfortunate system called our judicial system, which is to-day perpetrating more wrongs upon the people than any other system existing in this land.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I shall not stop to say anything in defense of the Committee on Appropriations. Long service here makes me quite aware that this criticism is one of the emoluments of a position on that committee, and I have really come to believe that I possess one of the most valued qualities of the prize-fighter, namely, to be able to stand more pummeling and come up more serenely than most of my colleagues. [Laughter.] I do say, however, that there is less reliance to be placed upon the estimates of the Department of Justice than upon those of any other Department of this Government, and I do not confine that remark to the Department of Justice as it is now organized. It has been so ever since my connection with the Committee on Appropriations began.

Now, the utter unreliability of those estimates must, in my judgment, result from one of two causes. Either there must be a lack of intelligence in administration, not a lack of honesty, but a lack of intelligence, or else the fault must be in the system. I have been convinced for years that the fault is in the system, and, as a member of the Committee on Appropriations in previous Congresses, I have more than once sought to have some provision placed upon the appropriation bill which would prevent this large expenditure of money, without in any way promoting the ends of justice; but it has been generally kept off the bill by points of order made under the rules of the House. We have had also, if I remember aright, the Judiciary Committee of the House endeavoring in a like direction, and, now what has the Committee on Appropriations done in this instance?

I have nothing to say about the strength of the language employed, but I have much to say with reference to the strength of the purpose of the committee, which is to bring this House and the people in control of the administration of justice in this country to a realization of what is necessary in this connection. If I may be permitted without offense to make the suggestion, I desire to bring to the attention of the Judiciary Committee of this House the propriety of considering and presenting some sort of amendment to the statute laws which will prevent the gross injustice that is being done to innocent and unoffending citizens in various parts of the country, and I was not surprised to see my friend from Missouri [Mr. BURNES] fall in with the suggestion that many of these wrongs and persecutions come from the administration of the internal-revenue laws. By all means abolish them! [Laughter and applause.] When we find a law or set of laws that result in doing wrong and inflicting persecution upon the citizen, it is our duty to duly consider the matter and find a remedy. I should not have risen at all, perhaps, except for the purpose of indicating to the proper committee of this House, in a calm, dispassionate, and gentle way [laughter], that there is something expected of them in this connection. I trust, without the least offense to my friend from Arkansas, that they will take the hint. "A wink is as good as a nod to a blind horse." [Laughter.]

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, when the intellectual feast is about "played out" we take part in the physical feast; and I see if I can not be beaten down on the law and the facts I am to be worried out physically.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I sometimes take a "wink;" but when I "wink" I "wink" at the tariff.

Mr. RANDALL. All right; we shall "wink" together, it may be. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, if that suggestion means anything it affords me the most profound gratification, for heretofore we have not been "winking" together on that subject.

Mr. RANDALL. I would not like to say so, but perhaps the gentleman is a little blear-eyed on that point. [Laughter.]

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, it is not the tariff that blears one's eyes; it is the product of the internal-revenue system that affects the eyes.

Mr. RANDALL. I would soon make them blind on that. [Laughter.]

Mr. ROGERS. I must accept the gentleman's statement on that subject. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman no doubt can tell just how to "wink" by the direction that the applause comes from.

Mr. RANDALL. Oh, no.

Mr. ROGERS. But I am not going to discuss either with him or the gentleman from Missouri the internal-revenue system. I turn that over to the Ways and Means Committee.

With these remarks I am perfectly willing, after all the gentleman from Missouri has said, to let his last remarks go by default, with a passing suggestion only—that in all my remarks of an hour and a quarter yesterday and in those I have made to-day there will not be found, I think, a single sentence that can be construed into anything personally offensive to anybody. Moreover, I did not begin the scene which has taken place in the House to-day.

Mr. BURNES rose.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. "Let us have peace." [Laughter.]

Mr. BURNES. Mr. Chairman, I call attention to the report of the Attorney-General for the year 1887. By this report I find that of those in jail at Fort Smith, Ark., during the year, 122 are put down as in jail serving sentences and 501 as awaiting examination or trial. Now, you can construe that as you please. I give this statement from the report of the Attorney-General himself for 1887.

Mr. ROGERS. That is, during the year?

Mr. BURNES. I do not know whether it is or not. That is the number of persons set down as in jail awaiting examination or trial——

Mr. ROGERS. If you do not know how the fact is, you ought not to make the statement.

Mr. BURNES. I make the statement on the faith of what I see before me in this report—"of those in jail during the year serving sentence or awaiting examination or trial." It appears there are 122 serving sentence and 501 "hanging by the gills." [Laughter.]

A single remark in reply to my distinguished colleague on the committee, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANDALL]. I trust that no one will misunderstand my position because of the playful turn which that gentleman has given to my remarks.

Mr. RANDALL. I do not propose to commit you in advance.

Mr. BURNES. Mr. Chairman, I shall never cease to denounce the evils, the outrages, and the horrors that are perpetrated in the name of law by public officers under the internal-revenue system of this Government. At the same time I wish to say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania and to the country that we will first equalize the burdens of taxation and reduce the duties upon some of the necessaries of life before we undertake to diminish to any great extent the revenue from internal taxation. [Applause.]

Mr. HERBERT. Mr. Chairman, it will perhaps divert the attention of the House a little from the course this debate has taken to bring it back to the question suggested by the gentleman from Pennsylvania. He says, and says truly, that there is a defect somewhere in our judiciary system, or in the manner of its administration. That defect has been pointed out clearly to this House by successive Attorneys-General—by Attorney-General Devens, by Attorney-General Brewster, by Attorney-General Garland—all of them concurring in the opinion that this defect results from the fee system—from the payment of fees to marshals, fees to district attorneys, fees to commissioners. The gentleman from Pennsylvania has correctly stated that we once attempted to remedy this evil upon an appropriation bill. In the Forty-eighth Congress we sent to the Senate upon an appropriation bill provisions reforming this system; but the Senate, it seems, had not time to consider the subject, and some Senators, too, objected to the measure because it came in that way. I think this an appropriate occasion to appeal to the Judiciary Committee to bring into this House a bill which will remedy the evils of the existing system.

Mr. MILLIKEN. The gentleman will allow me to say that a bill for this purpose was introduced in the House in the Forty-ninth Congress, was discussed here, but failed to receive consideration in the Senate.

Mr. HERBERT. So it did. The House has long recognized the evils of this system, and if we would only take up this question promptly, as we ought, we might in a short time send to the Senate a bill which it would consider and which would remedy the great and growing evils now existing.

Mr. Chairman, the evil of the fee system results from the size of our judicial districts. The marshal's fees depend not only on the number of cases, on the number of warrants and subpœnas he has to serve, but upon the distances traveled to serve. Mileage is what pays him, and this is a standing temptation before him. The district attorney's fees depend on the number as well as on the character of the cases he prosecutes. It is the size of the district that causes the difference between the fee system of the States and the fee system when applied to Federal courts. This is true also of the States where generally the fee system obtains, but in the States, in every county, there are judicial officers, and there are executive officers, and they are responsible to the public opinion of that county, where all their duties are discharged, for the manner in which they conduct their offices. They arrest no man, they try no man who is not in that county, and generally every person arrested is a voter. But owing to the size of the judicial districts of the United States courts, a commissioner sits in the center of that district, and, having his office there, issues his warrants for men residing at great distances, sometimes hundreds of miles away, and brings them before him—men who are strangers to him, men who have no influence over public opinion in the community where the commissioner lives. So it is with the marshal and the district attorney. They are not directly amenable to the public opinion prevailing in the neighborhood of the prisoners arrested for the manner in which they transact the duties of their office, as similar officers are in the several States, because the prisoners they arrest and try are generally brought long distances from their homes.

I did not rise, however, in the brief time allotted to me, to attempt to discuss this question at any length, but merely to call the attention of the House at this juncture to this very great and important subject and to express the hope that the House will soon set itself to work to correct this evil.

[Here the hammer fell.]

By unanimous consent the pro forma amendment was withdrawn.

Mr. BURNES. There are some twenty-eight estimates for public buildings which have come to the committee, and which are in excess of the limit fixed in the law for the completion of public buildings. It is obvious, therefore, that a point of order would lie against each and every one of them. Submitting to the rule of the House, I have been instructed by the committee to ask unanimous consent to allow these amendments to be presented, and also to allow a similar amendment to be presented by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. WASHINGTON]. If unanimous consent be granted, these amendments can be considered. Without such consent, under the rule, no consideration can be had, as they are obnoxious to the point of order.

A MEMBER. Why were they not incorporated in the bill?

Mr. BURNES. Simply because they were obnoxious to the point of order, that inasmuch as they are in excess of the amount limited by the law for the construction of these public buildings. I desire to say the reason given by the Supervising Architect, in whom we have confidence, is that these expenditures, ranging from $1,000 to $50,000 or $60,000, will immediately finish these buildings and save large amounts in rent which the Government is now paying.

Senator Hitchcock appeared before us and stated the Government would save by completing the building in his town $12,000 now paid for rent. We are told the same thing is true in reference to these other public buildings. There is no question, therefore, but it is in the line of economy to appropriate this money. It would be appropriated without question if it were before the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. For these reasons the Committee on Appropriations have recommended that these appropriations be made, and in order that the matter may be brought before the committee for consideration, including the amendment of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. WASHINGTON], I will now ask by unanimous consent the point of order against them may be waived.

Mr. RANDALL. They were not incorporated in the bill because the committee were unwilling to take the position of violating the rules of the House.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair hears no objection, and the point of order is waived, and the gentleman will send his amendment up.

Mr. BURNES. I submit the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

For court-house and post-office at Aberdeen, Miss.: For iron fence, sidewalk of approaches, in excess of the limit, $4,000.

For post-office and court-house at Auburn, N. Y.: For completion, in excess of the limit, $30,000.

For fire-proofing building, $12,000.

For post-office and court-house at Augusta, Me.: For completion, in excess of the limit, $35,000.

For fire-proofing building, $12,000.

For custom-house and post-office at Buffalo, N. Y.: For completion, in excess of the limit, $500.

For court-house and post-office at Carson City, Nev.: For completion, in excess of the limit, $36,000.

For custom-house wharf at Charleston, S. C.: For extension and completion, in excess of the limit, $138,000.

For post-office and court-house at Concord, N. H.: For completion, in excess of the limit, $11,000.

For court-house and post-office at Dallas, Tex.: For completion, in excess of the limit, $11,000.

For court-house and post-office at Denver, Colo.: For extension and completion, in excess of the limit, $60,000.

For marine hospital at Detroit, Mich.: For boiler and engine house, $2,500.

For court-house and post-office at Fort Wayne, Ind.: For completion, in excess of the limit, $16,000.

For post-office at Hannibal, Mo.: For completion, in excess of the limit, $2,000.

For court-house and post-office at Jackson, Tenn.: For completion, in excess of the limit, $10,000.

For court-house and post-office at Keokuk, Iowa: For completion, in excess of the limit, $15,000.

For court-house and post-office at Leavenworth, Kans.: For completion, in excess of the limit, $3,000.

For court-house and post-office at Louisville, Ky.: That limit of cost of building be exclusive of amount paid for site.

For court-house and post-office at Lynchburgh, Va.: For completion, in excess of the limit, $2,000.

For post-office and court-house at Manchester, N. H.: For fire-proofing and completion, in excess of the limit, $46,000.

For post-office and court-house at Montpelier, Vt.: For completion, in excess of the limit, $20,000.

For fire-proofing building, $15,000.

For court-house and post-office at Pensacola, Fla.: For completion, in excess of the limit, $2,000.

For custom-house and post-office at Port Townsend, Wash.: For completion, in excess of the limit, $38,000.

For post-office at Poughkeepsie, N. Y.: For completion, in excess of the limit, $500.

For custom-house at Richmond, Va.: For completion, in excess of the limit, $33,000.

For court-house and post-office at Rochester, N. Y.: For fire-proofing and completion, in excess of the limit, $50,000.

For post-office and court-house at Shreveport, La.: For plumbing and completion, in excess of the limit, $2,000.

For post-office at Springfield, Ohio: For completion, in excess of the limit, $15,000.

For fire-proofing building, $23,000.

For post-office at St. Joseph, Mo.: For unforeseen expenditure, resulting from settling of the building and occasioning tearing down, strengthening foundations, and rebuilding, $40,000.

For post-office and court-house at Syracuse, N. Y.: For extension, granite work for approaches, and completion, in excess of the limit, $65,000. And said building may be extended on the north side thereof 15 feet and one story high.

For post-office at Terre Haute, Ind.: For completion, in excess of the limit, $32,000.

For custom-house and court-house at Toledo, Ohio: For completion, in excess of the limit, $17,000.

For court-house at Jefferson City, Mo.: For completion of the building, $3,000.

For court-house at Columbus, Ohio: For elevator, $8,000.

Mr. WASHINGTON proposed the following additional amendment:

The custom-house at Nashville, Tenn.: For the construction of an elevator, $4,000.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to considering these several amendments?

Mr. ADAMS. I desire to ask, as it is not stated here in the bill, what amount is appropriated in connection with the building at Louisville—the amount paid for the site?

Mr. SAYERS. One hundred and forty-one thousand dollars.

Mr. ADAMS. I think it should have been stated in the bill.

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the consideration of these several amendments?

Mr. BREWER. Let us hear from the gentleman from Pennsylvania first.

The CHAIRMAN. The first question is, will the committee consider these amendments?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Chairman, I did not object to the consideration of these amendments, because I do not see that Congress can in any other way remedy the mistakes made in this bureau. It is really a wholesale change of law, with reference to some thirty of these buildings, as to the limits originally prescribed.

In my judgment, however, I should fail to properly discharge my duty on this floor if I did not direct attention to what I deem to be the loose, irresponsible, and uncertain manner of the expenditure of public money in connection with such matters. Whether such objectionable practices can be remedied by administration or will require the enforcement of statute law, I am not prepared to say with certainty at this time, but either one thing or the other should be done. There should be a reorganization of that bureau by the Administration, or else Congress should come to the rescue, through its appropriate committee in this House, and provide by statute how this business should be conducted.

It is well known that we give each year a certain amount of money for the payment of the employés, draughtsmen, sketchers, clerks, and others in this connection, and yet that appropriation of money gives no true index of the system of work there; nor do the expenditures give any fair and accurate information as to the amount of money that is actually expended.

Mr. HATCH. Will the gentleman yield to me for a question?

Mr. RANDALL. Yes, sir.

Mr. HATCH. Is not all that expense for draughting, etc., that the gentleman from Pennsylvania alludes to, taken out of each individual appropriation?

Mr. RANDALL. There is one of [illegible] mistakes of administration.

Mr. HATCH. Permit me a moment. I want to say that here is an appropriation to complete the building at Hannibal, Mo., of $2,000; and yet there would have been no lack of funds to complete it if it had not been that of the money already appropriated for that purpose amounts were used in draughting and other such expenses in that office which were supposed to be done under the general appropriation.

Mr. RANDALL. The gentleman is quite correct in his statement as to the Hannibal building. Not only is that true, but I know that of the appropriations made to some other buildings sums of money have been taken for work upon as many as twenty-five or thirty different buildings having no relation whatever with the appropriation and nothing to do with the object that Congress had in view in making the appropriation, and we knew nothing of it. Congress supposed when the appropriation was made, and a limit fixed, that the amount expended by the administration of this bureau was to pay only for the work upon the particular building specified. But in many instances sums have been taken out of the particular appropriation to cover expenses on various other buildings.

Mr. McKINNEY. By what right?

Mr. RANDALL. By the right of might. There is no law of Congress to justify it.

Mr. WILKINSON. Will the gentleman from Pennsylvania permit me to ask if this has been done by the present incumbent of the office?

Mr. RANDALL. Not to my knowledge; and I am inclined to believe that he is trying to remedy these mistakes.

But, Mr. Chairman, I am not inveighing against anybody. It has come as a tradition from former times that it can be done, and it is proper under such circumstances that I should make some suggestion as to what in my opinion should be done in this connection.

I am of the opinion that this bureau ought to be officered as other bureaus of the Government are officered in the Treasury; that you should give so much money to provide for the payment of salaries to certain capable draughtsmen, and that you should give sufficient salaries to secure proper copyists, sketchers, clerks, and others necessary. Why can not this be organized as other bureaus are organized? In this manner the expenditures there can be made specific; and the expenditures for plans, etc., of buildings, being done from a center, can be done under a system, while the amount necessary for the payment of janitors, superintendents, and custodians of public buildings at the particular location where the building is being erected will come entirely out of the fund appropriated by Congress for this purpose. Because of the omission to do this the many deficiencies to which attention has been called are brought to pass.

Mr. HATCH. Let me ask the gentleman if this can not be done without any additional legislation, if it is recommended by the Secretary, by putting it into the legislative appropriation bill?

Mr. RANDALL. My own judgment is, and my own opinion, that the administration of the Treasury Department will remedy the matter, and I am inclined to believe that it is within the range of administration. But if it is not done, then some organization ought to be brought about by legislation through the proper committee of this House, to wit, the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Pardon me, Mr. Chairman, for occupying so much time in this connection; but when I see a wholesale breakage of the law which has fixed the limits of these buildings, as now proposed, I think it due to the House to say that this should not be, and to incidentally and perhaps crudely undertake to suggest a mode of avoiding it in the future.

Mr. MILLIKEN. So far as this matter is concerned there certainly can be no reflection justly made upon the committee from which these bills come, and I can not see that there is any reflection justly to be made upon this House. In all the bills introduced in the last Congress, as far as my memory goes, appropriating money for public buildings, a clause was inserted, suggested by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN], providing that no money should be appropriated, or at least used, until the Supervising Architect had made his estimates, and that the estimates should come within the limitation of the appropriation for the building.

Mr. SAYERS. Will the gentleman from Maine allow me to interrupt him to make a suggestion?

Mr. MILLIKEN. Yes, sir.

Mr. SAYERS. These items of appropriation here refer to buildings which were authorized to be erected.

Mr. MILLIKEN. I so understand it, and they were authorized, some of them, if not all of them, by the Forty-eighth and Forty-ninth Congresses; some of them certainly by the Forty-eighth.

Mr. HATCH. Some of them as far back as the Forty-seventh Congress.

Mr. MILLIKEN. Now, that provision was placed in the bills for the purpose of avoiding just what has occurred here to-day, for the purpose of bringing the cost of the public building within the amount appropriated, so that Congress might know, when it was appropriating this money, how much it was going finally to expend on these public buildings, and in order that it might not be said, as it has been so often said, "This appropriation is simply an entering wedge; by and by you will want to get something more appropriated."

That was one of the objections which were made against these appropriations. Now, so far as the present Supervising Architect is concerned, I have no reason—and if I had a reason I do not know I should do it—to make any criticism upon him at all. I do not know the gentleman personally, and I know very little about the administration of his office, and in the absence of that knowledge I assume that he is doing his duty judiciously and honestly. But certainly if these abuses have not sprung up during his administration they have not been amended by it. Perhaps he has not had time or opportunity during the brief term of his administration of his office to give his attention to them. I desire to treat him fairly.

I think there is something a little further than this in the matter. I think that after these public buildings have been commenced there has been sometimes a little too much politics in the matter of their construction. I desire to make a statement in regard to the building at Augusta, Me. I introduced into this House the bill for the erection of that building. An appropriation of $150,000 was made for it. I stated to the House the $150,000 would erect and finish the building. I understood it to be so from the Supervising Architect. He had made his plans and specifications, and that was the amount of money he said it was necessary to appropriate, and we appropriated it.

Now, how has the work gone on? Why, sir, instead of issuing an invitation for proposals, the substructure of the building, which was quite costly, has been built by days' work at a cost which many people believe to have been considerably larger than the sum which it could have been built for if the work had been done by contract. Then, when the question came of building the superstructure, the Department did advertise for proposals, and proposals were sent in.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. RYAN was recognized, and yielded his time to Mr. MILLIKEN.

Mr. MILLIKEN. When the proposals were received it was found that there were half a dozen bids, more or less, for the building. As it happened a certain company, which perhaps has built more public buildings than any other in this country, a company entirely responsible, entirely capable of doing the best kind of work in the cheapest manner, for its granite works are within 2 miles of the spot where the building was to be constructed, was the lowest bidder; and what was the result? A little coterie of gentlemen came here, as I am credibly informed, protested against this company getting the work to do. Why? Because, and for no other reason in the world, the man who was at the head of this company, who I am sorry is now dead, who was recently governor of the State of Maine, Mr. Bodwell, was a Republican; and they said, "This work must not go into the hands of Republicans, because they would employ nobody but Republicans;" and the final event was all the bids were rejected. Then they advertised for proposals—I am stating what I know; indeed, what anybody may know if he will inquire—they advertised for proposals to furnish the material. Very well; when the bids came in it happened to be a repetition of the same old case; they were rejected again; and then they issued letters asking the bidders to revise their proposals.

Mr. WISE. Will the gentleman from Maine allow me a question?

Mr. MILLIKEN. Yes, sir.

Mr. WISE. Are you opposed to the erection of public buildings by days' labor?

Mr. MILLIKEN. I was opposed to the work I have referred to being done by days' labor, because I believed it could be done by contract for within the limit of the appropriation.

Mr. BLAND. When did all this take place?

Mr. MILLIKEN. This last summer.

Mr. BLAND. Who was in charge of the construction of public buildings at that time?

Mr. MILLIKEN. The same person who is in charge now.

Mr. BLAND. When was he appointed?

Mr. MILLIKEN. I do not say he is responsible, but somebody is. Further than that, Mr. Bodwell told me himself that he offered to take $150,000 and finish that building to the satisfaction of the Department, in as good style and manner as any building of the same class in the United States, and that offer was refused. The contract was given to another company; and while the substructure has been constructed of white granite they are building the first story of the superstructure of dark granite. Possibly they will build the third story, which has not yet been contracted for, of red granite; and if they continue as they have begun we shall have a public building like Joseph's coat—of many colors; and God only knows what it will cost if Congress shall, from time to time, be so indulgent as to furnish the money.

Now, I say there is something beyond what the House has control of in regard to these expenditures on public buildings. I am in favor of granting this $35,000, because it is necessary in order to put the building into habitable shape. You can not leave it without a roof; you can not leave it without a third story; you can not leave it unfurnished; and therefore, because it is necessary in the present state of the case, in order to make the building of any use to the Government, I am in favor of the amendment. But the whole trouble might have been avoided by going forward in a business-like, non-political way, as should be the course in every case of this kind. The construction of public buildings should be purely a matter of business, wherein politics should have no consideration.

Mr. RANDALL. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. MILLIKEN. I will.

Mr. RANDALL. Are you not a member of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds?

Mr. MILLIKEN. I am.

Mr. RANDALL. Then, in view of the statements you have just made, I think it is the duty of that committee to in some way consider and recommend a proposition to be enacted into law, which would prevent a repetition of the evils you complain of.

Mr. MILLIKEN. The gentleman is older in Congress than I am, and if he will submit a bill for that purpose I doubt not the committee will consider it favorably, if indeed such a bill can be formulated.

Mr. RANDALL. I have a great many other things to attend to, and this business belongs to your committee.

Mr. BURNES. Mr. Chairman, by an oversight of the committee an omission has been made which will be supplied by the amendment I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Post-office at Jersey City, N. J.: For necessary extension of the building, $12,200.

Mr. BURNES. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to pass upon these propositions together in order to save time.

The CHAIRMAN. As the Chair understands, the committee has not agreed to consider the last proposition, and the gentleman in charge of the bill now asks unanimous consent that they all be considered together.

Mr. BURNES. Yes, I ask unanimous consent that all these amendments be taken as one paragraph and considered in gross.

There was no objection.

Mr. VOORHEES. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment to this amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out $82,000 and insert $250,000 as the limit for the construction of the public building at Port Townsend, Wash.

Mr. BURNES. I make the point of order against that amendment that there is neither an estimate of the Department for it nor of the Supervising Architect.

Mr. VOORHEES. I trust that the gentleman will withhold his point of order long enough to permit me to make a brief statement.

Mr. BURNES. Having made the point, I will withhold it for the gentleman's statement.

Mr. VOORHEES. Mr. Chairman, it is susceptible of the clearest and most positive demonstration that the customs district of Puget Sound is one of the most important in the United States. At a meeting of the city council of Port Townsend, which is the port of entry, in November last, a set of resolutions was adopted, which was ratified by the board of trade of that city, setting out in detail the statistics relating to this great customs district, and it appears that the appropriation originally made on the 3d day of March, 1885, for this public building is totally inadequate to erect a building sufficient to accommodate the growing commerce of this portion of the Pacific Northwest. At that time $70,000 was appropriated for the erection of a public building, which was to accommodate not only the customs business, but also the post-office and the United States courts at that point. Subsequently, on the 9th day of December, 1886, an additional appropriation of $12,000 was made, making the appropriation in all $82,000.

Now, Mr. Chairman, it is absolutely true that the superficial area of floor-room contemplated by the plans adopted for the construction of this public building will be less than is now furnished in the rented buildings occupied by the customs department, leaving no room whatever for the accommodation of the post-office and the courts.

It appears from these statistical details that in the customs district of Puget Sound there are more American steam-vessels engaged in the foreign trade than there are in any other American port; there is a greater tonnage of American steam-vessels engaged in the foreign trade than in any other port except New York.

In the aggregate number of American and foreign steam-vessels engaged in the foreign trade it stands second, New York being first. In the aggregate tonnage of American and foreign steam-vessels engaged in the foreign trade it stands seventh. In the aggregate number of entrances and clearances of American and foreign vessels, steam and sail, it stands fourth. In the aggregate tonnage of all vessels, American and foreign, steam and sail, it stands seventh.

This showing alone fully sustains my assertion that this customs district is one of the foremost in the United States.

It appears further, Mr. Chairman, that while the collections in this district in 1886 amounted to $79,000, there has been since that time such a phenomenal growth and increase in the transactions of the district that the collector now estimates that during the present year the collections will reach the sum of $250,000.

I submit, Mr. Chairman, that it is a matter of economy, pure and simple, to give us money enough to construct a building at this port which will accommodate the rapidly growing and increasing business of the district of Puget Sound.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. CRAIN obtained the floor and said: I yield my time to the gentleman from Washington Territory [Mr. VOORHEES].

Mr. VOORHEES. I am very much obliged to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. Chairman, I might read from these resolutions a great many additional reasons for this increased appropriation, but my time will not permit. The following suggestions are very valuable as establishing the commercial importance of this port of entry:

Port Townsend as a center of travel is rapidly growing in importance, being the first American port reached by large ocean steamers arriving and departing tri-monthly to and from Alaska; also the first port on Puget Sound connected by ocean steamer with San Francisco making weekly trips; also connecting by daily steamer with Victoria, British Columbia, and by two lines of daily steamers with southern and eastern inland points; also by two semi-weekly steamers with Vancouver, British Columbia; also having various local steamer lines radiating on daily, tri-weekly, and semi-weekly schedules. It is also the northern terminus of the Port Townsend Southern Railroad, a line of railway being projected southward to connect with the great transcontinental lines. Port Townsend is nearly opposite, and only 30 miles distant from, Victoria, the capital of the province of British Columbia, where the English Government has expended a million dollars or more in public works.

The first appropriation ever made for the benefit of Washington Territory for a purpose of this kind was the appropriation of $70,000, subsequently increased to $82,000, $9,000 of which it was necessary to expend for a site on which to erect this public building, leaving an insufficient amount available for the construction of the building and the payment of expenses incidental thereto.

It seems to me singular that the Government of the United States should hesitate to appropriate $250,000 to provide for the transaction of the business of this port in view of the fact that the British Government has expended more than $1,000,000 at Victoria, a point 30 miles to the northward, the commercial importance of which is no greater and possibly not as great as is that of Port Townsend.

Mr. Chairman, our exports of lumber, coal, wheat, and other products are estimated at $10,000,000 annually; and the statistics to which I have adverted indicate that this customs district is of sufficient importance to justify Congress in making an appropriation adequate for the construction of a building which will cost not less than $250,000, the limit asked for.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I wish to ask the chairman of the subcommittee how much these increased appropriations for public buildings embraced in this amendment will aggregate?

Mr. BURNES. About $800,000.

Mr. BOUTELLE. What information has the committee received upon which to base its judgment that these appropriations are necessary?

Mr. BURNES. We have received specific reports from the Supervising Architect, setting forth in detail the condition of the work in each case and the amount of work to be done in order to complete the building.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Has the committee or the House any guaranty or any evidence that the amounts now proposed to be appropriated will secure the completion of these buildings?

Mr. RANDALL. The committee can not give any guaranty.

Mr. BURNES. The committee can not guaranty, nor has anybody undertaken to guaranty to the committee, that such will be the result; but the Supervising Architect, in whose judgment and pains-taking care we have great confidence, assures us that these appropriations will complete the buildings.

Mr. BOUTELLE. And this officer in whose "pains-taking care" and judgment you have this confidence is the same officer who, in some instances, made the plans.

Mr. RANDALL. Oh, no.

Mr. BURNES. This officer has been in office only about a year.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Then you have more confidence in the present officer than in the former one.

Mr. RANDALL. A fairer way to state the matter would be that we have no confidence in the system.

Mr. BOUTELLE. What we want to get at is, whether the House has any assurance whatever that these buildings will ever be completed.

Mr. SPRINGER. Oh, yes; we now have a Democrat in charge.

Mr. FELTON. Will not their completion depend on the appropriations which may be made?

Mr. BURNES. I can say I have perfect confidence myself that these appropriations will complete these buildings. That confidence is based upon my knowledge of the character of the Supervising Architect, whose assurances to me in that respect are ample.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I am very glad to find that one gentleman is satisfied.

Mr. MILLIKEN. I suppose it is very certain the buildings will not be completed unless the necessary money be appropriated.

Mr. McMILLIN. Having been called to the Senate during the earlier part of this discussion, I desire to know whether any of the appropriations now proposed to be made will carry the gross amount of the appropriations for these buildings beyond the limits originally fixed.

Mr. BURNES. They are all increases.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Mr. Chairman, my object in making these inquiries has been more especially to ascertain to what extent the Treasury, by these expenditures, is being mortgaged for the future against the passage of measures providing public buildings for localities where the people ought to have the accommodations asked, and would be entirely content with the appropriation of a reasonable and moderate sum, but are unable to get action at the hands of this House, largely, as I believe, because of the improvident and extravagant increase of appropriations for buildings already authorized by law.

I have introduced and have now pending before the committee of this House a bill which has been before the House now during three Congresses, asking the moderate appropriation of $50,000 for a custom-house and post-office in one of the most rapidly growing districts of my State. The building proposed to be constructed is not to be a pauper institution, but the revenues from that customs district would pay for the building in the course of two or three years. Yet, while year after year we have been appropriating money to build court-houses and post-offices in various villages and hamlets all over the country, where there is not a solitary penny of revenue, where every dollar of expenditure must be given outright by the Government, and the only equivalent obtained is in the increased comfort of the legal fraternity attending court, it has been impossible in many instances to get deserving measures of this character before the House; and now we are proposing to spend $800,000 in the way of increased appropriations for buildings which have been heretofore provided for.

Mr. VOORHEES. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. I desire to know the status of my amendment to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri reserved the question of order, which he will now state.

Mr. BURNES. My point of order is that this is not only an appropriation in excess of the limit fixed by law, but it comes here without any recommendation on the part of the Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department that it is necessary. I see no reason for it, and I insist upon my point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair can not see how any suggestion from the Supervising Architect would affect the point of order. The committee agreed to consider these several propositions although not authorized by law; and having agreed to consider them, it is in order to consider amendments to them.

Mr. SAYERS. I believe I have the floor.

Mr. CANNON. I wish to say that if I understood the Chair's decision——

Mr. SAYERS. I believe I have the floor.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois wishes to be heard on the point of order, and will be recognized.

Mr. CANNON. If I understood the unanimous consent it was given for the purpose of reporting an amendment from the Committee on Appropriations covering certain items, and also to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. WASHINGTON] to make a similar amendment; but I did not know that unanimous consent was given for the purpose of offering other and independent amendments providing for other buildings.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair does not so understand the fact. The gentleman from Missouri asked by unanimous consent to offer for consideration an amendment covering items of appropriation beyond the limit fixed in the laws providing for those public buildings, and unanimous consent was granted for that purpose and also to allow the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. WASHINGTON] to move a similar amendment.

Mr. CANNON. Then this amendment is one of them?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, this is one of them, and having agreed to consider them they are open to amendment.

Mr. CANNON. I did not understand that this was one of them.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, this is one of them, and the gentleman's amendment to the amendment is in order.

Mr. SAYERS. I desire to ask the gentleman from Maine [Mr. BOUTELLE] whether we did not pass a bill for him in the Forty-ninth Congress, appropriating $100,000.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I did not hear the gentleman.

Mr. SAYERS. Did you not direct a bill to be introduced last Congress, and did not the House pass it?

Mr. BOUTELLE. In the last Congress a bill was passed restoring a public building in my Congressional district.

Mr. SAYERS. Was not $100,000 appropriated for that building?

Mr. BOUTELLE. Yes, for the purpose of restoring a public building destroyed by fire. That is all right. We were entitled to have the bill passed.

Mr. SAYERS. I would ask the gentleman whether or not the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds did not recommend for him the construction of a public building in the Forty-seventh, Forty-eighth, and Forty-ninth Congresses, and whether the same bill is not now before that committee?

Mr. BOUTELLE. I understand that bill is now before the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and I am complaining because I can not get the committee to report it to the House.

Mr. SAYERS. Did not the gentleman have the bill before those three Congresses?

Mr. BOUTELLE. It ought to have been reported among the very first bills introduced in this Congress, but it has not been, and that is the reason I am complaining.

Mr. SAYERS. I wish to say, Mr. Chairman, that this House has done as much for the gentleman from Maine as he asked, and if the gentleman did not get his bill through during the Forty-seventh, Forty-eighth, and Forty-ninth Congresses it was because it was his fault or his misfortune.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I admit that it was my misfortune not to have gotten it through, and that is why I complain.

Mr. BELDEN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Maine has made an inquiry as to whether there were detailed estimates for this work, which I desire to answer, and state that I speak understandingly and advisedly when I respond that this is the first estimate in detail that has been presented to the House within twenty years.

This estimate is given in detail, every item is presented, every single item set out in full, and the amount of the deficiency here is for items that were not in the original plan at all. It is not, therefore, a deficiency in the true sense of the word. The fact of the matter is that the estimates have been made up without care or attention, being made by men without ability to give them correctly. Many things which should have been included in the estimates have been left out entirely. But the present Architect has inserted every item in this appropriation bill, and has prepared an estimate, item by item, of the amount required.

Mr. LONG. You mean as to the building at Syracuse?

Mr. BELDEN. I mean as to several buildings.

I make the statement boldly that there never has been an estimate presented for the completion of a building so much in detail, prepared with so much care, and one that is so sure to be right as this one.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Then you share the confidence of the gentlemar from Missouri that these appropriations are to be final?

Mr. BELDEN. I do, sir.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I am glad of that.

Mr. BELDEN. I know the facts; I have gone over the whole subject in detail, and have examined what was left out in former estimates, and I tell the gentleman that there is not a dollar asked for here that he does not tell us exactly what it is for.

Much has been said in this discussion about deficiencies. The fact is that the Government work here has all been done cheaper than any other work or any private work could be done. But if the gentleman from Maine gets his $50,000 appropriated, and the estimate is changed, he will find that there will be a deficiency.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANDALL] made the only suggestion which in my judgment will cover the question in future, and that is the appointment of competent men and a bureau having charge of the matter. It has been done by a lot of boys. Every gentleman here knows, who has had experience in such matters, that he can scarcely build an ordinary stable or a little house without having it cost much more than he estimated. You can not expect this Government work to cost less when boys have been making the estimates.

Mr. MILLIKEN. Will the gentleman from New York tell us whether the force of boys under the present Administration doing this work has been increased or diminished, and how long they have been there?

Mr. BELDEN. I do not know. The gentleman now in charge is a stranger to me. But I know from experience that it requires competent men to do this work. I have looked into the question and I feel that I am competent to give an opinion upon it.

Mr. MILLIKEN. I do not intend to impeach the Department, but the gentleman speaks of a lot of boys there.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Mr. Chairman, what is the particular question before the House?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York has the floor.

Mr. BELDEN. I say, Mr. Chairman, that the estimates which have been made, almost universally, heretofore have been made by incompetent persons or without sufficient care, and we have no bureau that can do it. I say that the present gentleman who occupies the place, if he undertakes to do it all as well as he has made these estimates, will not be able to finish one-fourth of these buildings; and nothing but a plan similar to that suggested by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANDALL] will cover the difficulty.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. BURNES. I now ask unanimous consent that debate upon this proposition be closed.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

Mr. HERMANN. Mr. Chairman, the State of Oregon is entitled to——

The CHAIRMAN. Debate has been closed by unanimous consent.

Mr. HERMANN. If unanimous consent is required, I object.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is too late.

Mr. HERMANN. Then I ask unanimous consent to be permitted to occupy the floor for two or three or four minutes on the pending amendment. [Cries of "Too late!"]

Mr. BURNES. Let him have the time. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Washington Territory.

The question was taken; and on a division there were—ayes 25, noes 78.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. HERMANN. I now move to strike out the first word.

Mr. Chairman, I wish to say——

The CHAIRMAN. Debate is closed by order of the committee.

Mr. HERMANN. Then I will offer the amendment to a succeeding paragraph.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I wish to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. When the motion of the gentleman from Missouri was made to close debate it was absolutely impossible for the gentleman from Oregon, or anybody sitting even two seats back of me, to hear a word because of the confusion upon the floor of the House. The gentleman during that confusion could not, of course, take cognizance of what was passing; and therefore I ask if this strict rule should be held to apply to him?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair can not keep order upon the floor except with the co-operation of gentlemen on the floor. The Chair will take great pleasure in co-operating with the gentleman from Michigan and other gentlemen in preserving order.

The pro forma amendment was withdrawn.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendments offered by the gentleman from Missouri.

The amendments were agreed to.

The Clerk read the following paragraph:

Mints and assay offices:

For wages assay office at Boisé City, $1,890.

For wages assay office at Boisé City, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1887, $335.

For wages assay office at Boisé City, being for the service of the fiscal year 1885, $335.

For freight on bullion and coin, mints and assay offices, $5,000.

Mr. HERMANN. I move to strike out the last word. I regret exceedingly, as representing a State more interested than any other in the amendment just disposed of, that the House has not deemed it wise or prudent to agree to the request made in the amendment offered by the Delegate from Washington Territory. Here comes a request, not from a single individual or Delegate, but it is a request which is backed up and indorsed unanimously by the Board of Trade of Port Townsend, and by the inhabitants of that enterprising and marvelously growing city, and by the unanimous request of the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Washington.

When the original act was passed in March, 1885, granting an appropriation of $75,000 for the construction of this building, a different state of affairs existed in the northwestern portion of the country from what exists at the present time. Then the service of the customs department required but eighteen persons to perform it. Now the business has so grown in magnitude as to require thirty-six persons to perform that service. Then, Mr. Chairman, the receipts amounted to but $79,000, whereas now, in the remarkably short lapse of but three years, they have grown to the enormous amount of $250,000. More money is received each year by the collector of customs of that great district than is sufficient to erect the building which has been recently under consideration.

Mr. Chairman, it is not only to the local interests of the great Northwest that this amendment is of importance. The people of the entire nation are interested in it. My friend from Washington Territory has almost exhaustively gone over the ground and shown to this House ample and sufficient reasons why his amendment should have received favorable consideration. But he might also well have referred to the construction of two great transcontinental lines which now reach that inland sea. The Northern Pacific has its terminus on those waters, and the Canadian Pacific, with its present terminus at Vancouver, will be connected and is now being connected with the waters of Puget Sound. And thus becomes still greater the necessity for a proper custom-house at that place.

If there is anything required to confirm or corroborate the petitions sent to this House it is the exigency which exists at that place at this time. When you look at the resort the Government is compelled to make to renting outside buildings at an immense amount of rental annually, and when you look at the great amount of foreign commerce, the immense amount of local as well as foreign shipments, it seems to me that this House should not pause a solitary moment in voting every dollar requested.

The Government should be like an individual in matters of this kind. Its action in managing its affairs should be as economical and as painstaking as would be that of an individual. If he was prosperous in his circumstances, with an immense surplus at his disposal, in carrying on his business transactions would he allow himself to go to work and rent outside buildings just because he did not feel that the time had arrived to spend what was necessary in erecting a building? A man who would allow the money to remain in his pocket and pay rental for outside buildings, while at the same time recognizing the necessity for the construction of additional buildings for his own use, would be acting with as little wisdom as is shown in the refusal of the necessary appropriations for this purpose. The same rule which would apply to a discreet, economical individual or business association certainly should apply to the Government of the whole nation. The commerce of the entire country requires this, and the necessary appropriation should be made.

[Here the hammer fell.]

The pro forma amendment was withdrawn.

The Clerk read the following paragraph:

Light-stations:

Hell Gate light-station, New York: For lease of the ground used as a site for the light-house and fog-signal established at Hallet's Point, near Hell Gate, New York, from April 1, 1886, to June 30, 1888, $1,350. And the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to remove the property of the Government from said leased ground on or before June 30, 1888.

Mr. LONG. I offer an amendment recommended by the Department since the bill was reported.

The Clerk read as follows:

Insert after line 2, page 3, the following:

"In addition to the amount appropriated by the act making appropriations for the sundry civil expenses of the Government, approved August 4, 1886, for the establishment of a light-house and fog-signal at Castle Point, Rhode Island, the sum of $5,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LATHAM. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

After line 2, page 3, insert:

"Pamlico light-station, North Carolina: For establishing a light off Pamlico Point, North Carolina, to replace the one on the point, $25,000."

Mr. BURNES. I am compelled to interpose the point of order against that amendment.

Mr. LATHAM. I ask the gentleman from Missouri to withhold the point of order in order to allow me to make a statement.

Mr. BURNES. I reserve the point of order.

Mr. LATHAM. The Secretary of the Treasury in his letter transmitting the estimates of deficiencies in the appropriations to the committee, which is dated the 22d of December, 1887, asks that this appropriation should be made; and in his letter he calls the attention of the committee to the importance of its being made. He tells them in that letter that the light-house at Pamlico Point, at the mouth of Pamlico River, has been greatly undermined by the waves of the sound and of the river, so that it is insecure and has been abandoned.

In fact, in the month of October the light at that light-house was extinguished. The river is one of the largest in Eastern North Carolina. Forty miles above its mouth is one of the most prosperous towns in that section of the country. Along both banks of the river are large mills engaged in the preparation of lumber for the various markets of the world. It has a West India trade employing six or eight vessels, which carry freight to those islands and bring back large cargoes of salt, molasses, and fruit. A number of vessels from northern ports are constantly engaged in the lumber traffic, carrying out millions of feet of lumber every year. Besides that there is a semi-weekly line of large and commodious steamers run by the Old Dominion Company to Norfolk. There is another semi-weekly line run to the city of Baltimore.

There is another line from the town of Washington to the neighboring city of New Berne, N. C. The sound and the river are dangerous to navigate without this light. It is supplied simply with a gas buoy, which is utterly and entirely insufficient for the purposes of safe navigation. It is proposed by the Department to replace the light-house which is now upon the land with a screw light only a few hundred yards distant, which will be amply sufficient for the purpose. If the appropriation is not put into this bill, but is left for the sundry civil bill, the amount appropriated will not be available in time, and meanwhile vessels navigating there will be in great danger. The light can not be well built during the winter; the work must be done during the summer; so that if the appropriation is not put into this bill it will probably be twelve months before the new light will illuminate that coast. In the mean time, Mr. Chairman, while this amendment of mine may be wrecked here upon a point of order, the lives and the property of our fellow-citizens may be wrecked on the point off Pamlico River. I trust, therefore, that the point of order will not be insisted upon. We have not a sufficient number of lights in the sounds of North Carolina. You can go almost from one end of Long Island Sound to the other by the light of magnificent structures which the Government has erected there for the protection of navigation; but upon our waters those light-houses are twenty or thirty miles apart. I ask of this House that they will pass this appropriation now.

Mr. BURNES. Mr. Chairman, there can be no question in my mind, nor, I presume, in the mind of any one here, that what the gentleman says is true; but, nevertheless, this proposition is not in order. It is clearly a proposition to construct a new light in a different place and disconnected entirely with the old one. It has not been considered by the Committee on Commerce; it comes here directly; it is neither an urgent deficiency nor is it a proposition to execute any provision of an appropriation already existing under the law. It is a proposition for a new work. The present structure is about to be washed away and the danger is so great that the light upon it has been discontinued, and now they want to erect a light on the shore, which they say will be of greater value than the old light-house. I have no objection at all to the work; I presume it is a work of great necessity; but under the rules it must go to the Committee on Commerce and be authorized and established before we can appropriate for it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

Northwest Seal Rock light-station, California: For continuing the construction of a light-house on Northwest Seal Rock, off Point St. George, California, $150,000.

Mr. CLARDY. Is not the amount proposed to be appropriated for this light-house in excess of the estimates?

Mr. BURNES. The gentleman is speaking of the Northwest Seal Rock light-house?

Mr. CLARDY. Yes.

Mr. BURNES. One hundred and fifty thousand dollars was the original estimate.

Mr. CLARDY. I will ask my colleague if the amount estimated was not $333,000, and if there has not been already appropriated $290,000; so that this $150,000 additional would make the total appropriation exceed the amount of the estimate?

Mr. BURNES. The facts are these: When this light-house, on the northwest coast of California, was established it was established on an estimate that the entire cost would be $333,000. Of that amount $290,000 has been appropriated, and nearly all of it expended. It is now estimated that the total cost will be $721,000, whereas the original estimate was $333,000.

Mr. CLARDY. When was this increased estimate for $721,000 made, and by whom?

Mr. BURNES. By the Department; the estimate comes from the Light-House Board.

Mr. CLARDY. Has any committee, except the Committee on Appropriations, ever acted upon this increased estimate?

Mr. BURNES. I really can not speak as to the practice; but the provision establishing this light, together with the first appropriation, was made in 1882.

Mr. CLARDY. By the Committee on Appropriations?

Mr. BURNES. I think perhaps by the Committee on Appropriations. Whether the Committee on Commerce reported the legislation establishing this light I do not know.

Mr. CLARDY. I ascertain the fact to be that the provision came from the Committee on Appropriations in 1882.

Mr. RANDALL. At that time the practice was for the Committee on Appropriations to originate and insert in their bills matters of this kind. Since that time the rules have been changed, and provisions for new work of this nature must be considered by the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. CLARDY. I have asked these questions in view of the philippic contained in the report, which I indorse.

Mr. BURNES. In justice to my distinguished colleague [Mr. CLARDY], the chairman of the Committee on Commerce, I will say I am satisfied that the first estimate for this matter went to the Committee on Appropriations. That estimate was relied upon, and the work was undertaken with the idea that it would cost only $333,000. Subsequent events have shown the original estimates to have been unreliable, and the total expenditure, as now estimated, will be $721,000.

Mr. CLARDY. Does not my colleague think that this provision would be obnoxious to a point of order?

Mr. BURNES. Oh, no, sir.

Mr. CLARDY. I mean the increased appropriation.

Mr. BURNES. There was no limit originally. There was simply an estimate for $333,000. The work was authorized, without any limitation as to cost.

Mr. CLARDY. I thought $333,000 was the amount specified originally as the limit of cost.

Mr. BURNES. No, sir; that was simply an estimate.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. As I understand, $290,000 has already been spent upon this work.

Mr. BURNES. Yes, sir.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. And the aggregate expense is estimated at $720,000, making the amount yet to be expended $430,000?

Mr. BURNES. About that.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. The expense yet to be incurred, as I understand, will aggregate $430,000, if the last estimate holds good. Now, would it not be wiser to abandon the work and let the $290,000 go than to spend $430,000 additional upon it?

Mr. BURNES. For an answer on that point, I will refer the gentleman from Kentucky to the gentleman from California [Mr. MORROW].

Mr. MORROW. Mr. Chairman, this light is probably one of the most important on the Pacific coast. The light-house is being built upon a rock about eight miles out in the ocean, where it lies directly in the track of all the commerce of the Pacific coast from California to Oregon, Washington Territory, British Columbia, and Alaska. The fact that the light-house is being constructed upon a rock, which had been placed in condition for the superstructure, has been one of the reasons why the original estimate has proved insufficient. This work is being constructed under the direction of one of the best officers in the service, who has now made a careful estimate, and I have no idea that any deficiency can arise hereafter.

When this light-house is completed we shall have there one of the most interesting structures of the kind in the world. It will be most valuable for the safety it will give to commerce; for to-day vessels proceeding from San Francisco to Oregon go out of their regular course in foggy or stormy weather some twenty or thirty miles in order to avoid this Northwest Seal Rock. It was for years a matter of discussion why the Government of the United States failed to place a light-house there, such a work being so signally necessary for the commerce of our country.

I have a very careful statement from the engineer in charge of this work, and from this statement it appears that a part of the present deficiency is due to the fact that from the insufficiency of previous appropriations the work has at times been suspended during the seasons in which it should properly have been done. In this report the engineer points out how during the last year some $30,000 or $40,000 in plant was destroyed because of the fact that the appropriation ran out, and it was necessary for the time to abandon the work on the rock.

I am glad that the Committee on Appropriations has adopted the most economical method to secure the completion of the structure by appropriating at once the necessary amount so that the work will not be again suspended in consequence of insufficient funds, and that the tools and other appliances may not be allowed to go to ruin, or be washed away by the sea. This appropriation, Mr. Chairman, is one in the interest of economy, and the Committee on Appropriations has acted wisely in reporting the appropriation as recommended by the Department.

I take the liberty of appending to my remarks the recent report of the engineer in reference to this work:

OFFICE OF LIGHT-HOUSE ENGINEER, TWELFTH DISTRICT,
San Francisco, Cal., November 17, 1887.

SIR: As I am soon to be relieved in charge of this office, I have the honor to submit the following report, bringing to date the history of the work for the new light and fog-signal on St. George's Reef, California.

An appropriation of $120,000 became available on March 4, 1887, and under date of March 7 a project for the season's work was submitted to the board and approved by its telegram of March 19.

Work on the rock itself had been virtually suspended, by failure of sufficient appropriation, since the autumn of 1883, and for the same reasons our operations were limited to the quarrying and cutting of stone with a small force during the good working months of 1884 and 1885, and had been totally suspended since November, 1886.

During this long interval an expensive plant in rope, tools, etc., had so deteriorated as to need almost complete renewal; spars for derricks and buoys had rotted; landslides had filled up our cuttings, destroyed our tracks, derrick landings, and other arrangements for shipping materials at the quarry; and the piles of the wharf at the depot had been so eaten by worms as to be useless.

We had prepared, with the exception of a small quantity of rubble, sufficient stone to complete the eighth course of masonry of the pier, which would involve the transportation to the rock of over 4,000 tons of material, and was, in my judgment, all that we could hope to accomplish during the working season.

The re-establishment of our facilities for preparing and handling material on Humboldt Bay, the accumulation of the extensive and costly plant necessary, and the relaying of the moorings involved the expenditure of much time, and needed to be hastened to the utmost, if we were to hope for the full use in actual construction of the short working season at the rock.

In my project, therefore, I asked the board's authority to employ hired labor and make purchases in open market during these preparations. Work at the rock by other means than hired labor has always been regarded as out of the question, in view of the numerous contingencies to which it is subjected; but with the project was submitted a draught of specifications under which it was proposed to advertise for bids for the transportation from our depot in Humboldt Bay to the work.

On receipt of the board's approval of the various recommendations in the project, orders were at once telegraphed to Humboldt Bay to begin work in accordance with full written instructions which had been sent beforehand, and on the 21st of March a force began clearing out the quarry, repairing wharf, preparations of spars for buoys and derricks, and overhaul of the long-disused plant and rigging.

The schooner Sparrow, of about 200 tons burden, was chartered in Humboldt Bay on the 29th of March, and the same day we began to fit her out as quarter-boat, with eating and sleeping accommodations for a force of fifty to eighty men.

A large miscellaneous assortment of tools, rope, blocks, chain, iron work, and a powerful steam-winch for use on the depot wharf were purchased and shipped by the steamer Santa Maria, which had been chartered to lay moorings and set derricks at the rock. She left San Francisco on this errand on the 5th of April for Humboldt Bay.

On the 11th of April bids in answer to advertisement published March 23 for transportation of material were publicly opened, and the results reported to the board by letter the following day. There were only two offers, one for the steamer Alliance and the second for the Santa Maria, which was higher for the whole service required by about $10,000. I had no doubt that the Alliance, which could only carry 200 tons at a trip, would be found unequal to the task, and believed that the work could be done by the Santa Maria, of more than double the size. The difference between the two offers being so large, however, I submitted the whole matter, with my views, to the board, and received instructions to make contracts with the owner of the Alliance, which were accordingly entered into May 12, 1887.

The party on the Santa Maria experienced almost continuous bad weather, and made but slow progress with the moorings up to May 1, when it became necessary to return to Humboldt Bay for various supplies. The quarter-boat Sparrow having in the mean time been fitted out, was taken in tow by the Santa Maria on her return to the rock and placed at the moorings there on the 11th, not to leave them again till the close of the season's work.

The moorings being all in position, on the 18th of May the Santa Maria was discharged, and the working party taking up their quarters on the Sparrow spent the rest of the month in setting up and rigging the four small derricks, building a landing stage outside the pier outline, setting up and connecting boiler and engine, and other general preparations for receiving and handling material.

The big derrick mast 20 by 20 inches, standing since June, 1884, was found badly cracked by a blow of the sea at a point some 40 feet above its level, and had to be fished with iron bands. The benches as left in the autumn of 1883 were practically uninjured, though a good deal of material had washed out of the vertical walls left standing around the cistern space, which had probably been somewhat shaken in blasting.

The contractor's vessel, the Alliance, was detained in San Francisco by a trouble, discovered at the last moment, with her boilers, until the 28th of May. She was loaded for her first trip to the rock on June 2; but on arriving there was found so badly fitted for her work that it was necessary to lend her gear and the services of our own riggers before the material could be gotten out at all.

The first stone in the work was laid the morning of the 7th of June, and by the evening of the 9th the Alliance had discharged her 200 tons of freight. On the 11th all the material she had brought was in place in the pier and the construction party out of work. This first voyage of the Alliance proved beyond question that my fears, expressed to the board before making the contract, that she would be found unequal to the task, were well founded, and that if we were to hope for success additional means of transportation must be at once secured. It showed further than this, that with sufficient transportation our arrangements at the rock would enable us to lay the eight courses planned for the season almost beyond a doubt.

Under date of June 15 I telegraphed to the board a full account of the state of affairs, and in reply received authority to charter the Santa Maria for $7,000 per month to supplement the services of the Alliance, but as the first-named vessel was then under another charter I could not secure her services before July 1. The month of June, after the first trip of the Alliance, was almost an incessant storm. Reaching the rock on her second voyage, the 15th June, a gale sprung up after she was moored, and on the night of the 16th, through the parting of some of the Sparrow's lines, the two vessels narrowly escaped destruction by collision. On the 17th the Alliance managed to slip and get clear, lay four days for shelter in Crescent City roadstead, and was finally discharged on the 22d. During the storm on the 19th, one of the dimension stones on the north face, nearly 30 feet above the sea, and weighing over 2 tons, was washed out of its bed, tipped over against the back of the bench, and broken. The men had been forced off the rock before they had time to put in the dowel.

On the 27th the Alliance reached the rock on her third voyage; but incessant northwest gales prevented her from discharging until the 8th of July, on which date the Santa Maria made her appearance with her first cargo.

From this time the work went on smoothly without special incident; though during all of July and part of August there was a good deal of time lost from the strong northwest winds, for the prevalence and severity of which the summer was remarkable. After July 4 four men were left on the rock in a cabin, which was set on posts above the cistern space, and strongly secured against the vertical cistern wall, with the roof about flush with the highest part of the rock. This was a great help, because steam could be gotten up and the working party landed by the big derrick on days when this would have been otherwise impossible.

During July we got but fifteen working days; and of the whole period from July 1 to September 26, when work was discontinued, there were fifty-seven good days, fourteen days when the men landed but were driven off, and seventeen days when no landing was attempted. The total amount of material landed on rock was 4,196 tons, and the number of cubic yards of masonry laid was 1,729.

On the 15th of September the last dimension stone for the season was laid, finishing the eighth course. The masons were then put on the rubble backing and the cistern face walls, which were finished to top of the eighth course on the 22d. The landing stage was then filled in with concrete around the piles to a depth of about 8 feet; the small derricks, engine, and other portable plant, were taken off the rock, and the boiler made secure in the cistern space.

It had been intended to fill the cistern space entirely with dry rubble, but through a misunderstanding the necessary material was not sent out from the depot, and this idea could only be partly carried out. It has been found, however, that the pier wall so far built breaks the sea considerably, so it is believed that very little solid water will fall into the cistern space, and though I should prefer to have had it filled, I do not think any harm will come from the present condition of things.

Everything possible having been done for the security of the work, on the evening of the 26th the Sparrow was cast loose from her moorings and taken in tow by the Santa Maria. Reaching Humboldt Bay the 27th, the Santa Maria was discharged, and a force set to work stripping and clearing up the Sparrow, which was turned over to her owner on the 30th.

At the beginning of the season the dimension stone for eighth course was in store at the yard, but the rubble needed was all at the quarry with the exception of some 5,000 cubic feet still to be cut. Most of this backing was prepared by the men sent up to form the rock party. While the moorings were being laid, and during the construction work at the rock, the parties left on shore were almost exclusively employed in handling material. Some additional backing was, however, gotten out, and one stone-cutter was kept at the yard preparing dimension stone to be used in case of accident to any of those shipped.

At the end of October the following quantities of material remain on hand:

	Cubic feet.
Cut dimension stone at yard	2,275
Uncut dimension stone at yard	1,100
Uncut dimension stone at quarry	230
Cut rubble at quarry	5,900
Rough rubble at quarry	4,000

The season's work, in spite of more than ordinarily bad weather, was completely successful.

That no serious accident happened, and no material of any kind was damaged or lost, and that not one of the large face stones, weighing from 2 to 6 tons, was even chipped in all its handling, speaks of itself for the care and skill displayed by the superintendent of construction and his subordinates.

For stone cutting it can be said that in this curving wall, including an area of about 6,000 square feet, with an allowance of but three-sixteenths of an inch made for joints in the patterns, it was not necessary to use a tool on a face stone at the rock during the entire season.

The expense of the work overran our estimate mainly in the setting of the moorings, which reaches the large figure of about $16,000 in consequence of the terrible weather of April and May, and the high price which we had to pay for the charter of a suitable steamer.

There are submitted herewith two tables, the first showing generally the expenditure on the work to date, aggregating $273,434.48; the second, in detail the expenditure subsequent to the passage of the last appropriation, aggregating $113,348.38.

If the masonry laid last summer resists uninjured the winter storms, the work has passed its experimental stage, for the system of construction can never be so severely tested again. The pier, even in its present condition, has been found to so break up the sea from the north and west that it will be possible next season to keep the working party altogether on the rock.

The existing landing stage, which is the only available space outside the pier outline, is at the level of the cistern floor (25 feet below top of rock). This answered for last summer, but now that the work is higher it will be economical to raise the landing stage 20 feet so as to reduce the lifts with hand-power derricks after the material has been landed by steam. It is proposed to fit this space between the two levels of the landing stage as men's quarters, and believed that this arrangement can be made amply secure for the working season.

A suitable quarter-boat costs nearly $1,000 to fit out, and her expenses for charter and crew will be about $1,500 a month, beside which the outfit in rope to enable her to lie at the moorings will annually amount to nearly $3,000. Besides this direct saving in having the men on shore there is the time saved in getting the men on and off with the derrick, and days gained when work can be done though landing would have been impossible.

It will be an advantage also to be entirely clear of the contractors for transportation, if, as I suppose, this work is to be done by contract. During last season, with two vessels together at the moorings, it was constantly necessary for self-preservation for our men to give the contractor help, handling lines, making fast, etc., and in practice we had always to give their vessels our hawsers to the rock, which damaged them more than our own use.

At the close of this year's work we had only a balance of about $16,565.

Next session of Congress, being a long one, we can not expect new money before July 1. Notwithstanding this, I think that if money is available a good season's work can be done next year. Our moorings next season will only need slight repairs; and these can be made, the proposed workmen's quarters built, derricks and engines set up—in all probability during the first three weeks of July. In the same time contracts or other arrangements can be made, and vessels in readiness in Humboldt Bay to begin the transportation, so that we can secure the eight or nine best weeks of the season, during which last year the bulk of our work was really done. Of the 4,196 tons of material landed last summer 3,386 tons were landed after July 20.

With the advantages of height of pier already built, and men living on the rock, I have little doubt that we could handle 5,000 tons next season, even with the time thus shortened, which finishes pier to boiler-room floor; and I am also confident that with the little start we gain with funds now available, we could supply the necessary material by pushing things at the quarry and yard. The doubtful element is in the transportation, which will have to be managed better than last year to carry out this programme.

Whether this service is to be performed by contract or by hired labor, the service of two vessels, each with a capacity of some 400 tons dead-weight cargo, will be absolutely necessary.

Last spring the demand for vessels of every kind was something unprecedented and rates for charter and freight higher than known before. This was the reason why I received only two bids for the transportation, for a number of responsible persons anxious to bid were prevented from doing so because they could not get vessels. To meet this demand a large fleet of steam schooners has been launched this summer, all vessels quite suitable for our work, and while it is impossible to predict whether or not the present extraordinary demand for lumber in Southern California will continue undiminished, I am inclined to the opinion that next year will be a more favorable one than last for a good contract for transportation, or the charter of the necessary vessels to do the work ourselves.

No detailed estimate has been made, in my knowledge, for the total cost of this light, and in the lack of experience which is now gained, no such detailed estimate with good claims for accuracy would have been possible.

I have had this estimate of the cost now required for completion prepared with much care, and the results are submitted in table No. 2, herewith. The cost of all materials as given in the first column is computed on the light-house wharf in Humboldt Bay, and the transportation and labor at the rock then added in the last. The pier itself now remaining to be built is figured on course by course, and then the tower is separated into two parts, the first from top of pier to top of ground floor, the second from thence to top of tower. The stone-work is kept by itself in the upper part of the table, and then follow the miscellaneous items of iron-work, wood-work, boiler, and machinery, lens and lantern. Separate small tables show the details of cost of cut stone, rubble, etc. The calculations are based on the adopted form of pier outline, carried to the top with rubble backing; and the general plan of tower shown on the board's drawings, with slight modifications in the latter to reduce to practicable dimensions stones shown of excessive sizes.

The labor of masons and stone-cutters is arrived at by adding to what the cost would be on shore the percentage shown to be necessary by the working days lost last season.

I have included in the estimate one important modification in the general plan which will increase the cost by some $10,000, but which will, I think, be found necessary.

It was proposed to cover the opening above the boiler-room in the top floor of the pier by an iron skylight with heavy glass in it. This is at an elevation of only 70 feet above the sea, and the roof of the fog-signal at Tillamook, 110 feet above the sea, has already been smashed in during a storm. The skylight will certainly get heavy blows, and will be, I think, a very bad arrangement for both light and ventilation. I strongly recommend a stone house like the deck-house of a steamer, forming an addition to the base of the tower and extended around this opening over the boiler-room.

With such a house the shutters or windows can be left open on one side or the other, when without it the covering over engine-room would have to be battened down like a ship's hatch. The item is by itself in the estimate.

The transportation from Humboldt Bay to rock is put at $10 per ton, and as the total amount remaining to be done is over 14,000 tons, the figure adopted for this service has a very important bearing. To those unfamiliar with the conditions of this case, $10 a ton for 60 miles of water carriage seems exorbitant, but we have a bad bar-harbor at one end of our line, a rock in the open sea at another, and only about nine weeks in the year when we can really count on smooth weather.

The contractor's vessel last season could land only 400 tons during all of June, and was on one trip obliged to wait eleven days before getting to the moorings. It must be remembered also that in spite of these drawbacks we must not only have the material landed, but it must be landed rapidly and in sufficient quantity to keep the rock gang busy. One large vessel will not do since we have only space to store between 200 and 300 tons of material at the rock; and, furthermore, because the vessels used last year were about as large as can with safety be handled at moorings in the open sea. Two vessels therefore must be used and two vessels lie idle during the many days of bad weather.

Before work began last summer I made a detailed calculation of what this work would cost with ordinary chances of weather if we did it ourselves, chartering two steamers, and it came out something over $9 the ton. Two bids were received—one of $10 from a man who had had a contract to land material on Tillamook under more favorable conditions as regarded a harbor, at $12 per ton, and the second from persons quite inexperienced in the matter, at varying prices for the different classes of material, which made their bid, from the amount actually paid them, $7.26 per ton. Their vessel proved entirely unequal to the work, and I was obliged to charter another to assist her; but I have good reasons to believe that, while only obliged to carry what he conveniently could, the contractor made no money, or lost some in the business. At all events he was glad to give up one load which he might have taken in the latter part of the season.

By the chartered vessel Santa Maria our transportation cost us $9.09 per ton in the best part of the season, with a master probably as capable a man for the business as could be found on the coast.

If our working time were to be limited to nine weeks before October 1, I think a contractor could make money at $9, or perhaps $8 per ton; but if he is to work from June 1, I don't believe that any man of good judgment and the necessary experience would offer to keep two vessels going and do it for less than $10; and I believe, further, that if we charter vessels and work without the stimulus of a contract during the same season it would not cost us much if any less.

It is to be remembered that there is a large element of risk of a total loss of vessel and cargo, and a still larger one of costly accidents, which all have to be figured on by a contractor, who can not for such services insure his vessels to their full value.

The transportation being by itself in the estimate, such weight as is desired can be given to these considerations, and the resulting modifications of my total figure easily arrived at. Certain figures of the estimate can only be reached by assuming a certain time for the completion of the work. Rope, a very costly item, can hardly be used more than one season; ship-chandlery and iron-work rapidly deteriorate with the rough usage received; and the annual maintenance of the moorings is very expensive. The wharf in Humboldt Bay, already once rebuilt, will only last from three to four years; the time assumed in my estimate is three seasons, including the short one of next year; and in this I think the station could be doubtless completed if sufficient funds are granted. One of these items, based on three years' construction, namely, the maintenance of moorings, over $30,000, will doubtless seem excessive, but I do not think it can be reduced.

The chains in use will, with some repairs, do next season, but after that I think they will have to be discarded and new ones bought. The sum named includes also the necessary service of a steamer, and this year alone the work on the moorings cost, with steamer, about $16,000.

The grand total of the estimate is in round figures $448,000, which, with the expenditure to date of, say, $273,000, gives us for the station complete $721,000. This figure may be thought surprising, but the general plan adopted before work began has not been departed from hitherto, and no changes for the future are recommended beyond the extension of the tower base over the boiler-room, before mentioned.

The work, in spite of its dangerous character, has so far been carried on without costly accident of any kind, and the fortunate discovery of granite on Mad River has enabled us to have our cut dimension stone ready for shipment in Humboldt Bay at a cost per cubic foot hardly greater than the rough granite from the Sierra, which it was originally intended to use, would have cost us on the wharf in San Francisco. In fact, it may be said that with a good general knowledge of the governing conditions, a cautious estimate for this work at the outset would have given even larger figures than my own as now submitted with the advantages gained in two seasons of actual work.

I have endeavored throughout the calculations to give outside figures, and it is possible that with sufficient appropriation and favorable contracts for transportation they may be reduced a little; but it is, on the other hand, certain that if sufficient annual appropriations are not granted the cost will be materially increased.

The history of this construction presents in a striking way the evil results of the existing method of appropriation for public work. The first appropriation was so small that it was necessary to wait a year for another before beginning. The sum of the first two appropriations was still scanty, and in consequence there was an unavoidable loss of two good months of the short working season. The third appropriation was so small that it compelled the giving up of vessels under charter and fitted for our service at much expense, the disbanding of a large skilled force, and the abandonment to destruction and depreciation of a costly plant.

For one year more the work dragged on with scanty funds, preparing material at an exaggerated cost for superintendence; another year was totally suspended, and then an appropriation sufficient to justify work finds us unprepared in every way, and forces the costly haste of last year's preparations for the full use of the working season.

The work is now again nearly out of money; and as the next is a long session of Congress, valuable time must again be lost next summer. In what has so far been spent I can show the loss of over $30,000 in items which can be closely figured upon, which has been absolutely thrown away in preparations afterwards made useless by failure of appropriation, and in repairing damages of all kinds due simply to delay. Besides this, there is the indirect damage, uncertain in amount, due to exaggerated cost of superintendence and other disadvantages inseparable from the endeavor to carry on extensive work with scanty and intermittent means.

The light was decided upon and sanctioned by act of Congress in 1881. Had sufficient appropriation been granted from the outset the light and signal could have been put in operation last autumn at a less cost by from $30,000 to $40,000 than is now possible even should Congress give all the remaining money needed in two successive appropriations.

I think I have succeeded in making plain the reasons for my recommendations that Congress be asked at the coming session for an appropriation of $200,000 for continuing construction of the light on St. George's Reef.

Respectfully submitted.

A. H. PAYSON,
Captain of Engineers, Engineer Twelfth Light House District.

CHAIRMAN OF LIGHT-HOUSE BOARD,
Washington, D. C.

The CHAIRMAN. There is no amendment pending. The Clerk will continue the reading of the bill.

Mr. BURNES. I move the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 7 strike out all after the word "dollars," in lines 1, 2, and 3, and insert as new paragraphs the following:

"For erecting two fire-escapes upon the buildings of the Reform School, of design and character to be approved by the building inspector of the District, $100.

"That one-half of the foregoing amounts to meet deficiencies in the appropriations on account of the District of Columbia shall be paid from the revenues of the District of Columbia, and one-half from any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Increase of water supply, Washington, D. C.: To enable the Secretary of War to complete the work of increasing the water supply of the city of Washington, under the act entitled "An act to increase the water supply of the city of Washington, and for other purposes," approved July 15, 1882, namely: For completion of lining of the tunnel, $297,750; for completing shafts, west connection, and for superintendence and engineering, $37,250; and for general contingencies of the work, $20,000—in all $355,000, said sum to be subject to all the provisions and restrictions of the said act of July 15, 1882, and of the act approved July 5, 1884, making appropriations for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia, as to its apportionment and settlement between the United States and the District of Columbia, and the refunding thereof. The work above provided for to be done under the contract heretofore made or by a reletting, as in the discretion of the Secretary of War shall be most promotive of the interest of the Government: Provided, That no contract shall be made at prices greater than the prices allowed under contract under which work has been heretofore done on said tunnel.

Mr. RANDALL. Members who have read the report of the committee in this connection will remember there were some strictures made on some officers of the Army heretofore connected with this work. These strictures have been taken by the officers involved as unjust. The attention of the committee was called to that part of the report, and by a supplementary report the cause of irritation was intended to be removed entirely. Whether it has been or not it is not necessary for me to say, but it is but just I should cause to be read as part of my remarks in this connection two letters from one of these officers, so they may, in justification of his conduct in that connection, be placed upon the public record.

I wish to say, in addition, that in all my intercourse as an official in this House with that gentleman he has appeared to me to be an intelligent man and an able engineer, and strictly upright in all his dealings.

The Clerk read as follows:

UNITED STATES ENGINEER OFFICE,
Pensacola, Fla., February 10, 1888.

DEAR SIR: I have this day received a copy of report submitted to accompany bill H. R. 6437—urgent deficiency bill—February 1, 1888, which contains severe strictures upon myself. This censure rests upon a statement of fact which shows that your committee have been grossly deceived. As the victim of this deceit, I earnestly request that I may be given an opportunity to appear before your committee and state the facts, with a view to such action as your committee may deem proper in the premises.

I propose to show that whereas the responsibility for the deficiency in the estimates for the extension of the Washington Aqueduct is, under this statement of fact, attributed to myself:

First. The work has been done under a plan of construction totally different from that presented to Congress as the basis of my estimates of 1879, and upon which the appropriation for this work was predicated.

Second. The appropriation was made July 15, 1882. The charge of the work was given to Maj. G. J. Lydecker August 11, 1882. He submitted his own project or plan for the work October 5, 1882, renewed his recommendation of the same July 14, 1883, and advertised for proposals for construction in accordance with his project August 29, 1883. I was detailed as Major Lydecker's assistant; was never connected with this work in any other capacity, and was removed from this position by Major Lydecker, being replaced by Lieutenant Symons January 4, 1884, before the tunnel was commenced. Thereafter I had no official connection with this work, but protested against the method of its execution.

Third. My advice has been utterly disregarded in carrying on the work, and the result is only the abortion of what I advised while acting as Major Lydecker's assistant.

It is a perfectly fair rule that the officer in charge of a work is entitled to all the credit for the success of the plan he adopts, because he alone is responsible for its failure. It is, therefore, unjust and undignified to plead the advice of a subordinate in the event of failure; nevertheless, I would myself have volunteered this plea in behalf of the responsible officer in charge had my advice been acted upon. As it was disregarded and myself excluded from the direction of the work, I have no responsibility whatever for the result.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. L. HOXIE,
Captain of Engineers, United States Army.

Hon. SAMUEL J. RANDALL,
Chairman Committee on Appropriations,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

UNITED STATES ENGINEER OFFICE,
Pensacola, Fla., February 11, 1888.

DEAR SIR: I inclose herewith a memorandum of facts designed to accompany my letter to yourself of the 10th instant, but not completed in time. Will you kindly consider it as a part of that letter, to be considered in connection therewith?

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. L. HOXIE,
Captain of Engineers, U. S. A.

Hon. SAMUEL J. RANDALL,
Chairman Committee on Appropriations,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

[Memorandum to accompany letter of February 10, 1883.]

The estimates submitted in 1879 contemplated the extension of the aqueduct by a brick conduit, with some slight tunnel work, perhaps, as an incident. Reference to the report of 1879 will show that the crossing of Rock Creek by "a tunnel" was simply an alternative proposition, the language of that report being as follows:

"Rock Creek may be crossed either by a gang of large cast-iron mains laid as siphons through the bed of the creek, or by a tunnel through the compact rock which underlies this stream. If borings in this rock are satisfactory, the latter method is, I (Captain Hoxie) believe, the best and cheapest."

The modification of the estimates of 1879, on which the appropriation was made in 1882, consisted solely in their increase to the extent of 10 per cent., in order, as stated by the then engineer commissioner, to make allowance for the rise that had taken place in the value of labor and material. It had absolutely nothing to do with changing from the plan of work submitted in 1879.

I explained to Major Lydecker in May, 1882, before this work was assigned to him, at his request, the plan which I then thought best, and which had been approved by Major Twining. This was a continuous rock-tunnel forced conduit, under heavy internal pressure, placed wholly in the gneiss-rock formation which underlies the District of Columbia, and below the general limit of surface disintegration. The success of the plan depended wholly upon the latter requirement.

Soon after he assumed charge of the work I was detailed as his assistant, and in accordance with his specific instructions conducted an examination to ascertain, by sinking one shaft, and from surface indications, the depth from the surface of the ground to the underlying bed-rock and the probable character of the rock. I reported the facts to him July 7, 1883, having ascertained them at the risk of my life.

I made the first draught of the specifications for the tunnel, requiring all shafts to be sunk until 30 feet of sound rock could be had above the roof of the tunnel, assuming a theoretical depth of shaft as a basis of award of contract, but requiring that the tunnel should be driven at any other depth without increased cost of the tunnel to the United States. These specifications were recast by Major Lydecker, retaining this vital feature.

January 4, 1884, I received, without warning, the following order:

"OFFICE OF THE WASHINGTON AQUEDUCT,
"Washington, D. C., January 3, 1884.

"Order: First Lieut. Thomas W. Symons, Corps of Engineers, having by direction of the Secretary of War, reported to the undersigned for duty upon the Washington aqueduct and the extension thereof, is hereby assigned as superintending engineer on the work, and as such will assume control of all active operations relating thereto. He will be obeyed and respected accordingly, and to that end all employés will report to and receive their instructions from him direct.

"G. J. LYDECKER,
"Major of Engineers, United States Army."

Lieutenant Symons took immediate possession of my desk at the aqueduct office, and I had no further official connection with the work.

Early in March, 1884, I discovered, accidentally, that the tunnel had been started; examined the rock thrown out, found it unsound, and immediately warned Major Lydecker that he must go deeper with the tunnel. My advice was disregarded.

Again on March 27, 1886, it was brought to my notice, with apparent reflection upon myself, that the result of driving the tunnel above the general limit of surface disintegration had been disastrous; that methods of construction had been resorted to which I deemed fatal to the success of the work; and that the cost of excavating and lining had been increased beyond that prescribed by the specifications. I succeeded in having these questions referred to the highest board of engineers, and this board put a stop to the faulty method of construction, but substituted a thoroughly safe one at greater cost. This saved the work, but did not reduce the cost.

I had no other connection with this work.

The preliminary examination had developed only the depth from surface of ground to bed-rock, with surface indications and the evidence in existing excavations as to its character. The probing of the rock along the whole line by the five shafts and three air shafts at nearly equidistant points on the line of 4 miles was indispensable as a condition-precedent to deciding upon the depth at which the tunnel should be driven. The sinking of these eight shafts should have been supplemented, if necessary, by deep boring at these points with the diamond drill, a cheap and common method of exploring rock. If then thought necessary, intermediate points of the line should have been similarly explored. No expense should have been spared at this stage of the work to determine that feature upon which the success of the plan was wholly dependent—the location of the tunnel below the general limit of surface disintegration.

Instead of this, the tunnel was started independently, and at various dates, from the foot of each shaft, whenever the shaft reached what appeared to be sound rock, or a depth in decomposed rock which was thought sufficient for the purpose. The evidence of the air shafts was not waited for. That a serious error of judgment was made as to the soundness of the rock appears in the announcement, August 12, 1885, of a deficiency of $395,000 on the tunnel after Major Lydecker had reported, August 11, 1884, while the tunnel was progressing from every shaft, as follows:

"Our expectations as to the feasibility of the tunnel and the probability of carrying it in good rock have been more than realized.

* * * * * * *

"From present indications it may be fairly assumed that, excepting the deficiency before referred to in relation to the land for reservoir, the amounts already appropriated will serve to complete the several parts of the work of increasing the water supply; at least there is no reason at the present for asking any additional appropriation."

With the announcement of a deficiency, three years after his assignment to the charge of the work, comes the first allusion by Major Lydecker to my connection with the original estimates. In his annual reports of 1883 and 1884 he speaks of the work only as "my project." In connection with the former he declined my offer to present the usual report of an assistant, so that I had not the customary opportunity for putting my opinions on record while connected with the work.

I cite the foregoing facts, not in vindication of the soundness of my advice to Major Lydecker as his assistant—that is not here an issue—but to show how wide was the departure from that advice in the work actually done.

R. L. HOXIE,
Captain of Engineers, U. S. A.

Mr. BURNES. As a further evidence that the committee did not desire to do any injustice or to criticise these gentlemen, I ask to have printed as part of the proceedings the supplementary report of the committee.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The report (by Mr. BURNES) is as follows:

The Committee on Appropriations submit the following as part 2 of the Report No. 208 presented to the House on the 1st instant, accompanying the bill (H. R. 6437) to provide for certain of the most urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the Government for the fiscal year 1888, and for other purposes.

Since the bill named was reported the committee have received, by the reference of the House, and have considered House Executive Documents Nos. 95, 105, 125, 131, 134, 135, and 136, and, based upon the said executive communications and House Executive Document No. 30, the committee recommend the following amendments to the bill, namely:

On page 7 strike out all after the word "dollars," in lines 1, 2, and 3, and insert as new paragraphs the following:

"For erecting two fire-escapes upon the buildings of the Reform School, of design and character to be approved by the building inspector of the District, $100.

"That one-half of the foregoing amounts to meet deficiencies in the appropriations on account of the District of Columbia shall be paid from the revenues of the District of Columbia, and one-half from any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated."

On page 8, after line 13, insert the following:

"For needed repairs and improvements on the old Museum building and annex, on Tenth street, between E and F, now occupied by the record and pension division, Surgeon-General's Office, as follows:

"For new steam heating apparatus, including necessary pipes and radiators, $2,500.

"For new plumbing throughout, $2,000.

"For wood-work, including the repair of floors, windows, doors, and water-closets, $500.

"For calcimining walls, ceilings, hallways, and repairing plastering, $395.

"For necessary painting of wood and iron work, including cases, shelving, and necessary glazing, $500; in all, $5,895."

On page 10, after line 2, insert the following:

"For completing the construction and for maintenance of a military telegraph line from San Francisco, Cal., to a point at or near Point Reyes, California, via Point San José, California, $2,474.75."

On page 14, after line 11, insert the following:

"This amount for pay of special agents and necessary expenses to carry out the provisions of section 3 of the act approved February 8, 1887, entitled 'An act to provide for the allotment of lands in severalty to Indians on the various reservations, and to extend the protection of the laws of the United States and Territories over the Indians, and for other purposes,' $10,000."

On page 15, after line 13, insert the following:

"For compensation of clerks in post-offices, $100,000.

"For rent, fuel, and light, $25,000."

On page 16, after line 1, insert the following:

"Support of convicts: For the support, maintenance, and transportation to and from the penitentiary of convicts from the District of Columbia, to be expended under the direction of the Attorney-General, $15,000."

On page 18, after line 4, insert the following:

"Salary of circuit judge: For salary of the additional circuit judge in the second judicial circuit, authorized by the act approved March 3, 1887, $6,000."

On page 23, after line 11, insert the following:

"Frederick Frerichs, $10,130.32, with interest at 5 per cent. from March 10, 1886.

"George E. Hendee, $8,178.01, with interest at 5 per cent. from March 21, 1887."

And on page 24, in lines 14 and 15, in lieu of the sum proposed, insert "$263,595.52."

The committee have also considered House Executive Document No. 121, submitting an estimate of $8,000 for an elevator in the public building at Columbus, Ohio, and make the same recommendation in reference thereto that they have made with reference to the estimates for public buildings submitted in House Executive Document No. 30, namely, that unanimous consent be asked in Committee of the Whole House to consider as an amendment to the bill the item in question.

In this supplementary report the committee deem it proper to refer to so much of the report already made, accompanying said bill H. R. 6437, as refers to the "increased water supply, Washington City," and to add that at the first session of the Forty-ninth Congress the subcommittee having in charge the District appropriation bill made a thorough investigation of the facts bearing upon the plan and progress of the work of completion of the tunnel for the water supply of Washington, embodying their views in report No. 3109 of that session. The following extract is taken therefrom:

"WATER SUPPLY, WASHINGTON, D. C.

"The amounts recommended under above head are in accordance with the estimates of Executive Document No. 39, present session. The $160,000 asked for the completion of the reservoir is needed, because it has been found necessary to replace much of the bottom of the same with hard clay at places where quicksand or other unsafe conditions were unexpectedly found, and to haul from other sections of the tunnel the stone needed for lining, that excavated nearest the reservoir being soft and crumbling.

"The sum needed to complete the tunnel is explained in the same document, and the reasons for its appropriation further set forth in the voluminous testimony which accompanies this report. The original estimates contemplated, as a rule, a surface conduit, to connect the existing reservoir with the new ones, 4 miles distant. The plan finally adopted was for a siphon tunnel to be sunk under Rock Creek and driven (as was expected) through continuous solid rock. In the construction of the work, however, the rock has not been found continuously solid or homogeneous, and nearly one-half of the tunnel passes or will pass through rock which softens and crumbles on exposure to air and water. This has compelled heavy outlay for lining these portions, and the method pursued has been to insert in the sections of the tunnel which require treatment a brick lining with dry stone packing.

"Capt. R. L. Hoxie, United States Engineers, having submitted to the committee some written strictures on this method of lining, and maintained that a concrete lining would be safer and cheaper, he was given a full hearing before a subcommittee, and the engineers in charge, Maj. G. J. Lydecker and Capt. T. W. Symons, were also examined in defense of their plans. General M. C. Meigs, Col. Thomas L. Casey, Lieut. Col. W. P. Craighill, and Maj. William Ludlow, United States Engineers, were also consulted upon the questions raised.

"The subcommittee investigating the matter, though not convinced that a mistake had been made in the plans adopted for lining the tunnel, but recognizing the difficulty, the novelty, and the importance of these questions, and the expediency of submitting them to competent experts, have, in recommending the amount called for by the estimates, provided that the Secretary of War shall forthwith take the advice of the highest engineer board of the Army upon the plans and methods heretofore pursued. One-half of the above sums are chargeable to the District of Columbia."

In neither the report from which the above was taken nor that to which this is supplementary was it intended to point out or determine either the merits or demerits of the plan or plans of the work as adopted, nor was it the purpose or intention of either committee to cast blame upon or award praise to any particular person or persons for the part taken by him or them in either the inception or prosecution of the work. Beyond the errors, whether at the inception or subsequently, which experience has demonstrated, and the inequality of estimates, which appropriations, made and now to be made, have established, the subject need not in this paper be pursued.

The names of Capt. R. L. Hoxie, Maj. William Twining, Capt. T. W. Symons, and Maj. G. J. Lydecker, all of the Corps of Engineers of the United States Army, were mentioned in the reports, and each had more or less to do, at one time or another, with the work under consideration, and yet a more complete investigation than has been given and fuller knowledge of the subject might show circumstances or conditions, having relation to imperfections of the science of their profession or to geological or other mysteries, which neither industry nor skill can ascertain and determine in advance that would exonerate either one or all of them from censure. The Executive Department in authority or a special committee of Congress may appropriately make such investigation and determine wherein the faults properly lie.

This committee has sought only to make, and now again makes, an earnest protest against the great and growing evil of careless, inaccurate, or unreliable estimates of the cost of public works, upon which Congress is compelled to rely in the authorization of and the appropriations for such works. This evil has grown into an almost universal custom, and in nearly all cases Congress finds, when it is too late, that vast expenditures in excess of estimates are required. This excess is often double the estimates, and not infrequently is followed by the added burden of a suit and judgment in the Court of Claims on a careless contract. The alarming discrepancies between the estimated and actual cost of the works mentioned in the original report afford Congress an excellent opportunity to emphasize its abhorrence and make manifest the necessity of reform.

The Clerk read as follows:

War Department:

State, War, and Navy building: For the following additional force under the superintendent of the State, War, and Navy Department building from February 1 to June 30, 1888, namely:

For one assistant engineer, at the rate of $1,000 per annum, and twenty-eight charwomen, at the rate of $240 each per annum; in all, $3,203.60.

Mr. BURNES. I move the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 8, after line 13, insert the following:

"For needed repairs and improvements on the old Museum building and annex, on Tenth street, between E and F, now occupied by the record and pension division, Surgeon-General's Office, as follows:

"For new steam-heating apparatus, including necessary pipes and radiators, $2,500.

"For new plumbing throughout, $2,000.

"For wood-work, including the repair of floors, windows, doors, and water-closets, $500.

"For calcimining walls, ceilings, hallways, and repairing plastering, $395.

"For necessary painting of wood and iron work, including cases, shelving, and necessary glazing, $500; in all $5,895."

Mr. McKINNEY. I move to insert after the words "per annum" in the twelfth line, page 8, "and five laborers, at the rate of $660 per annum."

Mr. Chairman, it is with some degree of hesitancy, of course, that I attempt to amend the report of our able Committee on Appropriations, but it is well known that the force of the War Department is being put into that portion of the building heretofore occupied by the Navy Department; proper provision should be made for it. It is also well known this is a building occupying the same territory occupied by the Treasury Department, with the addition of being two stories higher. At the present time in that building occupied by the Navy Department there are four acres of corridors, rooms, lawns, skylights, etc., to be attended to. The laborers of that Department only number twelve. When the War Department occupies the balance of the building it will occupy two acres of corridors, lawns, etc., and they will have to be taken care of by the laborers of that Department.

Now, the chief engineer has asked the Appropriations Committee to add nine more laborers to his force, to take care of this more than 50 per cent. of additional work which will be necessarily carried on there. The Appropriations Committee has seen fit not to do so, but to require the seventeen laborers already employed to do over 50 per cent. more work.

I am credibly informed by the gentleman in charge of the laborers there that they are frequently obliged now to work from one to two hours after the time required in the Department, and are often called upon to work during the Sabbath day, for which they get no extra pay, in order to keep up with the requirements there. The chief engineer says it will be utterly impossible unless there is this increase in the laboring force, with the large increase of work required there, to carry it on at all. He has asked for an increase of nine, but I propose to compromise the difference between him and the Committee on Appropriations, and add five laborers, so that they will not be overworked, and yet be able to discharge the work required without exceeding the hours of labor required or authorized by the law.

I do not believe, in the present condition of the country, that the House of Representatives can afford to insist upon laborers working on Department work a longer time than is required by the law itself, and doing work beyond their strength, as I am informed by the chief engineer they will have to do if the force is not increased.

I hope, therefore, that the committee will now allow this amendment to be inserted; and if hereafter it shall be found that the business can be conducted without this increase, or that the force is larger than necessary, it can be remedied when the regular appropriation bills are presented.

Mr. BURNES. Mr. Chairman, I differ with my good friend from New Hampshire with very great regret; and will content myself now with simply calling the attention of the committee to the present force in charge of the building, which force we think is amply sufficient to take care of the corridors and sidewalks. Now, when I read this list you will bear in mind that this force of men and women have nothing to do with the rooms. They do not enter them at all. There is another force, an inside force, having charge of that work. The persons referred to here are for outside work alone—for the pavement and in the corridors. There are employed there now: One clerk, $1,200; six elevator-tenders, at $720 each; one chief engineer, $1,200; six assistant engineers, at $1,000 each; twelve firemen, at $720 each; one captain of the watch, $1,200; two lieutenants of the watch, at $840 each; forty-eight watchmen, at $720 each; one carpenter, $1,000; one machinist, $900; two skilled laborers, at $720 each; seventeen laborers, at $660 each; and fifty-four charwomen, at $240 each; making a force of one hundred and fifty-eight persons in the employ of this service.

If that force is not sufficient to take care of the corridors and pavements of that building and keep them clean then I admit the Appropriations Committee is at fault.

Mr. McKINNEY. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. BURNES. Yes, sir.

Mr. McKINNEY. Will the gentleman allow me to make the statement that this force to which I refer not only takes care of the pavements and corridors to which he refers, but also of the water-closets, the skylights, and the general cleaning up around the building? This small force is required to take care of all the space there, covering more than 6 acres in extent, and only seventeen persons to do it.

The gentleman from Missouri gives the force employed all around the building. I speak of these laborers alone. They have much work to do which is not included in what the gentleman has suggested. Every pound of freight that is brought into that building or taken away from every part of the War and Navy Department is to be carried out or carried inside by these seventeen men. It is not only the keeping of the corridors and the pavements clean, but they have the skylights to clean, the water-closets to attend to, and they must carry out heavy freight that comes into the building and goes out, every particle of it.

If seventeen men are able to take care of this mass of work they are only able to do it as I have shown you by working beyond their strength, working hours after the Department closes, and working on Sundays. I do not want to add one or two hours a day of extra labor longer than the law requires other employés and laborers to work; and if the Appropriations Committee think it right, I am willing that they shall take the responsibility for it; but I will not fail in every case of this kind, whenever the opportunity arises, to lift my voice against it, believing that the Congress of the United States and the Representatives of the people should set an example to the people of this country not to employ their laborers for longer hours than the law fixes for Government laborers, or put work upon them beyond their strength, or that we would not consider right and proper in any private business.

Mr. RANDALL. The Committee on Appropriations made a careful inquiry in relation to the matter contemplated by this amendment. I am aware of the pressure made in this connection, for I have had experience in that direction in all of these cases where an increase is asked in the employés of these Departments. Now, the truth is that as a general rule all of these Departments are crowded with employés, and if they do the work intended by the law the force in this particular is adequate. I am in great hopes that an examination this year of the numerical force of the Treasury Department, and in other Departments of the Government, will enable the Committee on Appropriations to recommend a considerable reduction in their numbers.

The fact is that these public buildings, some of them, have men enough around about them to take care of a city of 200,000 inhabitants, and they ought to be weeded out, the deadheads removed, and the active working, laboring men perhaps increased in number. But until that is done I advise the House they had better adhere to the recommendation of the Committee on Appropriations, which has made diligent inquiry into this particular case.

The question being taken on Mr. MCKINNEY'S amendment, it was not agreed to.

The Clerk read the following paragraph:

Signal Service of the Army: For expenses of the Signal Service of the Army, as follows: Purchase, equipment, and repair of field electric telegraphs; signal equipments and stores; binocular glasses, telescopes, heliostats, and other necessary instruments, including absolutely necessary meteorological instruments for use on target ranges; telephone apparatus and maintenance of same, $5,000.

Mr. BURNES. I am instructed by the committee to offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 8, after line 24, insert the following:

"That the sum of $50,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, of the unexpended balance of $400,000 appropriated by the act of March 3, 1883, for armament of fortifications be, and the same is hereby, reappropriated and made available for the completion of and payment for the guns authorized by said act and now being manufactured by the South Boston Iron Works Company, under the contract dated September 24, 1883, and June 30, 1884, and the extension of the said contract is hereby authorized accordingly."

Mr. RANDALL. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. COLLINS] has taken much interest in this matter and intended to advocate the amendment. I do not see him in his seat, and I will only in his place state what he probably would have stated if he had been present—that is, that this provision making this appropriation was incorporated by the House in two former fortification bills and that the committee all concurred in the propriety of its adoption.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read the following paragraph:

For furnishing, delivering, and laying 7 nautical miles of submarine cable to connect Martha's Vineyard, Mass., with the mainland, and for building necessary land connections on Nantucket and connecting islands to the mainland, $9,944.

Mr. BURNES. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 18, after line 2, insert:

"For completing the construction and for the maintenance of a military telegraph line from San Francisco, Cal., to a point at or near Point Reyes via Point San José, California, $2,474.75."

The amendment was adopted.

The Clerk continued to read, and concluded the portion of the bill relating to the War Department.

Mr. BURNES. I move that the committee rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker pro tempore having resumed the chair, Mr. BLOUNT reported that the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 6437) to provide for certain of the most urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888, and for other purposes, had come to no resolution thereon.

GEORGE F. CHILTON.

Mr. WALKER. I ask unanimous consent to take from the Private Calendar the bill (H. R. 4557) for the relief of George F. Chilton.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to George F. Chilton, of Eminence, Mo., the sum of $187.50, for services as mail contractor on mail-route numbered 28620, from Van Buren, Mo., to Eminence, Mo., between May 2, 1886, and November 14, 1886, in addition to the amount already paid him for such service.

Mr. MCMILLIN. I should like to know something of the grounds on which this relief is sought.

Mr. WALKER. The bill is unanimously reported by the Committee on Claims and has the recommendation of the Post-Office Department. It proposes to give this party for his services as mail contractor the pay which has been too long withheld from him.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. WALKER moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. DINGLEY. I call up the bill (H. R. 2012) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to invest the lawful money deposited in the Treasury, in trust, by national banking associations for the retirement of their circulating notes, the consideration of which was assigned for to-day, simply for the purpose of its going over until to-morrow and not losing its place. If necessary, I move that its further consideration be postponed until to-morrow.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair thinks the bill would go over until to-morrow as a matter of course.

Mr. DINGLEY. If the Chair so rules, I do not press the motion.

EXPENDITURES, ETC., OF FISH COMMISSION.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky, by unanimous consent, submitted the following resolution; which was read, and referred to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries:

Resolved by the House of Representatives, That the Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries be, and is hereby, directed to report to this House as soon as practicable the expenditures of the Fish Commission for the fiscal year from July 1, 1886, to June 30, 1887, and from July 1, 1887, to February 1, 1888; the number of persons employed and the salaries paid; the property held by the commission, its cost, value, and location; the stations occupied by the commission, and the amount of unexpended appropriations, and for what purposes said appropriations were made.

INDEX OF SOUTHERN CLAIMS, ETC.

Mr. HIESTAND. I desire to make a privileged report from the Committee on Printing.

The resolution referred to the committee was read, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed 4,000 copies of the Index of Southern claims and claims referred to the Court of Claims under the Bowman act, recently prepared under the direction of the Clerk of the House; 3,000 for the use of members of the House, 1,000 for the use of members of the Senate.

The report of the committee was read, as follows:

The Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the concurrent resolution authorizing the printing of 4,000 copies of the Index of Southern claims and claims referred to the Court of Claims under the Bowman act, recently prepared under direction of the Clerk of the House, report the same with the recommendation that it pass.

Estimated cost, usual number, $8,776.50; 4,000 additional, $2,776.90; total, $11,553.40.

Mr. RANDALL. Is that report presented for immediate action?

Mr. MCMILLIN. That is not a privileged report.

Mr. HIESTAND. I ask that it be referred to the Calendar.

The report was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

JOHN K. LE BARON.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the House Calendar the bill (H. R. 2093) reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, for the relief of John K. Le Baron, and to put it upon its passage.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The bill will be read, after which the Chair will ask for objections.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to John K. Le Baron, postmaster at Elgin, Kane County, Illinois, the sum of $1,000, being the amount paid out by him for extra clerk-hire prior to July 3, 1883, and not provided for by the Post-Office Department.

Mr. MCMILLIN. Let us have the report read.

The report (by Mr. LYNCH) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred House bill 2093, beg leave to submit the following report:

The facts out of which this bill for relief arises will be found stated in House Report No. 4079, of the Committee on Claims of the Forty-ninth Congress, a copy of which is hereto appended and made a part of this report.

Your committee adopt the said report as their own, and report back the bill and recommend its passage with the following amendment: After the word "Le Baron," in line 4 of the bill, insert the word "ex," so that as amended the bill will read "John K. Le Baron, ex-postmaster," etc.

[House Report No. 4079, Forty-ninth Congress, second session.]

A bill similar to this (H. R. 10258) passed the House in the Forty-eighth Congress and was favorably reported from the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads at the second session of that Congress. The committee return this bill with the recommendation that it do pass, and adopt the Senate report, which is as follows:

It appears from the evidence submitted to the committee that John K. Le Baron was appointed postmaster at Elgin, Ill., an office of the second class, on December 20, 1881, and that his successor was appointed June 21, 1884, the office rising from the second to the first class October 1, 1883. In the early spring of 1882 the publishing house of David C. Cook was removed from Chicago to Elgin, Ill. The gross receipts of the office at the time of this removal amounted to $14,571 per annum. By reason of the removal they were suddenly increased, and for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1883, amounted to $57,446. Clerk-hire was granted to the postmaster by the Post-Office Department as follows:

	Per annum.
October 1, 1879	$1,000
October 1, 1882	2,000
July 1, 1883	3,000

This last allowance of $3,000 seems to have been satisfactory to the postmaster and sufficient to reimburse him adequately for the actual clerical expenses of the office from and after July 1, 1883. Between the time, however, when the David C. Cook publishing house was removed to Elgin and the time when this $3,000 allowance was made the postmaster was conducting the office at a loss to himself, which he claims amounted to $1,000. And it is for that amount, $1,000, paid out during five quarters when the Department seemed to have been unable to grant him a sufficient allowance, that the claimant asks relief.

If $1,000, as asked in the bill, is granted by Congress, that amount will, when added to the current allowance made by the Department, give the postmaster an average allowance of $650 per quarter for the five quarters in question. That such an amount is no more than reasonable for the proper conduct of the office for that time is indicated by the fact that an allowance of $750 per quarter ($3,000 per annum) was made by the Department for the handling of a like amount of business from and after July 1, 1883.

The following table, made at the Post-Office Department, will show the exact condition of the Elgin office from 1880 to 1883, inclusive:

ELGIN, ILL.

Period.	Salary.	Class.	Rent.	Fuel.	Light.	Clerks.	Gross receipts.	Box-rents and commissions.
1880	$2,500	2	.....	.....	.....	*$1,000	$10,331	$4,325
1882	2,800	2	†$200	†$75	†$65	†2,000	14,571	5,941
1883	3,100	1	200	75	65	‡3,000	57,446	18,913

*October 1, 1879. †October 1, 1882. ‡July 1, 1883.

It has been for some time the settled policy of the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads to disallow all claims of this character for clerk-hire where the expenditures exceed the allowances of the Department, even when recommended by the Department, as is done in this case. (See accompanying letter of the Acting First Assistant Postmaster-General to Hon. R. Ellwood.) But, in view of the extraordinary and exceptional circumstances surrounding this claim, the annual gross receipts of the office suddenly increasing from $14,571, on April 1, 1882, to $57,446 on July 1, 1883, by which increase the Government was largely benefited, and the claimant asking for but $650 per quarter for clerk-hire when $750 was afterwards allowed him by the Department for the same service, your committee deems it proper, and, in the interest of justice, trusts that the relief asked for may be afforded.

It therefore recommends the passage of the bill without amendment.

[Post-Office Department, Office of the First Assistant Postmaster-General, Salary and Allowance Division.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 13, 1884.

SIR: Your letter of the 2d instant, to the Postmaster-General, relative to claim of Mr. John K. Le Baron, late postmaster at Elgin, Ill., to be reimbursed in the sum of $1,000 for clerk-hire alleged to have been paid by him in excess of the amounts allowed by the Department, has been referred to this office.

In reply, you are informed that Mr. Le Baron was appointed as postmaster December 20, 1881, and his successor appointed January 21, 1884.

It appears from the records of this office that the allowance for clerk-hire from October 1, 1879, until October 1, 1882, was $1,000. At the last-named date the allowance for clerk-hire was increased to $2,000 a year, although the postmaster claimed at that time that he was compelled to pay $2,800 for clerk-hire.

On the 1st July, 1883, upon the reports of two inspectors who visited the office, the allowance for clerk-hire was increased to $3,000 a year.

It also appears from the records that the gross receipts of the Elgin office for the four quarters ended March 31, 1882, amounted to $14,571, and by the adjustment made on the four quarters ended June 30, 1883, the gross receipts were shown to be $57,466.

* * * * * * *

I have no hesitation in saying that a reasonable sum should be allowed to reimburse Mr. Le Baron, as postmaster, for the additional sums he paid for clerk-hire over and above the amount allowed by this Department.

The Department would have made ample provision for the expenses of the Elgin office if the appropriations applicable for the purpose would have warranted it.

Very respectfully,

JAMES H. MARR,
Acting First Assistant Postmaster-General.

Hon. R. ELLWOOD,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The amendment recommended by the committee, striking out the word "postmaster" from line 4, and substituting "ex-postmaster," was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois, moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. REED. Regular order!

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The regular order is the call of committees for the consideration of bills for one hour.

Mr. BLAND. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly the House (at 5 o'clock and 10 minutes p. m.) adjourned.

PRIVATE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED AND REFERRED.

Under the rule private bills and joint resolutions of the following titles were introduced and referred, as indicated below:

By Mr. C. H. ALLEN: A bill (H. R. 7267) to remove the charge of desertion from the record of Patrick McGarry—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BOWEN (by request): A bill (H. R. 7268) for the relief of Hannah Hurdle, widow of Samuel R. Hurdle—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7269) for the relief of Veronica Ulke—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. T. H. B. BROWNE: A bill (H. R. 7270) granting a pension to William H. Holden—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BUCHANAN: A bill (H. R. 7271) for the relief of Forman Mathews and David Stout Parker—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CULBERSON: A bill (H. R. 7272) for the relief of J. N. Boyd—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. DAVIS: A bill (H. R. 7273) granting a pension to Amasa Bullard—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FITCH: A bill (H. R. 7274) to remove the charge of desertion against the name of Michael Pfoertner—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7275) granting an increase of pension to Abram Duryée—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GALLINGER: A bill (H. R. 7276) for the relief of Alexander McKelvie—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. GEAR: A bill (H. R. 7277) granting a pension to James A. Mitchell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7278) granting an honorable discharge to Alexander S. Seber—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. GLOVER: A bill (H. R. 7279) for the relief of John Julius—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HARE: A bill (H. R. 7280) for the relief of E. Tubody, J. A. Summers, and J. P. Lundy—to the Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Justice.

By Mr. HATCH: A bill (H. R. 7281) granting a pension to Harrison Toops—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7282) for the relief of Samuel Pugh—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. S. T. HOPKINS: A bill (H. R. 7283) granting an increase of pension from $24 per month to $36 per month to James Nutt—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7284) granting a pension to Isaac C. Butts—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HUTTON: A bill (H. R. 7285) for the relief of St. Charles College, Missouri—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. LATHAM: A bill (H. R. 7286) for the relief of O. F. Adams—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. LEE (by request): A bill (H. R. 7287) referring the claim of Edward F. and Gilbert B. Walden, heirs-at-law of John Walden, to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MACDONALD: A bill (H. R. 7288) for the relief of Perry Childs—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. McADOO: A bill (H. R. 7289) to remove the charge of desertion against Rudolph Grischele—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. McKINNEY: A bill (H. R. 7290) granting a pension to Rae B. Cate—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MORSE (by request): A bill (H. R. 7291) to place on the pension-roll the name of Sarah E. Wetherbee—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7292) granting a pension to Mary McDonough—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PATTON: A bill (H. R. 7293) granting a pension to William Rimert—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PENINGTON: A bill (H. R. 7294) to grant an increase of pension to Thomas S. Biddle—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RANDALL: A bill (H. R. 7295) granting a pension to Theresa Charles—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RUSK: A bill (H. R. 7296) for the relief of the Merchants and Miners' Transportation Company of Baltimore, Md.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. STONE, of Kentucky: A bill (H. R. 7927) for the relief of William C. Robbins—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7298) for the relief of Benjamin Wiley—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7299) for the relief of A. P. Baker—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7300) for the relief of Milton H. Eggner—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7301) for the relief of C. T. Briggs—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7302) for the relief of S. J. Waters—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. TAULBEE: A bill (H. R. 7303) for the relief of William Lock and James H. Tensley—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WADE: A bill (H. R. 7304) for the relief of the heirs of Moses H. Shelton, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WICKHAM: A bill (H. R. 7305) granting a pension to Aaron Gilkison—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. S. V. WHITE: A bill (H. R. 7306) to pay a pension to John T. Bruen—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7307) granting a pension to Joseph H. Tucker—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WILKINSON: A bill (H. R. 7308) for the relief of Thomas G. Mackie and the heirs-at-law of William A. Hyde, deceased—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7309) for the relief of Caroline L. Maury—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also (by request), a bill (H. R. 7310) for the relief of Stewart & Co.—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. T. H. B. BROWNE: A bill (H. R. 7311) referring the claim of John N. Gatewood against the United States to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Changes in the reference of bills improperly referred were made in the following cases, namely:

A bill (H. R. 6806) for the relief of Benjamin F. Slaughter—from the Committee on War Claims to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 5210) for the relief of Philip H. Clear—from the Committee on Claims to the Committee on War Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk, under the rule, and referred as follows:

By Mr. C. H. ALLEN: Papers in the case of Patrick McGarry, for relief—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. C. S. BAKER: Petition of citizens of New York, Michigan, Connecticut, Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, manufacturers and merchants of the larger cities of said States, in favor of the bill introduced by Mr. BAKER of New York, for reduction of letter postage—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. BANKHEAD: Petition of Alexander Oldham, late of New Hanover County, North Carolina, now of Birmingham, Ala., for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of Dr. R. M. Harvis and others, and of D. N. Patton and others, of Livingston, and of J. H. Holmes and others, of Cuba, Ala., against the passage of the Blair bill—to the Committee on Education.

Also, petition of 150 citizens of Alabama, for the passage of the Blair bill—to the Committee on Education.

By Mr. BAYNE: Petition of American Clay Tobacco-Pipe Employers and Employés' Association, for an increase of duty on clay pipes—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BLOUNT: Petition of L. N. Calloway, for heirs of Emily Speights, of Baldwin County, and of Sarah V. Tanner, heir of John C. Tanner, of Butts County, Georgia, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. C. E. BROWN: Memorial of the Cincinnati (Ohio) Chamber of Commerce and Merchants' Exchange, touching the importation of adulterated articles—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. T. H. B. BROWNE: Petition of William H. Holden, for an original pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of John N. Gatewood, of Spottsylvania County, Virginia, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of Hopkins Bros. & Co., and other citizens of Accomack County, Virginia, for the improvement of Onancock River—to the committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, memorial of L. L. Nottingham and others, of Northampton County, Virginia, for the creation of a Department of Agriculture, and other purposes—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. BUCHANAN: Petition of General John C. Frémont and others, for the improvement of Manasquan Inlet, New Jersey—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. COX: Petition of Michael Feeney, of New York City, for the removal of the charge of desertion, and for honorable discharge—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, memorial of the mayor, aldermen, and commonalty of New York City, as to the war debt due from the United States—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CROUSE: Petition of O. W. Scott and 65 others, for change in postal laws relative to seeds, plants, bulbs, etc.—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. CUTCHEON: Memorial of the municipal officers of the city of Cadillac, Mich., on the subject of public buildings—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. DARLINGTON: Petition of Joseph S. Wilson, of Oxfordborough, Chester County, and of William S. Thompson Post, Grand Army of the Republic, of the same place, for the passage of House bill 549, granting a pension to said Joseph S. Wilson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FINLEY: Petition of Charles C. Morris; of Harriet F. Murrell; of John H. Lewis; of W. D. Lyon; of Oliver Kirtley; of N. T. Johnson; of Mary Jones; of estate of Robert Hindman; of Swann Hutcherson; of James Hazlewood; of William M. Hicks; of Rachael Hudson; of M. P. Hatcher; of Jesse Harlow; of Elias Gaddis; of Bush W. Griffin; of E. R. Garvin; of R. E. Garvin; of Robert F. Gameson; of James J. Green; of William A. Elkins; of William W. Davis; of Robert M. Durham; of Patience D. Chapman; of Elizabeth Craddock; of W. J. Burd, and of Daniel B. Adams, of Kentucky, for reference of their claims to the Court ofClaims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. FLOOD: Petition of Dexter White and others, of the Twenty-eighth district of New York, for the amendment of the general pension law—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GAINES: Petition of J. L. Chelton, W. C. Spain, Robert S. Gaishum, and others, of Dinwiddie County, Virginia, for change of tariff on silk—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. GIBSON: Petition for the improvement of Tuckahoe River, in Maryland—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition for the improvement of Still Pond Harbor, Maryland—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition of George T. Price, for pension for self and others—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. GROUT: Petition of William Schauz, for removal of customs duties on works of art—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HARMER: Two memorials of citizens of Philadelphia, Pa., in favor of speedy action on the subject of protection to wool-growing and woolen manufacturing industries in this country—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HAUGEN: Petition of 34 citizens of St. Croix County, Wisconsin, for the erection of a government telegraph—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. T. J. HENDERSON: Memorial of the authorities of Sterling, Ill., for a general appropriation for public buildings in certain cities—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. S. I. HOPKINS (by request): Petition of William Schaus, requesting that all imported paintings and sculptures be placed on the free-list—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. KEAN: Two petitions of citizens of New Jersey, fishermen, and others, for a law to protect the food-fish along the New Jersey coast—to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. KERR: Joint resolution of the Legislature of Iowa, for amendment of law in reference to liens of judgment of Federal courts—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. LATHAM: A bill for the improvement of Turner's Cut, at the head of Pasquotank River, in North Carolina—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. LEE (by request): Petition of Elizabeth T. Pierce; of French Dodd, son of Methalem B. Dodd; of Virginia A. Shumate; of Susan T. Samuel; of Edward T. Preston; of Burr W. Garrett; of J. J. Mosby; executor of Adelaide Withers; of George W. Preston, and of Carter B. Cropps, of Virginia, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of citizens of Alexandria County, Virginia, relative to the new bridge over the Potomac River—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. LONG: Petition of John H. Proutz and 72 others, citizens of South Scituate, Mass., for arrears of pensions—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of James H. Roberts, chairman, and Frank P. Oyer, secretary, of the Prohibition State Committee of Massachusetts, for a law prohibiting the importation of intoxicating liquors—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Universalist clergy of Boston and vicinity, for a treaty of arbitration with Great Britain—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of same, for investigation of Icelandic records—to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. LYMAN: Memorial of the authorities of Atlantic, Iowa, for a general appropriation for public buildings—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. McADOO: Three petitions of many citizens of New Jersey, against the present methods of menhaden fishing on the coast of New Jersey—to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. NELSON: Petition of Anne Lucas, for relief—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. NICHOLS: Petition of S. L. Norfleet and others, citizens of North Carolina, for laws requiring all convict-made goods to be marked "convict made," with penalties and forfeitures to protect the labor of citizens—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. O'DONNELL: Petition of 35 citizens of Eaton Rapids, Mich., for legislation to protect innocent users of patented articles from prosecution—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. O'FERRALL: Petition of Basil Grigsby, of Rappahannock County, Virginia, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. PATTON: Petition of William Rimert, for an original pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of 67 citizens of the Twentieth district of Pennsylvania, against removing the duty on coal—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. PERKINS: Petition of A. J. Ryan and others, citizens of Kansas, favoring the schedule of duties recommended by the wool-growers and woolen manufacturers—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. PLUMB: Papers in the claim of Alva W. Hicks, for relief—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, petition of Irena Warlick (Cherokee Indian), for indemnification for certain trespasses under the auspices of Indian Office—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Also, papers in the claim of A. W. Hicks, for relief—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. RICHARDSON: Petition of Robert N. Hunter, and of the heirs of Thomas Ridout, of Rutherford County, Tennessee, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. ROMEIS: Petition of C. Heurich, of the District of Columbia, asking that the Commissioner of Agriculture be required to give his reasons for refusing to publish his findings in the analyzation of beer—to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. RUSK: Petition of Jacob D. Ruff, for relief—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, paper in the case of Abraham Leidenstricker, for relief—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SENEY: Petition of the Cincinnati (Ohio) Musicians' Protective Union, favoring House joint resolution respecting the employment of Army and Navy bands—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, memorial of William Schaus, relating to the tariff on imported works of art—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SNYDER: Petition of John Bray, of Robert C. Lilly, of William C. Price, of Thomas O. Terry, of trustees of Baxter Institute, of William Rigg, administrator of Henry Rigg; of John S. Fisher, and of John S. Cunningham, trustee of St. Mark's Protestant Episcopal Church, Coalsmouth, West Va., for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, resolutions of miners, laborers, and other citizens of Coalburgh, Hampton, and North Coalburgh, Kanawha County, West Virginia, protesting against coal, coke, and pig-iron being put upon the free-list—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SPRINGER: Petition of the authorities of Petersburgh, Ill., for a general appropriation bill for public buildings—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. STAHLNECKER: Petition of William Schaus, regarding tariff on imported works of art—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. TAULBEE: Papers relating to the bill for the relief of J. H. Tinsley—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. E. B. TAYLOR: Petition of citizens of Ashtabula Ohio, for a government telegraph system—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, memorial of the village of Ravenna, Ohio, relating to public buildings—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. G. M. THOMAS: Papers in the case of N. L. Payne, for an original pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. VOORHEES: Petition of 148 citizens of Clarke County, Washington Territory, for national aid to common schools—to the Committee on Education.

By Mr. WADE: Petition of heirs of Moses H. Shelton, for reference of their claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WALKER: Memorial of citizens of Pemiscot County, Missouri, asking that all bills preventing the compounding of lard with cotton-seed oil be defeated—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. WASHINGTON: Petition of D. C. Edmondson, executor of Matilda O'Neal, of Davidson County, Tennessee, for reference of his case to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WEST: Petition of citizens of Johnstown, N. Y., for a general appropriation for building public buildings throughout the country—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. WHEELER: Petition of David B. Johnson, Laura E. Wilkinson, W. F. Hurt, and H. M. Jones, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill to improve the navigation of the Tennessee River at Colbert Shoals—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. S. V. WHITE: Petition of John T. Bruen, late captain Tenth Independent Battery New York Light Artillery, for relief—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Joseph H. Tucker, late colonel Sixty-ninth Illinois Volunteers, for relief—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WICKHAM: Petition of citizens of Lorain County, Ohio, for speedy action for the protection of the wool-growing and wool-manufacturing interests of this country—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WILKINSON: Petition of the Board of Underwriters of New Orleans, La., in favor of an international marine conference to formulate measures to lessen the dangers of navigation—to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. W. L. WILSON: Petition of W. D. Whitted and 40 other miners of coal, etc., against reduction of tariff on soft coal—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Isaiah Fenton and 160 other miners, of West Virginia, for same—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WISE: Petition for the creation of a Department of Agriculture, with a head as a member of the Cabinet—to the Committee on Agriculture.

The following petitions for an increase of compensation of fourth-class postmasters were severally referred to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads:

By Mr. C. L. ANDERSON: Of J. H. Gray and others, of Jewell Hill and Shady Grove, Jasper County, Mississippi.

By Mr. BANKHEAD: Of J. G. Willingham and others, of New Lexington, Ala.

By Mr. BUNNELL: Of citizens of Colley, Pa.

By Mr. McCLAMMY: Of citizens of Dismal, Sampson County, and of Colly, Bladen County, North Carolina.

By Mr. ROWLAND: Of citizens of Brown Creek, N. C.

The following petitions, praying for the enactment of a law providing temporary aid for common schools, to be disbursed on the basis of illiteracy, were severally referred to the Committee on Education:

By Mr. BACON (by request): Of 226 citizens of Orange County, New York.

By Mr. C. S. BAKER: Of 419 citizens of Monroe County, New York.

By Mr. BANKHEAD: Of 129 citizens of Tuscaloosa County, and of A. S. Whitehurst and others, of Northport, Ala.

By Mr. BOUTELLE: Of 174 citizens of Aroostook County, Maine.

By Mr. DE LANO: Of 247 citizens of Madison County, New York.

By Mr. HIESTAND: Of 471 citizens of Lancaster County, Pennsylvania.

By Mr. J. T. JOHNSTON: Of 314 citizens of Warren County, Indiana.

By Mr. LODGE: Of the First Baptist Church and 325 others, citizens of Essex County, Massachusetts.

By Mr. McKINNEY: Of 297 citizens of Rockingham County, New Hampshire.

By Mr. RUSK: Of 219 citizens of Baltimore County, Maryland.

By Mr. WEBER (by request): Of 250 citizens of Niagara County, New York.

The following petitions, asking for the passage of the bill prohibiting the manufacture, sale, and importation of all alcoholic beverages in the District of Columbia, were severally referred to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic:

By Mr. BAYNE: Of 120 citizens of the Twenty-third district of Pennsylvania.

By Mr. FLOOD: Of F. W. Arnold and others, citizens of the Twenty-eighth district of New York.

By Mr. FULLER: Of 137 citizens of the Fourth district of Iowa.

By Mr. GROUT: Of 109 citizens of the Second district of Vermont.

By Mr. KERR: Of 120 citizens of the Fifth district of Iowa.

By Mr. LA FOLLETTE: Of F. M. Burrows and 113 others, citizens of Dane County, Wisconsin.

By Mr. LYNCH (by request): Of 169 citizens of the Twelfth district of Pennsylvania.

By Mr. J. D. TAYLOR: Of 136 citizens of the Seventeenth district of Ohio.

SENATE.

THURSDAY, February 16, 1888.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. J. G. BUTLER, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATION.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, in response to a resolution of February 13, 1888, the report of John L. Smithmeyer, architect of the building for the Library of Congress; which, with the accompanying report, was referred to the Select Committee on Additional Accommodations for the Library of Congress, and ordered to be printed.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. EDMUNDS presented a petition of the White River Valley Pomona Grange, of Royalton, Vt., praying for a reduction of the postage on seeds, plants, bulbs, scions, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The other day I presented a petition which was rather informal, praying that a pension be granted to Sarah J. Foy, of Rutland, Vt. I now present another petition, which should have been presented at that time, but was mislaid, of this woman, for a pension. I move its reference to the Committee on Pensions.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN presented a petition of soldiers and sailors, citizens of Bainbridge, Ohio; a petition of the Middleport (Ohio) Post, No. 125, Grand Army of the Republic, and a petition of the Brooklyn (Ohio) Post, No. 368, Grand Army of the Republic, praying for the passage of what is known as the service-pension bill; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. SHERMAN presented a joint resolution of the General Assembly of Ohio, in favor of the passage of Senate bill 260, to reimburse the several States for interest paid on war loans, and for other purposes; which was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, and referred to the Committee on Claims, as follows:

[Senate joint resolution No. 13.]

Joint resolution relative to requesting our Senators and Representatives in Congress to do all possible for the passage of Senate bill No. 260.

Whereas there has been introduced in the Senate of the United States a bill (No. 260) to reimburse the several States for interest paid on war loans, and for other purposes: Therefore,

Be it resolved by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, That our Senators and Representatives in Congress be, and they are hereby, requested to vote for and urge the passage of the same, and that the governor forward a copy of this resolution to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

ELBERT L. LAMPSON,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
THEO. F. DAVIS,
President pro tempore of the Senate.

Adopted February 9, 1888.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, OHIO,
Office of the Secretary of State:

I, James S. Robinson, secretary of state of the State of Ohio, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of a joint resolution adopted by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio on the 9th day of February, A. D. 1888, taken from the original rolls filed in this office.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto subscribed my name and affixed my official seal, at Columbus, the 10th day of February, A. D. 1888.

JAMES S. ROBINSON, Secretary of State.

EXECUTIVE CHAMBER, Columbus, Ohio, February 10, 1888.

In compliance with the request contained in the resolutions above set forth, I have the honor to transmit a certified copy of the same herewith.

J. B. FORAKER, Governor.

Mr. SHERMAN presented a petition of 138 citizens of the Eighth and Twenty-first Congressional districts of Ohio, praying for prohibition in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented the petition of Samuel Kramer, an acting chaplain at the navy-yard, Washington, D. C., praying to be retired under the act of 1881; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. REAGAN presented resolutions adopted by the Grayson County (Texas) Medical Association, praying that medical and surgical instruments be placed on the free-list; which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. TELLER presented a petition of citizens of La Plata County, Colorado, praying for the removal of the Southern Ute Indians to the Indian Territory; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

He also presented the petition of T. M. Patterson and other citizens of Denver, Colo., praying that an appropriation be made for the establishment of the reservoir system in the State of Colorado; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. QUAY presented a petition of 126 citizens of the Sixth and Twenty-third Congressional districts of Pennsylvania, praying for prohibition in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. CALL presented a petition of the Board of Trade of the city of St. Augustine, Fla., praying that an appropriation be made for the improvement of the harbor at St. Augustine; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. ALLISON. I present a petition numerously signed by citizens of McGregor and vicinity, in the State of Iowa, making a statement respecting the tariff duty on wool, and praying that the schedule of duties agreed upon by the representatives of the wool-growers and wool-manufacturers at Washington City, January 14, 1888, may be speedily enacted into a law. I move the reference of the petition to the Committee on Finance.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. DANIEL presented the petition of William J. Canby and 201 other citizens of the District of Columbia, praying for prohibition in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. BLODGETT presented a petition of the Grand Division, Sons of Temperance, of New Jersey, officially signed, and a petition of Enterprise Temple, Temple of Honor, of New Jersey, officially signed, praying for a national commission of inquiry concerning the alcoholic liquor traffic; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. DAWES presented a petition of 204 citizens of the Sixth, Eighth, Eleventh, and Twelfth Congressional districts of Massachusetts, praying for prohibition in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. PLATT. I present a petition of 254 citizens of the Second Congressional district of Connecticut, the district in which I reside, praying for prohibition in the District of Columbia. I move the reference of the petition to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. PLATT presented a petition of 26 citizens of Utah Territory, praying for prohibition in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. CULLOM presented a memorial of the West Branch Lumberman's Exchange, of Williamsport, Pa., remonstrating against the proposed change in the tariff in relation to lumber; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a memorial of the Chamber of Commerce of Minneapolis, Minn., remonstrating against the proposed regulation of transportation over Canadian railroads; which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. SABIN presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Minnesota, praying for the enactment of such statutes as shall provide for the adequate punishment of crimes against women and girls; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented resolutions adopted by the Board of Trade of Minneapolis, Minn., in favor of free trade and exchange between the people of the United States and those of Canada of the products and manufactures of both countries; which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented the petition of Professor Edward D. Porter, of the University of Minnesota, praying that an appropriation be made for the purpose of establishing agricultural-experiment stations; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented a memorial of the Board of Trade of Minneapolis, Minn., remonstrating against alleged discrimination in favor of Chicago by the General Government in its fast-mail service; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. HALE presented a petition of 168 citizens of the Second and Fourth Congressional districts of Maine, praying for prohibition in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. BUTLER presented the petition of W. W. Timmons, T. B. Heinnent, M. D., C. M. Wise, and other citizens of Hymanville, Marlborough County, South Carolina, and the petition of Richard D. Lee, Marion Moise, E. W. Moise, and other citizens of Sumter, Sumter County, South Carolina, praying that an appropriation be made for deepening the bar at the entrance to Winyaw Bay; which were referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. BROWN. I present the petition of H. C. Clement, president of the Georgia Marble Works Company, praying that the tariff on marble may not be reduced; reciting the fact that over $500,000 have been invested in marble works and marble quarries in Georgia, and if they should have to come in competition with the cheap labor of Italy and other foreign countries they would be obliged to labor under great disadvantages, if not to suspend their work. They therefore pray that the tariff may not be reduced upon marble. I move that the petition be referred to the Committee on Finance.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BROWN presented a petition of the faculty of the University of Georgia, at Athens, Ga., praying for the enactment of an international copyright law; which was referred to the Committee on Patents.

He also presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Georgia, officially signed, representing 1,000 members, praying for the repeal of the internal-revenue tax on all alcoholic liquors; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. STEWART presented the petition of Charles D. Poston, a citizen of the United States, praying for an award of damages for losses sustained in Arizona for the want of Governmental protection; which was referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. WALTHALL presented a memorial of the Legislature of Mississippi, remonstrating against the passage of Senate bill 650, for the prevention of the use of cotton-seed oil as a substitute for hogs-lard; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. EVARTS presented resolutions adopted by the New York State Bar Association in favor of the passage of the bill increasing the pay of the United States judges resident in that State; which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of citizens of the Twenty-fourth Congressional district of New York, and a petition of 169 citizens of the Eleventh, Twenty-second, Twenty-seventh, Twenty-eighth and Thirtieth Congressional districts of New York, praying for prohibition in the District of Columbia; which were referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a petition of 29 surviving soldiers and sailors of the Union Army and Navy; a petition of the David S. Cole's Command, No. 4, Union Veterans' Union, Department of New York, and a petition of the soldiers, sailors, and marines of the Union Army and Navy, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented the petition of Rev. J. L. Roe, Rev. S. F. Wheeler, and other members of the Methodist Episcopal Churches, of Salem, N. J., praying for the better legal protection of young girls in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of the State of New York, officially signed, praying for legislation to provide for the adequate punishment of crimes against women and girls; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. FARWELL presented a memorial of citizens of Washington, D. C., remonstrating against the removal of the tracks of the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad Company to south K street; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented the petition of Dr. A. Dunbar, of Washington, D. C., praying that the scheme of weeding out the drunkard be tried in the District as a solution of the prohibition problem; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a petition of 154 citizens of the Tenth and Fourteenth Congressional districts of Illinois, praying for prohibition in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. COCKRELL. The Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 1679) making a donation to the Kansas Veteran Association of two condemned brass cannons and two hundred stand of small-arms and equipments, have instructed me to report it adversely, and recommend that the bill be indefinitely postponed, for two reasons: first, that there are no brass cannon condemned and unappropriated; and, in the second place, we accompany this report with a price-list of arms and accouterments for sale at all the various arsenals in the United States, and the price is so low that we do not think we should be justified in appropriating them. They can be purchased at all the various arsenals. The price-list is attached to this report, so that Senators can send it to persons desiring it in answer to any inquiries.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be postponed indefinitely, if there be no objection, and the report will be printed.

Mr. COCKRELL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1387) for the relief of the volunteers of the Fourth Regiment of Iowa Infantry, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. VEST, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1498) granting to the city of Grand Forks, Dak., the right to build two free bridges at said city across the Red River, reported it with amendments.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1701) authorizing the construction of a high wagon-bridge across the Missouri River at or near Sioux City, Iowa, reported it with an amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4327) regulating the construction of bridges over the Muskingum River, in Ohio, reported it with amendments.

Mr. SPOONER, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 604) for the relief of the heirs and legal representatives of Gerard Wood, deceased, asked to be discharged from its further consideration, and that it be referred to the Committee on Revolutionary Claims; which was agreed to.

Mr. SPOONER. Yesterday, by direction of a majority of the Committee on Claims, the Senator from Maryland [Mr. WILSON] reported favorably to the Senate the bill (S. 11) for the relief of Warren Mitchell. A minority of the committee, consisting of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR], the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY], and myself, dissent from that report, and I ask leave to present the views of the minority upon that bill at a day no later than to-morrow.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be so ordered, if there be no objection.

Mr. HOAR. I think there will be no objection to have the Senate also delay the order to print the original report, so that the two reports may be printed together.

Mr. SPOONER. That can be done if the majority report has not been already printed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is informed that the report of the majority of the committee has not been printed. Therefore it will be withheld from the Printer until the views of the minority are in, and they will both be printed together.

Mr. SPOONER, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3749) for the relief of Frank Baker, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. MCPHERSON, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1484) for the relief of G. Kaemmerling and others, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. DAWES, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them adversely; and they were severally postponed indefinitely:

A bill (S. 1149) to promote the efficiency of the public service in the Indian Bureau;

A bill (S. 1511) to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the allotment of lands in severalty to Indians on the various reservations, and to extend the protection of the laws of the United States and the Territories over the Indians," and for other purposes; and

A bill (S. 620) to divide the Great Sioux reservation, in Dakota and Nebraska, and to secure to the Indians the title in fee simple to lands in severalty, and to open a portion to actual settlement, and to provide for the better education and civilization of the Sioux Indians.

Mr. DOLPH, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1128) to create ports of entry at Tacoma and Seattle, in Washington Territory, reported it without amendment.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I reported the other day a bill to incorporate the Nicaragua Maritime Canal Company, but omitted to report with it the petition of P. Cudmore and many other citizens of Minnesota in support of that bill which had been referred to the committee by the Senate. I now return that petition to go on the files. It should have been returned with the report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The petition will be placed on the files of the Senate.

Mr. STEWART, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 35) to authorize the promotion of certain assistant surgeons of the Army after twenty years' service, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PAYNE, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, to whom was referred the bill (S. 630) for the relief of Edwin De Leon, reported it without amendment.

VALUATION OF IMPORTED MERCHANDISE.

Mr. ALLISON. The Committee on Finance unanimously instruct me to report a substitute for the bill (S. 977) to regulate the importation of foreign merchandise and to secure uniformity in the classification and valuation thereof, and for other purposes. I ask the Senate to allow this substitute to be printed as the original bill, so that it will appear when taken up for consideration as the original bill.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Then you had better report it as an original bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa asks that the amendment of the Committee on Finance, which is in the nature of a substitute for the entire bill, may be printed as an original bill.

Mr. EDMUNDS. To make the Journal right it ought to be reported as an original bill, with a new number, and then the other bill can be dropped.

Mr. HOAR. Then you do not have to take the question on the amendment and on the bill as amended separately.

Mr. ALLISON. Very well; I will adopt the suggestion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Journal entry, then, if there be no objection, will be changed so as to show that the Senator from Iowa, from the Committee on Finance, reports the original bill adversely; and the new bill will be read by its title.

Mr. ALLISON. The only reason why I suggested that the substitute be considered as the original bill is to continue the connection between the bill reported in December last and this bill. I think, on a moment's reflection, it will create less confusion if we connect the present bill with the one reported in December.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Very well; then the substitute is reported as an amendment intended to be proposed by the committee, and whether we will take it or the bill first reported when we proceed to consider the subject we will wait and see. That will be the straightway. No doubt there will be no objection then to substituting the amendment, but I should not wish to consent now until I see it.

Mr. ALLISON. I submit with the bill a written report, and ask that it be printed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair desires to know the wish of the Senator from Iowa concerning the substitute which he has reported.

Mr. ALLISON. There being objection to the course I suggested, I will let the bill take its usual course, whatever it may be. I simply report the bill which I send to the desk as a substitute for Senate bill 977.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Then Senate bill 977 is to be reported adversely and postponed indefinitely, and the substitute will be treated as the original bill.

Mr. ALLISON. No; I make no note of Senate bill 977. I now report a substitute for that bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. But under the rules the Chair thinks a bill must be reported back either with an amendment, or adversely, or favorably without amendment. There is no method under the rules by which the bill can be reported back without recommendation, with another as a substitute.

Mr. ALLISON. But Senate bill 977 is in the control of the Senate. It was not recommitted to the Committee on Finance; it is in the possession of the Senate. I report now an amendment in the nature of a substitute for that bill, which is in the possession of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands that Senate bill 977 is reported back with an amendment.

Mr. HARRIS. That bill was reported to the Senate perhaps a month or six weeks ago and is now on the Calendar. The Senator from Iowa is directed by the Committee on Finance to report an amendment, and I think his object will be accomplished by printing the paper he now sends to the desk as an amendment proposed by the committee to the pending bill.

Mr. ALLISON. That is what I desire, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report of the Senator from Iowa, from the Committee on Finance, will then be journalized as suggested by the Senator from Tennessee, and the report will be printed.

Mr. ALLISON. I desire to state that I wish to take the bill up at an early day. Of course I do not wish to interfere with any other pressing current business, but I give notice that on next Wednesday morning I shall ask the Senate to consider the bill, and to continue its consideration until it is completed.

Mr. HOAR. I desire to ask unanimous consent that 2,000 or 1,500 copies of the bill, whatever may be the number to bring it within the rule of the Senate, not requiring a reference to the Committee on Printing, be printed in pamphlet form for the use of the Senate.

Mr. MANDERSON. In document form?

Mr. HOAR. In document form. I suppose that will not exceed the limit fixed by the rule.

Mr. ALLISON. That is, to print the new bill?

Mr. HOAR. The new bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts asks an order that 2,000 copies of the amendment and the report may be printed.

Mr. HOAR. Not the report, but simply the new bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore The order to print 2,000 copies of the amendment for the use of the Senate will be made, if there be no objection.

Mr. MANDERSON. That will clearly be within the limit of $500 fixed by the rule.

Mr. HOAR. If the report would come within the rule of $500 I should like to have that printed also; but I suppose there would be some doubt about that, and so I will limit the motion to the bill.

Mr. HAWLEY subsequently said. The Committee on Finance a few moments ago reported a substitute or an amendment to Senate bill 977, and with it submitted a report which is to be very much in demand. Since the matter was up I have examined the report and am satisfied that the Senate can order the additional 2,000 copies spoken of far below the limit of $500. I therefore move that 2,000 additional copies of the report be printed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. In connection with the bill?

Mr. HAWLEY. With the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Connecticut moves that 2,000 copies of the bill and of the report of the Committee on Finance be printed for the use of the Senate. It will be so ordered, if there be no objection.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. EDMUNDS introduced a bill (S. 2018) granting an increase of pension to Henry Sprague; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2019) to amend section 2 of the act entitled "An act to provide for the bringing of suits against the Government of the United States," approved March 3, 1887; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I wish to say in regard to the reference of the bill, that it is a matter really and strictly judicial, but as the original bill, which it seems needs some correction, came at the last Congress from the Committee on Claims, I think it more convenient that this proposed amendment should go to that committee for consideration. I move that the bill be referred, with the accompanying papers, to the Committee on Claims.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. MORRILL (by request) introduced a bill (S. 2020) for the promotion of anatomical science, and to prevent the desecration of graves in the District of Columbia; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. FARWELL introduced a bill (S. 2021) to brevet officers of the Army on the active and retired lists; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. BLACKBURN introduced a bill (S. 2022) for the relief of Dr. William Kenney; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. SPOONER (by request) introduced a bill (S. 2023) to authorize the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to extend, widen, grade, curb, and lay sidewalks on Sixteenth street, between Boundary street and Columbia road; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. CULLOM introduced a bill (S. 2024) to authorize the construction of a bridge over the Mississippi River at or near Clarksville, Mo., and for other purposes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. VOORHEES introduced a bill (S. 2025) relating to pay of skilled workmen and leave of absence to all employés in the Government Printing Office; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Printing.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2026) to establish an additional land office at Springfield, in the State of Colorado; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2027) for the purchase of suitable grounds in the city of Richmond, in the State of Indiana, and the erection thereon of a public building for the post-office, United States collector's office, United States commissioner's office, and for the use of other United States officers in said city, and appropriating money for said purposes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. SABIN introduced a bill (S. 2028) to authorize the President to confer brevet rank on officers of the Army for gallant services in Indian campaigns; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2029) granting right of way to the Forest City and Watertown Railroad Company through the Sioux Indian reservation; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2030) in relation to bridge of Forest City and Watertown Railroad Company; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER introduced a bill (S. 2031) for the relief of Hannah Hurdle, widow of Samuel R. Hurdle; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. It would seem that the bill ought to be referred to the Committee on Claims, but as it proposes relief for injuries received in the service of the District of Columbia I move that it be referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. QUAY introduced a bill (S. 2032) to provide for the purchase or condemnation of the entire property and appurtenances of the Monongahela Navigation Company, a corporation of Pennsylvania; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. TELLER introduced a bill (S. 2033) granting a pension to Joseph Wirth; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2034) to authorize the citizens of the United States to return their estray cattle from the Republic of Mexico into the United States without the payment of duties; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, introduced a bill (S. 2035) granting an increase of pension to Samuel J. Murphy, of Marengo, Iowa; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2036) granting a pension to Mark F. Carter; which was read twice by his title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. BLODGETT introduced a bill (S. 2037) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of John Fitzpatrick; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. DANIEL introduced a bill (S. 2038) increasing the pension of Mary Minor Hoxey; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PLUMB introduced a bill (S. 2039) for the relief of the Albemarle and Chesapeake Canal Company; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. TELLER introduced a bill (S. 2040) to establish a land office at Folsom, Territory of New Mexico; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. McPHERSON introduced a bill (S. 2041) providing for the holding of the United States courts in the city of Newark, N. J.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. MANDERSON introduced a joint resolution (S. R. 55) abolishing the office of the United States surveyor-general for the district of Nebraska and Iowa, and authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to proceed, under the provisions of sections 2218 and 2219 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, in the transfer of the field-notes, maps, records, and other papers to the States of Nebraska and Iowa; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

He also (by request) introduced a joint resolution (S. R. 56) granting permission to officers and soldiers, members of the military order of the Loyal Legion of the United States and of the Grand Army of the Republic, to wear the badges adopted by those orders; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

AMENDMENTS TO BILLS.

Mr. DANIEL submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to House bill 6437, making appropriations to supply urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888, and for prior years, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. VOORHEES submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 1338) to extend the leave of absence of employés in the Government Printing Office to thirty days per annum; which was referred to the Committee on Printing, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. FAULKNER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 1176) to authorize the sale to aliens of certain mineral lands; which was ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 2093) for the relief of John K. Le Baron; and

A bill (H. R. 4557) for the relief of George F. Chilton.

DIAMOND SHOAL LIGHT-HOUSE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there are no "resolutions, concurrent or other," the Chair lays before the Senate the resolution submitted by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PLUMB] directing the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads to make a thorough inquiry into the cause of inefficient mail service.

Mr. RANSOM. I ask the unanimous consent of the Senate to take up the bill (S. 1283) making an appropriation for the erection of a light-house on or near Diamond Shoal, off Cape Hatteras, North Carolina. I think it will give rise to no debate.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to appropriate $500,000 for the erection of a light-house on or near Diamond Shoal, off Cape Hatteras, North Carolina. Contractors for doing this work may be selected by the Light-House Board, such as may, in the judgment of the board, be best fitted by reason of skill, experience, possession of plant, and control of means to do the work, payments to be made in the discretion of the board, upon the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SURETIES OF S. A. BLAINE.

Mr. COKE. I ask unanimous consent to call up the bill (S. 147) for the relief of S. D. Barclay, G. D. Adams, and William H. Kimbrew.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to release S. D. Barclay, G. D. Adams, and William H. Kimbrew, sureties on the bond of Samuel A. Blaine, late Indian agent, against whom a judgment was rendered in the United States court for the northern district of Texas, at Waco, Tex., for $5,000, on the 22d of November, 1886.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THE MAIL SERVICE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution coming over from a previous day, which will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. A resolution by Mr. PLUMB, directing the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads to make thorough inquiry into the cause of inefficient mail service.

Mr. REAGAN. I ask the Senator from Kansas if he will consent to an amendment of the resolution by inserting the word "alleged" after the word "such" in the last line but one?

Mr. PLUMB. That has already been done, I think.

Mr. COCKRELL. That word has already been inserted, on my motion.

Mr. PLUMB. The resolution has been already so amended.

Mr. REAGAN. Very well.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senate agree to the resolution?

The resolution was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. PLATT. I ask the Senate to consider at this time the bill (S. 395) for the relief of Hyland C. Kirk and others, assignees of Addison C. Fletcher.

Mr. MANDERSON. I do not desire to antagonize this request, but is the order of morning business closed? I think there is another resolution following the one which has just been acted upon.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair would be glad at this time to take the sense of the Senate upon a question affecting the order of business in the morning hour.

Mr. COCKRELL. I call for the regular order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Resolutions offered in the Senate are open to objection under the rule on the day they are offered, and under such objections they lie over for one day. It has been the practice of the Senate for some time to regard resolutions so objected to as entitled to consideration the next day or the day thereafter, whenever concurrent and other resolutions are called for. There are several resolutions either on the Calendar or on the table, the Chair is not able to say which, that have come over from a previous day under objection. The Chair desires to take the sense of the Senate, the rules being silent on the subject, whether those resolutions shall be called every morning under the order of "concurrent or other resolutions," or whether they shall go on the Calendar or on the table to be called up hereafter.

Mr. PLATT. I think that the orderly conduct of business in the Senate requires that resolutions which are objected to should be taken up the next day if opportunity offers; and therefore, although I desire the Senate to consider the bill to which I have referred, I will withdraw that request for the present.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, I have always understood that when resolutions were objected to under the rule they went over to the next day under the objection. They are then laid on the table of the Presiding Officer, and are submitted the next day at the close of resolutions then offered. An order of that kind was adopted at the last Congress; but if they were not disposed of on the first day after the objection was taken then they were placed on the Calendar. It seems to me that is the proper order of proceeding, because if a resolution comes over and the Presiding Officer lays it before the Senate, and it has its day in court and is not then disposed of, it ought to go to the Calendar and ought not to encumber the usual morning business of the Senate. That practice, I think, was adopted during the time I had the honor to preside over the Senate. Always, a resolution coming over under objection was submitted to the Senate at the proper time, at the close of resolutions on the following day, and if it was not then disposed of it went on the Calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. But if a resolution is not reached for consideration the next day after it is offered, or is not then submitted to the Senate, the Chair desires to be instructed whether the day having lapsed the resolution then is to go on the Calendar.

Mr. SHERMAN. I think the understanding was that a day should always be had, that one opportunity to dispose of the resolution should be given; and if it was not reached the first day it certainly would be the next, and then it would be laid before the Senate; but when laid before the Senate it is in the possession of the Senate, and it goes on the Calendar unless disposed of that day. I think that was the ruling adopted by the Senate while I occupied the chair.

Mr. HARRIS. I think the practice of the Senate has been, in the absence of a rule regulating it, very much as stated by the Senator from Ohio. Upon objection a resolution goes over; it lies on the table; attention is called to it on the next day. A concurrent or Senate resolution that went over comes over to the next day under that objection. Where the business of the morning hour is such that the whole time is consumed and the resolution not reached, but lies on the table, the practice, I think, has been to give it its day; that is, to call attention to it on the first day that it can be reached; but failing to be disposed of after the attention of the Senate has been called to the resolution on the table for the one day, it ought to take its place on the Calendar and be subject to the rules governing all cases on the Calendar.

Mr. PLUMB. I have had the impression, with the present occupant of the chair, that the rules laid it down that the resolutions objected to when offered come up as of course; that is to say, they have the right of way and are to be laid before the Senate when the order of resolutions is reached, and that applies to a resolution until action is taken or some understanding is reached, as in the case of a resolution I introduced. The Senator from Ohio, then presiding, did not lay it before the Senate. I called the matter to the attention of the Senate, and my recollection is quite clear that the present occupant of the chair then made a motion or a suggestion which resulted in an understanding or some affirmative act on the part of the Senate—I am not sure which—to the effect that these resolutions have the right of way until they are disposed of, and must be laid before the Senate when the order of resolutions is reached.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There are resolutions upon the Calendar which have been pending since the 21st of January undetermined, and have had no day before the Senate.

Mr. CULLOM. I wish to make an inquiry for the purpose of getting the attention of the Chair to the subject. Suppose a resolution is introduced and its consideration objected to the first day and laid over. Then, as I understand the Senator from Ohio and the Senator from Tennessee, it has another day, and is taken by the occupant of the chair and presented to the Senate. Suppose that resolution is taken up by the Senate for consideration, but not finally disposed of on that subsequent day, does it or not come up as unfinished business at some future time?

Mr. HARRIS. There is no unfinished business in the morning hour.

Mr. CULLOM. None at all?

Mr. HARRIS. None at all.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair would think that a resolution having been considered would still retain its place on the Calendar, the resolutions coming over from a former day, or be laid on the table.

Mr. HARRIS. I think it would go to the Calendar. It loses its place on the table, clearly.

Mr. CULLOM. It seems to me a very unsatisfactory way of disposing of a subject after partially discussing it, that on its coming before the Senate, it is to go to the Calendar to be considered three months hence, perhaps.

Mr. HARRIS. It is always under the control of a majority of the Senate.

Mr. CULLOM. I think it should come up again as unfinished business at some time.

Mr. HARRIS. It is always in the control of a majority of the Senate, just as any other matter on the Calendar. It has had the advantage, at least, of one day in court.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair, then, will lay before the Senate the first resolution coming over from a former day that has been considered. The title of the resolution will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. A resolution by Mr. CALL relative to the management of railroads by receivers appointed by United States courts.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is informed that this resolution was considered on the 9th of February and went over. The Chair, therefore, would hold that the resolution goes to the Calendar.

Mr. CALL. That is what I desire.

DISTRIBUTION OF REBELLION RECORDS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The next resolution coming over from a former day will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. A resolution submitted by Mr. MANDERSON February 9, 1888, directing the Secretary of War to furnish certain information concerning the distribution of Records of the Rebellion.

Mr. MANDERSON. I understand that resolution is for consideration at this time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be directed to report to the Senate what members of the Forty-seventh Congress have furnished lists for the distribution of the Records of the Rebellion as provided by law, the number of each volume thereof remaining undistributed, and the list of names and addresses of those designated to receive that publication by any member of Congress when notified so to do by either of the Senators from the State represented by said Congressman.

Mr. MANDERSON. I think it due the Secretary of War that I should say that, in a conversation had with him within a few days and since the presentation of this resolution, he said to me that in refusing to grant, upon requests of members of Congress, the lists of names furnished by members of the Forty-seventh Congress of persons and libraries to receive the Rebellion Records he had been simply following a custom of the Department, not a rule that he himself had inaugurated, but that finding such a custom obtaining he simply continued it; that he saw no objection whatever to a resolution of this character and would be glad, as I understood him, to have it pass. I think it due to him that this statement should be made in his behalf.

Mr. President, while referring to this matter I wish to speak on a subject somewhat akin to it. A somewhat unfortunate result, so far as the comfort of many members of the Senate is concerned, came from the discussion of this question a few days ago, and it is somewhat of a commentary, I think, upon the strictures made by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST] upon the extensive publication of public documents. My own mail has been much burdened, and I understand the mail of many other Senators has been inundated by requests for documents, some of them of the character that the Senator from Missouri characterized as very good literature, and other documents that he condemned as worthless. I wish to say here, for the purpose of relieving myself at least, that so far as this document, the Records of the Rebellion, is concerned, there are none within my gift, and there have been none for me to distribute. The whole issue of that valuable publication was monopolized by the members of the Forty-seventh Congress, and none others except those named upon the lists furnished by them can be distributed, unless it shall be in accord with the joint resolution that passed the Senate a few days ago, permitting the distribution of undistributed copies where members of the Forty-seventh Congress are not yet in Congress, such distribution to be by their immediate successors.

Mr. CULLOM. Allow me to say that I have had the same experience as to requests that the Senator indicates that he has had, and many of the requests made to me have been to the effect that perhaps I might get some public documents for the applicants from the distinguished Senator from Missouri, so as to accommodate the citizens of Illinois to some extent.

Mr. MANDERSON. Now, Mr. President, one word further in response to some of the suggestions made by the Senator from Missouri in his remarks upon the resolution submitted by him and referred to the Committee on Printing a few days ago. I regret that I was not in my seat on that day, and I regret that there was no member of the Committee on Printing in his seat to hear his remarks. The evils that he depicted have been recognized by that committee to exist in part. I think there was some degree of exaggeration of the evils by the Senator from Missouri, and I think he will find on full consideration of the subject-matter that to make changes of the sweeping character he seems to desire would be very injurious to the public service.

As I understood him from reading his remarks it is his desire to cut down in a large degree the usual number of public documents that are printed, and to reduce greatly the number of bills and resolutions that are printed for the use of Congress. I do not think that the Senator from Missouri could have looked carefully into the manner of distribution of these documents, else he would not have made the assertion that as to those issued under the rule of the usual number there are any for distribution by him. Take, for instance, the Senate Journal and the House Journal; none are for the distribution of the Senator from Missouri, and, as I understand it, none are upon the list for distribution by any member of Congress. In the printed blank that issues from the folding-room of the Senate that contains the list of documents issued for the public that are subject to distribution by members of the Senate, the Senate Journal and the House Journal will not be found, nor will any of the reports, valuable as many of them are, made by the committees of this body be found.

The bills that are printed and that he would reduce in number to, I think, 750 by his resolution, are now printed to the extent of 924 when they are Senate bills, and this is the disposition made of them: 440 of them go to the document-room of the House, so that every member of the House of Representatives may be furnished with at least one copy of the bill and that there may be some in excess for distribution. To the office of the Clerk of the House there go 308; to the office of the Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate, 134; to the office of the Secretary of the Senate, 8; to the Department of State, 15; to the office of the Public Printer, 4, and there kept as file copies, 15, making the 924 which constitute the usual number of bills that are printed.

I had investigated, prior to the discussion upon this subject the other day, the question whether this number of bills could be reduced, and I am satisfied that as to what are known as private bills—take, for instance, the private pension bills—we could quite materially decrease the number, as they are not in great demand by members of Congress or by outside parties; but as to general bills, I doubt if the number could be reduced from 924 now printed under the law, which has been the number established by law for many years past.

As to documents of the Senate, the usual number, by legislation upon that subject had years ago, is 1,900. Of this number 940 are left unbound and 960 are bound copies, and this is the distribution made of these documents: To the document-room of the House of Representatives of unbound copies there go 411; to the office of the Clerk of the House 20; to the Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate 243; to the Secretary of the Senate 6; to the folding-room of the Senate 190; to the Department of State 30; to the office of the Public Printer 4, and for file copies 36, making——

Mr. BUTLER. Is the Senator now referring to each publication—1,900 of each publication?

Mr. MANDERSON. Nineteen hundred of each document and report of Congress.

Mr. BUTLER. That is to say, 1,900 of the volume on Commerce and Navigation, and of the Message and Documents?

Mr. MANDERSON. No, I do not refer to them. Those are not documents or reports to Congress. The Senator refers to reports made by the Executive Departments, called executive documents, the number of which is fixed by law.

Mr. BUTLER. We each got about thirty-odd of those.

Mr. MANDERSON. I am not referring to those. My reference is to the documents published by order to print the usual number by Congress; for instance, there comes to either House of Congress a report from one of the Department chiefs, the Secretary of the Interior for example. It is ordered to be printed with the accompanying papers.

Mr. BUTLER. The annual report?

Mr. MANDERSON. Not the annual report, because that printing is provided for by general law passed many years ago. All the reports of committees that come here are ordered printed. That order implies that there shall be printed 1,900 copies.

Mr. BUTLER. I do not understand that those documents are printed for distribution.

Mr. MANDERSON. Not at all, and I am correcting the apparent misapprehension of the Senator from Missouri in that regard. They are not printed for distribution as public documents are usually distributed by members of Congress; but this is the distribution: Of the bound copies, numbering 960, there go to the Senate document-room 114; to the House document-room 313; to the Senate folding-room 43; to the Department of State 10; to the Department of the Interior 420, and these are for distribution among the libraries of the country that are designated as depositaries of public documents by law, being named as such by the members of the House of Representatives and of the Senate; 52 copies go to the Library of Congress; 10 to the library of the House of Representatives, and 1 is retained in the office of the Public Printer, making 960, and the two sorts, bound and unbound, composing the 1,900 copies that are thus printed.

Mr. HOAR. When the Senator has got through the particular point which he is making, I desire to ask him a question, prefacing it by a statement of the reason for it.

There is a general notion prevailing throughout the country that there is a vast storehouse here of all the public documents printed by order of Congress, not mentioning the documents provided for the transaction of the business of either House, but general documents like the Agricultural Report, and the Report of the Geological Survey, and the Surgeon-General's Report, and the Rebellion Records more particularly. I suppose there are two notions that prevail very extensively. One is that there is an unlimited number of these documents, so that any Senator or Representative can supply any constituent who wants them, no matter what the number may be, and many people think we are negligent if we do not supply everybody who requests them. The next is that there is an enormous waste of these documents, that they are stolen by members of either House, or that they are used for all manner of purposes that may be imagined.

I get from surgeons in the late war very proper requests, which I should be eager to comply with, for copies of the Medical and Surgical History of the War; and they feel quite disturbed that other persons who have not perhaps rendered military service themselves get them, and they do not. I am only stating now the experience of every Senator. I get from young gentlemen in the colleges applications for the Geological Report, for the report of Powell's Survey, and so on, and most costly and valuable reports, the Polaris Expedition, the Greely Expedition, and the other Arctic expeditions. I get perhaps only 10 or 15 copies of some of these reports. In the old district which I represented when I was in the other House there are now more than thirty public libraries; and I suppose in the Commonwealth which I represent there are more than three hundred, and this number does not begin to supply them.

Now, I should like to ask the chairman of the Committee on Printing if he will make a statement, which may go with his other statements to the country, of the number which are usually received for distribution by the members of this body of the more important reports, so far as he has it in his memory.

Mr. MANDERSON. I would hardly dare to trust my memory to respond in any detail to that question. I can only answer it in a general way.

The documents that are of the character referred to by the Senator from Missouri in his speech of a few days ago, being the reports of the Departments and the reports of the chiefs of bureaus, are published in the number that he described. There are not a great many of each one that come to the distribution of a member of Congress. In the aggregate, of course, they amount to a large number. Documents of the character described by the Senator from Massachusetts—for instance, the Report of the Commissioner of Education, the Report of the Commissioner of Agriculture, the numerous publications of the Geological Survey, of the Smithsonian Institution, and of the Academy of Sciences, are published in numbers fixed by concurrent resolution by Congress.

The greatest number published of any one document is that of the Report of the Commissioner of Agriculture, and that runs into many hundred thousands annually. Four hundred thousand, I believe, is the usual number that has been printed for distribution. I have never, since I have had the honor of presenting these resolutions under instruction of the Committee on Printing, heard any proposition from any Senator on this floor to reduce the number, and I do not think there has ever been a motion as to any other of the documents that I have named to reduce the number that it was proposed should be printed. Very frequently the Senate Committee on Printing have proposed to reduce the number provided for in a House concurrent resolution, and the Senate has usually been in accord with us in that reduction. Occasionally we have increased, and the Senate has been with us in the matter of increase.

I think the number allotted to each member of the Forty seventh Congress of the Rebellion Records was 26, the Reports of the Geological Survey perhaps 15 or 16, and of the Ethnological Report 15 or 16. Of the late very valuable publication, known as Cattle and Dairy Farming, the number to each member of the Senate was, I think, 6.

Mr. PLATT. Eleven.

Mr. MANDERSON. Eleven, and 6 to each member of the House of Representatives. I will, at my earliest convenience, present a report that shall come either upon some special document that is to be printed or in response to the resolution of the Senator from Missouri, and attempt to show exactly the number of public documents issued, the allotment to each member of the Senate and each member of the House of Representatives, and the character of the publication.

Mr. TELLER. I should like to ask the Senator from Nebraska a question. How is the Cattle and Dairy Farming publication published?

Mr. MANDERSON. By authority of Congress, by concurrent resolution passed at the last session; that is to say, there was a motion made first that the usual number be printed.

Mr. TELLER. Did the resolution fix the number?

Mr. MANDERSON. The concurrent resolution fixed the number to both Senate and House beyond the usual number, and I think 1,000 copies were furnished to the State Department for distribution, it being a consular report and not one of the usual documents issued by order of Congress or the Executive Departments.

Mr. President, I did not rise for the purpose of going into this matter in any detail, but simply to say that the Committee on Printing has recognized some of the evils that are complained of by the Senator from Missouri. It has not, however, during the last two or three years felt that it was justified in making any radical change of the laws that had existed for so many years, and concerning which there never has been one word of complaint until that which emanated from the Senator from Missouri a few days ago. Under a resolution that was introduced at the last session of Congress the Committee on Printing started an investigation with a view of codifying the printing laws and remedying some of the abuses that are complained of. That work was well under way under the efficient care of Major Poore, the late clerk of the Committee on Printing. Its progress was interrupted somewhat by his death, but the committee is yet making the investigation in that regard and trying to reconcile some of the conflicting views on the subject. It also has in charge an investigation into the manner of the distribution of the public documents.

I recognize that there are great evils in the present method of distribution. Quite valuable reform has been obtained by the efforts of Dr. Ames, who is the superintendent of the distribution of documents in the Interior Department; but my own idea of the matter—and I confess that my views are rather crude upon this subject, as I have not yet brought them into tangible shape—is that in the distribution of the documents that are for issue by members of Congress it would be well that they should be distributed under some issuing executive officer, say, perhaps, a superintendent of documents. I do not believe that he should be under the control or a part of the Department of the Interior. I do not think he should be any more an executive officer than the Public Printer is an executive officer; and I think the most economical way of distributing these documents would be to have them taken from the Printing Office to, perhaps, some adjoining building, so that the cost of carriage would not be great, some building adapted for the purpose of their storage prior to distribution, where they would be protected from injury by dampness, and that there this superintendent of documents, who should be under the control of Congress—for let it be borne in mind that the printing which is conducted at the Public Printing Office is by an officer who is the creation of Congress, and the work that he does is under the direct control of Congress—I think this distributing officer should occupy a like position, and that the documents which are allotted to members of Congress for distribution among their constituents should be distributed through that channel; not that I would dispense with the document-room of either the Senate or the House, for we all know the convenience of having that distributing center near at hand.

Now, before closing, Mr. President, I simply want to show what becomes of the documents to the number of 960 that are known as the Senate reserve documents. I have already stated where they are sent, and this is the distribution made of them: There go to Senators 78 copies, and to the Library of Congress 2 copies. These 80 copies are bound in calf. There are bound in sheep the remaining 880 volumes, and they are thus distributed: To the Clerk's document-room of the House 313 copies; to the Senate library 36; to the House library 7; to the Department of State 10; to the Department of the Interior 420, these being for distribution to public depositories; to the Library of Congress 50; to the Senate folding-room 43, and one to the Public Printer, making the 960 copies bound in calf and sheep that are known as the bound copies of the reserved documents of the Senate.

The distribution of the Senate Journal is as follows: There go to the Senate document-room 66 copies; to the Department of the Interior for distribution 1,550—and that distribution is not only to the public libraries of the country, but, under the law, 1 copy is sent to every State library, 1 copy to the governor of every State and Territory, and 1 copy, I believe, to the secretary of state of each State, and a large number, of course, are sent to foreign countries through the Department of the Interior; to the Secretary of the Senate 150 copies; making 1,766 copies, and then, to be delivered as reserved documents according to the list I have before read, 960 copies, making the total number 2,726.

Mr. VEST. What is done with those 960 reserved documents?

Mr. MANDERSON. The 960 are distributed as I have said—to Senators 78 copies; to the Library of Congress 2 copies; 313 to the Clerk's document-room of the House; 36 to the Senate library; 420 to the Department of the Interior, etc. So that the distribution of these Journals is exactly the same as the distribution of the bound copies of the documents that are ordered in the usual number or of the reports of Congress.

I do not claim that this is the best method of distribution; but the Committee on Printing have not felt it well, as an independent proposition, that they should make any change in this number that the experience of many years without complaint seems to have taught Congress was the proper number and a wise system.

Mr. VEST. Mr. President, the fact that this abuse which the chairman of the Committee on Printing has admitted to exist has become crystallized by custom is no argument to me for its continuance. I repeat every word I have said heretofore in regard to the printing of public documents and the inexcusable waste of public money in that direction, and the experience of every day that we have been in session has confirmed me in my opinion.

I received this morning a communication from the Register's Office of the Treasury, referring to the remarks I had the honor to submit to the Senate on last Monday, written by Mr. Holladay, an employé of that Department, one of its principal employés, which states that so gross has become the abuse of piling up these perfectly worthless documents in the Treasury Department that the Secretary of the Treasury some six months ago appointed a committee of five employés of the Department, of which he was chairman, to ascertain what relief could be had from this nuisance, for it has become nothing else. The corridors were filled up, the garrets filled, and there was no room for the absolutely necessary records of the Department needed for the transaction of business—filled with the Journals of the House and Senate and every resolution that is printed here by Congress, and that matter has been accumulating there for the last thirty years.

Why, sir, the clerk of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, as I said the other day, told me that last week he sent to the basement of this Capitol twenty-five bags of these documents which had never been opened, and the clerk of the Committee on Commerce, of which I am a member, corroborates the statement by saying that he does the same things. There is not a committee-room in this Capitol that is not crammed with them. There are over twenty-five hundred bags of unbound books in the cellar of the Capitol to-day.

Mr. MANDERSON. Are not those the books that are the allotment to each member of the Senate, not as yet distributed by him?

Mr. VEST. No, sir. They are sent to the committees, copies are distributed to every committee-room, and they are sent to each one of us individually besides.

Mr. MANDERSON. I should like to ask the Senator whether those copies of different documents in the committee-rooms are not of value, and whether they had not better be retained there, at least those of modern date, upon proper shelves and in proper cases, rather than have those committee-rooms stripped to the bare walls, as a great many are, and not a book to be seen upon any shelf.

Mr. VEST. I undertake to say that there is not a single member who will rise and declare that he consults one of these books in a committee-room. Every one of us knows that if we want to consult any publication of the Government we send to Mr. Smith at the document-room, and he sends us the record. Life is too short for us to go into these files of books and hunt out an item that is wanted in regard to the proceedings of Congress or in regard to an expenditure that has been made in a Department. It is not done; we know that it is not done by us.

The Senator from Illinois, and I am sorry he did not have more originality, said that he supposed the people needed valuable public documents. I said, until I thought I had exhausted my command of the English language to express it, that I had no valuable documents, but I have old House Journals and Senate Journals and statistical reports, and if my friend appeals to me personally he can have them, but I do not think so poorly of the intelligence of the people he represents as to suppose they want them.

Mr. CULLOM. Will the Senator allow me to say a word?

Mr. VEST. Certainly.

Mr. CULLOM. I simply stated that some of my constituents had the impression that the Senator had the Rebellion Records or some such work as that which they were very anxious to procure, and suggested that as I had none and never had any, possibly I might get some from the distinguished Senator.

I want to say, however, while I am on the floor, that I am not very well informed about the distribution of documents, but I suppose that so far as the committee-rooms are concerned, each committee-room is furnished with one copy of each public document at each session of Congress, and it seems to me that that is a very proper provision to be made. I am inclined to believe that the books which are going to the cellar or elsewhere out of the committee-rooms are old reports, probably twenty, thirty, forty, or fifty years old, which of course are not likely to be used by Senators in legislation at the present day. If that is the truth about it, which I take it to be, I still see no reason in that why the committee-rooms should not be furnished with a copy of each of the reports from year to year that are being made, for the use of the committees.

Mr. VEST. The Senator is very much mistaken. These are not old documents accumulated for a number of years, but they are books just issued to the committees and there is no room for them. In the room of the Committee on Commerce the glass cases provided for the files of these documents are full. You can not pile them on the floor. If all the books issued to the committees of the Senate were put in the committee-rooms, not a man could get into them—not one. We know that all we want is a file of the documents accessible to every member of the Senate and House, and that is in the document-room perfectly accessible and under the charge of a skillful officer. But yet a constant stream of publications goes to the committee-rooms and to each individual member of Congress.

My friend from Illinois says he has received communications from his constitutents stating that I had these publications. I stated expressly, as far as my feeble command of the English language would permit, and I have said it over and over again, that the documents I have are those issued to every member of the Senate, which are absolutely worthless to me and I suppose to them—these journals, these statistical reports issued to me for my personal and individual benefit, and for which I have no use.

Mr. MANDERSON. That the Senator may not be misunderstood by his constituents or the people at large, had he not better make the further statement that he gets but one copy of the Senate Journal and but one copy of the House Journal for his individual use?

Mr. VEST. I think I know whereof I speak on this subject. I am much obliged to my friend from Nebraska. What I do want to say is this: that I have no valuable documents; that I want more copies of the Records of the Rebellion; that I want more Agricultural Reports; that I want more Geological Reports; that I want more Reports on Cattle and Dairy Farming; that I want books that my people want, but I do not want this trash and the public money thrown away upon it. We have spent, as I showed the other day, and I repeat it, since the Forty-sixth Congress $1,200,000 that we might just as well have thrown into the Potomac River.

Mr. ALDRICH. Will the Senator from Missouri allow me to make a suggestion?

Mr. VEST. Certainly.

Mr. ALDRICH. It is that the books which he considers trash and which his constituents consider trash may be considered valuable by the constituents of other Senators.

Mr. VEST. Does the Senator from Rhode Island mean to say that his people want the Journals of the House and Senate?

Mr. ALDRICH. Certainly they do; and there is not a library in my State that would not wish to have them. The Senator made a mistake the other day in saying that these books were sent by the Secretary of the Interior to every library in every State in the United States. They are only sent to four libraries, and I have over forty public libraries in my little State that are anxious to receive these copies, and I do not have enough at my disposal to meet the demands within my State. If the Senator has a surplus I shall be very glad to relieve him.

Mr. VEST. I have heard that over and over again. I think I can distribute my charities without any suggestions from others. I find that so many of these public documents go to the Secretary of the Interior, and I am told that they are distributed to the libraries in the respective States.

Mr. ALDRICH. Four in each State, I think.

Mr. COCKRELL. Will my colleague permit me? It is not four to a State. One goes to a designation made by each Senator and each Representative, and it depends upon the number of Senators and Representatives a State has. Rhode Island gets four and Missouri gets sixteen.

Mr. VEST. I assert, and that is the salient point in this discussion, that instead of spending the money of the people upon books that they want, we are throwing it away upon books that they do not want and that we do not want ourselves. The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BUTLER] says to me that he has a ton of these documents issued to him for his personal use, and if there is such a rush for these documents on the part of our Republican colleagues, I take it for granted he will supply the demand to a limited extent anyhow.

I understood the Senator from Nebraska to assert that none of these House and Senate Journals are distributed to Senators and Members.

Mr. MANDERSON. For distribution, I do say.

Mr. VEST. For their personal use.

Mr. MANDERSON. No; I distinctly said that each Senator and each Member of the House received one for his personal use, but that he did not receive any for distribution, and the Journals will not be found upon the document list for distribution.

Mr. VEST. I made no statement here the other day in regard to this matter that I did not get from the Printing Office and from the document-room. I spent a day in hunting up the truth in regard to this abuse and this nuisance. Here is the condition of the printing of the Senate Journal, to which I refer the Senator from Nebraska, and I suppose he has this book at his command:

Sixth. Of the public Journals of the Senate and of the House of Representatives, 1,550 copies.

That is under section 3798 of the Revised Statutes, passed February 18, 1875. Fifteen hundred and fifty "of the public Journals of the Senate and of the House of Representatives." By a mistake in the revision, to which the Printing Office called my attention, as also did Mr. Amzi Smith, there was put in another provision in the revision, section 3792——

Mr. MANDERSON. Will the Senator give the dates of those acts, so that we may see how that is?

Mr. VEST. I have given one—February 18, 1875; and now section 3799 of the Revised Statutes is:

Of the documents printed by order of either House, there shall be printed and bound 50 additional copies for the purpose of exchange in foreign countries.

In section 3792, 1,550 are authorized, and in the above paragraph which I have read 1,550 more, making 3,100. Instead of 1,550 copies as stated in the Revised Statutes, there is twice that number; first, under the section which I have read, of the public Journals of the Senate and of the House of Representatives, 1,550 copies, and under section 3792, which was enacted on the 25th of July, 1868, it is provided that—

Fifteen hundred and fifty copies of any document ordered by Congress shall be printed, and that number shall be known as the usual number. No greater number shall be printed unless ordered by either House or as hereinafter provided.

Fifteen hundred and fifty copies are printed under this section and bound, and 1,550 copies under the other section, and I am told by the superintendent of the document-room and by the Public Printer or his assistant, who is very competent in this matter, that that was a mistake in the Revised Statutes, and yet it has gone on from year to year at an enormous expense to the people of the United States.

Mr. MANDERSON. The Senator from Missouri, if he will permit me to make the suggestion, this error in the law having existed for the last thirteen or fifteen years, has been here the greater part of those years smarting under this terrible infliction of public documents and has until this time made no efforts to correct it.

Mr. VEST. I have not been upon the Committee on Printing. I permitted myself to rely on the opinion of my distinguished friend from Nebraska, who has been chairman of that committee, and never until the other day, in a debate utterly unpremeditated, was my attention called to this abuse, and on inquiry I found that the Public Printer had carried out what he conceived to be the law by publishing twice as many of these documents as Congress ever intended should be published; and he informed me—or rather Mr. Brian, the assistant of the Public Printer, who is very competent in these matters—that he had appeared before Committee after Committee on Printing and called their attention to this thing, but without avail, and it has been permitted to go on from year to year.

I leave to the Senate to judge what is the worth of a remark made by the Senator from Nebraska a moment ago that I had been smarting under this abuse and had called no attention to it. I have done my work. I have served faithfully on all committees where I have been placed, and I have relied on other committees to do their duty. It is an abuse; and if there is any doubt about it let any Senator go to the basement of this Capitol, let him look at the upper portion of the Capitol, and let him look at the committee-rooms, and he will find that thousands and thousands of dollars are thrown away without any sort of excuse for it.

All that I want to do is to take this money and apply it to useful publications, and cut off this nuisance. Instead of throwing away hundreds of thousands of dollars year by year upon books that nobody wants, let us apply this money to books that will do some good amongst the people, and disseminate intelligence and aid the people throughout the country. That is all I want.

Mr. COCKRELL. Mr. President, in regard to the Secretary of War not disclosing the names of persons to whom the Rebellion Records have been ordered to be sent, I can verify from my own personal knowledge the custom that has existed in the War Department for many years, and probably the same exists in other Departments in regard to the distribution of documents. The Secretary of War has declined ordinarily to give information in relation to the lists of names sent in by the different Senators and Representatives of their constituents for these documents to be sent to. I remember very distinctly that some years ago I applied there and discussed the matter fully with the Secretary of War, and told him why I wanted to see the list of names, for the purpose of making, not public use of it, but simply to save me labor in distributing, simply that I might not send my copies to persons designated by Representatives, and the Secretary then permitted me to go and examine the list. It is simply a regulation of the Department, and I presume the present Secretary only followed in that line.

In regard to the documents which are accumulating in the Departments, the select committee of the Senate in regard to the organization and methods of business of the various Departments has given some attention to that and will report a bill on that question, not only in regard to the documents which have accumulated in the Executive Departments, but also the files of valuable documents which are no longer needed in the current business and have no historical value or political interest. That report will be submitted at a very early day.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I can not myself conceive of any such abuse having grown up in any Department of the Government as that a citizen of the United States asking for information of the character mentioned here should not receive it; much less that when a public officer, a member of this body or the House of Representatives, asks for it his request should be refused; and I was very much astonished, and I confess I was somewhat indignant, when I received from the Secretary of War a notice that I could not learn what libraries in my State were getting the Rebellion Records and that that was a state secret that must be kept close. I do not know but that that has been the rule, and when the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] says it has been I will not dispute his word. I simply say that it is an absurd, ridiculous rule, that, it seems to me, a man of ordinary intelligence would have wiped out on the first notice that such a rule had been adopted by somebody or had crept in by some system.

A Senator asks me if I ever heard of such a rule. I never heard of such a rule in the Interior Department, and I know such a rule never existed there, and does not exist there now.

On more than one occasion I have expressed my opinion about secrets in the Departments. I hold that there is no Department in this Government that has any business to have secrets from the public, except it may be the State Department, pending treaty negotiations or something of that character. Every decision made by the head of a Department ought to be an open book; every adjudication made by the head of a bureau ought to be an open book for the people of the United States to read and examine—not simply the public officials, but any man who does not go there out of simple idle curiosity, during the business hours of the day ought to have access to the public records. It is one of the essentials of a free people that they should know what their public servants are doing.

I may be pardoned if I depart a little from the subject. I consider the secret sessions of the Senate entirely unrepublican in character, except when there shall be, as there may occasionally be, a treaty under consideration that ought to be considered in the secrecy of an executive session; but there is no more reason why the confirmations of executive appointments should be behind closed doors, in my judgment, than there is that we should legislate behind closed doors, as we did some years ago.

Mr. PLUMB. Sympathizing somewhat with the Senator from Colorado, I should like to ask him what he thinks about the sessions of the President and his Cabinet on public matters. I do not want the matter to go off without considering the whole subject.

Mr. HAWLEY. He ought to include the Supreme Court also.

Mr. TELLER. I will include them all. I said the adjudications of a Department should be public. I do not say that when the Secretary of the Interior sits down to determine a judicial question, as he does, or when his law division sits down to determine it, pending that investigation everything should be made public. I do not suppose that when the President calls about him his Cabinet, what they discuss and what they say should be made public; but I do say that when they have come to a determination, that determination becomes the property of the people of the United States, and the President has no right to conceal it, and every member of his Cabinet ought to be compelled to take the responsibility for the advice that he has given the President.

So I hold here. If there is anything that the Senate desires to consider that it thinks it ought to consider in privacy, the application of two Senators closes the doors. When we have got through, the act should be made public, and it should be known how every man voted. That is what I say. And when the Senator from Connecticut asks me if the Supreme Court conferences should be public, he asks a question that has been asked by people who have not given thought to the subject. It is not a new and original proposition with him. It has been asked a dozen times by people who do not consider the difference between the processes of arriving at a conclusion and the conclusion itself. The Supreme Court renders its decisions in public when they are reached, and it does not attempt to hide the responsibility from the men who make them. Every man goes upon the record and the public knows just how each member of the judiciary votes; but the people do not know how the members of this body vote upon questions of infinitely more importance to them than the questions which are presented to the court.

Mr. HAWLEY. Will the Senator permit me a word?

Mr. TELLER. Certainly.

Mr. HAWLEY. I understood the Senator to be discussing the general proposition that all these things should be considered in public. He was not speaking so much about conclusions.

Mr. TELLER. I said expressly adjudications and determinations, when reached, should be made public.

Mr. HAWLEY. Then the Senator is satisfied if we have an ordinary executive session and announce afterwards the result, which we do always.

Mr. TELLER. I am not aware of that, but I am satisfied that would be an improvement on the present method. I am satisfied if I could say to my constituents, "On that nomination I voted so and so," it would be satisfactory to them; and I should be ashamed of myself if I ever cast a vote in the Senate, either in secret or open session, and was afraid to declare to them how I had voted. A treaty comes here of importance to the people, a treaty comes here that the whole people of the United States are interested in, and we sit with closed doors to consider it, and assume the responsibility of its rejection or its adoption.

I did not propose to discuss that question when I commenced. I only referred to it incidentally. I rose to say a word about these public records. I do not want to say anything offensive to anybody, but this is a very little matter. This is a good deal, if I can say it without being offensive, like a tempest in a teapot. If all the reforms now agitated and suggested should be carried out we should save comparatively little, a mere bagatelle, a mere nothing. Is it not better that we should err on the side of giving the people of the United States the advantage of knowing what their public servants have been doing? Is it not better that there should be too much publicity than not enough, that there should be books printed that they do not want rather than there should be books that they want and can not get left unprinted?

I agree with the Senator from Missouri, that we have not been advised perhaps sufficiently of the expenditure of money for this purpose, and that we get too few of valuable documents, like the one referred to a few moments since on Cattle and Dairy Farming, where great expense is incurred in getting the facts, with valuable plates and valuable pictures illustrative of the breed of cattle, and they are put in at great expense, and yet we get for the people of the United States less than 4,000 copies to distribute.

Mr. MANDERSON. If the Senator will permit me, I should like to suggest another practical difficulty in the road of publishing the best material. I do not mean to say that the Committee on Public Printing, as now constituted, would be efficient critics, and that if they would approve after reading it would benefit matters much; but I do say that it is a practical impossibility for the Committee on Printing to examine all the manuscript that is sent to them with a proposition to print. We must rely, and we invariably do rely, upon the recommendation of the heads of Departments from which a document emanates, not only as to the advisability of printing it, but as to the number that shall be printed.

Mr. TELLER. I hope the Senator will not understand that I am criticising the committee. It was farthest from my thought.

Mr. MANDERSON. I did not so understand the Senator.

Mr. TELLER. I know how this is done. I know we pay five or six hundred thousand dollars a year for geological surveys. The printing of the results of their labors costs a mere nothing. I can show one book which cost more than $100,000, yea $120,000, and I received 2 copies of it and my associates here received 2 copies of it. It would have cost a mere nothing to have given us 20 copies, because the labor consisted in preparing the data and acquiring the information; and when it was once put in print we might just as well have had 20 copies apiece as 2; and there is a demand in my State for a thousand of them to-day—a valuable book on mining.

If the Government is to expend its money to gather together these facts and this information, it gathers them for the people or it has no business with them at all. You have not any right to the valuable labors of scientific men if you are to bury the results. There should be enough copies printed of their works to enable at least a reasonable number of people to have them. I know we can not publish Agricultural Reports so that every farmer shall get one; but we can publish them so that there can be a copy in every neighborhood; we can publish them so that there shall be a copy in every school-house; we can publish them so that there shall be a copy in every library, and that is what I want, and that is what the people want.

I have served in this body several years and I have not a public document on my hands, unless it is one that has come to me within a few days past, that has not gone out to the people whom I attempt to represent. I have never had a book given to me that I could not distribute, and my own personal reports and those of the action of this body and the other House I keep in my private library at home. I have carefully preserved them, and I will say to the Senator from Missouri that they are examined from time to time by the people of my State.

I received but a few days since a letter from a State senator of my State saying, "Send me one copy of every document that the Government publishes." He says, "I keep a library for the benefit of the community in which I live, and the people understand that when they come to my library they can find everything the Government has published, and they come here whenever they want to find anything of the character of a Government publication."

I repeat again that the $5,000 or $10,000 which would be saved is a mere nothing, for I do not believe all the reforms suggested would amount to $5,000 a year. What is that? It is a mere nothing. It is one of the essentials to the maintenance of a free government that the people understand what their servants are doing. When the eye of the people is upon the public servants, then you may expect that you will have better legislation, and if ever the time shall come when this Republic will be in danger it will be when the people of the United States shall be careless of what their public servants are doing and shall fail to bring them to the proper mark if they fail in the discharge of duties that they have been intrusted with here, and you can not give them too many books, you can not make your record too open, you can not make your proceedings here too open. It is no answer to me to say that I may want, when I rise to discuss a treaty with the King of the Cannibal Islands, to talk about a policy of the Government that I do not want the King of the Cannibal Islands to understand. If I want to discuss that I say to my neighbor sitting by my side, "Let us close the doors," and two men in this body can close them; but when we get through, the people of the United States are entitled to know how I voted upon that treaty with the King of the Cannibal Islands.

I am not afraid, I repeat again, at any time, upon any vote that I may be called to give—nay, more, I am glad to let the people whom I represent know how I voted, whether it is in accordance with their wishes and their will or not.

Mr. VEST. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CHACE in the chair). The Chair would say to the Senator from Missouri that the morning hour has expired.

Mr. VEST. I wish to say a word.

Mr. MANDERSON. I hope the Senator from Missouri will be allowed to go on, and that we shall have the resolution disposed of.

Mr. SAWYER. I gave notice that I would call up the pension bills this morning. If this will not run on long, I will not interfere with the Senator from Missouri.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. No objection being made, the Senate continues the consideration of the resolution submitted by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON].

Mr. VEST. I have no disposition to detain the Senate by any remarks on this subject. The Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER] has discussed the whole matter, and says that the changes I propose amount simply to a saving at the best of five or ten thousand dollars in the course of a year. I read the other day the figures showing that we had wasted, in my judgment, $1,200,000 since the Forty-sixth Congress, and there is not a single session of Congress in which we have not thrown away over $150,000 on useless publications. It may be that that amount of money is not worth the consideration of the gigantic intellect of the Senator from Colorado; but I have been under the impression that we were here for the purpose of correcting just such abuses. I have neither furnished the teapot nor raised the tempest. This matter came here on a report of the Committee on Printing, and I took occasion to express my views in regard to an abuse that has grown up and which no Senator can fairly deny.

As to the declamation of the distinguished Senator from Colorado in regard to imparting general information to the people and taking secrecy off the proceedings of the Senate, I have nothing to say except that if that Senator will tell me how the presence of two thousand five hundred bags of unopened and bound documents in the cellar of this Capitol tends to disseminate intelligence among the people, I will bow with the greatest pleasure to his superior intellectuality. Yet this fact exists, and I assert now that the money is thrown away, and all I ask of my friend from Nebraska is, without imputing to him any neglect of official duty, that he look into the causes of this abuse, that he will, if possible—and he could do no higher public service—go through the list of documents distributed to Senators and Representatives personally and also for distribution by them, and increase the number of valuable documents and diminish those that are worthless. That is all. In that I doubt not the Senator from Colorado would cordially concur.

Mr. MANDERSON. The Senator will permit me to ask if that suggestion he has just made is not the very point of difference? The Senator says that certain documents are useless. The Congress of the United States for many years, some fifteen years, has designated by a majority that the documents he characterizes as useless are useful. Shall the Printing Committee or the chairman of the Printing Committee put up their opinion or his opinion as against that majority opinion of Congress that has operated for the last fifteen years?

Mr. VEST. Is there any limitation upon abuse? Is it possible that we are bound by precedent to such an extent that we can not go into the reform of the abuses of this Government? What are committees made for, what are Senators elected for, except for the specific purpose of improving the legislation of the country and introducing more economical methods in the public service?

Mr. MANDERSON. Who shall decide between the Senator and myself?

Mr. VEST. The Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled will decide. I point to an abuse, and I say now that there are twenty-five hundred bags of these documents in the basement of the Capitol that are useless.

Mr. MANDERSON. And I submit to the Senator that these bags of books that he refers to are books that have been accumulated in the committee-rooms that have been stripped of that which I say is useful in committee-rooms and have been sent to these places of deposit.

Mr. VEST. Since I have been speaking on this floor the clerk of the Committee on Foreign Relations has informed me that he sent down fifteen bags of these documents within the last few days, and I doubt not that every clerk of a committee of the Senate will corroborate the assertion. I ask the Senator from Nebraska if it is a fair criticism upon the public service that this enormous mass of volumes is issued unnecessarily? Why, sir, there are documents there unopened, bags unopened, that have lain in the basement of the Capitol for thirty years, and yet at the same time we have letters from my constituents, and from the Senator's constituents, and from all parts of the United States, asking for public documents that I can not supply—Smithsonian Reports, Agricultural Reports, Dairy Reports, Reports on Ethnology, the Geological Survey. Why not issue more of these? There is a list here, and the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BUTLER] proposes to speak upon it, showing the publications of this Government. Of certain valuable documents there are given to each Senator and Representative five or a dozen, and then there is sent to him all this trash, utterly useless, that nobody ever reads; bound volumes, for which there is no storage room; and I have been told by some Senators since this question came up that they have sent books to their post-offices, and the postmasters wrote to them remonstrating that they could not distribute them, could not give them away; books sometimes printed for our personal use, with our names upon them. And the Senator from Rhode Island says that his constituents want them—Journals of the Senate and of the House! My constituents want something that is worth reading. I do not propose to insult their intelligence by sending them books that they will not read and that are only fit to be put in libraries for reference and left on file to be accessible to the public.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I did not intend when I spoke before to cast a reflection upon the Senator from Missouri or to be offensive in any manner. I shall endeavor not to be excited, however, on this matter myself.

Mr. VEST. I am not excited.

Mr. TELLER. The Senator makes a statement as to cost which can not possibly be correct. I challenge the correctness of it, and it is not possible that he can make it out. He admits that of these various documents we must publish some. Now, the grand expense is in publishing the first volume. When you have got one book ready, when you publish but one, you have the great expense of the publication. Suppose you publish 3,100 of a certain class, and 1,500 are absolutely needed by Congress, when you have got the 1,500 ready you have incurred the grand expense; each volume after that will not cost over 40 per cent. of the first 1,500. So it will not do at all to multiply the expense of one volume by the total number of any given document to arrive at the gross expense. The great expense is in the first 1,000 or 2,000 of any work, and then the additional cost of further numbers is a matter simply of printing, paper, and binding. So it will not do to send out to the country a statement that we have wasted $1,200,000 in a few years.

While I do not intend myself in dealing with governmental affairs to be picayune and small, $1,200,000 is as much to me as it is to anybody, and I am anxious to save it. I have not been brought up in a way to despise dollars by any means, nor have I been brought up in a school that teaches me that I have any right to waste the public funds any more than my own.

Mr. VEST. If the Senator will permit me, I do not suppose there can be any difference between us as to the amount of money that has been spent. Here is what I referred to the other day:

I find on inquiry at the Printing Office that not one of these volumes has cost less than $2, and some of them cost as high as $2.85 and $3 apiece. There are 76 Senators and 334 Members and Delegates of the House, making 410 together in the two Houses. The number of public documents sent to each in the Forty-sixth, Forty-seventh, Forty-eighth, and Forty-ninth Congresses is 729, making 300,348 volumes at $2 apiece, making $600,696, or $150,174 in each Congress.

My position, whether right or wrong, is that these books are absolutely worthless to us, and I have found out by experience in my public duties that they are useless to our constituents.

Mr. TELLER. The Senator says the whole money expended is a waste; but does ever a government in the world fail to publish the record of its legislative proceedings? Was there ever a government that failed to furnish the representatives of the people a copy of all the records of its action? Has there ever been a time in the history of this country when a Senator or Member of the House did not get a copy of the Journal, not only of his body, but of the other? And what kind of a government would it be if we got down to that point of economy that we could not afford to give to each Senator and Member a copy of the proceedings of both bodies, and that we could not afford to give a copy to the public libraries of this country? Thirty-one hundred copies will not more than furnish one to each library in this country; it will not begin to do it. In the State of Colorado we are entitled to thirteen numbers, but it does not begin to supply the libraries of the State, let alone private libraries. It does not supply the principal libraries of the State.

Mr. MANDERSON. I will say to the Senator, with his leave, that of the class of publication to which he refers, the Senate and House Journals and the bound reports of committees of both Houses, the State of Colorado gets but six copies. Three go to the libraries designated and one to each member of the Senate and House from the State.

Mr. TELLER. Nobody can complain of that. If the documents accumulate in the Capitol, if in one of the committee-rooms they accumulate excessively, the whole expense, I repeat, is not very great, and I do not see why they should not be in the committee-rooms.

I have not had the good fortune to be connected with committees that I had very much control of so as to have many of these books. I think at this session for the first time in my eight years' service in this body I am in a committee-room that has something of a library. It has the statutes; it has some of these proceedings, and I must say I felt quite elevated when I got in there where I could get a book when I went to the committee-room without having to send to the public Library, and that I could spend ten, fifteen, or twenty minutes with some advantage to myself, and I hope to that of my constituents, looking up a subject connected with legislation. I never had before, and I never before heard any Senator complain that his committee-room was overstocked with books since I have been here. They may be so, but it has been true so far as I am concerned in my committee-rooms that there are a great number of shelves which are bare on which many books might be put. I think it would be of advantage to some members of the committees, myself at any rate, especially if I should have time to study.

Mr. HAWLEY. If this discussion is to go on, I propose to contribute an observation that may possibly be of some use.

The Senator from Missouri talks of the overloaded committee-rooms. Many of the committee-rooms have a large number of books that are of no possible use for the studies of that committee-room; but if there be a committee-room that has a complete collection of the peculiar books needed for its exact work, I do not know where it is. One would suppose that the first desire of a committee would be to have in its room a collection of the reports made by that committee from the beginning. I think a few years ago there was not one in a single room in this building. I know that the Military Committee did not have it and many others did not. Mr. McKee, of the Senate library, formerly of the document-room, has been making a private effort in this direction for some months and has succeeded in getting one copy for each committee-room of the Senate and of the House of all the reports that those committees have made—some of them are, of course, comparatively new committees—but running back to the war of 1812, when many of the documents were destroyed. But not only would a committee desire to have the reports made by that committee, but they naturally need a collection of all the statutes, and of all Government documents pertaining to the business of that particular committee.

If I dared to make a practical suggestion in the way of advice, I would say to the chairmen of committees that the lack under which they labor is very largely their own fault; that they can direct their clerks to begin now to make a collection of the specialty library that the committee needs. I am doing that work and have very much interest in it.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President, the remarks submitted by the Senator from Missouri on Monday last, and which he has substantially repeated to-day, convey, though of course not so intended by him, a false impression, in my judgment, of this whole matter. That there are abuses, that there is some extravagance in the number of documents ordered to be printed by Congress, is, in my judgment, beyond question. But when the Senator from Missouri says that we are throwing away $150,000 per annum in the publication of useless documents, such as the Journals of the two Houses and the various reports from the Departments, he is entirely mistaken. As the Senator from Colorado has well said, the great cost of the publication of these documents is the setting them in type; and when you have ordered 500 or 1,000 copies to be printed, the additional number up to 1,900 or 2,000 is insignificant. It is the mere cost of the paper and press-work.

Mr. VEST. And the binding.

Mr. GORMAN. The binding, of course, costs so much per volume. But there is not $150,000 or any other great amount of money thrown away each Congress in printing.

I submit to the Senator from Missouri that the natural inference from what he has said would be that the Committee on Printing have not been looking to and guarding carefully the interests of the Government. I have served upon the Committee on Printing for six or seven years, and each and every year it has been endeavoring to reduce the expenditures on account of public printing. There has never been a proposition made by that committee to reduce the number and the cost of public documents, some of which were considered entirely useless—at all events the printing of which was extravagant—that my friend from Missouri, who is a great economist, has not led the fight to increase the number, and almost invariably the reports of the Committee on Printing have been disagreed to and the largest number proposed has been ordered. I submit in this matter of the publication of the Journals of the two Houses, 3,100 copies may possibly be an excessive number, but my attention had not been called to that particular publication before, and I doubt whether that of the chairman of the committee has been called to it. Possibly 600 copies might be sufficient; but surely of the message of the President of the United States and the reports of the various Departments 1,900 copies are not too great a number to be distributed among the people.

The Senator from Missouri and myself may not care to look at them; we can send to the document-room and get them; but for distribution throughout the country, in my judgment, 1,900 is not too great a number. There is never a message sent in by the President of the United States that there is not a motion made by either a member of the Senate or of the House, and usually agreed to unanimously, for the printing of an additional number.

I hold in my hand a statement made by the Public Printer showing the exact number of documents ordered, the number fixed by law, and the number ordered by resolution of either House of Congress or of both Houses. If the Senator will refer to the Public Printer he will find that the whole expenditure per annum is $550,000. The Committee on Printing have struggled for several years to reduce the number of reports to be printed and the illustrations, and in the Agricultural Report alone at the last Congress we saved $55,000 in the illustrations. The innumerable reports that come in from heads of Departments, of which an extraordinary number is ordered to be printed, have run this amount up; but under the supervision of the Committees on Printing of both Houses of Congress, while the volume of work from the Government Printing Office has exceeded by 20 per cent. that of four years ago, the expenses of that great department have been kept down, because we have eliminated the expensive illustrations which heretofore were found in all these reports.

Now, I say to the Senator from Missouri that there is absolutely nothing in this case, unless Congress shall determine that it will reduce the number of documents, such as the Journals of the two Houses and reports of the Departments, below what was thought necessary fifteen years ago. The broad proposition that will have to be met when his resolution comes up for consideration is whether the number is to be decreased; and when you decrease the number from 1,900 to 1,000 or 1,200, as proposed by my friend from Missouri, the saving will be insignificant.

Mr. VEST. The Senator will see that he is mistaken as to the numbers printed. Of the Senate Journal alone 3,194 copies are printed, and of the House Journal 3,128. The Public Printer is printing this number from year to year.

Mr. GORMAN. The fact the Senator from Missouri presents ought to be considered; but that practice has crept in and has not been corrected, and I am glad the Senator from Missouri has called attention to it; but what I wanted to do was to enter my protest against the natural inference to be drawn from the remarks of the Senator from Missouri, that the Committees on Printing had been careless in the expenditure of the money.

Mr. VEST. I did not say that.

Mr. GORMAN. No, sir; the Senator from Missouri did not say that, but it is the natural inference to be drawn from what he said as to the extravagant expenditures of an unnecessary $150,000 each year. It is not one-tenth of it.

Mr. VEST. I made no attack upon the Committee on Printing. They made a report here and I took occasion to call their attention to what the Senator from Maryland himself knows is a mistake in the Revised Statutes in regard to the printing of the Journals. I made no reflection on the committee. If I have succeeded in drawing attention to this matter and any reform is inaugurated, I shall be glad.

Mr. GORMAN. The exact language of the Senator from Missouri was:

In other words—

Referring to the printing of the executive documents and the Journals—

In other words, we have thrown away in these four Congresses alone $1,200,000 of the public money.

Mr. VEST. I repeat it.

Mr. GORMAN. I say the Senator is mistaken, notwithstanding the fact that he repeats his statement. I say to him that there is no escape from printing the President's message and the accompanying documents from the Departments; there is no escape from printing the Journals of the House and Senate, and when you have ordered the printing of 100 copies, the number may be increased without amounting to one-tenth of the sum he has named, and therefore his statement is misleading. The impression of the country will be that we have been throwing away $1,200,000, when the fact is that by the passage of his resolution he would not save $50,000 per annum.

Mr. SAWYER. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of private pension bills favorably reported on the Calendar.

Mr. MANDERSON. I appeal to the Senator to give way. I do not think any one desires to be heard further on this resolution, and if it can be considered and passed, I desire to modify it.

Mr. SAWYER. If the Senate will come to a vote on the resolution, I will not insist on my motion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The yeas and nays not having been ordered, the Senator from Nebraska has a right to modify his resolution.

Mr. MANDERSON. I send the modification to the desk.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out all after the word "undistributed," in the fourth line, and insert:

The Secretary of War is requested, whenever the information is desired by any member of Congress, to furnish such member a list of names of those designated to receive the publication within the State or district represented by such member of Congress.

The resolution as modified was agreed to.

THE MEXICAN FREE ZONE.

Mr. MORGAN submitted the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury is directed to inform the Senate whether and to what extent the customs laws and regulations of Mexico, in the belt of country known as the Free Zone of Mexico, extending along our border, has encouraged smuggling across that border into either country, the estimated loss of revenue to the United States from that cause, the means employed, or that are necessary to prevent such smuggling, and the additional cost to the United States of the necessary agencies to prevent the violation of its laws in consequence of the existence of that Free Zone.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

Mr. MORGAN. I submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Secretary of State is directed to send to the Senate copies of all correspondence with the Government of Mexico, or its diplomatic representatives, not heretofore published, respecting the laws and regulations of that Republic relating to customs duties and their collection in the belt of border country extending with our frontier from the mouth of the Rio Grande to the Pacific Ocean, known as the Free Zone of Mexico.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I suggest to the Senator from Alabama that the ordinary course has been, and I think it ought to be, in calling for diplomatic correspondence, that the request should be addressed to the President, with the usual clause, "if not in his opinion incompatible with the public interest."

Mr. MORGAN. I had been informed that the minister from Mexico had made a voluntary communication to the Secretary of State setting forth what the laws and regulations were.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I dare say that may be true as matter of fact, but officially we do not know it. I think we had better preserve the usual form.

Mr. MORGAN. That was the reason why I put the resolution in the form I did, knowing there was no secret about the matter. I am quite willing to change it so as to direct the resolution to the President, "if not incompatible with the public interest."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The modification of the resolution will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the President, if not incompatible with the public interest, is requested to send to the Senate copies of all correspondence with the Government of Mexico, etc.

Mr. EDMUNDS. It should be, "if in his opinion not incompatible with the public interest."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution as proposed to be modified will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the President, if in his opinion not incompatible with the public interest, is requested to send to the Senate copies of all correspondence with the Government of Mexico, etc.

The resolution as modified was agreed to.

ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY.

Mr. MORGAN. I move that when the Senate adjourn to-day it adjourn to meet on Monday next, at 12 o'clock.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Alabama moves that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet on Monday next.

The motion was agreed to.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills, received from the House of Representatives yesterday, were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

A bill (H. R. 1612) to provide for holding terms of the United States district and circuit courts in the State of Nebraska;

A bill (H. R. 2595) for the relief of the widow of John A. S. Tutt, deceased;

A bill (H. R. 3361) to provide for holding terms of the circuit and district courts of the United States for the district of Kentucky at Owensborough, in said district, and for other purposes; and

A bill (H. R. 4375) to create a board of arbitration to settle and determine the controversy between the United States and the State of Texas relating to certain territory by them respectively claimed.

The following bills, received from the House of Representatives today, were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads:

A bill (H. R. 2093) for the relief of John K. Le Baron; and

A bill (H. R. 4557) for the relief of George F. Chilton.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on the 14th instant approved and signed the act (S. 1754) for the relief of Henry H. Marmaduke, of Missouri; and on the 15th instant the joint resolution (S. R. 50) appointing Andrew D. White a member of the Board of Regents of the Smithsonian Institution.

COMMITTEE SERVICE.

Mr. SAWYER. Before proceeding with the pension bills I wish to ask the Senate to excuse me from further service upon the Committee on Education and Labor. I have so much work to do on other committees that it is utterly impossible for me to attend to the business, and I ask that the Chair fill the place if the Senate will excuse me.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Wisconsin asks to be excused from further service upon the Committee on Education and Labor, and that the vacancy caused by his resignation be filled by the Chair. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The Chair appoints the Senator from Virginia [Mr. RIDDLEBERGER] to fill the vacancy upon the Committee on Education and Labor.

IMPROVEMENT OF OHIO RIVER.

Mr. QUAY. I ask the Senator from Wisconsin to give way for one moment for the passage of a resolution calling on the War Department for information.

Mr. SAWYER. I yield for that purpose.

Mr. QUAY. I offer the resolution which I send to the desk.

The Chief Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, requested to report to the Senate what amount of money could be profitably expended in the coming fiscal year in locating and continuing the improvement of the Ohio River between Davis Island Dam and a point at or near the mouth of Raccoon Creek in Beaver County, Pennsylvania, in accordance with reports of Col. W. E. Merrill, engineer in charge.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I suggest to the Senator from Pennsylvania that that resolution should be modified so as to read "that the Secretary of War be directed," instead of "requested."

Mr. QUAY. I have no objection to that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That modification will be made, if there be no objection.

The resolution as modified was agreed to.

CONSIDERATION OF PENSION BILLS.

Mr. SAWYER. I ask that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of private pension bills on the Calendar favorably reported.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Wisconsin? The Chair hears none, and the Secretary will report the first private pension bill on the Calendar in their order on the Calendar.

Mr. VEST. Do I understand that this only applies to private pension bills?

Mr. SAWYER. Private pension bills reported favorably.

Mr. VEST. Why not take up all the private bills?

Mr. SAWYER. We always take the pension bills by themselves. We can take up the others subsequently.

Mr. VEST. Very well.

MARY GAMMELL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1298) granting a pension to Mary Gammell. It proposes to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mary Gammell, widow of Andrew Gammell, late private in Company C, Thirty-fourth Massachusetts Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FREDERICK BENO.

The bill (S. 39) to grant an increase of pension to Frederick Beno was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to increase the pension of Frederick Beno, of East Portland, Oregon, to $72 per month.

Mr. BUTLER. Is there a report in that case?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is. The report will be read.

The Secretary proceeded to read the report submitted by Mr. PADDOCK January 10, 1888, and having read to the end of the letter signed "M. C. George," namely:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 39) granting an increase of pension to Frederick Beno, have examined the same, and report:

That said Beno was a private in Company F, Twelfth Missouri Infantry, and was severely wounded in thigh and arm at battle of Vicksburg, May 22, 1863, and was only pensioned first at $4 per month; afterward increased to $50, and is clearly entitled to $72, as fully appears by the inclosed letters.

All the papers in the Department clearly establish this claim, and your committee recommend the passage of the bill with an amendment, inserting company and regiment in which he served.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., December 6, 188-.

DEAR SIR: I desire to especially call your attention to the pension case of Frederick Beno, certificate No. 131076, who desires to have his allowance increased from $50 per month to $72 per month, the full sum which I understand can be given for a total disability.

I desire to state, on my own personal knowledge, that Mr. Beno is totally disabled, being unable to walk and having no use of his arms or legs. He suffers intensely, and his neighbors frequently hear him several hundred yards away screaming in his misery. He is compelled to take morphine from six to twelve times a day, and has done so for years, to suppress his pain. From the use of morphine his body has become poisoned, until sores have appeared all over him, scarring his body almost completely. It is necessary to have some one by him all the time to attend to him. Both testicles have had to be removed. He has a wife and three children, and possesses no property, but is a subject of charity upon his relatives, friends, and neighbors. His pain causes him to become delirious at times, and I have seen him in a perfectly insane and raving state; in fact, he is frequently insane, and when in that condition is dangerous to handle, for he then appears to have the power to strike wildly with his arms.

In his sane moments I have conversed with him regarding his service in the war, and, strange to say, notwithstanding his terrible condition, he becomes enthusiastic over the fact that he has sacrificed everything in defense of his country; and I have heard him say he would do it all over again rather than to see his country destroyed.

If there was ever a case that possessed true merit for a full allowance for total disability it is this one.

Yours, truly,

M. C. GEORGE.

Hon. W. W. DUDLEY,
Commissioner of Pensions.

Mr. BUTLER. Unless some Senator desires the further reading of the report, I do not care to hear anything more. I am quite satisfied.

Mr. MITCHELL. I desire to state that I know this man well, and there is no man in the United States suffering more.

Mr. BUTLER. I have no doubt, from the reading of the report thus far, that the man is entitled to a pension.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. JULIET G. HOWE.

The bill (S. 300) granting a pension to Miss Juliet G. Howe was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Miss Juliet G. Howe, a volunteer nurse during the late war, and pay her a pension at the rate of $25 per month.

Mr. COCKRELL. I call attention to the difference between the bill and the report. The report says "Mrs. Juliet G. Howe" and the bill says "Miss Juliet G. Howe."

Mr. PADDOCK. There should be a correction of the name as printed in the bill. The proper name is Mrs. Juliet G. Howe. She was a Miss Robbins.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, that amendment will be made.

Mr. COCKRELL. I should like to hear the report read. I should like to know some reason why this lady is given $25 when the widows of soldiers are given only $12. I shall move when the report is read to strike out "$25" and insert "$12."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the following report, submitted by Mr. PADDOCK January 10, 1888:

That Mrs. Juliet G. Howe served during the war with great distinction as an army nurse, and is now suffering from disease contracted during such service.

The records in the office of the Surgeon-General show that Juliet G. Howe (at that time Juliet G. Robbins) served as a nurse in Hammond General Hospital, Point Lookout, Maryland, from August 3, 1862, to October 5, 1863; at Columbian College General Hospital, Washington, D. C., from June 6, 1864, to August 30, 1864, and at De Camp General Hospital, David's Island, New York Harbor, New York, from September, 1864, to September 19, 1865.

At all places she served with great acceptance to the sick and wounded soldiers and the surgeons in charge, and received flattering testimonials from them.

April 24, 1865, a testimonial, signed by nearly one hundred soldiers, says:

"She has always been kind to us, and we shall always remember her with pleasure. She is indeed the soldier's friend."

At Point Lookout, Maryland, Assistant-Surgeon Allen, United States Army, said:

"Faithful, efficient, always cheerful, beloved by the patients universally. A better nurse could not be obtained. She has had my warmest thanks, and has my heartiest indorsement."

William H. Gardner, assistant surgeon, United States Army, on October 18, 1863, at Hammond General Hospital, says:

"It gives me much pleasure to testify to the character and qualities of Mrs. Juliet G. Robbins (now Howe), who has long been a nurse in this hospital. * * * In her wards she was kind and attentive to the sick and wounded under her care, ever ready to relieve their wants, and never sparing of labor or pains which could conduce to their happiness or comfort."

At same hospital, April 10, 1866, Th. Siebold, acting assistant surgeon, United States Army:

"I take pleasure in offering this trifling mark of regard for Mrs. Juliet G. Robbins (now Howe) and Mrs. M. S. Poole, who have so faithfully attended in my ward since the 20th December last."

The above indorsed by S. H. Allison, acting assistant surgeon, United States Army, and surgeon of volunteers.

At De Camp General Hospital, May 22, 1865, T. E. Martindale, assistant surgeon, United States Volunteers, says:

"My connection with this hospital being about to terminate, I find it difficult to leave without tendering you this expression of my high esteem for you * * * testify to your untiring devotion, your unceasing attention, and your success in ministering to the patients * * * and the eminent abilities you have displayed in your profession of nurse."

This and other testimonials, and the proof of disease and suffering from the sacrifices she then made, satisfy your committee she is entitled to the pension she seeks, and they report said bill favorably, with an amendment changing the word "Miss" wherever it occurs in said bill to "Mrs."

Your committee have made diligent inquiry at the offices of Adjutant-General, United States Army, and Surgeon-General, and can not find that the said nurse was paid for any such service.

The committee recommend the passage of the bill.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move to strike out "$25" and insert "$12" in line 7 of the bill.

Mr. PADDOCK. I hope the Senator will not move that amendment.

Mr. SAWYER. If there is to be a contest, let the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri moves to amend the bill by striking out "$25" where it occurs and inserting "$12;" so as to read:

And pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

Mr. PADDOCK. I hope the Senator from Missouri will not insist upon the amendment. This is a most exceptional and meritorious case. This woman was a nurse throughout the whole period of the war. The testimonials as to her service are numerous and of the highest character. She never received a dollar of remuneration from any source whatever. She is now an invalid and bedridden. If she were an ordinary nurse she would be entitled to $12 a month; but owing to the fact of her disability she is entitled to an additional amount, and it seems to me that in such a case there ought to be no question as to the sum proposed by the committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. COCKRELL. Mr. President——

Mr. SAWYER. I think we had better pass over the bill and go on with the others, if there is to be a contest.

Mr. PADDOCK. I hope the Senator from Missouri will withdraw his amendment.

Mr. COCKRELL. I shall unquestionably not withdraw the amendment. There is no question but that the amendment is right, just, equitable, and fair in law and in equity. She is not entitled to a pension at all, and this is a mere gratuity. It is not based upon any disease or injury received or contracted in the service in the line of duty. There is not one word in the report to show that there was ever any injury or disability incurred in the service when she was performing the duty of a nurse. It is a mere gratuity. There is no law for granting this pension.

Mr. SAWYER. I ask that the bill be passed over.

Mr. PADDOCK. She received injury in the line of duty. Her health was broken down and ruined by reason of the service she performed. Of course there is no provision of law to cover such cases, but the equities are very strong.

Mr. PLATT. I wish to inquire of the chairman of the Committee on Pensions, or of the Senator from Wisconsin, who has these matters in charge, what has been the usual pension which has been allowed to a volunteer nurse, or whether there has been any usual rate of pension allowed?

Mr. PADDOCK. Will the Senator from Wisconsin——

Mr. SAWYER. I will answer that, if you will allow me.

Mr. PADDOCK. Allow me to make one statement in answer to the question of the Senator from Connecticut. This bill exactly as it is now passed the Senate at the last Congress, and the reasons for its passage now are infinitely stronger than they were then, because this woman is bedridden and ruined in health, and she is a very aged person.

Mr. SAWYER. In answer to the Senator from Connecticut, I will say that it has been the custom of the committee to grant a pension of $25 a month in such cases, but in the last Congress the other House cut most of the bills down, and we acquiesced. However, on a few of them we got a conference committee and some were allowed $20 and some $18, but the other House has been pretty persistent——

Mr. COCKRELL. In cutting them down to $12?

Mr. SAWYER. In cutting them down to $12. If this bill is going to give rise to any discussion, I will ask to have it passed over, unless the Senator from Missouri and the Senator from Nebraska can agree upon an amendment.

Mr. PADDOCK. I am unwilling to accept the amendment, but I will consent that the bill may go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri is entitled to a vote on his amendment, if he desires.

Mr. COCKRELL. I have no objection to the bill going over, if it is the desire that we shall go on and dispose of unobjected cases.

Mr. SAWYER. There is another bill of the same character which will soon be reached.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over, and when again reached the amendment offered by the Senator from Missouri will be pending.

Mr. PADDOCK. I suggest that it be allowed to go over, retaining its place on the Calendar.

Mr. SAWYER. Of course.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be so ordered, if there be no objection.

MATTIE GRAZIANI.

The bill (S. 303) granting a pension to Mattie Graziani, of Covington, Ky., was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mattie Graziani, widow of Lawrence L. Graziani, late of Company A, Third Regiment United States Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE PARK.

The bill (S. 1299) granting a pension to George Park was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of George Park, dependent father of William C. Park, Company H, Fifty-seventh Massachusetts Volunteers.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the report be read in that case.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the following report, submitted by Mr. DAVIS January 10, 1888:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the petition of George Park, praying for a pension, have examined the same, and report:

The petitioner, George Park, alleges that his two sons, H. L. Park and William C. Park, both minors, enlisted in Company H, Fifty-seventh Massachusetts Volunteers. H. L. Park, the eldest, was killed in the battle of North Anna River, June 24, 1864, aged nineteen years. William C. Park was wounded in the battle of the Wilderness; returned to his regiment from hospital; was taken prisoner at the springing of the mine at Petersburgh, and sent to the prison at Danville, N. C., where he died January 6, 1865, aged eighteen years.

The mother is drawing a pension on account of the death of the eldest son, and the petitioner is advised that he can not be allowed a pension under existing laws because the mother is receiving a pension on account of the death of one of their deceased sons.

Petitioner is seventy-three years old; is unable to support himself without outside help; is troubled with varicose veins in his limbs and rheumatism in his shoulder-joints. The Commissioner of Pensions writes to the chairman of this committee in regard to this case:

"The parents had two sons, who were killed or died in the service. Unless the parents are living apart or at variance, the father can not be pensioned under the laws as they now exist."

F. Wessen deposes, August 22, 1866, that William C. Park worked for him for the last two years previous to enlistment, and that deponent paid his wages to the petitioner, amounting to about $40 a month.

October 13, 1866, said Wessen and one F. F. Hopkins made a joint affidavit; Wessen deposing that he employed William C. Park from July, 1860, to December, 1863, at which time he enlisted, and that he, Wessen, paid the father the son's wages, at the rate of $25 to $30 a month, the father being in delicate health and nearly dependent on the earnings of his son for support of his family of wife and four children.

Hopkins deposes that he has known the father and family four years, and that the above statement is true in all respects.

Both deponents also state that the soldier left surviving one sister (Theresa), whose age on January 3, 1866, was five years.

This claim was rejected by the following indorsement:

"May 13, 1877. Rejected. The mother alive."

In view of all the facts in this case, your committee recommend the passage of the bill which is herewith submitted.

Mr. COCKRELL. I should like to ask the Senator from Wisconsin if the mother is still living? This claim was rejected eleven years ago. May 13, 1877, is the date of rejection in the Pension Office. At that time the claim was rejected because under the general law only the mother could draw a pension, whilst living, on account of dependence upon the son. Is the mother still living?

Mr. SAWYER. This is a bill which was reported by the chairman of the committee, and the details are not in my mind. As he is not present, I ask that the bill be passed over. I can not explain it, because I have not in my mind the details.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over, retaining its place on the Calendar.

CORDELIA R. JONES.

The bill (S. 1300) granting a pension to Cordelia R. Jones was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Cordelia R. Jones, widow of Theodore Jones, a private in Company G, Twenty-eighth Illinois Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. HETTIE K. PAINTER.

The bill (S. 434) granting a pension to Mrs. Hettie K. Painter was announced as the next pension bill on the Calendar.

Mr. COCKRELL. Is there a report in that case?

Mr. SAWYER. I ask that this bill be passed over. It is a bill of the same kind reported by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. PADDOCK] as the one which was passed over a few minutes ago.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over, retaining its place on the Calendar, if there be no objection.

HARLOW B. HYDE.

The bill (S. 1427) granting a pension to Harlow B. Hyde was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Harlow B. Hyde, dependent father of George B. Hyde, late a private in Company C, Second Wisconsin Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE W. PEAVEY.

The bill (S. 1478) granting a pension to George W. Peavey was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of George W. Peavey, late first lieutenant Fifty-seventh United States Colored Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY J. DAVIS.

The bill (S. 1111) granting a pension to Mary J. Davis was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mary J. Davis.

Mr. PLATT. Ought not the bill to state the connection of Mary J. Davis with the service, or something of that sort?

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask for the reading of the report in that case.

Mr. PLATT. I ask first, if the Senator will permit me, that the bill be read once more.

Mr. HARRIS. Let the bill be read first.

Mr. COCKRELL. I was just glancing at the report. There is no soldier named in it.

The bill was read.

Mr. PLATT. My point was this: I thought something should appear in the bill showing some claim to a pension. It states nothing about it, whether she was a nurse, a dependent mother, or a widow.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let part of the report be read and then I will suggest an amendment to cover the point which the Senator raises, which is a legitimate one, I think.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the report submitted by Mr. SAWYER January 17, 1888, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred a bill granting a pension to Mary J. Davis, have examined the same, and report:

The claimant is the mother of the late Lorenzo Crittenden, who was ward-room steward on board the United States ship Guerriere. As to his service the Third Auditor says:

"He enlisted on the Ohio June 15, 1867, was transferred to the Guerriere the same day, and served on that vessel to May 15, 1869, when he was discharged."

He had previously enlisted and served on the United States ship Pawnee, and served out the term of his enlistment, when he was discharged.

A claim filed by him for pension, in consequence of disabilities incurred during his service, was pending at the time of his death, which occurred at Sailors' Home, Quincy, Mass., January 22, 1880.

The mother's claim was rejected July 18, 1885, "on the ground that the sailor's death was not the result of disease incurred in the service and line of duty, but, as indicated by the report made upon special examination, most probably the result of vicious habits."

This is certainly the conclusion of the special examiner appointed to investigate the claim, but in the opinion of the committee it is not justified by the testimony filed in the claim, nor does it furnish any information in addition or contrary to that already produced. The origin of the disease is shown by the testimony of his comrades.

Joseph Fletcher and Henry Peters swear that they knew Crittenden since the year 1867, being on the same ship with him; that they well remember his sickness on board the Guerriere by reason of the positions, Fletcher being steerage cook and Peters being ward-room waiter; they knew from the conversation of the doctor that Crittenden was sick with rheumatism.

Benjamin F. Page swears to his personal knowledge of the man and of his sickness on board the same vessel.

George F. Long swears that he was in the service with Crittenden, and knows he was sick before and after discharge.

William E. Corthel swears that he knew Crittenden since 1862; in 1869 and 1870 worked for the same man, and during that time he was lame and used up with rheumatism in left side, leg, and ankle; saw him often until he went to the Quincy Home, and afterwards saw him frequently and noticed that he was partially paralyzed.

William T. Prindell swears that he first knew Crittenden in 1867, and in October, 1869, sailor came to him lame and sick with rheumatism in left side, leg, and ankle. He offered to work without wages if witness would take him in. Witness did so, and Crittenden worked about the dining-room, at times so used up that he could do little or nothing. At this time Dr. Leighton boarded with witness and prescribed for both of them for rheumatism. In May, 1870, witness became embarrassed and gave up business, and Crittenden went to work for P. S. Wetherell on or about the same terms as for witness, and Dr. Leighton also boarded with Wetherell and prescribed for sailor. As witness and Crittenden were afflicted in the same way, it is natural that witness remembers that Crittenden kept getting worse and worse, and his disability increased until he became paralyzed. Dr. Leighton is dead and Wetherell has lost his mind.

Samuel D. Harrington and John P. Fitzgerald swear that sailor was treated from November 1, 1869, to the latter part of 1871 by Dr. Leighton for rheumatism, and he was not able to keep employment on account of his disability. Patrick Fitzgerald and Joel Wilder knew Crittenden from 1869 to 1871, and boarded where Crittenden worked; know that he had rheumatism off and on all the time, sometimes being confined to bed.

Philander T. Wetherell swears to Crittenden's being in his employ from November, 1869, to fall of 1871, and was attended by Dr. Leighton, now dead.

Dr. Thomas Hall swears that he was Crittenden's physician four years, and attended him various times for chronic articular rheumatism, from which he was never entirely free; and latterly for uræmic convulsions, followed by paralysis of left side, rendering him perfectly helpless.

Dr. Faxon, superintendent of Quincy Home, says Crittenden was admitted to home December 27, 1875. Disease, paralysis. No treatment aside from battery. Died January 22, 1880. Cause, paralysis, which, he says, was caused by tobacco.

It may be here remarked that the paralysis ensued after "chronic articular rheumatism," from which the man became partially before he was wholly paralyzed. He was a great and almost helpless sufferer from this first cause, and it seems a little strained and far from consistent to trace paralysis to tobacco.

These witnesses are all residents of Boston, Mass.

There were two special examinations, the first in Washington, the last in Boston. In the first there were no developments. The last was an ex parte investigation. No one representing the interests of the claimant had anything to do with it. In this examination Isaiah Prindell appears as a witness. He begins by saying that he is not certain, but thinks he knew Crittenden before 1860; and then goes on to testify in reference to him as to his condition prior to his voyage on the Guerriere. "It was about 1865 or 1866 that he worked for affiant." He knows of his going to the home on account of rheumatism and paralysis. He does not know how he incurred rheumatism, but he said it was in the service. While he knew him his habits were fair. He smoked some; do not know that he chewed any. Did not smoke much.

Mrs. Mary Snow testifies in this examination, but it is principally as to what she does not know.

The doctors who treated him in hospital and at the home differ in their testimony. Some say he drank and smoked excessively. Some say he had delirium tremens, others not. Dr. Hall never saw him drunk. Testifies from memory. Dr. Faxon, of the home, says his disability when admitted to the home was paralysis; he died of general debility resulting from that; don't know that paralysis was the result of rheumatism; he really worried himself to death—disappointed that he could not recover from his paralysis. He did not drink, but he smoked; he (Dr. Faxon) served tobacco to all who were able to use it. Some he cut off; they were not strong enough. He could not say that tobacco caused his death. Again he says his paralysis was caused by tobacco; reason for this opinion is his conversations with him; he never examined him. George F. Going, his shipmate, sailed with him from Boston to Rio Janeiro. He used to smoke and took a glass occasionally; never saw him the worse for liquor.

William E. Corthel, who testified in the special examination, says his habits were good; never saw him under the influence of liquor; saw him many times day and evening. "It was not a fact that he was a hard drinker or smoker; saw him every day or two for nearly two years; he smoked cigars; he used to drink beer; have seen him and know."

Samuel D. Harrington, in special examination, says he was not a bad drinker; never saw him intoxicated; smoked like the average of men. This special examination has produced nothing new except some few contradictions.

A. H. Shattuck, Second Auditor's Office, in a letter to the Commissioner of Pensions, written October 13, 1884, says as to the son's supporting his mother that he was in no condition to do so.

"He always expressed a desire to assist his poor old mother, who was once a slave, but circumstances prevented. The claimant, Mrs. Mary J. Davis, and her daughter live together and support themselves by taking washing. I always thought Mr. Crittenden in every sense a gentleman; his habits were temperate, and the officer in the hospital in which he died spoke of him to me in the highest terms."

Mrs. Davis and her children were slaves. They first belonged to John C. P. Peter, late of Montgomery County, Maryland. They afterwards became the property of the Rev. Charles H. Nourse, of Georgetown, D. C., from whom Mr. W. W. Corcoran, of Washington, D. C., purchased their freedom. Lorenzo, the deceased son, was for some years after a servant in Mr. Corcoran's family. She has one daughter, feeble in health. The two have for years struggled to procure needful food by doing such work as they could get and were competent to perform. She was, beyond any question, a dependent mother, dependent, unfortunately, in the eye of the law, upon a sick and dying son. There is no question as to the relationship or the dependence. There is no pretense that the claim should not be allowed, except that stated in the communcation of the Commissioner of Pensions, that the son's death was attributable to "vicious habits." This inference can only be drawn from the contradictory testimony of some of the witnesses.

Lorenzo Crittenden was some five years in the service of the Navy. His last three years were in part spent in South American ports. The records of the Navy Department show that he was ill at more or less frequent intervals during the cruise. From the time of his discharge he was disabled, and his disability gradually increased until he was stricken down with paralysis, and death soon after ensued. The predominance of testimony is against the theory of vicious habits, and in the opinion of the committee, in view of the weight of respectable and convincing proof to the contrary, it is an unjust decision.

The bill is reported favorably with a recommendation that it do pass.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move to add to the bill, after the words "Mary J. Davis," the words "dependent mother of the late Lorenzo Crittenden." I am not exactly familiar with the designations of those employed in the service. I suppose it would be correct to add after "Lorenzo Crittenden" the words "an enlisted man in the naval service."

Mr. SAWYER. Yes, I think so.

Mr. PLATT. Anything that will identify the pensioner will do.

Mr. COCKRELL. He was a ward-room steward, and the Third Auditor says he was enlisted, and served, when he was discharged; so I suppose we could call him an enlisted man in the naval service.

Mr. SAWYER. It is an oversight that some such clause was not put in the bill.

Mr. DOLPH. Let the amendment be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to add to the bill, "dependent mother of the late Lorenzo Crittenden, an enlisted man in the naval service."

Mr. SAWYER. There is no objection to that amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HENRY F. KAISER.

The bill (S. 124) granting a pension to Henry F. Kaiser was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Henry F. Kaiser, late a private in Company E, Forty-ninth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM SACKMAN, SR.

The bill (S. 465) granting a pension to William Sackman, sr., was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of William Sackman, sr., late a private in Company K, Fifth Regiment Missouri State Militia Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELIZA DOUGLASS.

The bill (S. 339) granting a pension to Eliza Douglass was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Eliza Douglass, dependent mother of James Douglass, late of Company H, Fifth Regiment Colored Troops.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

POLLY H. SMITH.

The bill (S. 43) granting a pension to Polly H. Smith was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Polly H. Smith, widow of the late John H. Smith, brevet captain Company L, Second Regiment United States Artillery, at the rate of $50 per month, from and after July 1, 1886.

Mr. COCKRELL. I should like to hear the report read in that case.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the report, submitted by Mr. TURPIE January 17, 1888, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 43) granting a pension to Polly H. Smith, have examined the same, and report as follows:

The claimant is widow of John H. Smith, brevet captain Company L, Second Regiment United States Artillery, now deceased. The service record of husband is as follows:

He enlisted as a private in Battery L, Second Regiment Artillery, at Newport, Ky., January 27, 1854; was discharged by reason of expiring of term of service January 27, 1859; re-enlisted in same corps February 22, 1859; was discharged from second enlistment August 14, 1863, by reason of appointment as second lieutenant in same corps of artillery. Was promoted to first lieutenant June 13, 1864. He served in Army of Potomac, in Army of Cumberland, in Maryland and District of Columbia, in New York and Florida, until 1865, afterwards in California, in Washington, Arizona, and Alaska, in active service until December, 1879, sixteen years.

The history of the disability and death of the soldier is as follows: He was detailed in 1868 to act as assistant quartermaster and acting commissary of subsistence in Washington. His duties as such were very laborious, and he was almost constantly in the saddle. After several months' service as such, at the close of a long day's ride he discovered that he was injured; this was the beginning of fistula in ano. He underwent three operations of the knife for relief. The last wound was seven months in healing, and before healing the fistula appeared in another place, leaving him in a worse condition than at first, with health utterly broken. December 9, 1870, he applied to be relieved from active duty, and a retiring board of the Army, convened for that purpose at San Francisco, did retire him after fully hearing evidence, "as incapacitated for further duty by reason of disease contracted in the line of his duty." He died very suddenly at Portland, Oregon, September 8, 1885, reported as of "heart disease," while engaged in lifting a trunk. The evidence shows him to have been at the time of his enlistment and up to 1868 a man of excellent health, robust constitution; never before sick a day in his life. After 1870 never well; always suffering. The heart disease is characterized as sympathetic, the result of his other ailments and injuries. He died fifteen years after his retirement, but there is no evidence that he ever recovered his health. His ill health and disability were incurred in the line of service. The marriage took place at Fort Ridgely, March 5, 1860; is testified to by the adjutant-general of post and sutler, who were eye-witnesses.

It is recommended that the bill be reported back with recommendation that it do pass.

Mr. COCKRELL. I should like to call the attention of the committee in this case to the fact that after the name of John H. Smith appear the words—

Brevet captain Company L, Second Regiment United States Artillery, and to pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month from and after July 1, 1886.

That is granting arrears of pension.

Mr. SAWYER. I suggest that those words be stricken out. Their insertion was an error.

Mr. COCKRELL. Before I move to strike out those words I wish to include a little more. This officer was never anything but a lieutenant. I have never known any one to be pensioned according to the brevet rank of a deceased officer or soldier. I move to strike out the words "brevet captain" and in lieu to insert "lieutenant," and it will then read, "John H. Smith, late lieutenant Company L, Second Regiment United States Artillery," and then I move to strike out the rest of the bill, so that it will pension her as the widow of a lieutenant.

Mr. SAWYER. Very well.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The proposed amendment of the Senator from Missouri will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. In lines 6 and 7, it is proposed to strike out the words "brevet captain" and insert the words "late lieutenant."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be agreed to, if there be no objection.

Mr. HOAR. Before the amendment is agreed to I should like to know whether the officer actually acted as captain, performing the duties of captain.

Mr. COCKRELL. He was simply a lieutenant in the regular Army. Any lieutenant, even a junior or second lieutenant, may occasionally perform the duties of a captain.

Mr. HOAR. On what account is the pension conferred?

Mr. COCKRELL. It is conferred because the Pension Office refused it. The Pension Office said the disease of which he died very suddenly did not originate in the service in the line of duty. The committee think that it is sufficiently attributable to his service to pension him.

Mr. HOAR. When the disease originated was the officer actually acting as captain in the advanced rank, whatever it was, or as lieutenant?

Mr. COCKRELL. Probably as a private. He was a private for a long time. It was only in 1863 that he became a lieutenant.

Mr. DOLPH. I call for the reading of that portion of the report which speaks of his duties at the time he discovered that he was injured.

Mr. HOAR. Before that is read, allow me to state, with the leave of the Senator from Oregon, a question which has been presented at the Pension Office and also presented to the Committee on Pensions of the Senate. For instance, all the commissioned officers of a company may be killed in an action, the sergeant takes command, and while he is actually in command of the company he receives a wound which is the origin of his disability. Thereafter he is commissioned. The Pension Office under existing law declines to give him a pension attributable to the rank which he is actually exercising, pensioning him only in accordance with his actual rank. I believe justice requires that we should give the officer the pension in accordance with the rank he is actually holding, occupying, exercising at the time of his disability, and I do not want to insert anything in this bill which puts up the bars against that doctrine.

Mr. COCKRELL. I do not want anything to go into the bill that would seem to sanction the position taken by the Senator from Massachusetts. It is an old controverted question. It was before the Committee on Military Affairs for a long time, and it has been considered settled for a long time. There was at one time a bill passed authorizing a certain class of officers to be retired upon the rank of their command. A lieutenant-colonel under that law could be retired with the rank of major-general. That law was repealed after full discussion.

It has never been held in the whole service of the Army that because a lieutenant might be called upon to command a company, or a captain called upon to command a regiment, whilst he was so commanding he should be considered as holding the advanced rank as to pay and emoluments, or anything of that kind.

Mr. HOAR. I do not speak of that. I speak simply of his pension after a disability incurred when he was acting in an advanced position.

Mr. COCKRELL. If he should be pensioned according to the rank of his command, why should he not be paid according to it?

Mr. HOAR. I think there is a great difference when the man has been actually wounded.

Mr. COCKRELL. But that question would not be affected one way or the other by the amendment I propose, because my amendment simply gives him the rank he really held, about which there is no controversy.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senate agree to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. DOLPH. Let the portion of the report which refers to the disability which led to the death be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That part of the report will be again read.

The Secretary read as follows:

The history of the disability and death of the soldier is as follows: He was detailed in 1868 to act as assistant quartermaster and acting commissary of subsistence in Washington. His duties as such were very laborious, and he was almost constantly in the saddle. After several months' service as such, at the close of a long day's ride, he discovered that he was injured; this was the beginning of fistula in ano. He underwent three operations of the knife for relief.

Mr. DOLPH. That is enough. I simply desire to say that this is a very meritorious case, so far as the widow is concerned. Her necessities are great, and, in fact, she is in destitution. I of course would not desire to make a precedent which would be troublesome hereafter; but if the widows of other officers in similar cases have received the amount called for by the bill, there is no reason why there should be a discrimination made against this claimant.

Mr. COCKRELL. There is no reason why a discrimination should be made in her favor, and I want simply to place her on an equality with other widows whose husbands' deaths were caused directly by injuries received in the service in the line of duty.

This lieutenant died of heart disease, and it is only indirectly that you can attribute his disease to the service. Now we place her on an equality with all the others. If the others are getting $50 she will get it; if they are getting $40 she will get it, whatever the amount may be.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Missouri.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The next amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. After the word "month," in line 8, it is proposed to strike out the words "from and after July 1, 1886."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be agreed to, if there be no objection.

Mr. COCKRELL. No; my amendment is to strike out all after the word "artillery," which would simply leave the case as was indicated a moment ago.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment of the Senator from Missouri will be so stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. After the word "artillery," in line 7, it is proposed to strike out the words:

And pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month from and after July 1, 1886.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS CHAPMAN.

The bill (S. 74) to increase the pension of Thomas Chapman was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to increase the pension of Thomas Chapman, of Campbell County, Tennessee, to $25 per month, his disabilities being such as to require the constant attention of some person to take care of him.

Mr. COCKRELL. I should like to ask whether the special bill we passed recently would affect this case.

Mr. SAWYER. What is this case?

Mr. COCKRELL. It is the case of Thomas Chapman, proposing to increase his pension to $25, his disability being such as to require constant attendance. The bill we passed recently did not affect this kind of a case, I understand.

Mr. SAWYER. No, it did not affect this kind of a case. This case is all right, and the bill ought to pass just as it was reported.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN M'GRATH.

The bill (S. 1512) granting an increase of pension to John McGrath was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of John McGrath, late a private in Company D, Twenty-third New Jersey Volunteers, at the rate of $30 per month, in lieu of that which he is now receiving.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the report be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the report submitted by Mr. BLODGETT January 18, 1888, as follows:

The petitioner, who was a private in Company D, Twenty-third New Jersey Volunteers, enlisted August 26, 1862, was mustered out September 13 of the same year, and was discharged February 14, 1863. In his application for a pension, filed February 10, 1879, he claimed that in the fall and winter of 1862 he contracted a severe cold, which settled in his lungs, resulting in incipient consumption, which later became chronic. This claim he substantiated, and was pensioned from February 15, 1863, at $4 per month, and from March 3, 1880, at $8 per month. On April 11, 1880, he made application for an increase of pension on the ground of increased disability. This was granted August 27, 1880, since which time he has received $16 per month. He now prays for further increase, alleging diseases of heart, kidneys, and liver, and claims to be totally incapacitated for labor.

The reports of the examining surgeons fully substantiate the claims of the petitioner, and after careful examination of other evidence the committee feels justified in recommending favorable action on his petition and accompanying bill.

Mr. COCKRELL. I do not see in the Chamber the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BLODGETT], who reported this bill. There is no mention made in the report of any action in the Pension Office since August 27, 1880. The Pension Office has always been, as I understand, liberal in allowing an increase and in reopening and reconsidering cases. I do not see that in this case any effort has been made since 1880 to have the pension increased. If no effort has been made at the Pension Office for an increase of pension, I submit that now, seven years after his pension was increased to $16, the Committee on Pensions ought not ask us to take this bill up and entertain jurisdiction of it until the matter has first been presented to the Pension Office. If we follow such a practice we shall simply turn the Senate into a pension office, to consider claims of every kind before they have been passed upon by the Pension Office itself.

Mr. SAWYER. The rule of the committee is as the Senator from Missouri has said it should be, but by some means a large number of such bills came to us. I ask that this bill may go over, as the Senator who reported it is not present, and I do not remember the case.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over and retain its place on the Calendar, if there be no objection.

Mr. COCKRELL. Oh, yes; let it retain its place on the Calendar.

MANON VANGORDON.

The bill (S. 330) granting a pension to Manon Vangordon was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Manon Vangordon, brother of Jacob Vangordon, late of Company K, Eighty-fourth Indiana Volunteer Infantry.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the report be read in that case.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the following report, submitted by Mr. PADDOCK January 18, 1888:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 330) granting a pension to Manon Vangordon, have examined the same, and report:

It appears from the papers in this case that Jacob M. Vangordon enlisted September 28, 1862, and served as a private in Company K, Eighty-fourth Regiment Indiana Volunteers, and that while so serving he was killed by a gunshot wound received in the line of duty at or near Atlanta, Ga., in 1864. Manon Vangordon, the sole surviving brother of Jacob, who, except for his age, would be entitled to receive a pension, who is totally blind and helpless and was dependent upon his brother during his life-time for support, and who is now a subject of charity, applied to the Pension Office for pension, which application was rejected because he was more than sixteen years old when the soldier died. He was forty-five years old in September, 1885, when his claim was presented to the Pension Office.

The record shows Jacob Vangordon to have been a good, true, and brave soldier; that he served about two years, and finally lost his life in the line of duty, and the committee are of the opinion, considering his honorable and useful service and the loss of his life under such circumstances, and the dependent condition of the brother, that the Government can well afford to make an exception in this case.

They therefore recommend the passage of the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN KALBFLEISCH.

The bill (S. 331) granting a pension to John Kalbfleisch was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of John Kalbfleisch, Company A, One hundred and sixteenth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, at the rate allowed for loss of leg.

Mr. PLATT. Is not that very indefinite, "at the rate allowed for loss of leg?"

Mr. PADDOCK. He lost his leg below the thigh.

Mr. PLATT. Ought not the bill to specify the loss of leg above the knee? I suggest that that amendment be made.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment proposed will be read at the desk.

Mr. COCKRELL. It was the right leg in this case that was lost, but the report does not state whether it was lost above the knee or not.

Mr. PLATT. That is the amendment I propose.

Mr. PADDOCK. The proof discloses the fact that it was lost just below the thigh.

Mr. SAWYER. Then it was above the knee.

Mr. PADDOCK. It was above the knee, which is the technical expression.

Mr. COCKRELL. Then let the bill state that the pension is granted for the loss of leg above the knee.

Mr. PLATT. That is what I propose.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. After the word "leg," at the end of the bill, it is proposed to insert the words, "above the knee;" so as to read:

At the rate allowed for loss of leg above the knee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SAMUEL LANE.

The bill (S. 122) granting a pension to Samuel Lane was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Samuel Lane, late of Company G, Fifty-fifth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN F. BALLIER.

The bill (S. 1613) granting an increase of pension to John F. Ballier was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to increase the pension of John F. Ballier, late colonel of Ninety-eighth Pennsylvania Volunteers in the war of the rebellion, at the rate fixed by law for cases of total disability.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PHILLIPE RAY.

The bill (S. 1614) granting a pension to Phillipe Ray was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Phillipe Ray, late of Company B, First New Jersey Cavalry in the war of the rebellion.

Mr. COCKRELL. I should like to hear the report read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the report, submitted by Mr. QUAY January 24, 1888, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the petition of Philip Ray, of Philadelphia, Pa., praying to be allowed a pension, have had the same under consideration, and report:

Philip Ray, the claimant, was enrolled and mustered on the 20th day of August, 1861, as sergeant of Company E, First New Jersey Cavalry; was early in 1862 reduced to the ranks and transferred to Company B, where he was made a corporal; was captured by the enemy at Harrisonburgh, Va., June 6, 1862, and is borne as a prisoner upon the regimental rolls for May, June, July, and August of that year. At a date not of record he was returned as a paroled prisoner to Camp Parole, Annapolis, Md., and thence transferred to a Washington hospital September 22, 1862. He rejoined his regiment, re-enlisted at the expiration of his term of service, and was discharged as corporal Company B, July 24, 1865. A pension is claimed for disabilities originating in exposure while a prisoner at Belle Isle and Lynchburgh, Va. His application was filed originally in 1869, and relinquished by his attorney in 1871 with the avowal that the evidence required by the Commissioner of Pensions could not be furnished. The case was afterward reopened upon the personal application of the claimant, and on June 17, 1887, was finally disposed of adversely by the Assistant Secretary of the Interior, who said in his letter dismissing it that the claimant was no doubt a good soldier and may have contracted the disability in the service, but that he had failed signally to prove it by the scanty evidence adduced.

The evidence submitted to the committee consists of a certificate of ex-Surgeon Rulett, of the First New Jersey Cavalry, and an affidavit of M. Hutchinson as to the sound health of the claimant at enrollment, and affidavits of Mrs. E. Beech and Mrs. C. Hornby that he was suffering in 1873 from kidney disease, which he said was contracted while in the United States service. The medical examiners to whom his case was committed reported his disability from diabetes at one-fourth of total, and permanent, and that, in their belief, it originated in the service in line of his duty. Ray himself testifies that it had its origin in a severe cold contracted on account of want of shelter while a prisoner, and that his health improved after his return to his regiment, but that during "Burnside's mud march," in January, 1863, he suffered a relapse, since which this disease has been continuous. He accounts for the impossibility of securing favorable testimony from his comrades by stating that he was desirous of promotion, which would have been difficult if his physical condition was known.

Your committee, in consideration of the long service of this soldier, his disabled condition, and the possibility and fair probability that his statement is true, report back his petition with the accompanying bill and recommend its passage.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HANNAH R. LANGDON.

The bill (S. 549) granting a pension to Hannah R. Langdon was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Hannah R. Langdon, widow of Henry H. Langdon, late an assistant surgeon in the Seventh Regiment Vermont Volunteers in the war of the rebellion, at the rate of $20 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. ARABELLA CODDINGTON.

The bill (S. 293) granting a pension to Mrs. Arabella Coddington was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The Committee on Pensions reported an amendment to add to the bill the words "in lieu of the pension she now receives;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, at the rate of $25 per month, the name of Mrs. Arabella Coddington, widow of E. H. Coddington, late captain of Company H, Forty-fifth Regiment of Iowa Infantry Volunteers, in lieu of the pension she now receives.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the report be read in that case, showing why the change of pension is made.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the following report, submitted by Mr. PADDOCK January 31, 1888:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 293) granting a pension to Mrs. Arabella Coddington, have examined the same, and report:

The petitioner is the widow of E. H. Coddington, who was mustered into the Fourteenth Regiment, Company F, Iowa Volunteers, as a sergeant, and was mustered out as captain of Company H, Forty-fifth Regiment Iowa Volunteers.

During his lifetime he was pensioned for loss of arm, in consequence of which it is affirmed that he was totally disabled, and from which he subsequently died. After his death his widow was pensioned at the rate of $8 a month, and the purpose of this bill is to increase her pension to $25 a month.

In the opinion of the committee the increase provided for is just; but there is another reason why she should have it. Prior to her marriage she was a hospital nurse, served faithfully as such, was exposed to and contracted a contagious disease, that of measles, and by reason of exposure took cold, which so permanently and seriously impaired her health that she is a suffering invalid at the present time. In substantiation of this, affidavits have been filed with the committee which satisfactorily prove her service and suffering.

Independent of this, however, she is entitled to a pension corresponding with the grade of a captain's widow, and the committee report the bill favorably, with an amendment inserting after the word "volunteers," in the eighth line, the words, "in lieu of the pension she now receives," and recommend that the bill do pass.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. ELVIRA L. JOHNSON.

The bill (S. 752) to grant a pension to Mrs. Elvira L. Johnson, widow of Commodore Philip E. Johnson, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 5, to change the name "Philip E. Johnson" to "Philip C. Johnson;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized and directed to place the name of Mrs. Elvira L. Johnson, widow of Commodore Philip C. Johnson, on the pension-roll at the rate of $50 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. I should like to ask the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. FAULKNER], who reported the bill, if this is the regular amount allowed by the Committee on Pensions in all similar cases of the same class and rank?

Mr. FAULKNER. It has been the rule in a number of cases; in fact I do not know any exception to it. There are numerous cases where the rank was lower than commodore where the amount was granted that is allowed in the bill.

As it does not appear in the report I desire to say further, for the information of the Senate, that Commodore Johnson was in fact an admiral at the time of his death by the regulations of the Navy Department. Owing to the death, or resignation, or retirement of an officer of that rank two days before Commodore Johnson's, he was in fact at that time, though not by commission, rear-admiral, and his widow would have been entitled to this pension.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to grant a pension to Mrs. Elvira L. Johnson, widow of Commodore Philip C. Johnson."

JACOB KINTZ.

The bill (S. 1086) granting a pension to Jacob Kintz, alias John Walters, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Jacob Kintz, alias John Walters, late of Company G, Second Battery, United States Infantry, afterward of the Twenty-first United States Infantry, and later, under new enlistment, assigned to Company I, Twenty-first United States Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHRISTOPHER WISEMILLER.

The bill (S. 819) granting a pension to Christopher Wisemiller was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Christopher Wisemiller, late private Company B, Third Regiment Wisconsin Cavalry Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN VERTESSY.

The bill (S. 821) granting a pension to John Vertessy was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of John Vertessy, late a captain in Company E, of the One hundred and sixth Regiment of Ohio Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ANGERONE P. COLE.

The bill (S. 815) granting a pension to Angerone P. Cole, mother of George H. Cole, private Company B, Twenty-fourth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteers, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Angerone P. Cole, mother of George H. Cole, private Company B, Twenty-fourth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

IDA M. WELTON.

The bill (S. 1784) granting a pension to Ida M. Welton was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension-roll the name of Ida M. Welton, only surviving child of George C. Welton, late a soldier in the Sixth Regiment Vermont Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY MARTIN.

The bill (S. 174) granting a pension to Mary Martin was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mary Martin, widow of Thomas Martin, late a private in Company C, Second Massachusetts Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ABBIE M. HAY.

The bill (S. 172) granting a pension to Abbie M. Hay was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Abbie M. Hay, widow of Thomas H. Hay, late a captain in the United States Army.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HENRY B. VERY.

The bill (S. 173) granting a pension to Henry B. Very was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Henry B. Very, late a private in Company A, Twelfth Rhode Island Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY A. MYKINS.

The bill (S. 170) granting a pension to Mary A. Mykins was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mary A. Mykins, widow of Daniel J. Mykins, late captain of Company E, One hundred and seventieth Regiment of New York Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM HEALEY.

The bill (S. 806) granting a pension to William Healey was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of William Healey, late a private in Company L, Second Regiment Illinois Light Artillery.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BASILE CHAMPAGNE.

The bill (S. 801) granting a pension to Basile Champagne was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Basile Champagne, late private in Company B, First Wisconsin Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DAVID A. SERVIS.

The bill (S. 820) granting a pension to David A. Servis was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of David A. Servis, late a private in Company B, of the Twenty-first Regiment of Wisconsin Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY SULLIVAN.

The bill (S. 838) granting a pension to Mary Sullivan was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mary Sullivan, widow of Michael Sullivan, late a private in Company K, Ninety-third Regiment Illinois Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARGARET S. MURRAY.

The bill (S. 404) for the relief of Margaret L. Murray was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments: In line 6 to change the name "Margaret L. Murray" to "Margaret S. Murray," in line 7 to change the name "J. Edward Murray" to "T. Edward Murray," and in line 10 to change the name "Margaret L. Murray" to "Margaret S. Murray;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he hereby is, ordered to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Margaret S. Murray, of Worcester, widow of Henry Murray, mother of T. Edward Murray, musician in Company C, Third Battalion Massachusetts Rifles, who died from disease contracted in the service, leaving no widow, child, or children, and upon whom said Margaret S. Murray was dependent.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. I should like to have the report read in that case.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the report submitted by Mr. DAVIS January 31, 1888, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred a bill (S. 404) for the relief of Margaret S. Murray, granting her a pension as the mother of T. Edward Murray, Company C, Third Battalion Massachusetts Rifles, have examined the same, and report:

This claim was rejected by the Bureau of Pensions June 9, 1879, and again April 11, 1884, for the reason that the soldier's death was not the result of a disability contracted in the service.

The deceased son enlisted April 19, 1861, for three months, and was discharged July 12, 1861, having been in the hospital since June 12, 1861, for treatment for typhoid fever. He died of consumption September 12, 1876, never having filed any claim for a pension. The claimant is his mother and a widow; and the proof as to her dependence on the deceased is, in the opinion of your committee, sufficient. The history of the deceased, subsequently to his discharge, appears by the following evidence:

Dr. O. Newton testifies, in March, 1879, that he was surgeon of the battalion of which deceased was private; that deceased was very sick with typhoid fever, and was sent home as soon as he was able to be moved; that when the fever left him he was afflicted with pustules filled with blood, which, when opened, could be stopped only by packing with lint saturated with Monsel's solution of iron. Deceased never came under affiant's treatment after leaving the Army, but affiant frequently saw him, and knows he never fully recovered; frequently saw him after consumption was manifest, which he believes was caused by malarial poisoning, and of which he has no doubt he died.

Dr. P. E. Hubon testifies, March, 1879, that deceased came under his care in July, 1861, in an almost moribund condition from typhoid malarial fever of lowest grade, liver apparently enlarged, and jaundiced and sickly appearance of skin. For days had to open rapidly-formed abscesses on face and body, and his case seemed hopeless. Under treatment he slowly recovered sufficiently to do some business. From that time to 1873, when affiant went to Europe, he treated deceased for various complaints, sore throat, cough, etc. In all treatment had to combat the malarial poison in his system.

Dr. F. J. McNulty testifies, March, 1879, that he treated deceased from November, 1873, to September, 1876; that when he saw him in 1873 he was suffering from an acute attack of bronchitis, which soon developed into a chronic form; and about the latter part of 1874 or beginning of 1875 well-marked symptoms of pulmonary phthisis presented themselves, which caused his death in 1876. In February, 1881, the same physician testifies that he attended deceased from early in 1873 until a short time before his death, February 12, 1876; that during this time affiant treated him for acute bronchitis; that the condition of his lungs during all this time was tuberculous, and he had frequent hemorrhages, and affiant's opinion is that he contracted his disease during the late war.

James J. McLane, late captain Company E, First Massachusetts Cavalry, testifies, April, 1880, that he was well acquainted with deceased, who was a sound man at his enlistment; that from exposure, etc., at Fort McHenry, Baltimore, was taken sick from a bad cold, which disabled him, and for which he was sent to hospital for treatment, where affiant frequently saw him suffering from hemorrhage and great weakness, which eventually caused his death. Affiant was with him during his service, and after his discharge until his death. Affiant saw deceased after his discharge in Little Washington, N. C., where he had a turn of bleeding, and afterward, in the fall of 1863, at Fort Washington, where he was so bad that affiant had him placed on a bed and carried to a hospital, "where I saw him several times bleeding from the lungs." Affiant saw him again at Roanoke Island, in 1865, where he was employed in the quartermaster's department as clerk. He was then troubled with spitting blood from his lungs, and after his discharge from that service until his death "throwing blood from his lungs."

George P. Burt testifies that he saw the deceased the next day after his discharge, when he appeared in a very sickly condition, suffering apparently from disease of some of his vital organs, and thereafter frequently saw him have hemorrhages until his death. In May, 1862, when troops were called for, he started for the seat of war, but was unable to go beyond Boston. In February, 1863, affiant called on deceased and found him bleeding from the lungs. In June, 1863, the deceased was appointed enrolling officer for the draft, but owing to his feeble condition was unable to accept. He soon after left for the front, where he remained until the spring of 1866, when he came home feeble and still suffering from frequent attacks of hemorrhage. He never rallied, but gradually failed from frequent attacks until his death.

Eliza O. Regan testifies that when deceased came home he was very feeble, appearing like a person with consumption.

Isaac Davis testifies that prior to deceased's enlistment he was a student in affiant's office, and to all appearance he was a strong, robust, healthy man, and free from any disease or bodily injury.

Twenty of deceased's neighbors and townsmen testify that he was sound at enlistment and free from disease.

In reference to the application for a rehearing of the case, in 1881, a report on file in the Pension Office states:

"Claim was rejected June 9, 1879, on the ground that the disease—phthisis—which caused soldier's death was not the result of his military service. In my opinion the additional evidence on which claim is readmitted is not sufficient on which to base a change of action. It now appears from the testimony of Dr. McNulty that he did not attend soldier up to time of his death, so we have no medical testimony or record to show cause of death."

The testimony is uniform, however, that out of the fourteen or more years which elapsed between his discharge and demise, only a fraction of a year, and that immediately preceding his death, is unaccounted for, and that during all this time he was under treatment for malarial and consumptive diseases or ailments allied to them. Evidence less pertinent and consecutive has in hundreds of cases convicted men of serious crimes; and your committee think it is not straining the point of evidence or mercy in favor of the widowed and paupered mother of the dead soldier to conclude that testimony which shows a sound condition of health at enlistment, serious and almost fatal illness during service, and a state of health from that time to death that required the regular attendance of physicians, whose concordant statements are continuous up to within the year, and "a short time before his death," is sufficient and binding upon their judgment, and that it justifies a favorable report upon the subject under consideration.

This is, therefore, herewith made, and the passage of an amended bill is recommended, correcting the names of the said Margaret S. Murray and the said T. Edward Murray to correspond with the facts, which amended bill is herewith submitted.

Before the reading was concluded,

Mr. COCKRELL. I do not care to have the report read further. I wish to suggest an amendment. Before the word "mother," in line 6, I move to insert the word "and;" and after the word "mother" to insert the word "of." The language seems to create some confusion the way it is now: "the name of Margaret S. Murray, of Worcester, widow of Henry Murray, mother T. Edward Murray." There ought to be some connection between the words, and I move that the words I have suggested be inserted, so as to read:

The name of Margaret S. Murray, of Worcester, widow of Henry Murray, and mother of T. Edward Murray.

That will explain exactly the relation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Missouri.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill for the relief of Margaret S. Murray."

C. R. THOMAS.

The bill (S. 335) granting a pension to C. R. Thomas, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to grant an increase of pension to C. R. Thomas, whose pension certificate is numbered 120171.

Mr. COCKRELL. I suggest after the name "C. R. Thomas" to insert "late a corporal Company D, Sixty-fourth Regiment Ohio Volunteers," so as to show what he is. I move that amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HENRY STAFFORD.

The bill (S. 679) granting a pension to Henry Stafford was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Henry Stafford, late a member of Company K, Seventh Regiment of Iowa Veteran Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES F. ALLGOWER.

The bill (S. 334) granting an increase of pension to Charles F. Allgower was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Charles F. Allgower, late captain of Company I, Seventy-seventh United States Colored Troops, at the rate of $72 a month.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the report be read in that case.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the report, submitted by Mr. DAVIS January 31, 1888, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 334) granting an increase of pension to Charles F. Allgower, have examined the same, and report:

It appears by the records in the case of Charles F. Allgower that he entered the service of the United States as a private in Company C of the Sixth Regiment New York Volunteers; that during such service he lost his left arm by a cannon shot, necessitating its amputation near the shoulder joint; that by reason of such injury he was mustered out of service, and so remained until his arm had time to heal; that thereupon he re-entered the service and became captain of Company I, Seventy-Seventh Regiment United States Colored Troops; that while on such duty he was transferred to the staff of General T. W. Sherman, then commanding the eastern district of Louisiana, as inspector of artillery and ordnance officer; that while in the discharge of that duty he suffered a collision with other horsemen, in which he was thrown from and underneath his horse, rendering him senseless, and from which resulted partial paralysis of both legs and of the remaining arm, deafness in the right ear, and mental disorders consequent upon concussion of the brain. Added to these infirmities is the loss of an eye, which occurred as a special dispensation, and is not chargeable to his military service.

It is in evidence from successive boards of medical examiners, as well as from private and unofficial physicians, that his injuries have rendered him practically helpless, requiring the services of an attendant in nearly every process and function of life—in dressing and in walking, in lying down and in rising up, and in the eating as well as in the final disposition of his food. This evidence is continuous, and is strengthened in its cumulative effect by the attempted technical impeachment by a pension agent, who, finding that the captain had walked the length of a block in a city, and, under inspiring conditions of strength and weather, had covered a larger space in the country, reported him—with an eye and an arm gone, with tottering legs, and a reeling brain—as partially disabled.

Your committee think proper to embody in this report the following letter from Captain Allgower's commander, who was equally noted for his bravery, his discipline, and his justice:

"HEADQUARTERS THIRD ARTILLERY,
"Fort Adams, Rhode Island, October 17, 1866.

"DEAR SIR: Yours of the 15th instant is received. I am very glad to hear from you again, and that you are being well cared for.

"It gives me pleasure to state that you served faithfully on my staff as inspector of artillery and ordnance officer from March, 1864, until you became totally disabled from a fall with your horse in the year 1865. I will always bear witness to your zeal and devotion to duty, and your sincere desire (and success) to always promptly meet the views and wishes of your commander in the line of your duty. Your knowledge, too, of ordnance and artillery, and all subjects connected therewith, was far above the general run of that of volunteer artillery officers.

"You deserve much credit, besides, in striving to the performance of arduous service after you had lost an arm in battle in the cause of your country.

"Your misfortune in accidentally being thrown with your horse when in the performance of your duty, and thus totally disabling you, was seriously felt by me, as I had no officer in my command who could properly replace you.

"Hoping that you will continue to improve in your health, and that you will receive the reward of your country for your important services, I am, very respectfully,

"Your obedient servant,

"T. W. SHERMAN, B. M. G., U. S. A.,
"Colonel Third Artillery, late Commander Eastern District Louisiana.

"CHARLES F. ALLGOWER, Esq.,
"Late Captain Seventy-seventh Colored Infantry,
"St. Luke's Hospital, New York City."

In this case there is a mass of papers which should suffice to define the status of a regiment; covering a score of years; comprising statements from nearly a score of doctors and many scores of acquaintances and attendants, and all establishing by testimony the facts hereinbefore detailed.

Your committee believe that Captain Allgower has earned in service and suffering the increase of pension for which he asks; and the bill for such increase is therefore reported favorably, and with a recommendation that it do pass.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move to amend the bill by adding at the end:

In lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

Mr. SAWYER. I have no objection to that amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

STEPHEN D. REDFIELD.

The bill (S. 1785) granting a pension to Stephen D. Redfield was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Stephen D. Redfield, late a second lieutenant in Company A, Thirty-seventh Regiment Iowa Volunteers, at $17 a month, in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REUBEN BROWNMILLER.

The bill (S. 333) granting a pension to Reuben Brownmiller was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Reuben Brownmiller, father of Jeremiah Brownmiller, late a private in Company H, Forty-eighth Ohio Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BERRY DAY.

The bill (S. 737) granting a pension to Berry Day was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Berry Day, father of A. L. Day, deceased, late of Company I, Fifth Regiment Ohio Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS S. HOPKINS.

The bill (S. 450) for the relief of Thomas S. Hopkins, late of Company C, Sixteenth Maine Volunteers, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to exempt Thomas S. Hopkins, late a private in Company C, Sixteenth Maine Volunteers, by reason of mental incapacity, from the limitation prescribed in section 2 of the act of Congress approved March 3, 1879, entitled "An act making appropriations for the payment of the arrears of pensions granted by act of Congress approved January 25, 1879, and for other purposes," to pay to him the same rate of pension, and the same arrears thereof, as if his application for a pension had been filed with and allowed by the Commissioner of Pensions prior to June 16, 1880.

Mr. PLATT. I should like to hear the report in that case.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Secretary proceeded to read the report submitted by Mr. DAVIS January 31, 1888.

Mr. PLATT. I withdraw the call for the reading of the report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The call for the reading of the report is withdrawn.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ADDIE BELL.

The bill (S. 1506) for the relief of Addie Bell was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to pay to Addie Bell, daughter of Maranda Bell, deceased, mother of John S. Bell, late private in Company C, One hundred and forty-eighth Regiment New York State Volunteers, the pension granted by certificate No. 231248 to Maranda Bell, computing the amount due to the day of her death only.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES D. WHALEY.

The bill (S. 753) granting a pension to James D. Whaley was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of James D. Whaley, of Lawrence County, Missouri, late of Company H, Fourth Regiment Missouri State Militia Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ABBIE S. HUTCHINSON.

The bill (S. 733) granting a pension to Abbie S. Hutchinson was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Abbie S. Hutchinson, widow of Charles F. Hutchinson, late private Company I, Sixth New Hampshire Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. ELIZABETH G. SCOTT.

The bill (S. 944) increasing the pension of Mrs. Elizabeth G. Scott was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Elizabeth Goodale Scott, widow of Robert N. Scott, deceased, late lieutenant-colonel Third United States Artillery, at the rate of $50 per month, in lieu of the amount now received by law.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY E. JOHNSON.

The bill (S. 337) granting a pension to Mary E. Johnson was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mary E. Johnson, dependent daughter of E. Johnson, late of Company A, Sixty-fourth Regiment Ohio Veteran Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LOUISE PAUL.

The bill (S. 749) granting a pension to Louise Paul was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Louise Paul, widow of Brig. Gen. Gabriel R. Paul, at $100 a month, in lieu of the pension she is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GUARDIAN OF ENOS J. SEARLES.

The bill (S. 738) granting a pension to guardian of Enos J. Searles, of Clermont County, Ohio, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Enos J. Searles, late private Company L, Fifth Ohio Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

STEPHEN R. SMITH.

The bill (S. 286) granting an increase of pension to Stephen R. Smith was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Stephen R. Smith, late a private in Company C, Thirty-first Regiment Iowa Infantry, at the rate of $40 per month, in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GENERAL S. W. PRICE.

The bill (S. 433) granting an increase of pension to General S. W. Price, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to increase the pension of General S. W. Price, late of the ——— Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, from $72 to $100 per month, Price having become totally blind, the loss of his eyesight being the direct result of a gunshot wound received by him while in the service of the Government in the United States Army, at the battle of Kenesaw, during the late war of the rebellion.

Mr. MANDERSON. I move to fill the blank in the fifth line by inserting the word "Twenty-first," General Price having been colonel of the Twenty-first Regiment Kentucky Volunteers.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ABBY J. SLOCUM.

The bill (S. 169) granting an increase of pension to Abby J. Slocum was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place the name of Abby J. Slocum, widow of John S. Slocum, late colonel of the Second Rhode Island Volunteer Infantry, on the pension-roll at the rate of $50 per month, in lieu of the rate of pension she now receives.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELEANOR S. LAWSON.

The bill (S. 175) granting a pension to Eleanor S. Lawson was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Eleanor S. Lawson, widow of Elias Lawson, late an acting ensign in the Navy.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ANDREW FRANKLIN.

The bill (S. 626) granting an increase of pension to Andrew Franklin, alias McKee, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Andrew Franklin, alias McKee, at the rate of $30 per month, in lieu of the pension he is now receiving under an act of Congress approved February 28, 1885.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the report be read in that case.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the following report, submitted by Mr. PADDOCK February 1, 1888:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 626) granting an increase of pension to Andrew Franklin, alias McKee, have examined the same, and report:

The claimant was a soldier in the Mexican war, and is now about ninety-five years of age. By special act, approved February 28, 1885, he was granted a pension at $8 per month. He now asks for an increase of the same to $30 per month. The testimony which was produced before the committee at the time the bill granting him a pension was pending shows that the claimant saw hard service in the war with Mexico and was wounded in action.

On account of the great age, the infirmities, and the total dependence of the claimant, the committee are of opinion that the increase should be allowed. They therefore recommend the passage of the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES H. YOUNG.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 2467) to amend chapter 191 of the private acts of the Forty-ninth Congress, passed at the second session thereof, concerning James H. Young. It proposes to amend chapter 191 so as to read:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of James H. Young, formerly captain of Company L, Fifth Regiment Kansas Cavalry Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JESSE H. STRICKLAND.

The bill (S. 381) for the relief of Col. Jesse H. Strickland was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 8, before the words "a pension," to strike out "that he be allowed" and insert "pay him;" so as to make the bill read:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Jesse H. Strickland, formerly colonel of the Eighth Regiment of Tennessee Cavalry, United States Volunteers, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill for the relief of Jesse H. Strickland."

WILLIAM C. WAIT.

The bill (S. 550) granting a pension to William C. Wait was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to restore to the pension-roll the name of William C. Wait, late a private in Company C, of the Fifth Vermont Volunteers, at the rate of $8 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY E. CRIMMINS.

The bill (S. 168) granting a pension to Mary E. Crimmins, widow of Patrick Crimmins, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mary E. Crimmins, widow of Patrick Crimmins, late a machinist's helper in the United States Navy, in service at the Naval Torpedo Station, Goat Island, Rhode Island.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LIZZIE WRIGHT OWEN.

The bill (S. 42) granting a pension to Lizzie Wright Owen was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Lizzie Wright Owen, only surviving daughter of George Wright, late a brigadier-general of United States volunteers, at the rate of $50 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY B. HOOK.

The bill (S. 1412) granting increase of pension to Mary B. Hook was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to pay Mary B. Hook, widow of James H. Hook, late a lieutenant-colonel in the Army, the sum of $50 per month in lieu of the amount she is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ANN E. TEW.

The bill (S. 167) granting a pension to Ann E. Tew was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Ann E. Tew, widow of George W. Tew, late colonel of the Fifth Rhode Island Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARGARET E. PIERCE.

The bill (S. 40) granting an increase of pension to Margaret E. Pierce was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides that the pension of Margaret E. Pierce, widow of Captain Henry Hubbard Pierce, late of the Twenty-first United States Infantry, who held the rank of major during the war of the rebellion, shall be increased to the amount allowed by law to the widow of a major.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHANNA LOEWINGER.

The bill (S. 739) granting a pension to Johnanna Loewinger was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. SAWYER. I move to amend the bill, in line 6, by striking out the name "Johnanna," and inserting "Johanna."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be read as proposed to be amended.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Johanna Loewinger, widow of Charles Loewinger, deceased, late of Company E, Twenty-eighth Regiment Ohio Volunteers.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to Johanna Loewinger."

PETER STUSSE.

The bill (S. 817) granting a pension to Peter Stusse was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Peter Stusse, late a private in Company K, of the Ninth Regiment of Wisconsin Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BETSEY MANNSFIELD.

The bill (S. 809) granting a pension to Betsey Mannsfield was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Betsey Mannsfield, mother of Franklin J. Mannsfield, late a private in Company I, of the Fifth Regiment of Wisconsin Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMASTASIA WALTER.

The bill (S. 816) granting a pension to Amastasia Walter was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Amastasia Walter, widow of Peter Walter, late a private of Company G, of the Twenty-six Regiment of Wisconsin Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DELIA U. PECK.

The bill (S. 803) granting a pension to Delia U. Peck was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Delia U. Peck, widow of Thomas S. Peck, late private in Company (unassigned) of Twenty-second Regiment of Wisconsin Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MELVINA GREENWOOD.

The bill (S. 805) granting a pension to Melvina Greenwood was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Melvina Greenwood, widow of William B. Greenwood, late a private in Company B, of the Sixteenth Regiment of Wisconsin Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. ELIZA L. MACE.

The bill (H. R. 363) granting a pension to Mrs. Eliza L. Mace was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mrs. Eliza L. Mace, widow of Richard E. Mace, late of Company I, Third Maine Volunteers, deceased.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

STEPHEN SINGLETON.

The bill (S. 860) granting a pension to Stephen Singleton was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place the name of Stephen Singleton on the pension-roll.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move to amend, after the name "Singleton," by inserting "late a private in Company G, Eighty-seventh Indiana Volunteers."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELIZA SUMMERS.

The bill (S. 472) granting a pension to Eliza Summers was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Eliza Summers, widow of Cornelius Summers, deceased, late a private of Company I, Seventy-first Regiment Missouri Enrolled Militia.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JULIA A. RHOADS.

The bill (S. 842) granting a pension to Julia A. Rhoads was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Julia A. Rhoads, widow of James R. Rhoads, a soldier in the late war of the rebellion.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

OSCAR S. COLLINS.

The bill (S. 413) granting an increase of pension to Oscar S. Collins was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Oscar S. Collins, late of Company F, First Regiment of Rhode Island Light Artillery Volunteers, at the rate of $36 per month, in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN HUMES.

The bill (H. R. 365) granting a pension to John Humes was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of John Humes, father of George W. Humes, deceased, late a private in Company E, Second Maine Cavalry Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FRANCES M'NEIL POTTER.

The bill (S. 1317) for the relief of Frances McNeil Potter was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to increase the pension of Frances McNeil Potter, daughter of the late General John McNeil, United States Army, from $30 to $50 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HANNAH C. DE WITT.

The bill (S. 451) granting a pension to Hannah C. De Witt was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-rolls the name of Hannah C. De Witt, mother of George E. De Witt, late a private in the Seventh Battery Maine Artillery, who died in the service November 9, 1864.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LOUISA PROVOST.

The bill (S. 1884) granting a pension to Louisa Provost was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Louisa Provost, widow of Peter Provost, late a soldier in Company B, Seventeenth Vermont.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. MARY R. ARMSTRONG.

The bill (S. 1070) granting a pension to Mrs. Mary R. Armstrong was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mrs. Mary R. Armstrong, mother of George R. Armstrong, late a member of Company L, Eleventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM RICHARDSON.

The bill (S. 1638) granting a pension to William Richardson was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of William Richardson, late a private in Company K, First Ohio Artillery.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SARAH ERRICKSON.

The bill (S. 822) granting a pension to Sarah Errickson, widow of James S. Errickson, late seaman United States Navy, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Sarah Errickson, widow of James S. Errickson, late seaman United States Navy.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

W. A. LEMASTER.

The bill (S. 647) for the relief of W. A. Lemaster was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for paying to W. A. Lemaster, of Iconium, Iowa, the whole sum of the pension due to George Lemaster, deceased, at the date of the death of George Lemaster, June 23, 1873, the pension having been erroneously withheld from March, 1861, during and up to June 23, 1873; but W. A. Lemaster shall first make proof satisfactory to the Secretary that he is the sole surviving heir of George Lemaster, deceased.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. BETSEY WINTERBOTTOM.

The bill (S. 895) for the relief of Mrs. Betsey Winterbottom was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension-roll the name of Mrs. Betsey Winterbottom, widow of John Winterbottom, late of Company A, Twenty-seventh Regiment Wisconsin Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHARLOTTE CAROLINE HACKLEMAN.

The bill (H. R. 120) for the relief of Charlotte Caroline Hackleman was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension-roll the name of Charlotte Caroline Hackleman, the invalid daughter of Pleasant A. Hackleman, late a brigadier-general of United States volunteers, and who was killed at Corinth, Miss., in October, 1862, at $18 per month for and during her natural life.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY C. KNIGHT.

The bill (H. R. 440) granting a pension to Mary C. Knight was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mary C. Knight, dependent daughter of Luther M. Knight, of Franklin, N. H., late surgeon of the Fifth Regiment New Hampshire Volunteers and chief medical officer of the First Division Army Corps, at the rate of $18 per month, payable to her legally constituted guardian.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN. C. JOHNSTON.

The bill (H. R. 221) increasing the pension of John C. Johnston was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides that the pension of John C. Johnston (certificate No. 45303) as private Company A, Sixty-first Pennsylvania Infantry Volunteers, be increased to $36 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY EVERINGHAM BROWN.

The bill (H. R. 880) granting a pension to Mary Everingham Brown was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mary Everingham Brown, a volunteer nurse during the war of the rebellion, at $12 a month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HUBERT M. POTTER.

The bill (H. R. 2457) to increase the pension of Hubert M. Potter was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to increase the pension of Hubert M. Potter, late private Company B, Fourteenth United States Infantry, to the amount of $45 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN GEIBEL.

The bill (S. 824) granting a pension to John Geibel was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 7, to strike out "to date from the day he was discharged from the service of the United States;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John Geibel, late a private in Company K, First Michigan Light Artillery.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

M. T. LINDSEY.

The bill (S. 703) granting a pension to M. T. Lindsey, of Oregon, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of M. T. Lindsey, of Oregon, late a sergeant of Company B, First Regiment Ohio Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELISHA GRISWOLD.

The bill (S. 835) for the relief of Elisha Griswold was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Elisha Griswold, formerly of Company F, Third Michigan Cavalry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

OSCAR F. CARPENTER.

The bill (S. 930) to grant a pension to Oscar F. Carpenter, Eleventh Independent Battery of Ohio Light Artillery, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Oscar F. Carpenter, late of the Eleventh Independent Battery of Ohio Light Artillery, for a wound of right leg, accidentally inflicted in camp in December, 1862, by a pistol in the hands of a comrade.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN A. TURLEY.

The bill (S. 45) granting a pension to the widow of John A. Turley was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Cynthia E. Turley, widow of John A. Turley, late a private in Company E of the Twentieth Kentucky Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HELEN M. RANDOLPH.

The bill (S. 1354) granting a pension to Helen Randolph was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Helen Randolph, widow of John Randolph, late of Company I, Thirty-fourth Regiment New York Volunteers, and of Company G, One hundred and eighty-ninth Regiment New York Volunteers.

Mr. DOLPH. There should be an amendment by inserting the letter "M." in the name of Helen Randolph, making it "Helen M. Randolph," and "S." after "John," so as to make it "John S. Randolph." I move these amendments.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to Helen M. Randolph."

SARAH E. BRANSON.

The bill (S. 854) granting a pension to Sarah E. Branson was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Sarah E. Branson, widow of Philip W. Branson, deceased, late of Company F, Fortieth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES COEY.

The bill (S. 1413) to increase the pension of James Coey was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to increase the pension of James Coey, late major of the One hundred and forty-seventh Regiment, New York Volunteers, to $60 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FRANCES ANNE PYNE RICKETTS.

The bill (S. 393) for the relief of Frances Anne Pyne Ricketts was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Frances Anne Pyne Ricketts, widow of James B. Ricketts, late a major-general in the United States Army, retired, at the rate of $100 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SAMUEL BROOKS.

The bill (S. 338) granting a pension to Samuel Brooks was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause, and in lieu thereof to insert:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to restore to the pension-rolls the name of Samuel Brooks, late of Company D, One hundred and fifth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry; that such restoration be made as of the date when the name of the said Brooks was dropped from said rolls, and that said Brooks be paid the pension he would have received from the date when his name was so dropped the same as if his name had never been stricken from said rolls.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the report be read in that case.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the following report, submitted by Mr. DAVIS February 14, 1888:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 338) granting a pension to Samuel Brooks, have examined the same, and report:

Samuel Brooks enlisted as private in Company D, One hundred and fifth Regiment Ohio Volunteers, August 2, 1862; was wounded at Fayetteville, N. C., on March 16, 1865; was discharged May 16, 1865; was pensioned at $4 per month from November 21, 1866, which pension, under the arrears act, related back to May 16, 1865, and was dropped December 1, 1870. The bill is for granting him a pension.

The declaration of the claimant for a pension was made on November 17, 1866. It recites, generally, that his wound was received at Fayetteville, N. C., in the service and in the line of duty, on or about the 16th day of March, 1865, and, particularly, that "while on the skirmish-line and entering the said town of Fayetteville he was wounded by a musket-ball from the rebels, passing through his left arm above the elbow, and through the left breast superficially," etc. Upon this declaration, the testimony of two comrades, one of whom saw him shot, and the other who knew of the fact from seeing him several days before and after the wound was received, and the company-roll of that date reporting him "absent, wounded," the pension was granted for the sum and of the date above mentioned. The claimant is an illiterate man, unskilled in expression, and the declaration for the pension was written by a person who, as the papers show, was clerk of the probate judge before whom the attestation was made.

The claimant drew his pension until December 1, 1870, when he was dropped without notice and without opportunity to answer or explain the attacks upon his character embodied in the report of a special agent of the Pension Office, who, under date of October 15, 1870, stated that "three citizens of Painesville, Ohio, and late members of Company D, One hundred and fifth Ohio Volunteers, informed him that claimant had been on duty as guard; that he had been called in and reported himself at camp; that claimant was intoxicated at the time, and was cautioned not to go away, as the regiment was about to move; that, not heeding the admonitions of his comrades, he went off, and while away was wounded; that the report was general that claimant was wounded in a house of ill-fame." The conclusion of the special agent is:

"The weight of evidence seems entirely against the fact that his wound was received in the line of duty, and I respectfully recommend that his name be stricken from the pension-roll."

In accordance with this report, based on ex parte and unsworn statements, the Commissioner struck the name of the claimant from the roll, as before stated, on December 1, 1870. After this fact had become known to claimant, and the ground of dismissal ascertained in general terms to be that his wound was not received in the line of duty, the claimant, for the first time, as shown by the records, made detailed statements of the circumstances attending its incurrence in a letter to the Commissioner and in a sworn declaration for renewal. The general facts thus detailed are that his regiment was in the advance as the army approached Fayetteville; that when they entered the town they were detailed for guard duty and placed in charge of properties; that his wound was received when he was relieved from guard and was obeying an order to rejoin his company on receiving notice that the regiment had evacuated the town, and that it occurred at meeting on the street a party of rebels in citizens' dress, with muskets, and who, on his refusal to halt and surrender, stabbed him in the hip with a bayonet and shot him in the arm and breast; that he escaped from them and rejoined his company at a ponton bridge outside the town, where his wounds were dressed by the regimental surgeon, and from whence he was taken on a stretcher to an ambulance.

The claimant states that Thomas Bowen, of Company A, same regiment, was with him when ordered off guard, accompanied him on his way to rejoin his company, and saw him shot. He protests that he has not knowingly made himself responsible for any conflicting statement to the above; that he does not write readily and is obliged to depend on others, and that any contradictory statement which may exist is due to misapprehension on the part of his attorneys; and that especially he never intended to say that he was wounded in a skirmish in which his regiment was engaged, or that he was wounded as the regiment entered Fayetteville, for the regiment had no skirmish. He denies the rumors of his being intoxicated and being at a house of ill-fame, and avers that he was not with his company or with any part of his regiment from an hour after the regiment entered the place until he got back to it, after being wounded.

Thomas Bowen, of Company A, same regiment, testifies in corroboration of the claimant in all essential points.

While the claimant, as many of his letters show, was making unavailing efforts to ascertain the precise charges against him, that he might have opportunity to answer and disprove them, and thus secure reinstatement, the secret-service division of the Pension Office was apparently more successful in its efforts to sustain the theory upon which the suspension was based, to wit, that the wound was incurred while absent from his command, off duty, and drunk. Four men, Taylor, Webster, Allen, and Grover, were found, who, under the immunity of secrecy, indorsed the statement reported by the detective to the Commissioner of Pensions on October 15, 1870. The verbal statements of these men were forwarded to the Commissioner May 1, 1872, and were made to play an important part in determining an appeal taken by the claimant from the Commissioner's decision of suspension to the Secretary of the Interior, which appeal was decided on November 30, 1872. This decision, after reviewing the whole case, concludes as follows:

"Applying the principle hereinbefore alluded to, I am clearly of the opinion that the sworn testimony in support of the claim outweighs the unsworn testimony against it, and therefore that the pension should be restored to the claimant. I do not deem the discrepancies existing between the two declarations of the claimant to be a sufficient ground for denying him a pension, if his right thereto is otherwise clearly established. They may have resulted from a defective memory—a very common fault. They do not of themselves indicate an attempt to defraud the Government, nor do I find anything of any weight in the papers that goes to justify a suspicion of fraudulent intent.

"Before the case is fully disposed of, however, I would suggest that every effort be made by your office to obtain the affidavits of Taylor, Grover, Allen, and Webster as to their knowledge of the circumstances as stated by them to the special agent of your office. If they will swear to what they have stated the weight of evidence will incline against the claimant and justify a continued suspension of Brooks's pension, or rather an entire cessation thereof."

The affidavits of the parties in question were secured by the detective, McColm, and transmitted to the safe custody of the secret-service division. The animus which moved the detective and his conception of duty in a case of antagonism between a soldier and his own official superior are indicated in the following extract from his report of January 29, 1873, transmitting to the Commissioner of Pensions the last of the four affidavits of which he was sent in quest:

"The affidavit of Grover completes the testimony called for by the honorable Acting Secretary of the Interior, in order that the weight of testimony made under oath, that of Taylor, Allen, Webster, and Grover, may sustain the decision of the honorable Commissioner of Pensions in the case."

If the detective had been inspired by a higher power than that which is credited with furnishing his class their acuteness, he could not more tersely or happily have interpreted the theory on which the Pension Office had proceeded in this case from the date of the order of suspension. These four affidavits of persons living in three different towns of two States, sworn to at dates twenty-seven days apart, were, as the originals show, written by the same hand, with the same ink and pen, on paper of the same water-lining and texture, doubtless at the same time, covering identically the same facts, using the same and peculiar forms of expression, and are, on their face, not the unbiased testimony of honest men, sorrowfully compelled, in justice to the Government, to do an injury to a comrade, but the coinage of a single brain, the work of a professional affidavit-monger, spiked throughout like thorns with malicious adjectives, and unmistakably intended to "sustain the decision of the honorable Commissioner of Pensions in the case," even at the cost of an act so wrongful that, without the legal penalty, it has all the moral obliquity of perjury.

None of these affidavits state as a matter of fact that claimant was at a house of ill-fame and was shot there, though they all suggest it, but all assert that claimant, after being ordered in from duty on guard, returned to his command in a state of intoxication and went away again against advice, receiving his wound during such later absence and when not on duty. These two specific charges—intoxication and receiving wound when off duty—being brought to the attention of the honorable Acting Secretary of the Interior, through these four affidavits of which he had suggested the procurement, secured from him on February 25, 1873, an affirmance of his suggestion of November 30, 1872, and a confirmation of the Commissioner's suspension of the claimant's pension.

It will be impracticable to follow in full detail the subsequent steps in the case. Frequent appeals were made by the claimant and his attorney to be informed of the alleged facts and theories relied on by the Pension Office in opposition to the restoration of the claimant's pension. One of these appeals, addressed to the late President Garfield, November 26, 1875, and by him referred to the Commissioner, embodies the following sensible and manly language:

"I reiterate my firm belief that a gross wrong is done this man by stopping his pension. Department officers act in good faith, I have no doubt, but the wrong comes from their practice of keeping from the claimant a knowledge of supposed facts and theories obtained through their secret-service division. I do not complain of the fact that the Government employs spies. I do insist that where the justice of their conclusion is strenuously questioned by a claimant he should be furnished, not with names of witnesses, but with a detailed statement of facts and circumstances alleged against him."

All appeals of this nature have been without effect. The Pension Office has rested secure in testimony with which it was satisfied, because it knew the detective who manufactured it, and which it was certain could not be technically disproved, because protected by the seal of departmental secrecy. The claimant's side of the case has, therefore, been conducted at manifest disadvantage, and according to the hints thrown out by chance and uncertain rumor. From the testimony obtained by claimant at various times since the suspension of the pension, and from that taken before different pension examiners and on file in the case, the committee extracts such portions as bear upon the issue raised by the affidavits procured by the detective of the secret-service division.

The affidavit of Henry Bowen, of Company A, of the same regiment with claimant, details the circumstances under which deponent came to be in claimant's company at the time the wound was received. Bowen testified, March 13, 1872, as follows:

"I was formerly a member of Company A, One hundred and fifth Regiment Ohio Infantry Volunteers, and well remember Samuel Brooks, the above-named soldier, who was a member of Company D, same regiment. Said Brooks was wounded in the left arm and breast on or about the 16th of March, 1865, while in the performance of his duty at Fayetteville, N. C., under the following circumstances, to wit: He was one of the detail to perform guard duty in the town, and was on duty most of the day. In the afternoon I saw said Brooks while passing on the street, and stopped with him. When the troops had left the town we did not receive information of it for some time—not until they had all got outside of the town. We were then notified by our sergeant to report to our companies, and we immediately started to comply. On the way we met five men dressed in citizens' clothes, and armed. They endeavored to stop us, but we would not halt. One of them charged bayonet on Brooks, and in the scuffle another one fired, wounding him as above stated. I did not see Brooks again until we reached the regiment. Brooks was not stationed at a house of ill-fame, nor did either he or myself visit such a house during the time I was with him. Neither of us had anything to drink during the day. The shooting was in no manner the fault of said Brooks; we were at the time on the way to join the companies of which we were members. I was the only man with Brooks at the time he was shot."

Marshall A. Teachout, sergeant of claimant's company, testifies:

"I was formerly sergeant Company D, One hundred and fifth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and well remember Samuel Brooks, who was a member of the same company and regiment. When our right arrived at Fayetteville, N. C., on or about the 16th March, 1865, it was detailed, or at least a portion of it, to guard the place, and our major was acting provost-marshal. Said Brooks was one of the detail, and was on guard a large portion of the day. I was in charge of the guard at that portion of the town. While on guard said Brooks was wounded in left arm; by whom I do not know. He did not leave Fayetteville with the company, but my recollection is that he came to it just as it was about to start, and was then wounded. He was not then intoxicated, and if any person has stated that he was wounded at a house of ill-fame it certainly was a mere matter of conjecture with him."

Orrin Snediker, member of Company F of claimant's regiment, testifies:

"The regiment was there sent out on guard duty, and I distinctly remember that Samuel Brooks, of Company D, went out with the regiment, and when we returned to headquarters said Samuel Brooks was not there; but he returned within about thirty minutes, wounded in the arm and breast, and I then talked with him about his wounds. I know that he did not return from guard duty until after he was wounded."

Reuben M. Simmons, member of Company F, same regiment, testifies:

"We were ordered out on guard duty, and when we returned to headquarters, or within a few minutes after we got back, Samuel Brooks, of Company D, came in wounded in the arm and breast. I know he did not return to his command after he went out on guard duty until after he was wounded."

R. G. Morganridge, captain of claimant's company, testifies:

"Was with the company at Fayetteville, N. C., and that the claimant was with the company at said Fayetteville; that when the Army was there the One hundred and fifth Ohio Volunteer Infantry was detailed to guard the town, and my company with the rest, and claimant went on duty with the rest of the company. In order to better guard the town, it was decided to divide it into districts, which was done, one company being assigned to each district. Guards were then placed at such places in the town as would preserve order and protect property. In many instances guards were stationed at private houses. Claimant went on duty with the rest of the company, and while on said guard duty, or before he rejoined his company, he was wounded. I was not present when claimant received his wound, and did not see him when he was shot, but do know that he went on duty with the rest of the company, and that when he returned he was wounded.

"I would further say that when the army moved out of Fayetteville toward Goldsborough, N. C., the One hundred and fifth Ohio Volunteer Infantry remained on duty in the town until the army trains had all moved out; said regiment covering the extreme rear of the army. I would further state that the claimant was a brave soldier and did his full duty as a soldier while in my company and under my command. The truth of the above statements I can personally certify to because I was personally knowing to them."

It is proper to state with reference to Captain Morganridge that in 1885, two years after the above direct and positive testimony was given, he was subjected to an examination before Special Examiner Loomis, in which his testimony, while not specifically contradictory of the above, is vacillating and uncertain, and inclined, under the direction of leading questions by the examiner, to give color to suggestions and innuendoes against the claimant. His testimony as a whole, if it possesses any value, is in favor of the claimant; and particularly as to the fact of his being wounded before his return to his company from standing on guard, and so sustaining the theory that such wound was incurred in the line of duty.

In January, 1885, the case having been reopened by the Pension Office for the review of old evidence and the introduction of new, an examination of witnesses was had before Examiner Keeney. At this examination several witnesses testified, but at such length that the committee gladly avail themselves of the succinct and intelligent summary made by the examiner. For the same reason the committee rely on the summaries made in June, 1885, and August, 1886, by Examiners Sweetzer and Parker, respectively. The committee invite attention to the recommendations of each of these examiners, made with all the facts before them, and fresh from contact with witnesses who, for the first time in the history of the case, instead of testifying ex parte, were subjected to rigid and exhaustive examinations. The summary of testimony given before Examiner Keeney, dated January 21, 1885, follows:

"CLEVELAND, OHIO, January 21, 1885.

"SIR: I have the honor to return herewith all the papers and to submit my report in claim No. 91319, of Samuel Brooks, of Painesville, Lake County, Ohio, late a private in Company D, One hundred and fifth Ohio Volunteer Infantry. The claimant was present and availed himself, as far as he desired, of all his rights in the premises. When he was not actually present himself he was represented by Sextus Sloan, esq., of Painesville, Ohio, his attorney.

"The claim having been investigated by two special agents under the old ex parte system, and some two or three appeals taken therein, I entered upon this examination with an honest endeavor to arrive at the true, bottom facts, if possible, and finally set the whole matter at rest.

"Pension is claimed for gunshot wound of left arm and left breast, received at Fayetteville, N. C., March 16, 1865. The only point involved in the claim is line of duty.

"Samuel Brooks, claimant, alleges that the wound was received while on his way to his company and regiment, after having been relieved from duty and ordered at once to report; that he was attacked by five armed citizens, one of whom shot him. It was about midnight, March 16, 1865; Union forces were evacuating the town. He did not report to his company and wander off and get shot; was not under the influence of liquor; had not tasted a drop that day; is and was not then a drinking man; never saw his company that night until they came to him at the ponton bridge as they were moving out; was lying there shot. Manner, fair. Reputation, good.

"Almon Grover, Unionville, Ohio, testifies that claimant was, as he understood, wounded in line of duty on his way to report to his company after having been relieved from duty. Claimant did not, to witness's knowledge, report to his company, get relieved, and wander off and get wounded in a private quarrel; was not drunk or under the influence of whisky; was a temperate, man of peaceful disposition. This witness, it will be observed, is one of the parties purporting to have testified before Special Examiner McCohn. He renounces that affidavit and makes a strong deposition in favor of the claim. Manner, fair, unbiased. Reputation, good.

"Henry Scoville, Ashtabula, Ohio, testifies that he was on guard duty at a private house next to the one claimant was guarding; that the was relieved from duty just after claimant was and ordered to report to his company at once; that they were going to evacuate the city; that he took right on down the street after claimant, though on the other side; kept in sight of him and one Bowen, who was with him, and saw them attacked by armed citizens, and heard the firing; that when the difficulty arose he, witness, did not stop just then to make a 'close inspection of things,' but 'got away from there pretty lively' himself; that the next he saw of claimant was when they found him at the ponton bridge shot—wounded; that he was in line of duty when the wound was received; was not drunk or under the influence of liquor; was not a drinking man; was going direct to his company when wounded. This witness is a man of bad reputation for truth and veracity, but I was impressed, from the details he gave, with the belief that he told the truth as near as he could recall the facts. Manner, fair; exhibited no bias or prejudice.

"Samuel J. Potts, Painesville, Ohio, testifies: Wound, as he understood it, was received in line of duty, 'returning from post of duty.' Claimant had not reported to his company before wounded; first they saw of him was down at the ponton bridge, wounded; this as they moved out; he was sober then, not drunk; was a temperate man. Manner of testifying, fair. Reputation, good.

"James H. Taylor. This is another one of the witnesses seen by the special agent, McColm, and, while a man of good reputation, has a bearing and manner in testifying which impresses one with the belief that he is either telling a lie or not telling the whole truth. He goes 'square back' on his affidavit to McColm, as he had practically done before in having made an affidavit in support of the claim at the instance of the claimant, and now, before me, and in the presence of the claimant, he makes a deposition supporting the claim. Of course his conflicting statements renders the testimony worthless either for or against the claim. After he, himself, mentioned the ex parte statement made before McColm, I deemed it proper to cross-question him upon it, and did so. He is against all pensions and pensioners, and is a chronic grumbler about them, as well as other things which do not coincide with his particular views.

"Claimant's final statements: F. M. Webster, one of the witnesses testifying against him before McColm, is dead; was killed by the cars some years ago; and Minor Allen is now, I am informed, residing in San Raphael, Marin County, California. He is a most important witness, and should be seen and closely questioned.

"I was unable to find but one comrade who knew anything of the case who had not already testified, for the reason that since the rejection, or since the claimant was dropped from the rolls, he has scoured the whole country and procured almost all the members of his company's affidavits.

"In conclusion, I will say that I am firmly of the opinion, from the evidence before me, that this claim is meritorious. I believe the claimant was wounded as alleged, and had there been an open investigation in the beginning would never have been dropped from the rolls. I am further satisfied that the question of intoxication is without foundation, claimant being a man always temperate; never seen or heard of being under the influence of liquor at any other time before, during, or since the war; is strictly temperate now; never touches a drop of intoxicating liquors of any kind.

"Respectfully,

"L. C. KEENEY, Special Examiner.

"JANUARY 31, 1885.

"Approved: The summary is a true reflex of the testimony embodied in this report.

"LEONARD MARTIN.

"Supervising Examiner, Cleveland District.

"Hon. O. P. G. CLARKE,

"Commissioner of Pensions."

The record of the case, so far as your committee have discovered, does not show any attempt on the part of the Pension Office to procure the testimony of the witness Allen, as advised by Special Examiner Keeney. Instead of that, Keeney is directed to take the testimony of two men who were not members of claimant's company, and who had no knowledge of claimant or his wound. On this, under date of May 29, 1885, Keeney reports as follows:

"In the month of January I investigated this claim and then procured all the testimony that could be found in this section of county material to the point at issue. I presume from an examination of the papers that the claim was returned for the testimony of George L. Mason, mentioned in Loomis's report, and for that of Locy Swartout, mentioned in office list of comrades, neither of whom were members of claimant's company, and very naturally know nothing whatever of the case; never knew the man.

"I am still of the opinion that this claim is meritorious. There must have been some mistake in sending it back here. It should have been sent as per recommendation in my former report, where it was certain evidence could have been found. It seems to me that we should not enter into speculation until we have exhausted certainties in the matter of securing evidence in a pension claim."

On June 25, 1885, Special Examiner Sweetzer made an examination of Dr. John Turnbull, assistant surgeon of the One hundred and fifth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, with the following report:

"Reputation good; unbiased; testifies that his age is forty-five; was assistant surgeon of the One hundred and fifth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and as the surgeon was a portion of the time acting as brigade and division surgeon, he, deponent, was assistant surgeon in charge of the regiment during last two years of the war, he being at this time the only medical officer on duty with the regiment; personally knew applicant.

"On the night of the 15th and 16th of March, 1865, we were called up before midnight, in line of march, at Fayetteville, N. C., and awaited and assisted the trains in crossing the river on ponton bridges, acting as rear guard for our portion of the army; the rebel citizens and rebel soldiers attacked our regiment, repeatedly firing upon us; and during this skirmish Samuel Brooks was wounded by a gunshot wound in upper third of left arm; also in left breast, and a flesh wound in left hip, which had the appearance of being caused by a bayonet. He was brought across the river with a portion of our men, the last to cross, and after crossing with him they laid him down by an old building, and one of the soldiers (I can not name him) came to me and told me Samuel Brooks was badly wounded and needed my assistance. I went immediately and found him wounded as above described. I dressed his wounds as best I could, and had him placed upon a stretcher and carried forward by his comrades to the ambulance, which was the last time I have ever seen him.

"It must have been 1 or 2 o'clock a. m. when he found applicant lying wounded as stated above; has no reason for believing he was not in line of duty when wounded, but believes he was; well knows the regiment had a number of men placed around the town at different houses; knows it because there were a number of rebels scattered around, and some of them were lying wounded in these houses, and he (deponent) attended them, and thus he saw that some of our men were on duty, and he thinks Brooks was one of these. When deponent found Brooks lying wounded he was, to all appearances, perfectly sober; if he was not he would certainly have known it; soldier was not, to his knowledge, in the habit of drinking. He was a good soldier; no shirk and no coward, and always prompt in performance of duty, and a surgeon very soon finds out who shirks and cowards are; statements given herein are given from a record made on the morning sick report and prescription book of the One hundred and fifth regiment and partly from memory also; knew soldier sufficiently well to have known if he had been addicted to loose habits of any kind; believes him to have been in all respects a trusworthy, moral man; can not say whether soldier had any personal enemies.

"Conclusion: From the evidence thus submitted I am firmly of the opinion that the claim is meritorious, and that the applicant is clearly deserving of a restoration of pension. I myself saw and examined deponent's regimental sick report and prescription book, such as a medical officer would naturally keep, and therein I find laid down the important facts relating to dates, nature of wounds treated, and final disposition of the soldier so far as within the medical officer's jurisdiction. I recommend the case for further examination as per report of Special Examiner L. C. Keeney, dated January 21, 1885.

"Very respectfully,

"A. H. SWEETZER, Special Examiner."

The record of Dr. Turnbull's examination bears the following indorsement:

"In view of the fact that a majority of the witnesses who testified against claimant in a former ex parte investigation have repudiated their adverse testimony, and the positive statements as to incurrence in line of duty by good and reliable witnesses, including that of Dr. Turnbull, I do not think, taking into consideration the distance the witness Allen lives, the case should be held for his deposition. I think it should be admitted, and, with Special Examiner Keeney, think that if a fair and impartial examination had been held in the first place the man's name would not have been dropped from the rolls.

"ROGERSON, S. E. D.

"SEPTEMBER 29, 1885."

On August 26, 1886, Special Examiner Parker took the testimony of Thomas Bowen, who was with the claimant when the wound was received. The conclusion of the examiner's report is given herewith, but the testimony is so closely identical in all essential points with that given by Bowen fourteen years before, and hereinbefore set forth, that its repetition is not considered necessary. It is as follows:

"Bowen is an ignorant man, but told his story in a truthful manner, and I believe him. I am of the opinion that this is a just claim, and I would recommend that claimant's name be restored to the pension-rolls.

"Very respectfully,

"R. W. D. PARKER."

These summaries embrace all the testimony, taken at the latest opening of the case for that purpose, of sufficient pertinency to influence any fair judgment as to the merits of the claimant's case, the proceedings in which have been presented with the degree of fullness herein employed that they might serve as an object lesson of the mode in which business has been conducted in a most important branch of the public service, a purpose the propriety of which will further appear before the reflections on the case are finally closed.

On November 30, 1872, according to the decision of the Acting Secretary of the Interior (the point of discrepancies in statements having been considered immaterial), the sole question remaining open in this case was that of the incurrence of the claimant's wound in the line of duty. The procurement by the detective, McColm, of the affidavits of the witnesses Taylor, Allen, Webster, and Grover, averring that the claimant, when wounded, was drunk and off duty, decided, in the opinion of the Acting Secretary of the Interior, this question against the claimant; and such decision was formally rendered by this official on February 25, 1873. Of the witnesses examined during 1885 and 1886, abstracts of whose testimony are hereinbefore given, many contradicted all and all contradicted many of the averments of the four affidavits, on which alone there was found justification for withholding the claimant's pension. These latter witnesses, however, furnished only cumulative testimony; for, as has already been shown by the committee, the affidavits of Taylor, Allen, Webster, and Grover contained inherent proofs of their falsity; and what the committee charge, the majority of these four affidavit-makers (one of whom is dead, and comprising two out of three who are still alive) themselves admit and sustain in their examinations of January, 1885.

It remains, therefore, that the theory and action of the Pension Office in this case are based on the ex parte testimony of one man; and by inherent as well as external evidence, by the affidavit itself, by the recanting oaths of his partners in wrong as well as by the unimpeached oaths of half a score of other witnesses, this one man is a thrice-proven perjurer; and yet upon this state of the case, and since these facts have thus been plainly demonstrated and placed on the records of the Pension Office, it has within the past year once more been solemnly decided that the claimant is not entitled to a restoration of his pension because his wounds were not received in the line of duty.

The wrong and outrage of this secret-service system is, not that it sometimes uses questionable means to secure just results, nor that by a more subtle cunning it frequently defeats conspiracy and fraud, but that its methods are applied to instances of technical wrong or simple discrepancy, and are thereafter perpetuated by the bureau rule of secrecy. If such secrecy were in fact total and perpetual, and so made to bear solely against the pecuniary rights or interests of the parties attacked, its evils would be comparatively lessened. But when to give force to needed evidence slander assails private character, and its poison, exhaled from careless employés or the more vicious dupes of the detective, spreads broodingly over the homes of its victims, the wrong and outrage become intolerable.

In the case under consideration the pitiable aspect is not that of the suspended pensioner groping amid the entanglements of concealed evidence and making ill-afforded journeys to discover comrades who would certify to his courage and character, years after his case had been sealed and closed in the secret-service division of the Pension Office, but it is when the busy gossip brings to his wife's unwilling ears the detective's falsehood of her husband's incontinence and crime. It is true that in this case slander did not impair the wife's confidence in her husband, and it is to their equal merit that such is the truth.

Among the voluminous papers which make up this case there is a letter from the wife of the claimant to the Commissioner of Pensions, written thirteen years after her husband had been dropped from the rolls, and bearing internal evidence that it was inspired by recent knowledge of the secret attacks upon her husband's character, as it also bears testimony of staunch womanliness and wifely devotion. The letter is badly spelled and inelegantly composed, but your committee venture to affirm that it was written by an honest wife and mother, to whom the pension is much for the comforts it would bring, but to whom it would be vastly more as the seal and pledge of the husband's honor and the family's good name. It is printed here without change:

"PAINESVILLE, February 16, 1884.

"SIR: I thought I would take the liberty of dropping you a few lines myself, seeing you did not answer my husband's letter. Now, all this talk that's about him is all falts, for I have known him from a boy up. Mr. Dudley, sir, I think that's a poor excuse to believe false stories. I think he had ought to have his pension. I think he has sent in sufficient proof, and good responcible men. It does seem to me that Rowdeys words are taken nowadays before good responcible men. You know the best of men have enemies. Now, if I could find out who those boys are he would make them prove it. I wish you would let me know if you could. Samuel's health is very poor and he can not work as other men can. His wounds bothers him dreadful bad. Oh, how they do pain him before a storm, and yet growing worse. My husband was a strong, healthy boy when he went into the army, and he has never had a days' good health since he came out. He has been a great distance to get his captain's affidavits and others also. They have respected him enough to drop him a card to see if he has redeemed his pension.

"If he was such a man as they say he was in the army, why would these business men be willing to help him. It has cost a great deal to go from one place to another, they live so far apart. They all seem to think that he was a good boy in the service. But, Mr. Dudley, he did not go in for money, he went in for his country, done his duty properly, never came home on a furlough, served almost three years until he got wounded, got an honorable discharge, like a man. His parents and relations are good Respectable and Responcible people, and mine also. Now, Mr. Dudley, I have a weakly family to take care off, and a sickly man and little to do with. Now, Mr. Dudley, please let me know what further proof you want. It would help me a great deal, for I need it bad; for I think it due to me, for he has lost both his health and wealth in the army. Now I hope I will hear a good news next time. This money is due to us if farety is shown. No more at present. Write soon, if you please, and let me know what you are going to do about this business.

"Very truly,

"MARIA BROOKS.

"Mr. W. W. DUDLEY."

Repeatedly since 1870, as the records show, on personal application and by attorney for copies of the charges alleged against the claimant, a declination has been returned, for the reason that it was in contravention of the rule of the Pension Office—holding sacred by such rule not the character of the soldier, but that of his defamers, and making of itself a breastwork behind which the slanderer could safely attack the unsuspecting and the weak. Such a system, so administered, is not merely pernicious and dangerous; it would be disgraceful in a despotism, and in a republic it is infamous.

It appears to your committee, after a full examination of the records of this case, that for the past seventeen years the Pension Office, in an effort to vindicate the feeble infallibility of a bureau, has not been careful to avoid trifling with the fame of an honest and faithful soldier, whose triple wounds should have been his protection; and, in such attempt, has caused the expenditure of more money than would have sufficed to pay his pension from the date of his discharge to that of his probable death. It is clear that this soldier has been wronged; and the bill directing his name to be placed on the pension-roll is amended so as to make such restoration relate back to the date when it was dropped therefrom; and, so amended, it is hereby reported back to the Senate, with the recommendation that it do pass.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. F. SELINA BUCHANAN.

The bill (S. 1985) granting an increase of pension to Mrs. F. Selina Buchanan was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mrs. F. Selina Buchanan, widow of the late McKean Buchanan, of the United States Navy, at $50 per month, in lieu of the amount she is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES JACKSON PURMAN.

The bill (S. 656) granting an increase of pension to James Jackson Purman was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to grant to James Jackson Purman, late first lieutenant in the One hundred and fortieth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, a pension at the rate of $45 per month in lieu of the pension now paid him.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. VIRGINIA GRIER.

The bill (S. 123) granting a pension to Mrs. Virginia Grier was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mrs. Virginia Grier, widow of William N. Grier, late brevet brigadier-general and colonel of the United States Army, at the rate of $30 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TOBIAS BANEY.

The bill (S. 121) granting a pension to Tobias Baney was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Tobias Baney, late of the One hundred and ninety-fifth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN S. COLEMAN.

The bill (S. 1007) granting a pension to John S. Coleman was announced as next in order on the Calendar.

Mr. COCKRELL. I think that had better go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill is objected to, and will retain its place on the Calendar.

EDWARD DURANT.

The bill (S. 765) granting an increase of pension to Edward Durant was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 10, before the word "dollars," to strike out "fifty" and insert "twenty-seven;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Edward Durant, late a private of Company G, Eighth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, who is now pensioned under certificate numbered 175166, and pay him a pension at the rate of $27 per month, in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SOPHIA W. WRIGHT.

The bill (S. 901) for the relief of Sophia W. Wright was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Sophia W. Wright, a volunteer nurse during the war of the rebellion, at the rate of $25 per month.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move to strike out "25," in line 7, and insert "12."

Mr. PADDOCK. I hope the Senator from Missouri will consent to let the bill go over instead of pressing the amendment.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let it pass over.

Mr. SAWYER. Let it go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over, the pending question being on the amendment of the Senator from Missouri.

MARY M. BRIGGS.

The bill (S. 899) for the relief of Mary M. Briggs was announced as next in order. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mary M. Briggs, a volunteer nurse during the war of the rebellion, at $25 per month.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let that go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over under objection, retaining its place upon the Calendar.

JAMES LUCAS.

The bill (S. 1096) granting a pension to James Lucas was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of James Lucas, late a private in Company H, One hundred and eleventh Regiment Ohio Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EMMA VON BERNEWITZ.

The bill (S. 1717) granting a pension to Emma Von Bernewitz was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Emma Von Bernewitz, a nurse in the Medical Department, United States Army.

Mr. PLATT. There is no amount specified in that bill.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move to insert "$12 a month."

Mr. SAWYER. I have no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. The proposed amendment is to add to the bill "and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LYDIA D. HOLTZ.

The bill (S. 811) granting a pension to Lydia D. Holtz was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 8, after the word "infantry," to strike out "to date from January 16, A. D. 1869, the date of William F. Holtz's death;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Lydia D. Holtz, widow of William F. Holtz, late a private in Company G, Fourth Regiment Minnesota Volunteer Infantry.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THERESA B. HOFFMAN.

The bill (S. 1665) granting a pension to Theresa B. Hoffman was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Theresa B. Hoffman, widow of E. G. Hoffman, deceased, late a captain in the One hundred and sixty-fifth Regiment of New York Volunteers, and to pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month, to commence from the date of the death of E. G. Hoffman, August 16, 1886.

The Committee on Pensions reported an amendment to strike out "to commence from the date of the death of the said E. G. Hoffman, August 16, 1886."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. What is the amount allowed to a captain? Is that the usual allowance?

Mr. SAWYER. Twenty dollars is the law. This is the same as the general amount.

Mr. COCKRELL. All right.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DAVID WILLIAMS.

The bill (S. 830) granting a pension to David Williams was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of David Williams, late a private in Company F, of the Twenty-eighth Regiment of Wisconsin Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. HARRIS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. PADDOCK. I appeal to the Senator from Tennessee to give way to me for one moment to call up a bill which was passed over informally,

Mr. HARRIS. I do not hear the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. PADDOCK. I ask the Senator to give way to me a moment to call up a bill which was passed over on account of an objection interposed, which is ready to be withdrawn.

Mr. HARRIS. One of the pension bills that has been passed over to-day?

Mr. PADDOCK. Yes, sir.

Mr. HARRIS. For that purpose I will withdraw the motion, but I beg to say to Senators that if I were to yield to one, I should have to yield to every other one; but inasmuch as the Senate, by unanimous consent, agreed to take up pension bills, I will allow the Senator from Nebraska to call up the bill to which he alludes, provided it does not lead to debate and discussion.

Mr. PADDOCK. I think it will not lead to debate. It is Order of Business 39, being the bill (S. 300) granting a pension to Mrs. Juliet G. Howe.

Mr. COCKRELL. I hope the Senator will not insist on disposing of that question now. There are several cases involved. It will occasion some discussion, and there is a general bill now on the Calendar reported by the committee in regard to all nurses. I think it had better go over until we can look into it a little further. There may be some special reason why this bill should be passed, but we have not time to look into it now.

Mr. HARRIS. If this is going to lead to discussion, I decline to withdraw my motion.

Mr. PADDOCK. I made the request under the impression that my friend from Missouri, after the very full statement of the case I made to him, would not interpose any further objection to its passage. As I find now that he does interpose an objection and insists upon it, I will not press the matter.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Tennessee moves that the Senate do now proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After twenty-two minutes spent in executive business the doors were reopened, and (at 4 o'clock and 58 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, February 20, 1888, at 12 o'clock m.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate the 16th day of February, 1888.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL.

Charles S. Cary, of New York, to be Solicitor-General, vice Alexander McCue, resigned.

REGISTERS OF LAND OFFICE.

R. B. Wilson, of Russellville, Ark., to be register of the land office at Dardanelle, Ark., vice Adolphus G. Leming, term expired.

Henry W. Scott, of Jetmore, Kans., to be register of the land office at Larned, Kans., vice William R. Brownlee, removed.

Edward G. Spilman, of Rapid City, Dak., to be register of the land office at Devil's Lake, Dak., vice Henry W. Lord, term expired.

NOMINATION WITHDRAWN.

William L. Bradford, to be consul of the United States at Barranquilla.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate February 16, 1888.

UNITED STATES CONSUL.

J. Harvey Brigham, of Louisiana, to be consul at Kingston, Jamaica.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS.

Alonzo L. Miles, of Maryland, to be collector of customs for the eastern district, in the State of Maryland.

RECEIVERS OF PUBLIC MONEYS.

Charles M. Foree, of Shelbyville, Ky., to be receiver of public moneys at Lewiston, Idaho.

J. H. Craddock, of Marysville, Cal., to be receiver of public moneys at Marysville, Cal.

REGISTERS OF LAND OFFICE.

Lewis C. Granger, of Oroville, Cal., to be register of the land office at Marysville, Cal.

Willis Holmes, of Natchitoches, La., to be register of the land office at Natchitoches, La.

Edward O. Miller, of Visalia, Cal., to be register of the land office at Visalia, Cal.

Francis F. Patterson, of Salem, N. C., to be register of the land office at Lewiston, Idaho.

Henry O. Billings, of Alton, Ill., to be register of the land office at Hailey, Idaho.

REVENUE SERVICE.

Fred R. Falkenstein, of Maryland, to be a second assistant engineer in the revenue service of the United States.

Second Lieut. Walstein A. Failing, of New York, to be a first lieutenant in the revenue service of the United States.

Second Lieut. William C. De Hart, of New Jersey, to be a first lieutenant in the revenue service of the United States.

Second Lieut. Albert Buhner, of South Carolina, to be a first lieutenant in the revenue service of the United States.

Third Lieut. Horace B. West, of Pennsylvania, to be second lieutenant in the revenue service of the United States.

Third Lieut. George A. Starkweather, of Wisconsin, to be a second lieutenant in the revenue service of the United States.

Third Lieut. John C. Moore, of Maryland, to be a second lieutenant in the revenue service of the United States.

Third Lieut. Charles D. Kennedy, of Massachusetts, to be a second lieutenant in the revenue service of the United States.

John E. Reinberg, of the District of Columbia, to be a third lieutenant in the revenue service of the United States.

Frank H. Dimock, of Massachusetts, to be a third lieutenant in the revenue service of the United States.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY.

Passed Assistant Paymaster William W. Barry, to be a paymaster in the Navy.

Assistant Paymaster Leeds C. Kerr, to be a passed assistant paymaster in the Navy.

Commodore Daniel L. Braine, a resident of New York, to be a rear-admiral in the Navy from the 4th September, 1887.

Capt. George Brown, a resident of Indiana, to be a commodore in the Navy from the 4th September, 1887.

Commander William Whitehead, a resident of Pennsylvania, to be a captain in the Navy from the 4th September, 1887.

Lieut. Commander Charles A. Schetky, a resident of New Jersey, to be a commander in the Navy from the 4th September, 1887.

Lieut. Benjamin F. Tilley, a resident of Rhode Island, to be a lieutenant-commander in the Navy from the 4th September, 1887.

Lieut. John O. Nicolson, junior grade, a resident of Alabama, to be a lieutenant in the Navy from the 4th September, 1887.

Ensign George W. Denfield, a resident of Massachusetts, to be a lieutenant, junior grade, in the Navy from the 4th September, 1887.

Lieut. George T. Emmons, junior grade, a resident of New Jersey, to be a lieutenant in the Navy from the 1st November, 1887.

Ensign Albert W. Grant, a resident of Wisconsin, to be a lieutenant, junior grade, in the Navy from the 1st November, 1887.

Naval Cadets John G. Tauresey, a resident of Delaware; Albert C. Diffenbach, a resident of Pennsylvania; Theodore C. Fenton, a resident of Pennsylvania; Volney O. Chase, a resident of Louisiana; George R. Slocum, a resident of Illinois; William G. Miller, a resident of Virginia; George W. Kline, a resident of New Jersey; John P. McGuinness, a resident of Idaho Territory; Joseph Strauss, a resident of Virginia; Charles S. Stanworth, a resident of Virginia; Robert L. Russell, a resident of Georgia; Harrison A. Bispham, a resident of Pennsylvania; Armistead Rust, a resident of Virginia; George R. Evans, a resident of Massachusetts; Edward W. Eberle, a resident of Arkansas; James E. Shindel, a resident of Pennsylvania; David S. Nes, a resident of Pennsylvania; Charles M. McCormick, a resident of Virginia; Glennie Tarbox, a resident of South Carolina; William W. Gilmer, a resident of Virginia; Robert E. Coontz, a resident of Missouri, and Benjamin Wright, a resident of Tennessee, all graduates of the Naval Academy, to be ensigns in the Navy from the 1st July, 1887.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

Paul Shillock, of Minnesota, to be assistant surgeon with the rank of first lieutenant, January 31.

Second Regiment of Cavalry.

Second Lieut. Francis D. Rucker, to be first lieutenant, January 31, 1888.

Fourth Regiment of Artillery.

Second Lieut. Clarence P. Townsley, to be first lieutenant, January 16, 1888.

Third Regiment of Infantry.

Second Lieut. John H. Beacom, to be first lieutenant, January 20, 1888.

SECOND LIEUTENANTS IN THE ARMY, TO RANK FROM FEBRUARY 6, 1888.

Third Regiment of Infantry.

2. Corp'l William C. Neary, Company E, Battalion of Engineers.

Fifth Regiment of Infantry.

1. Sergt. James Baylies, Company A, Fifth Infantry.

Sixth Regiment of Infantry.

4. Quartermaster Sergt. George A. Detchmendy, Third Infantry.

Eighth Regiment of Infantry.

3. Sergt. Joseph C. Beardsley, Company B, Fourth Infantry.

Eleventh Regiment of Infantry.

5. First Sergt. Thomas J. Watkins, Light Battery C, Third Artillery.

Twelfth Regiment of Infantry.

6. Corp'l Earl C. Carnahan, Company G, Sixteenth Infantry.

Twentieth Regiment of Infantry.

7. Sergt. Archibald A. Cabaniss, Troop B, Fourth Cavalry.

Twenty-second Regiment of Infantry.

8. Sergt. Maj. Thomas M. Moody, Ninth Infantry.

Twenty-fourth Regiment of Infantry.

9. Sergt. Charles E. Tayman, Company K, First Infantry.

Twenty-fifth Regiment of Infantry.

10. Sergt. Thomas H. McGuire, Company B, Eighteenth Infantry.

POSTMASTERS.

Orlo S. Rockwell, to be postmaster at Kent, in the county of Portage and State of Ohio.

Morgan H. Hoyt, to be postmaster at Brewster, in the county of Putnam and State of New York.

John B. Abbott, to be postmaster at Geneseo, in the county of Livingston and State of New York.

James L. Clark, to be postmaster at Glenwood Springs, in the county of Garfield and State of Colorado.

John H. Rolfe, to be postmaster at Penacook, in the county of Merrimack and State of New Hampshire.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, February 16, 1888.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by Rev. Dr. BRUSH, president of Dakota University.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

UNITED STATES PENITENTIARY, BOISÉ CITY, IDAHO.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting an estimate from the Attorney-General of an appropriation for the improvement of the United States penitentiary at Boisé City, Idaho; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

GEORGE W. CHAPMAN VS. UNITED STATES.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of findings of fact in the case of George W. Chapman vs. The United States; which was referred to the Committee on War Claims.

W. R. BILLINGSHED VS. UNITED STATES.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of findings of fact in the case of W. R. Billingshed, administrator, vs. The United States; which was referred to the Committee on War Claims.

J. S. THOMPSON VS. UNITED STATES.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of findings of fact in the case of Joseph S. Thompson against the United States; which was referred to the Committee on War Claims.

APPROPRIATION FOR MILITARY ACADEMY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, recommending an amendment to the bill making appropriations for the support of the Military Academy for the next fiscal year; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

URGENT DEFICIENCIES, POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting an estimate from the Postmaster-General of appropriation for urgent deficiencies in the Post-Office Department; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

IMPORTATION OF ADULTERATED FOOD.

Mr. BUTTERWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I desire to present to the House, and to have printed in the RECORD, a resolution of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, asking legislation to prevent the importation of adulterated articles of food.

The SPEAKER. The resolution will be referred to the Committee on Ways and Means, and, in the absence of objection, will be printed in the RECORD.

The resolution is as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The board of directors of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce and Merchants' Exchange has recently memorialized your bodies for the enactment of such laws as will prevent the mixture of certain articles of human food, hurtful or otherwise, to be sold under names that were calculated to practice an imposition upon consumers, on the one hand, and to work injury to great industries, on the other. This was intended in its application to reach, in general terms, articles of domestic production. We, however, can not fairly impose exactions upon our own people which do not attach to articles produced in other lands. We do therefore pray that such laws may be enacted as will prevent the introduction into this country of all adulterated, mixed, doctored, or compounded articles entering into the consumption of the people, whether of food or drink, under any other name than that which legitimately pertains to the same, to the end that the health of the people may be protected, a better code of business morals created, and that honest industry, both at home and abroad, may find suitable encouragement and protection.

LEVI C. GOODALE, President.

WM. E. HUTTON, Secretary.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed with amendments, in which the concurrence of the House was requested, the bill (H. R. 6439) authorizing the appointment of eleven division superintendents of railway mail service.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

A bill (S. 313) for the relief of R. R. Tinsley; and

A bill (S. 371) to aid in the establishment and temporary support of common schools.

Mr. MILLS. I call for the regular order.

REPORT UPON DOCUMENTS WHICH CAN NOT BE SUPPLIED.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I rise to make a privileged report from the Committee on Printing.

The Clerk read the report, as follows:

The committee have made the investigation called for under House resolution adopted on January 23, which is as follows:

"Resolved, That the Committee on Printing inquire into and report the reason why members of Congress can not procure books standing to their credit on the books of the Doorkeeper, if such fact exists."

In answer to the inquiry the committee submit the following letter from the Doorkeeper of the House, dated January 27, 1888:

"OFFICE DOORKEEPER,
"HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES UNITED STATES,
"Washington, D. C., January 27, 1888.

"SIR: Your communication of the 25th instant, inclosing a copy of a resolution introduced in the House by Hon. W. P. TAULBEE, and stating that the committee will be pleased to receive from me any communication I may desire to make in answer to the proposed inquiry, has been received.

"In reply I have the honor to hand you herewith a letter from the superintendent of the folding-room, which explains the reasons why certain books standing to the credit of members can not be furnished. I have no personal knowledge of the matters stated by the superintendent in reference to Fish and Fisheries, Agricultural Report for 1880, and Shackelford and Garfield eulogies.

"The report of L. F. Warder, Acting Doorkeeper, dated December 7, 1885, House Miscellaneous Document No. 20, first session Forty-ninth Congress, shows that there were only 44 copies of the Agricultural Report of 1880 on hand at that time, and I do not suppose that any copies have been printed and delivered since this report was made.

"The report of my immediate predecessor, House Miscellaneous Document No. 17, first session Fiftieth Congress, shows that there were but 27 copies of Fish and Fisheries on hand at the time the inventory was taken, while a later inventory, taken at my instance, shows that there were 14 sets of this book on hand at that time, copies having in the mean time been delivered to the members entitled to receive them. There are due members and ex-members 437 sets of Fish and Fisheries.

"Very respectfully,

"A. B. HURT,
"Doorkeeper House of Representatives.

"Hon. JAMES D. RICHARDSON,
"Chairman Committee on Printing."

Upon the same point the committee submit the following letter from the superintendent of the folding-room:

"OFFICE SUPERINTENDENT FOLDING-ROOM,
"HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES UNITED STATES,
"Washington, D. C., January 25, 1888.

"DEAR SIR: In reply to your verbal inquiry for information in regard to the subject-matter of the resolution of Mr. TAULBEE, which resolution is as follows: "Resolved, That the Committee on Printing inquire and report the reason why members of Congress can not procure books standing to their credit on the books of the Doorkeeper, if such fact exists," I have to state that the only books standing to the credit of members of Congress on the books of the folding-room which can not at this time be promptly furnished, are the following:

"1. Agricultural Report of 1880.
"2. Shackelford eulogies.
"3. Hayden's Report, volume 3.
"4. Fish and Fisheries.
"5. Eulogies on Garfield.

"The reasons why these books can not be furnished are as follows:

"First. Agricultural Report, 1880: The deficiency in these reports occurred, I am informed, during the Forty-seventh Congress, and was occasioned by the failure of the then Public Printer to furnish the folding-room with the full quota as required by law.

"Second. Shackelford eulogies: During the Forty-eighth Congress a fire occurred in the folding-room and destroyed, or damaged so badly as to be unfit for distribution, a quantity of books, among which were the Shackelford eulogies.

"Third. Hayden's, volume 3: As will be seen from the accompanying letter from the foreman of the bindery of the Printing Office, there is still due the folding-room 473 copies of this report. The supply of these books in the folding-room being exhausted, no more orders for them can be filled until the remainder are furnished by the Government Printing Office.

"Fourth. Fish and Fisheries: It seems that in prorating these books about the 1st of February, 1886, a mistake was made by prorating 6,000 copies instead of 5,000 copies, the actual number printed for the House. This mistake credited each member with three more sets of this book than they were entitled to receive, making the folding-room about 1,000 sets short of the number credited. As the mistake was not discovered for nearly eighteen months after, and very many members had in the mean time drawn the number thus placed to their credit, it was too late to fully correct the error. After it was discovered, however, three sets were deducted from the accounts of members who had that number still remaining to their credit, and where only one or two sets were to the credit of members the account was canceled. On account of this error there are 437 sets of this book still to the credit of members and ex-members which can not be furnished until some provision is made to supply the folding-room with that quantity of them.

"The Department is short of the Garfield eulogies about 100. Why this is so I have no means of knowing. They were received during the Forty-seventh Congress.

"Respectfully, your obedient servant,

"JOHN G. HEALY, Superintendent.

"Mr. A. B. HURT,
"Doorkeeper House of Representatives."

The foregoing letter of the superintendent of folding-room shows there are Agricultural Reports for 1880 to the credit of members which can not be now supplied.

The reason of this appears, in part at least, from the letter of the Public Printer herewith submitted, dated February 1, 1888:

"GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE,
"Washington, D. C., February 1, 1888.

"SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of January 28, in reference to the shortage in the delivery of the Agricultural Report for 1880.

"From the best information available, I beg leave to state that the shortage occurred in this way: When the report for 1879 was about all delivered it was discovered that it was 4,680 copies short, and Mr. Defrees, Public Printer, arranged with Mr. Parrish, a book-dealer of this city, to supply the shortage, and he (Mr. Defrees) to repay him with an equal number of the report of 1880, saying it was cheaper than to put the 1879 report back to press. When the 1880 report was printed Mr. Defrees paid Mr. Parrish the 4,680 books, but failed to make that number extra, for the reason, I learn, that the 4,680 extra lithographs necessary were not ordered. I further learn that when Mr. Rounds took charge of the office his attention was called to the matter, but he questioned his authority to order the lithographs and make good the shortage in books.

"Respectfully, yours,

"TH. E. BENEDICT,
"Public Printer.

"Hon. JAMES D. RICHARDSON,
"Chairman Committee on Printing, House of Representatives."

The statement is made in this letter that "when the report for 1879 was about all delivered it was discovered that it was 4,680 copies short," etc., and further explains how the Public Printer (Mr. Defrees) attempted to remedy this error. Why this shortage occurred in the report of 1879 is not shown, and the committee can not answer further upon it. It may possibly have been a mistake simply in the count, there being so large a number printed. At any rate the committee have no knowledge as to how the error was made.

The shortage in the "Shackelford eulogies" is explained by reason of the fire which occurred during the Forty-eighth Congress in the folding-room. A number of these volumes, it seems, were damaged in that fire and thus lost to members.

The "Garfield eulogies," it appears, are about 100 short. Why this is so the superintendent of the folding-room says he does not know. The Garfield eulogies were received in the Forty-seventh Congress. The number short is so small, and the error, if any, so far back, the committee did not prosecute the inquiry further as to these eulogies.

The error in the account as to the volume entitled "Fish and Fisheries" is fully explained by the superintendent in his letter, and need not be repeated here. A letter from the Public Printer, herewith filed, shows that the full number ordered has been printed and delivered to Congress:

"GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE,
"Washington, D. C., February 2, 1888.

"DEAR SIR: In reply to yours of January 28, in the matter of Fish and Fishery books referred to, I find that the full number ordered has been printed and delivered to Congress, and there are no further numbers due from this office. We have on hand 507 sets reserved in this office for sale under authority of law, for which we have regular demands at the hands of private parties weekly.

"Respectfully, yours,

"TH. E. BENEDICT,
"Public Printer.

"Hon. JAMES D. RICHARDSON,
"Chairman Committee on Printing, House of Representatives."

From the foregoing letter it will appear that there are now in the Government Printing Office 507 sets of this work, Fish and Fisheries, which, under the law, have been reserved for sale to private parties. The deficit in the House folding-room, as shown hereinbefore, in members' accounts is 437 sets; so that if it is desired, and the former law on the subject so modified, instead of selling the sets in the Government Printing Office, they may be turned over to the Doorkeeper of the House to supply the deficit.

The only remaining work which can not be supplied, as appears from the letter of the superintendent of the folding-room, is Hayden's Report, volume 3, which was ordered about 1876. The facts in relation to this deficit are shown in a letter from the Public Printer of this date, February 15, which is herewith submitted, and is as follows:

"GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE,
"Washington, D. C., February 15, 1888.

"DEAR SIR: I am enabled now to dispose of the last of your three requests for information, received January 28, after a long and painstaking examination and inquiry.

"I find that a part of Hayden's Report, volume 3, ordered about 1876, is in this office in an incomplete condition, owing to the lack of the necessary plates to finish same. The deficiency on the order amounts to 1,236 volumes, as near as we can make out from the imperfect records concerning same, of which we have the printed signatures complete for about that number of volumes.

"We find that there is a deficiency in eighteen different plates, averaging a shortage of 1,230 down to 50. Before the work can be finished Congress must authorize new lithographic work to meet this deficiency. As yet we have been unable to find the original books showing the receipt of plates, and can not answer as to whether the same were paid for. I learn from one of the clerks, verbally, that they were not delivered, and it is probable that they were not paid for.

"Respectfully, yours,

"TH. E. BENEDICT,
"Public Printer.

"Hon. JAMES D. RICHARDSON,
"Chairman of House Committee on Printing."

The committee have thus answered the inquiry ordered in said resolutions, and ask to be discharged from the further consideration of the subjects involved.

Mr. RICHARDSON. If the House will indulge me, I desire to occupy only a few moments in explaining the facts covered by this report.

The resolution directed the committee to inquire what documents standing to the credit of members on the books of the Doorkeeper could not be furnished. The fact is developed that there are five publications the copies of which can not be supplied. These five are the eulogies on Shackelford, the eulogies on Garfield, the Agricultural Report of 1880, the Report on Fish and Fisheries, and the third volume of Hayden's Reports. The number of Garfield eulogies which could not be supplied was very small; and the committee suppose that possibly a mistake was made in counting them in the first instance. They were ordered furnished, however, and were published during the Forty-seventh Congress.

In regard to the Shackelford eulogies, it is shown that a number of copies were destroyed or damaged in the fire which occurred in the folding-room during, I believe, the Forty-eighth Congress, so that the shortage in respect to that work is thus accounted for.

In regard to the Agricultural Reports for 1880, the deficit has occurred in this way: A very large number were printed—possibly 300,000—and the committee suppose that the Public Printer made an error in the computation of the number printed.

It appears that of the edition of 1879 there was found, when the documents came to be delivered, a shortage of 4,680 volumes; and the then Public Printer, Mr. Defrees, borrowed from a private dealer in this city that number of copies in order to supply Representatives and Senators, promising that he would return to this dealer an equal number of copies of the edition of 1880. When the edition of 1880 was printed the Public Printer failed to get the appropriation to cover the publication and lithographing for the additional number of copies, and therefore he could not comply with his promise. He returned to the dealer the number of copies he had borrowed of the edition of 1879, but the quota of members was thereby diminished to that extent.

Mr. BURROWS. The gentleman from Tennessee has referred to the Public Printer getting a number of documents from a private dealer. I wish to ask the gentleman whether he has ever had occasion to inquire into that matter, so as to ascertain how it happens that very valuable documents, like the Medical and Surgical History of the Rebellion and other Government publications, can be obtained here of second-hand dealers. The question is, where those volumes come from and how the dealers get them.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, our committee has had no orders to make any such investigation; and of course any information I might give on that subject would be entirely personal.

Mr. BURROWS. I believe I shall introduce a resolution on that subject at an early day.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I suppose it is possible that impecunious members sell their books, though I know nothing of any sale.

Mr. HOLMAN. Or Senators.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Surely not Senators. I do not know any other way to account for the fact.

Mr. BURROWS. These books belong to the public, and are not the personal property of members.

Mr. PAYSON. I would like to ask the chairman of the Committee on Printing whether his committee is advised, or whether he can explain, how the Public Printer could procure from a second-hand dealer this large number of Agricultural Reports, when they had not yet been delivered to the folding-room, and were supposed not to have gone out of the Public Printing Office.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I am unable to answer that question. The Public Printer at that time was Mr. Defrees; and as he is dead, I do not know how we can get that information. These reports are taken away from the Printing Office and delivered to members in installments; that is, they begin to deliver before the entire edition is ready. It is possible, I suggest, that the private dealer got some of the first books sent out.

Mr. PAYSON. It seems very strange that a Public Printer, finding a deficiency of documents to which members of Congress are entitled, should make up that deficiency by going to a second-hand dealer down town, and borrowing from him more than four thousand volumes in order to supply members of this House.

Mr. RICHARDSON. It does seem a little singular; but it is possible, if the dealer procured the books from the first lot sent out by the Printing Office.

Mr. PAYSON. It is wholly inexplicable.

Mr. BURROWS. How did the dealer get them?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I have no means of knowing; it occurred away back in 1879 or 1880.

Mr. CUTCHEON. He probably "raised" them.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. Speaker, it is utterly impossible to know what is going on.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I shall detain the House but a few moments longer.

I do not know positively how it is possible—I answer in response to gentlemen—that this could have occurred, that book-sellers in the city of Washington are able to supply public books; but as a matter of fact, while I have never bought or sold one of these in my life, I know from very reliable information that these books can be bought from regular dealers in this city. How they get them I am not able to say, nor is it a part of the inquiry imposed upon the committee.

That, however, explains the deficiency in the number of Agricultural Reports for 1880. In regard to the book "Fish and Fisheries" I will state that this was ordered printed by the Forty-seventh Congress, and it seems that when the Doorkeeper of the House came to make the allotment to members, he supposed, on information he received, as he says, that the edition comprised 6,000 copies, and he made a pro rata distribution upon that basis. It turned out, however, that the whole number ordered printed for the House was only 5,000, and therefore there being the mistake of 1,000 volumes there were at least 3 books too many given to each member who received his allotment. Now, a number of members came forward and got the 17, the full number they would have been entitled to if the number printed had been 6,000.

Some eighteen months after the distribution, when the error was discovered, it was found that he could not supply the members with 17 copies each. Each would have been entitled to about 14, if a proper distribution had been made from the beginning, but he could not supply them that number because of the fact that the number of members who had already received 17 copies reduced the total number for distribution to such an extent that he could not even supply to the members the number to which they were properly entitled—that is, 14 copies. Thus 437 volumes of this work can not now be supplied to members, that number having been taken out by members under the error made in the first allotment, in excess of what those members were entitled to.

But in this connection let me say there are now 507 copies of the work in the hands of the Public Printer, left there under the law which authorized their publication, for sale by the Public Printer to private parties. In addition to the 5,000 copies ordered printed for the House and the usual number for the Senate, there were 1,000 copies ordered to be left in the hands of the Public Printer for sale to private parties.

If Congress desires it, a portion of the number left there to be sold may be appropriated to make up the allotment to members, rather than have them sold as first contemplated. A change of the law, however, will be necessary in order to turn over to members these 437 copies. In this way the deficit in the numbers of this book can be supplied, and it would still leave, of course, a small number in the hands of the Printer for sale to private parties.

The only other volume unaccounted for is Hayden's volume, number 3, printed by order of the Forty-fourth Congress, some ten or twelve years ago. Four hundred and seventy-three copies of this work are short. How they came to be missing the Public Printer is unable to state, as he says, and the committee have no means of determining how the deficit occurred. He is also unable to find all the plates necessary for a reprint of the book, or the manuscript; and hence is unable to supply the demand unless Congress makes a new appropriation to cover the cost of the lithographic plates and other work necessary.

But, Mr. Speaker, permit me to say in this connection that I do not believe the volume in question ought to be republished, but all the facts in relation to it will be included in the subsequent report that the committee will make as to delayed work in the Government Printing Office under a resolution heretofore passed. This volume relates to some of the old geological surveys, as I am informed, and I believe that the plates are plates of old bones, discovered in the great West, of animals that inhabited the forests there many, many years ago. I doubt very much whether the expense incident to the republication ought to be incurred.

Now, I believe I have noticed all the facts in connection with this matter. There is nothing in the report to reflect upon anybody. The committee could find no reason to think in any of the cases that there had been anything more than unintentional error, and which, as I have shown, crept into the accounts of members, and which now prevents a full distribution of the documents in question.

I move that this report be printed and ordered to lie upon the table for the use of members.

The motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. SAYERS. I demand the regular order.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I hope the gentleman will yield to me for a moment, with the view of submitting four resolutions of the Ohio Legislature, as I am compelled to leave the House.

Mr. SAYERS. I will withdraw the demand for the regular order for that purpose.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I request unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, to submit at this time certain joint resolutions of the Legislature of the State of Ohio, with reference to reimbursing the States for interest on war loans; a resolution in reference to arrears of pensions to certain pensioners; one in reference to the payment of bounties, and another with regard to the cattle industry of this country, which I ask to have printed in the RECORD.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The resolutions are as follows:

INTEREST ON WAR LOANS.

[Senate joint resolution No. 13.]

Joint resolution relative to requesting our Senators and Representatives in Congress to do all possible for the passage of Senate bill No. 260.

Whereas there has been introduced in the Senate of the United States a bill (No. 260) "to reimburse the several States for interest paid on war loans, and for other purposes:" Therefore,

Be it resolved by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, That our Senators and Representatives in Congress be, and they are hereby, requested to vote for and urge the passage of the same; and that the governor forward a copy of this resolution to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

ELBERT L. LAMPSON,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
THEO. F. DAVIS,
President pro tempore of the Senate.

Adopted February 9, 1888.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, OHIO,
Office of the Secretary of State:

I, James S. Robinson, secretary of state of the State of Ohio, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of a joint resolution adopted by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio on the 9th day of February, A. D. 1888, taken from the original rolls filed in this office.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto subscribed my name and affixed my official seal at Columbus the 10th day of February, A. D. 1888.

JAMES S. ROBINSON,
Secretary of State.

EXECUTIVE CHAMBER, Columbus, Ohio, February 10, 1888.

In compliance with the request contained in the resolutions above set forth, I have the honor to transmit a certified copy of the same herewith.

J. B. FORAKER, Governor.

ARREARS OF PENSION IN CERTAIN CASES.

[Senate joint resolution No. 7.]

Joint resolution instructing our Senators and requesting our Representatives in Congress to use all honorable means to secure the passage of Senate bill No. 913.

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That from and after the passage of this act all persons on the pension-rolls of the United States who are drawing pensions on account of loss of limb or limbs shall be entitled to receive arrears of pension from date of discharge or disability, and covering all the time up to the passage of the act or acts authorizing the issuance of their last pension certificate, at the same rate per month to which that certificate entitles them:" Therefore,

Be it resolved by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, That our Senators in Congress are instructed and our Representatives in Congress are requested to use all honorable means to secure the passage of such bill; and that the governor be requested to forward a copy of this resolution to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

ELBERT L. LAMPSON,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
THEO. F. DAVIS,
President pro tempore of the Senate.

Adopted February 1, 1888.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, OHIO,
Office of the Secretary of State:

I, James S. Robinson, secretary of state of the State of Ohio, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of a joint resolution adopted by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio on the 1st day of February, A. D. 1888, taken from the original rolls filed in this office.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto subscribed my name and affixed my official seal at Columbus the 2d day of February, A. D. 1888.

JAMES S. ROBINSON,
Secretary of State.

EXECUTIVE CHAMBER, Columbus, Ohio, February 3, 1888.

In compliance with the request contained in the resolutions above set forth, I have the honor to transmit a certified copy of the same herewith.

J. B. FORAKER, Governor.

PAYMENT OF BOUNTIES.

[House joint resolution No. 14.]

Joint resolution requesting Congress to pass Senate bill No. 1206, Fiftieth Congress, first session, to equalize the bounties of soldiers, sailors, and marines of the late war for the Union.

Whereas unjust discrimination was used in granting and payment of bounties by the United States Government to the volunteer soldiers, sailors, and marines of the late war for the Union;

Whereas there are many soldiers, sailors, and marines suffering at this time from said unjust discrimination: Therefore,

Be it resolved by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, That it is the sense of this General Assembly that Congress should at the earliest possible opportunity pass the above-named Senate bill No. 1206, popularly known as the "Logan bill," and recently reintroduced by Senator PLUMB, of Kansas.

Resolved, That the governor be requested to forward to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress a copy of these resolutions.

ELBERT L. LAMPSON,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
THEO. F. DAVIS,
President pro tempore of the Senate.

Adopted February 1, 1888.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, OHIO,
Office of the Secretary of State:

I, James S. Robinson, secretary of state of the State of Ohio, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of a joint resolution adopted by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio on the 1st day of February, A. D. 1888, taken from the original rolls filed in this office.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto subscribed my name and affixed my official seal at Columbus, this 2d day of February, A. D. 1888.

JAMES S. ROBINSON,
Secretary of State.

EXECUTIVE CHAMBER, Columbus, Ohio, February 3, 1888.

In compliance with the request contained in the resolutions above set forth, I have the honor to transmit a certified copy of the same herewith.

J. B. FORAKER, Governor.

PLEURO-PNEUMONIA AMONG CATTLE.

[House joint resolution No. 15.]

Joint resolution requesting our Senators and Representatives in Congress to support Senator T. W. PALMER's bill relative to the eradication of contagious pleuro-pneumonia among cattle.

Whereas the danger to the cattle industry of this country from contagious pleuro-pneumonia is so great as to necessitate the most thorough means of eradication of this insidious disease; and,

Whereas the bill indorsed by all the Cattle Breeders' Associations, and introduced by Senator T. W. PALMER in the United States Senate, is the only adequate measure devised for the swift and sure stamping out of this disease: Therefore,

Be it resolved, That this General Assembly commend this measure, thus indorsed by the cattle growers of America, and request our Senators and Representatives in Congress to give said bill their support.

Resolved, That the governor be requested to transmit a copy of these preambles and resolutions to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

ELBERT L. LAMPSON,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
THEO. F. DAVIS,
President pro tempore of the Senate.

Adopted February 1, 1888.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, OHIO,
Office of the Secretary of State:

I, James S. Robinson, secretary of state of the State of Ohio, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of a joint resolution adopted by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio on the 1st day of February, A. D. 1888, taken from the original rolls filed in this office.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto subscribed my name and affixed my official seal at Columbus, the 3d day of February, A. D. 1888.

JAMES S. ROBINSON,
Secretary of State.

EXECUTIVE CHAMBER, Columbus, Ohio, February 4, 1888.

In compliance with the request contained in the resolutions above set forth, I have the honor to transmit a certified copy of the same herewith.

J. B. FORAKER, Governor.

SOCIETY OF OLD BROOKLYNITES.

Mr. FELIX CAMPBELL. I desire to present a petition from the "Society of Old Brooklynites," containing nearly 10,000 names, for an appropriation for the erection of a monument to commemorate the virtues of the "Martyrs of the prison-ships." I ask that the memorial be printed in the RECORD without the names, and that it be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The memorial is as follows:

BROOKLYN, January 5, 1888.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your petitioners, an incorporated society of the city of Brooklyn, under the title of the "Society of Old Brooklynites," would respectfully represent:

That the remains of more than 11,500 martyrs to the cause of liberty lie entombed in this city, who died during our Revolutionary war, on board the prison-ships of the British at the Wallabout, and which were buried on our shores during that memorable struggle, many of which were, by the action of the waves, washed out of their shallow graves, their bones scattered along the beach, exposed to the summer's sun and winter's storm, until the year 1808, when the Tammany Society or Columbian Order, of the city of New York, had them collected and buried with imposing ceremonies, in which the governors of several States, mayors of cities, and civil, military, and ecclesiastical dignitaries from all parts of the country took part.

The place of burial was on Jackson street, in this city, and the tomb, a temporary wooden structure, in which they were placed became so dilapidated by reason of changes made in the surroundings, and from natural decay, that the sacred remains were again exposed to the gaze of the multitude, until the park commissioners of this city, with the sanction of the city government, prepared with great care and expense a permanent and imperishable tomb for their reception on the historic ground of Fort Greene, a charming elevation in Washington Park, in this city, overlooking the scene of their sufferings and death, to which the sacred remains were carefully removed and deposited.

Those devoted patriots, from every one of the original thirteen States, were prisoners of war taken by the British army and navy, and numbered more than were killed in all the battles, both by sea and land, in that long and desperate struggle for freedom.

When it is remembered that constant and unremitting efforts were made by the British officers to induce these prisoners to purchase their freedom and save their lives by enlisting in the service of the enemy; that many, probably the majority of them, had families who were suffering by reason of their absence; that to remain in these horrible prisons was almost certain death, and that under all these circumstances they remained faithful to the cause in which they had enlisted, and preferred death to dishonor, we must concede that they earned the title of "Martyrs of the prison-ships," and deserve such recognition from the Government, to aid in the establishment of which they sacrificed their lives, as will show to the world that republics are not ungrateful, but that we cherish their memories, honor their devotion to their country, and will erect such an enduring monument to commemorate their virtues as will stimulate future generations to emulate their patriotism.

We therefore most respectfully ask that your honorable body will make an appropriation of not less than $100,000 toward the erection of a suitable monument to be erected at or near the spot where their sacred remains now lie, the site for which will be donated for that purpose by the city of Brooklyn.

This society will most cheerfully give all the aid in their power toward the accomplishment of the object of this petition.

Very respectfully,

JOHN W. HUNTER, President.

SAMUEL A. HAYNES, Secretary.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your petitioners, citizens of the United States, do respectfully and earnestly pray your honorable body to hear and grant the petition of the Society of Old Brooklynites, and to cause the erection of the long-delayed monument to the "Martyrs of the prison-ships."

WINDMILL ISLAND, DELAWARE RIVER.

Mr. BUCHANAN, by unanimous consent, presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of New Jersey requesting Congress to make an appropriation for the removal of Smith's or Windmill Island from the Delaware River; which was referred to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT NEWBURGH, N. Y.

Mr. BACON, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. 7312) for the erection of a public building at Newburgh, N. Y.; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

REGULATION OF COMMERCE.

Mr. BACON also, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. 7313) to amend chapter 104 of the statutes of the United States of America, passed at the second session of the Forty-ninth Congress, entitled "An act to regulate commerce;" which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

FEES, ETC., OF UNITED STATES DISTRICT ATTORNEYS AND MARSHALS.

Mr. COWLES, by unanimous consent, submitted a resolution asking information as to compensation and fees of United States district attorneys and marshals; which was referred to the Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Justice.

SERVICE PENSIONS.

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, a petition of eleven old soldiers of Hendrysburgh, Belmont County, Ohio, praying for a service pension.

There was no objection.

The petition is as follows:

HENDRYSBURGH, OHIO, February 13, 1888.

To the honorable Members of Congress:

In the name of common justice, have the old soldiers of the country got no friends among the law-makers of our nation? All the legislation for years has been to the interest of the moneyed men. The dear bondholder has been provided for, while the old soldier has been left out in the cold. The widows of generals have been provided for. Can't we old soldiers, who stood the burden and the heat of battle, get nothing? We are poor; we have nothing to pay men to work for us. We do all we can. We vote for what we think to be men who will advance our interests in Congress, but yet they seem to entirely forget us when they get there. If we had remained at home when the war broke out where would our country have been to-day? The result would have been an entirely different form of government than we are now enjoying. But, instead of the boys staying at home, they went to the front at the call of the President for volunteers; and then what kind of money did we get paid off in? Money worth about 33 cents on the dollar. The bondholder got his in gold, just what the soldier was promised would he enlist.

So you see we performed our part of the contract, but the Government has failed on her part. What the old soldiers of the country want is a service pension; that is, the long-termed men, the men who went at the first call and staid until the last gun was fired at Appomattox.

Look what was done for the Mexican soldiers. They got their land-warrant for 160 acres of land and now get $8 per month pension, and they saved the State of Texas, while we saved the nation, and we were promised a land-warrant; that is, those of us that went in 1861. Have we got it? No, we have not.

Names and length of service:

Leander D. Bevan	months...	47
Joseph Penn	do.....	37
William Kirk	do.....	36
David Smith	do.....	52
Hugh Donley	do.....	12
Henry Conkel	do.....	48
R. A. Heaney	do.....	24
James W. Thompson	do.....	36
Napoleon B. Agy	do.....	43
William I. Clark	do.....	48
John W. Taylor	do.....	36

SUBMARINE CABLES.

Mr. NORWOOD, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 5614) to carry into effect the international convention of the 14th of March, 1884, for the protection of submarine cables; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. SAYERS. I call for the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the call of committees for reports.

Mr. SAYERS. I move to dispense with the morning hour for the call of committees.

Mr. TAULBEE. I have two reports which I desire to present which I have had in my hands for some time.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Let it be understood that gentlemen can hand the reports to the Clerk.

Several MEMBERS. Oh, no!

Mr. ADAMS. I ask unanimous consent to make a report from the Committee on the Judiciary.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas has called for the regular order, which cuts off requests for unanimous consent. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Texas to dispense with the morning hour for the call of committees.

The question being taken, there were—ayes 31, noes 47.

So (further count not being called for) the motion was not agreed to.

ADVERSE REPORTS.

Mr. ADAMS, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported back with adverse recommendations bills of the following titles; which were severally laid upon the table, and the accompanying reports ordered to be printed:

A bill (H. R. 3403) appointing the first Monday of October in each year as the day on which Congress shall meet;

A bill (H. R. 1830) to provide for the execution of bonds of all officials by their sureties in aliquot parts;

A bill (H. R. 2361) for the relief of Weissinger and Bate, Edward Holbrook, and others;

A bill (H. R. 1808) to amend section 847 of the Revised Statutes of the United States; and

A bill (H. R. 1807) to amend section 1014 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

NICARAGUA CANAL COMPANY.

Mr. CLARDY, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 5615) to incorporate the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

Mr. CLARDY. I ask that my colleague on the committee, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. PHELAN], be permitted to present the views of the minority on this bill.

There was no objection, and the views of the minority were ordered to be printed with the report of the committee.

HYDROGRAPHER OF THE NAVY.

Mr. HERBERT, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, reported, as a substitute for the bill H. R. 5024, a bill (H. R. 7314) to authorize the appointment of a hydrographer and assistant hydrographer of the Navy; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOHN W. PHILIP.

Mr. HERBERT also (for Mr. COCKRAN) reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 639) to authorize Commander John W. Philip, of the United States Navy, to accept a silver pitcher from the Government of the United States of Colombia; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

DIVISION OF GREAT SIOUX RESERVATION.

Mr. PEEL, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, reported back, as a substitute for the bills named below, a bill (H. R. 7315) to divide the Great Sioux Indian reservation into separate smaller reservations, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

The original bills, as follows, were severally laid on the table:

A bill (H. R. 1940) to divide a portion of the reservation of the Sioux Nation of Indians in Dakota into separate reservations, and to secure the relinquishment of the Indian title to the remainder.

A bill (H. R. 3286) to divide the Great Sioux reservation in Dakota and Nebraska, and to secure to the Indians the title in fee-simple of lands in severalty, and to open a portion to actual settlement, and to provide for the better education and civilization of the Sioux Indians.

A bill (H. R. 3287) to divide a portion of the reservation of the Sioux Nation of Indians in Dakota into separate reservations, and to secure the relinquishment of the Indian title to the remainder.

SAN JUAN COUNTY, NEW MEXICO.

Mr. JOSEPH, from the Committee on the Territories, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 1983) to ratify an act entitled "An act creating the county of San Juan, in the Territory of New Mexico;" which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ADVERSE REPORT.

Mr. TAULBEE, from the Committee on Claims, reported back adversely joint resolution (H. Res. 19) to provide for the payment of compensation to jurors summoned in the condemnation of a site for the new Congressional Library; which was laid on the table, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

ALBERT A. EMERY.

Mr. TAULBEE also, from the Committee on Claims, reported with an amendment the bill (H. R. 3176) for the relief of Albert A. Emery; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

On motion of Mr. TAULBEE, leave was granted to Mr. LYNCH, of Pennsylvania, to submit the views of the minority, to be printed with the report.

COMMISSIONERS OF CLAIMS.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 3367) to authorize the President to appoint three commissioners of claims; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ADJUDICATION OF CLAIMS.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky, also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 3366) authorizing the Court of Claims to adjudicate certain claims arising under the provisions of the act of March 12, 1863, entitled "An act to provide for the collection of abandoned property, and for the prevention of fraud in insurrection districts within the United States;" which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PROMOTION OF ANATOMICAL SCIENCE.

Mr. ATKINSON, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 5042) for the promotion of anatomical science, and to prevent the desecration of graves in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ADVERSE REPORT.

Mr. BOOTHMAN, from the Committee on Accounts, reported back adversely the bill (H. R. 5843) for the relief of Robert Dougherty; which was laid on the table, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the business of this day shall be concluded, the House shall take a recess until 8 o'clock this evening for the purpose of debate only on the bill (H. R. 1426) to require the Pacific railroads to maintain telegraph lines.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

CLAIMS UNDER EIGHT-HOUR LAW.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. I rise to make a privileged report from the Committee on Labor, which I ask the Clerk to read.

The Clerk read as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, February 7, 1888.

Mr. TAULBEE submitted the following; which was referred to the Committee on Labor:

"Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, the Secretary of the Interior, the Postmaster-General, and the Attorney-General be, and they are hereby, requested to inform the House what amounts are deemed necessary to pay the claims arising in their respective Departments, under the provisions of a bill now pending in the Senate, entitled 'A bill providing for the adjustment of the accounts of laborers arising under the eight-hour law,' and numbered 1853, should said bill become a law."

The Committee on Labor, to which was referred the accompanying resolution of inquiry, report the same back with the following amendment, and request its adoption as amended:

Amend by striking out the word "Senate," in line 11, and all after, and inserting "House, entitled 'H. R. 1322, providing for the adjustment of the accounts of laborers and mechanics arising under the eight-hour law,' should said bill become a law."

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. This amendment simply substitutes the title of a House bill for that of a Senate bill which has not yet been reached in the House.

Mr. TAULBEE. I ask unanimous consent that the bill to which the amendment relates may be printed in the RECORD with the resolution.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. I do not object to that.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HATCH). The first question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The question being taken on the adoption of the resolution as amended, there were—ayes 51, noes 13.

Mr. OATES. No quorum.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri, and Mr. OATES were appointed.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 130, noes 10.

Mr. OATES. I withdraw my point that no quorum has voted.

So the resolution was adopted.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri, moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. TAULBEE. Did the Chair submit to the House my request for unanimous consent that the bill to which this resolution relates be printed in the RECORD with the report?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will submit that question now. If there be no objection, the bill indicated by the gentleman from Kentucky will be printed in the RECORD. The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered.

The bill is as follows:

A bill (H. R. 1322) providing for the adjustment of accounts of laborers, workmen, and mechanics arising under the eight-hour law.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That whoever, as a laborer, workman, or mechanic, has been employed by or on behalf of the Government of the United States since the 25th day of June, 1868, the date of the act constituting eight hours a day's work, shall be paid for each eight hours he has been employed as for a full day's work, without any reduction of pay on account of the reduction of the hours of labor.

SEC. 2. That all claims for labor so performed in excess of eight hours per day are hereby referred to the Court of Claims, to be adjudicated upon the basis that eight hours constitute a day's work, and are to be paid for at the price per day as provided for in the first section of this act, and judgment given against the United States in favor of each claimant for the amount found due, to be paid as other judgments of the Court of Claims against the United States; and no statute of limitation, or payment made or receipt given for a less sum per day than the full price of a day's work, as provided in the first section of this act, shall bar the right of recovery: Provided, That all suits under this act shall be commenced within two years from and after its passage; and any number of said claimants may join in the same suit.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. WHITING, of Massachusetts, by unanimous consent, obtained indefinite leave of absence, on account of important business.

DIVISION SUPERINTENDENTS, RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE.

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House, with the amendments of the Senate, the bill (H. R. 6439) authorizing the appointment of eleven division superintendents of railway mail service.

The amendments of the Senate were read, as follows:

In line 2 strike out "eleven" and insert "two."

In line 3, after the word "service," insert "in addition to those heretofore authorized."

Amend the title of the bill so as to read: "An act authorizing the appointment of two additional division superintendents of railway mail service."

Mr. DOCKERY. I ask that these amendments be concurred in. They are only verbal and make more specific the intention of the House bill.

The amendments were concurred in.

URGENT DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. SAYERS. I move that the House now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering general appropriation bills, my purpose being that the House resume the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6437) to provide for certain of the most urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888, and for other purposes.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. Speaker, is that motion in order before the second morning hour?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union (Mr. BLOUNT in the chair), and resumed the consideration of House bill No. 6437.

The Clerk, resuming the reading of the bill, read as follows, under the heading "Increase of the Navy:"

Navigation: For completing the navigation outfit of the Chicago, including compass binnacle and electric-lighting supplies, $2,500.

Mr. HERBERT. I offer the amendment which I ask the Clerk to read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Between lines 10 and 11, on page 11, insert the following:

"For the purpose of making 100 feet longer the dry-dock now under contract to be built at the Brooklyn navy-yard, $100,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary."

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman desire to be heard on this amendment?

Mr. HERBERT. I do not think it necessary. The Committee on Appropriations make no objection to the amendment. I will simply ask that the letter which I send to the desk be printed in the RECORD.

There was no objection.

The letter is as follows:

BUREAU OF YARDS AND DOCKS, NAVY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, February 6, 1888.

SIR: Referring to our conversation this afternoon in relation to the lengthening of the dry-dock at New York, I beg leave to state that the dock can be lengthened 100 feet for the sum of $100,000. The contractors are now at work on the excavation and are driving the piles around the dock to which the timbers are secured, and it is important that the money required should be appropriated within three weeks, in order that there may be no extra expense to haul out the piles referred to. The advisability for this increased length is apparent. Two companies owning steamship lines that cross the Atlantic are building ships of 560 feet in length and 64 feet beam, for which there is not a dock in the United States large enough to take them in. Although these ships are under the English flag, all the money in them is the money of citizens of the United States. This increased length would accommodate these new vessels and would also be of great advantage to the Government, as it often happens that two vessels of less than 300 feet in length require docking at the same time, and it could be done in this dock, if 600 feet in length, at much less cost than if docked singly.

I beg leave respectfully to urge upon Congress speedy action in this matter, as it seems but a proper thing to do, in view of the disposition of the Government to foster, as far as possible, the shipping interests of the citizens of the United States.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
D. B. HARMONY, Chief of Bureau.

Hon. H. A. HERBERT,
Chairman Committee on Naval Affairs.

The amendment of Mr. HERBERT was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Offices of surveyors-general:

Office of surveyor-general of Arizona: For salaries of clerks in his office, $1,000.

Office of surveyor-general of California: For salaries of clerks in his office, $2,000.

Office of surveyor-general of Colorado: For salaries of clerks in his office, $1,000.

Mr. CANNON. I move to strike out the last word. I wish to call attention, Mr. Chairman, to these appropriations to different surveyors-general. The cost of these offices in the way of salaries in the aggregate for this year is over $100,000, and has been more than that for the two years past. Their duties are to make contracts for the survey of the public lands. Since the commencement of this Administration the survey of the public lands has been practically abandoned. Yet here is the machinery in all these surveyors-general's offices in the different States and Territories costing over $100,000, and no substantial expenditure being made for survey of the public lands!

There was some talk yesterday about the industries down in Arkansas, namely, the expenditures of large amounts for witnesses, etc., in the courts; in fact, that was said to be the principal industry in that State. [Laughter.] I wish to call attention, for a moment, to some of the industries in these Territories, useful so far as these surveyors-general are concerned in the main in the payment of salaries to officials, but not in the expenditure by these officials in the survey of public lands. In addition to that which they now receive they are still hungry for more, and come in and ask for additional appropriations by way of deficiencies. And the Committee on Appropriations, of which

I have the honor to be a member, not with my approval, but against my vote, report these deficiency appropriations.

I apprehend gentlemen know what these surveyors-general do. Their principal business is to make contracts with deputy surveyors or contract surveyors for the survey of public lands. In theory of law they examine the work of the deputy surveyors, but in point of fact they do not examine it after the work is done. The deputy surveyors get no pay until after their work is examined by special agents sent out from the Department.

So then, Mr. Chairman, we have in most of the Territories and some of the States a lot of clever gentlemen, I take it, with corps of clerks, in many instances from their own families, who are drawing these comfortable salaries, doing substantially no work in facilitating the survey of the public lands. I will call the attention of the gentleman from Arkansas again to the fact that some other portions of the country besides Arkansas have industries connected with the civil service of the Government. [Laughter.]

I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Office of surveyor-general of Dakota: For salaries of clerks in his office, $3,000.

Mr. HERMANN. I desire to ask the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES], having charge of this bill, why it is there is no appropriation made for the surveyor-general of the State of Oregon? Why is not that office mentioned in connection with these deficiencies for clerical service?

Mr. CANNON. It was estimated for like all the others, but I do not know for what reason it was omitted.

Mr. BURNES. It was with the greatest reluctance that the Committee on Appropriations consented to incorporate in the bill any of these deficiencies. The committee were inclined to follow the suggestion of the gentleman from Illinois as the result of his experience in reference to these matters and strike them all out. Why Oregon should be omitted I am at a loss to determine. If the others remain in the bill, I think Oregon should also be included, and will help the gentleman to have the bill so amended.

Mr. HERMANN. I thank the gentleman from Missouri. Let me inquire whether Oregon was not also included in the recommendations of the Department?

Mr. BURNES. Yes; I think it was included in the recommendations of the Department.

Mr. HERMANN. For how much?

Mr. BURNES. One thousand dollars.

Mr. HERMANN. Then I move an amendment for that amount.

Mr. BURNES. The estimates of the Department were scaled in each case, and the amendment of the gentleman should provide as in the other cases, and $800 would be the proper amount.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Oregon move any amendment to the bill?

Mr. HERMANN. Mr. Chairman, with the consent of the chairman of the subcommittee, I move a further amendment to this paragraph.

The Clerk read as follows:

Office of surveyor-general of Oregon: For salaries of clerks in his office, $1,000.

Mr. BURNES. Say eight hundred, and we will accept it.

Mr. SAYERS. Make it $500.

Mr. HERMANN. I think I have suggested the proper amount.

Mr. SAYERS. I desire to call the attention of the committee, and especially that of the gentleman from Oregon, to the report of the Commissioner of the General Land Office in reference to the condition of the surveys of public lands in Oregon:

The number of acres surveyed up to June 30, 1887, was 39,867,995. The lands disposed of up to that date, June 30, 1887, amounted to 19,652,488 acres, leaving surveyed and undisposed of 20,215,507 acres.

So it seems, Mr. Chairman, from the report of the Commissioner of the General Land Office that there is really no necessity for this deficiency, because there are already more than twenty millions of acres of land that have been surveyed and are now undisposed of in the State of Oregon, or were on the 30th day of June, 1887.

Mr. HERMANN. Mr. Chairman, permit me to state, in response to what the gentleman has said, and also in addition to it, that there is possibly no State or Territory in this Union which has been so sadly neglected by the Committee on Appropriations as my own State in connection with her public lands; and I will further supplement what the gentleman from Texas has said by stating that while there are in round numbers some 20,000,000 acres of public lands which are surveyed and undisposed of, there are 20,000,000 acres or more yet unsurveyed and which it is desired shall be surveyed in order that settlers who are awaiting the opportunity may go upon them, make their settlements, and obtain titles.

Permit me also to make the additional suggestion that the surveyor-general of that State, by the report of the last Committee on Appropriations of the House, was cut down from the compensation allowed to other surveyors-general to the miserable pittance of $1,800, where the maximum allowed has been $2,500; and yet, Mr. Chairman, that officer, as competent possibly as any other officer holding a similar position in any State or Territory of this Union, is, or was, compelled by the action of the House a year ago to live on this beggarly sum of $1,800 in a city where the cost of living is possibly as great as in any other Western city on the continent. I asked that the amount should be increased to the maximum, but that amendment was rejected; and when I asked that it be increased to at least $2,200 it was refused. Every amendment looking to an increase to a reasonable sum was rejected.

In view of the rapid settlement of that State and the demand for public lands, in view of the incoming tide of settlers moving very rapidly into that region and seeking a resting place and an opportunity to acquire title to lands within the dominion of this country, I ask, Mr. Chairman, this committee to grant this small pittance of $1,000 as an addition for clerk-hire in the office of the surveyor-general there, the same as you have granted in other land offices.

And in further corroboration of the statement I have made, that great injustice has been done to this officer, I submit that the bill as it now stands, from this Committee on Appropriations, entirely ignores my State, Oregon not even being mentioned in this connection, notwithstanding the report of the Secretary that this officer should have at least $1,000 for this service. I ask, therefore, in bare justice, that the amendment I offer be accepted, and I hope sincerely in the name of justice that there will be no objection from any quarter to it.

Mr. SAYERS. If the gentleman from Oregon will accept $800 as a compromise in order to get along with this bill, we will agree to it.

Mr. HERMANN. Very well; I will agree to it as a last alternative.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Oregon modifies his amendment.

Mr. HERMANN. I move that the amount be fixed at $800.

Mr. CANNON addressed the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the gentleman from Oregon.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, I was endeavoring to get the attention of the Chair before the question was submitted to the committee. I wanted a minute in connection with this subject, and will move as an amendment to the amendment of the gentleman from Oregon to strike from the bill all of the appropriations for offices of surveyors-general on pages 12 and 13 of the bill; and I want to say upon that amendment that the gentleman from Oregon is right, and that if any of these appropriations are to go into the bill Oregon ought to have a share.

Mr. BURNES. She has got it.

Mr. CANNON. I want to say further that I congratulate my friend, as well as the surveyor-general of Oregon, that they are such good friends; and want to add that in my opinion in the present condition of the public service $800, in addition to the appropriation for Oregon, and these other appropriations in addition all along the line here, will not survey one acre of public land or make contracts for one extra acre.

I call attention again to the fact that for this year there is but $50,000 for public surveys and that is not all being spent.

Mr. BURNES. I want to call the attention of my friend from Illinois to the fact that all of these items are for mere clerical assistance. It is not proposed to survey an acre of land with any of these appropriations, but to give the surveyors-general clerical assistance to enable them to dispose of the rapidly accumulating business in their offices.

Mr. CANNON. Let us see just how much work has accumulated. Mind you, the Democracy came into power in 1885 on the cry of "reform." They were going to have a new order of things. Well, the surveys of the public lands amounted to $6,000 in 1886. In 1887 the surveys amounted to substantially nothing; and in this year you will expend less than $40,000 in the survey of public lands, and now, with three years' experience, with a force in the offices of the surveyors-general costing over $100,000 annually, you come with an additional appropriation for clerical service, and say it is needed in these various land offices for surveys of the public lands. In other words, you keep the machinery to do the work, but you have not and are not now working.

Well, I suppose it is desirable that in the State of Oregon, and the other States and Territories which have these officers, our Democratic friends who have been long out of office should have these salaries; and I suppose it is desirable that they should have this clerk-hire. But I want to call attention to the fact that in three years for this service you have spent over $300,000 in salaries and less than $60,000 in surveys or contracts for surveys, and that is all these officers do substantially; so that the claim of the gentleman, that this is merely for clerical service, which he claims to be necessary, is tolerably thin.

Therefore, I shall insist on my amendment to strike out these appropriations for all these surveyors-general.

Mr. RICE. I desire to state that these appropriations are absolutely too low already. The gentleman from Illinois should take into consideration that west of the Mississippi River there is now a large extent of territory into which people are swarming all the time, and that Washington Territory, New Mexico, and other Territories are clamoring for more surveys, but can not have them because the law does not justify them or because the appropriations are insufficient for the clerical work of these offices.

I have lived on the Mississippi River for more than forty years, and have been over all these Territories, and know it is absolutely necessary this expense should be incurred. The public-land system of this Government can not be carried on unless these offices of surveyors-general are maintained and money appropriated to carry on this work. They are just as necessary to the practical conducting of the public-land system as the engineer department is to the management of a railroad. No one would undertake to say that railroads could be carried on without an engineer department and an efficient one. The records must be brought up, the work must be prosecuted, and sufficient appropriations made for carrying on the public-land system. And I will say to the gentleman from Illinois that instead of the appropriations in this bill being too large they are not half enough for the purposes intended. Having submitted these observations I will not take up more of the time of the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands the amendment of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] to cover the amendment of the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. HERMANN] as well as the paragraphs making appropriation for offices of surveyors-general, on pages 12 and 13 of the bill.

Mr. CANNON. My amendment is intended to cover all, including the amendment of the gentleman from Oregon.

The question being put on Mr. CANNON'S amendment, there were—ayes 62, noes 43.

Mr. RICE. I make the point that a quorum has not voted.

Mr. RANDALL. This is an amendment, which will be reported to the House, and can be voted upon in the House.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman withdraw the point of no quorum?

Mr. RANDALL. I suggest to the gentleman from Minnesota that the amendment can be voted upon separately in the House.

Mr. RICE. I withdraw the point of no quorum.

The Clerk read the following paragraph:

Transportation of Indian supplies: To pay necessary expenses of transportation of goods, provisions, and other articles for the various tribes of Indians, including pay and expenses of transportation agents, $40,000.

Mr. SAYERS. I am instructed by the Committee on Appropriations to offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 14, after line 11, insert the following:
"This amount for pay of special agents and necessary expenses to carry out the provisions of section 3 of the act approved February 8, 1887, entitled 'An act to provide for the allotment of lands in severalty to Indians on the various reservations, and to extend the protection of the laws of the United States and Territories over the Indians, and for other purposes,' $10,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read the following paragraph:

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT.

Letter-balances, scales, and test-weights: For letter-balances, scales, and test-weights, $7,000.

Mr. SAYERS. I am instructed by the Committee on Appropriations to offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 15, after line 13, insert the following:
"For compensation of clerks in post-offices, $100,000.
"For rent, fuel, and light, $25,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SAYERS. I am instructed by the committee to offer an amendment to come in on page 16, after the heading "Department of Justice."

The Clerk read the amendment, as follows:

Support of convicts: For the support, maintenance, and transportation to and from the penitentiary of convicts from the District of Columbia, to be expended under the direction of the Attorney-General, $15,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. I move to strike out the last word, and desire to print as part of my remarks a statement of appropriations for expenses of United States courts. It covers the last ten years.

I call attention to the fact that this statement does not include most of the deficiencies for 1887 and 1888, which will be considerable.

Since that statement was prepared we have notice of $90,000 more than we had before, and I desire to call attention to certain facts which will appear from this table. The expenditures for 1886, when we had the deficiencies in, as compared with the expenditures for 1878, show an excess in round numbers of $429,000. In 1886, as compared with 1881, there is an excess of $191,000, and as compared with 1888 the expenditure in 1881 is $180,000 less. Take the years 1878, 1879, 1880, and 1881, aggregate them and get the average, and you have $3,140,000, which is, in round numbers, $280,000 less than the expenditures for 1886. In this connection I desire to call attention to the fact that the internal-revenue laws have been practically wiped out, and that a vast number of prosecutions which used to be conducted under the Department of Justice have ceased. I merely state these cold, naked facts, and call the attention of the House to them. I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

The statement is as follows:

Statement of appropriations for expenses of United States courts.

[Including items in the deficiency bill already passed and the accompanying bill.]

	1878.	1879.	1880.	1881.	1882.	1883.	1884.	1885.	1886.	1887.	1888.
Expenses of U. S. courts:
Annual appropriation.	$2,650,000.00	$2,750,000.00
Deficiencies	285,000.00	425,000.00
Claims	19,481.57	66,520.49
Total	2,955,481.57	3,241,520.49
Fees and expenses of marshals:
Annual appropriation.			$600,000.00	$650,000.00	$600,000.00	$600,000.00	$600,000.00	$600,000.00	$675,000.00	$675,000	$675,000
Deficiencies			30,000.00	60,000.00	50,000.00	150,000.00	91,724.67	127,155.03	30,000.00
Claims				32,243.37	2,058.55	30,549.96	786.30
Total			630,000.00	742,243.37	652,058.55	780,549.96	692,510.97	727,155.03	705,000.00	675,000	675,000
Fees of district attorneys:
Annual appropriation.			300,000.00	350,000.00	325,000.00	325,000.00	325,000.00	325,000.00	350,000.00	350,000	325,000
Deficiencies			25,000.00	20,000.00	87,370.37	119,500.00	80,000.00	40,000.00	25,568.81
Claims				2,417.06	3,067.05	3,228.33	175.60
Total			325,000.00	372,417.06	415,437.42	447,728.33	405,175.60	365,000.00	375,568.81	350,000	325,000
Pay of assistant attorneys:
Annual appropriation.											100,000
Fees of clerks:
Annual appropriation.			160,000.00	160,000.00	150,000.00	160,000.00	160,000.00	160,000.00	175,000.00	175,000	175,000
Deficiencies			25,000.00	45,000.00	55,000.00	60,000.00	50,000.00	54,744.50	8,465.87
Claims				1,257.65	65.49	1,283.20	38.00
Total			185,000.00	206,257.65	205,065.49	221,283.20	210,038.00	214,744.50	183,465.87	175,000	175,000
Fees of commissioners:
Annual appropriation.			140,000.00	140,000.00	100,000.00	130,000.00	130,000.00	100,000.00	100,000.00	100,000	50,000
Deficiencies			230.90	16,000.00	55,000.00	20,000.00	5,000.00	46,056.22	60,000.00
Claims				3,119.80	780.95	488.93	131.85
Total			140,230.90	159,119.80	155,780.95	150,488.93	135,131.85	146,056.22	160,000.00	100,000	50,000
Fees of jurors:
Annual appropriation.			400,000.00	400,000.00	450,000.00	450,000.00	450,000.00	400,000.00	450,000.00	450,000	450,000
Deficiencies			40,756.35	40,000.00	20,000.00		60,000.00	50,000.00	90,000.00	50,000	150,000
Claims				2,154.65	62.20	87.70	80.20
Total			440,756.35	442,154.65	470,062.20	450,087.70	510,080.20	450,000.00	540,000.00	500,000	600,000
Fees of witnesses:
Annual appropriation.			550,000.00	550,000.00	600,000.00	600,000.00	600,000.00	550,000.00	550,000.00	550,000	550,000
Deficiencies			60,497.14	30,000.00	70,000.00	6,080.00	60,321.50	121,408.74	237,150.00	200,000	300,000
Claims				6,185.83	247.55	3,171.66	98.80
Total			610,497.14	586,185.83	670,247.55	609,251.66	660,420.30	621,408.74	787,150.00	750,000	850,000

Statement of appropriations for expenses of United States courts—Continued.

	1878.	1879.	1880.	1881.	1882.	1883.	1884.	1885.	1886.	1887.	1888.
Support of prisoners:
Annual appropriation.			$193,000.00	$200,000.00	$325,000.00	$325,000.00	$300,000.00	$300,000.00	$250,000.00	$240,000	$250,000
Deficiencies			128,972.13	100,000.00					11,740.68	40,000
Claims				3,657.93	3,804.50	5,678.53	263.00
Total			321,972.13	303,657.93	328,804.50	330,678.53	300,263.00	300,000.00	26,740.68	280,000	250,000
Rent of court-rooms:
Annual appropriation.			67,000.00	75,000.00	75,000.00	70,000.00	50,000.00	50,000.00	50,000.00	50,000	60,000
Deficiencies			360.00				5,559.40	7,409.90	8,623.03	13,500
Claims					750.00
Total			67,360.00	75,000.00	75,750.00	70,000.00	55,559.40	57,409.90	58,623.03	63,500	60,000
Pay of bailiffs, etc.:
Annual appropriation.											100,000
Deficiencies											75,000
Total											175,000
Miscellaneous expenses:
Annual appropriation.			280,000.00	300,000.00	325,000.00	325,000.00	310,000.00	325,000.00	300,000.00	314,400	214,400
Deficiencies			26,608.04				15,000.00		13,361.53	20,000
Claims				6,858.91	1,418.90	949.93	2,021.50
Total			306,608.04	306,858.91	326,418.90	325,949.93	327,021.50	325,000.00	313,361.53	334,400	214,400
Total by years	$2,955,481.57	$3,241,520.49	3,027,424.56	3,193,895.20	3,299,625.56	3,386,018.24	3,296,200.82	3,206,774.39	3,384,914.92	3,227,900	3,374,400

The Clerk read as follows:

For miscellaneous expenses, Department of Justice, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1886, $244.04.

For miscellaneous expenses, Department of Justice, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1885, $68.88.

Mr. HOOKER. I move to strike out the last word. Mr. Chairman, I desire to ask of the gentleman having this bill in charge some explanation of the deficiencies which occur in the Department of Justice, as set forth in this bill. I find, on page 17, these deficiency appropriations:

Fees of jurors, United States courts: To supply a deficiency in the appropriation for fees of jurors, United States courts, $150,000. Fees of witnesses, United States courts: To supply a deficiency in the appropriation for fees of witnesses, United States courts, $300,000. Pay of bailiffs, etc., United States courts: To supply a deficiency in the appropriation for pay of bailiffs, United States courts, $75,000. Fees and expenses of marshals: For fees and expenses of marshals, United States courts, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1886, $10,000. Fees of commissioners: For fees of commissioners and justices of the peace acting as commissioners, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1886, $10,000. For fees of witnesses, United States courts, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1884, $321.50. For fees of witnesses, United States courts, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1883, $5,080.

Then comes an item of $20,000 for "miscellaneous expenses of the United States courts," making an aggregate of deficits in the United States courts for the payment of fees of witnesses, marshals, bailiffs, and commissioners of $550,080, deficiencies, some of them running back, as will be observed, as far as 1884. Now, sir, I take it that ordinarily deficiencies ought to be provided for in the next ensuing fiscal year after they have occurred, and I think that they most generally are. I can not understand how this accumulation of deficiencies in the United States courts could have grown up, extending as far back as 1884, and I want some explanation of it from the gentleman having the bill in charge.

It will be observed that in one case there is a deficiency for witness fees alone of $300,000. I refer generally to these appropriations, because I do not care to take them up seriatim at this time. I refer to them collectively in order that the gentleman having charge of the bill may explain how it is that these extraordinarily large deficiencies have grown up, and I think that a solution of the difficulty that occurs in this case, and some explanation of the suggestions made by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS], in the general remarks which he submitted upon this subject the other day, might be found if the Judiciary Committee, which, I suppose, would be the appropriate committee for the purpose, would formulate a law providing that the compensation of district attorneys in these courts should be by annual salaries of proper amount to pay them for the labor they perform. If that was the case, if a salary was attached to this office of district attorney instead of fees, then these extraordinary expenses, the fees of marshals for the transportation of witnesses, and the fees of the witnesses themselves, which grow up in the multiplied suits which are engendered in these courts, might not be incurred.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. RANDALL took the floor and yielded to Mr. HOOKER.

Mr. HOOKER. I have said this much on this subject because heretofore in my experience in the Congress of the United States, and also in Congresses of which I had not the honor to be a member, it has been suggested that we should compensate, by fixed salaries, these officers who represent the United States in the prosecutions which grow up under one form or another, whether under the internal-revenue laws or under the timber acts, which latter are the most prolific source of prosecutions in the Federal courts. In whatever form these suits arise, it is undoubtedly proper and most desirable that the prosecuting officers should be paid regular salaries, and should not be animated by a desire to accumulate a large number of suits so as to show extra efficiency on the part of the land officer or the district attorney himself. Let the prosecuting officers be salaried, and if these fees are to be collected, let them be paid into the Treasury of the United States to help to defray the expenses of the Government.

This measure of reform has at times been proposed heretofore, and I think the adoption of such a proposition would add largely to the justice with which the Government pursues its citizens for violations of these very highly penal laws, under which, in some cases, the question of intention is eliminated from consideration, so that a technical violation of the internal-revenue law, or the timber act, renders the party amenable to very severe penalties.

A MEMBER. A bill of that kind is now pending.

Mr. HOOKER. I am informed by a gentleman sitting near me that a bill of that sort is pending. I think that the enormous expenses in the administration of our Federal courts, for which the Committee on Appropriations now find it necessary to provide, demonstrate the necessity of some such legislation as will abridge the exercise of these extraordinary penal powers on the part of the courts. You might as well say that the judge sitting upon the bench to determine these questions should receive a salary in proportion to the number of cases decided, a salary paid by the litigants who may be defeated in the suits, as to say that the district attorney should be compensated in this way. He is an officer of the Government, and, like the Attorney-General of the United States, ought to be a salaried officer. If it is proper that fees be collected, they should, when collected, be paid over into the Treasury of the United States in order to avoid these large deficiency bills which constantly recur and which grow out of the exercise of this jurisdiction on the part of Federal officials.

Mr. KERR. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word of this clause, or, if in order, I will move to strike out all these appropriations for extra expenses of the Department of Justice. In this connection I wish to say that I listened with much interest to the debate of yesterday. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES], in his closing remarks on this subject, said he would not favor just now a change of policy in this respect. The gentleman, however, represents in part the State of Missouri; and a few years ago a Democratic convention of that State passed a resolution in favor of sweeping out this entire internal-revenue system—in favor of overthrowing it altogether—giving as one reason for that position the vast expense attending the administration of the system.

Mr. BURNES. Do I understand my friend to say that in a Democratic State convention of Missouri such a resolution was passed?

Mr. KERR. I do, sir.

Mr. BURNES. I am not aware of it.

Mr. KERR. A resolution adopted in their State convention made such a declaration; and if the gentleman will examine their platforms of a few years ago, he will find it.

Mr. BURNES. How many years ago?

Mr. KERR. Some few years ago; I can not at this moment state the exact number.

Mr. BURNES. I feel confident the gentleman is mistaken.

Mr. KERR. Now, I wish to know whether the reason of the change of position on the part of the gentleman and his party is that they now have under their control the Federal offices for the administration of those laws? I wish to know whether the vast expenses attending the administration of the law in connection with prosecutions for the enforcement of the tobacco and whisky taxes, which expenditures go into the pockets of members of the gentleman's political party, are the reason for this change of policy? I know that in my own district these expenses are very large. A man who places two cigars on top of a tobacco box is prosecuted and fined to the amount of $100; and such fines go into the pockets of men belonging to the gentleman's party. There is a universal demand that these laws shall be swept out of existence.

I wish further in this connection to call attention to the platform of the gentleman's party, adopted in Chicago three years ago:

Sufficient revenue to pay all the expenses of the Federal Government, economically administered, including pensions, interest and principal of the public debt, can be got under our present system of taxation from custom-house taxes on fewer imported articles, bearing heaviest on articles of luxury and bearing lightest on articles of necessity.

That is the pledge on which the national Democracy have been standing before the country for the last three years.

Mr. BLAND. Why does not the gentleman read the whole of that platform?

Several MEMBERS. It is too long.

Mr. BLAND. Read the whole of it, and then give us your own platform on the same subject.

Mr. KERR. Mr. Chairman, I might read also the provision of the same platform in regard to civil-service reform [laughter] and many other things; but I do not choose to do so.

Now, I ask that this party, claiming to represent the views of the American people to-day, shall redeem the pledges they have made, or else in plain terms repudiate those pledges, and say that the time has come in the history of their organization when the pledges made by a great party are to be repudiated in the administration of the law.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HATCH. Mr. Chairman, I will yield time enough to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. KERR] if he will tell me in what year and by what Democratic body in the State of Missouri any resolution was ever passed asking for a repeal of the internal-revenue system.

Mr. KERR. I have it at home. [Laughter.]

Mr. HATCH. I will wait till the gentleman can go home and get it. It will take the balance of his life to find it. It never had an existence. No Democratic convention or Legislature in the State of Missouri ever passed such a resolution.

Mr. KERR. The gentleman is mistaken; such a resolution was passed.

Mr. HATCH. I challenge the gentleman to produce it.

Mr. KERR. I will produce it.

Mr. HATCH. Very well; bring it out if you can. The gentleman can not find it. He will find that the Legislature of the State of Missouri and every Democratic convention that has been held in that State for the past ten years have passed resolutions demanding that Congress shall wipe from the statute-book that provision of the internal-revenue law which prevents the farmers of the country from selling their leaf-tobacco to anybody but a licensed dealer. That is as far as they have gone; and that provision which they have asked to have repealed was passed by a Republican Congress and signed by a Republican President. It fastened the shackles upon the farmers of this country, so that they could not sell a pound of tobacco unless to a licensed dealer without violating the law and being subject to fine and imprisoment.

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana. Why do you not repeal the law? You have the power.

Mr. HATCH. We have been knocking at the doors of Congress ever since my advent here in the Forty-sixth Congress trying to have it repealed. We can pass it through a Democratic House, but we can not get it through the Republican Senate. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. ROWELL. Have you ever tried to pass it through a Democratic House?

Mr. HATCH. Yes, we have repeatedly.

Mr. ROWELL. When?

Mr. HATCH. In the Forty-sixth and Forty-eighth Congresses. [Laughter.]

Mr. MILLIKEN. The gentleman's party is in power and why is it not passed now?

Mr. HATCH. It passed the House in one bill and went to the Senate and was modified there so that at this time the growers of tobacco are allowed to sell the products of their farms to the extent of $100 in value.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Will the gentleman from Missouri yield to me?

Mr. HATCH. Yes, with pleasure.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Why was the tax put upon tobacco? [Applause.]

Mr. HATCH. For the best reason in the world; the Government needed the amount of money at that time. [Applause.]

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. A moment, if you please. Then my friend from Missouri takes his share of the responsibility?

Mr. HATCH. Yes; the gentleman from Missouri never shirked his share of the responsibility. [Applause.]

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. If my friend will allow me to finish my question.

Mr. HATCH. Certainly.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. I understand that he does not criticise the Republican Congress which put the tax on tobacco?

Mr. HATCH. I do not.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Nor the Republican President who signed the law?

Mr. HATCH. I do not.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. I wish that to be understood.

Mr. HATCH. I only criticised——

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Let the responsibility for the repeal lie with the Democratic majority which has the control of this House.

Mr. HATCH. I only criticised the House that put that law upon the statute-book, and which I regard as one of the most infamous, which prevents the growers of a great product in this country like that of tobacco from selling it to anybody but to a licensed dealer of the Government.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. I rise to a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. What is the section of the bill which this discussion relates to? [Laughter.]

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Chairman, I only want to say, so far as the country is to-day involved, it matters not what has been the action of the past; let us in the future all join hands and strike from the statute-book this iniquitous system. [Applause.]

Mr. HATCH. I will join the gentleman from Pennsylvania in that when the bonds and debts of the Government for which that tax was imposed have been paid and when the clothing and fuel of the poor people of the country have been relieved from taxation.

Mr. RANDALL. Neither the bonds nor any other debt of the United States is in the least danger of not being paid.

Mr. HATCH. Ah, you levied this war tax to pay war debts so long as one of them is in existence. When the money was needed this was a fair rate and this was a fair subject of taxation.

Mr. REED. Let me ask the gentleman a question. Are you opposed, then, to the repeal?

Mr. HATCH. I am opposed to the repeal until the price of blankets comes down. Wait until we reduce the tax on the necessaries of life.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Chairman, I hope in the heat and ardor of the discussion on economic questions that the effect of the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. KERR] will not be lost sight of. I desire, in the few remarks I shall make, to call the attention of the committee back to the question under consideration. The amendment of the gentleman from Indiana is to strike out this deficiency for jurors and witnesses in United States courts. I hope that motion to strike out will not prevail, and for this reason: On the 12th day of December last the Attorney-General of the United States notified this House, through its Committee on Appropriations, that the appropriation to pay witnesses was already exhausted when only five and a half months of the fiscal year had expired, so that in many sections of the country the United States courts had practically to suspend their operations. And they remain, so far as the criminal business is concerned, suspended to-day, and if this amendment prevails they will remain suspended until the 1st day of July next.

Now, I do not hesitate to say that there is something strange about this. Who is responsible for it? The originator of this state of things I do not know, and do not care to know. It is enough for me that this state of facts is in existence, and that there has been mismanagement somewhere.

If, Mr. Chairman, an appropriation of $550,000, made at the last session of Congress, was thought to be sufficient by the Department of Justice, and at this session of Congress we are called on to supplement that by on additional appropriation of $300,000, nearly three-eighths of the whole sum necessary, five-eighths of that which was necessary having been appropriated in the first instance, either the Department of Justice did not understand its business when it made up its estimates, or the Committee on Appropriations did not understand its business when it made up its bill; and I do not care whether the responsibility rests upon the one or the other; it is somewhere between them. I repeat, this money must be voted, or the business of the courts will remain at a standstill. In my own State the courts have been suspended since December 12.

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HOOKER] asked a few moments ago for information in regard to those items of appropriation for the Judicial Department which appear in the bill now under consideration. I have to say on behalf of the Committee on Appropriations that they have in this bill given every dollar that was recommended by the Judicial Department.

For the fees of jurors in the United States courts, covering $150,000, I have to state that $450,000 were appropriated originally, being the sum estimated for, and that the committee were informed but a few days ago that of this amount of $450,000 only $25,000 was on hand for the balance of this fiscal year.

As to the item of $300,000 for fees of witnesses, $550,000 were appropriated in accordance with the recommendations of the Department of Justice, and a few days since the Committee on Appropriations was officially informed that of this amount only $100 remain on hand, all the rest having been exhausted, and that an indebtedness of about $70,000 has accrued.

As to the pay of baliffs, the appropriation for which amounted to $100,000, in accordance with estimates sent to Congress, the information was given the committee that it was completely exhausted on the 1st of January last. Seventy-five thousand dollars has been recommended by the committee. This is in accordance with the estimate of the Department.

The deficiencies for prior years were ascertained only since the Forty-ninth Congress. They are deficiencies not previously reported, and the committee felt it their duty to provide for them. So that the committee in its action has thus far given to the Judicial Department every dollar that has been asked for.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Do I understand my friend from Texas to say that when the Department of Justice asked for an appropriation for witnesses of $550,000, it really asked for $300,000 less than was necessary that year?

Mr. SAYERS. That seems to be the necessary deduction, because it comes now and asks for an additional $300,000.

Mr. BUCHANAN. And you are satisfied that it is needed?

Mr. SAYERS. We have the word of the Department of Justice.

Mr. HOOKER. I will call the attention of the gentleman from Texas to that clause of the bill to which I referred, which provides:

For fees of witnesses, United States courts, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1883, $5,080.

How does that happen to be incorporated here, or that it has not been provided for in previous bills?

Mr. SAYERS. Because the estimate only came to the present Congress.

Mr. HOOKER. And was not called to the attention of any intervening Congress between that date and this?

Mr. SAYERS. So I am informed.

Mr. BURNES. Mr. Chairman, on yesterday there was slight allusion made to the subject of tobacco during the course of the debate, and another allusion of the same sort has been made to-day. From the ever-constant readiness with which this House bubbles over at the mention of this commodity, I am inclined to believe that if another commodity, also covered by the internal-revenue laws, and from which a large tax is derived, were mentioned that there would be a regular Pandora's box opened upon the floor of the House, and confusion would reign supreme. [Laughter.] At all events, the mention of the subject which has so aroused the House in connection with this amendment induces me to turn to the consideration of that other element under the internal-revenue laws, which upon this occasion need not be mentioned, and ask unanimous consent that this debate on this provision and the pending amendments be now closed by the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. To what paragraph does the gentleman's request apply?

Mr. BURNES. I ask unanimous consent that the debate be closed with reference to all the items under the head of "Department of Justice." and all amendments pending thereto.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The Clerk again reported the amendment offered by Mr. KERR.

The question being taken, the amendment was not agreed to.

Mr. NEAL. I offer an amendment, to come in after the heading "Judicial" at the top of page 17.

The Clerk read the proposed amendment, as follows:

Insert the following:
"For pay of assistant district attorneys for the year ending June 30, 1888, $20,550."

Mr. NEAL. I desire to send to the desk a communication from the Department of Justice, to be read as an explanation of that amendment.

Mr. SAYERS. I raise the point of order against the reading of that letter. The committee having unanimously agreed that further debate should be stopped on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa, and on the provisions of the bill to which that amendment referred, I submit that reading the letter, being in the nature of debate, is not in order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. BUCHANAN. But the amendment of the gentleman from Iowa only applied to the paragraph ending with line 17 on the sixteenth page.

Mr. NEAL. I desire to be heard on the point of order made by the gentleman from Texas.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES] asked unanimous consent that all debate be closed on the provisions relating to the Department of Justice and all the amendments thereto. The Chair submitted that request to the committee, and it was agreed to.

Mr. NEAL. Will the Chair hear me on the point of order?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair does not think it necessary to take up time in discussion as to the point of order, as he has already ruled upon it. The Chair sustains the point of order. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee.

The question being put, the Chairman stated that, in the opinion of the Chair, the noes had it.

Mr. NEAL. I call for a division.

The committee divided, and there were—ayes 20, noes 23.

So (further count not being called for) the amendment was not agreed to.

The Clerk read the following paragraph:

Pay of bailiffs, etc., United States courts: To supply a deficiency in the appropriation for pay of bailiffs, United States courts, $75,000.

Mr. LAIRD. I call the attention of the gentleman having charge of the bill to the necessity of amending the enumeration of items in that paragraph relating to the "pay of bailiffs, etc."

Mr. SAYERS. This item is in the exact language in which it came from the Department of Justice; but the committee recognize the propriety of the amendment suggested by the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. LAIRD. I submit that the language of the law should be followed.

Mr. SAYERS. We have an amendment for that purpose which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read the proposed amendment, as follows:

On page 17 strike out lines 8, 9, and 10, and insert in lieu thereof the following:
"For pay of bailiffs and criers; of expenses of district judges directed to hold court outside of their districts; of meals for jurors when ordered by the court; of compensation for jury commissioners, not exceeding $5 per day, not exceeding three days for any one term of court; for stenographic clerk for the Chief-Justice and for each associate justice of the Supreme Court, at a sum not exceeding $1,600 each, $75,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SAYERS. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read the amendment, as follows:

On page 17, after line 10, insert:
"Support of United States prisoners: For support of United States prisoners, including necessary clothing and medical aid and transportation to place of conviction, $90,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read the following paragraph:

Fees and expenses of marshals: For fees and expenses of marshals, United States courts, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1886, $10,000.

Mr. CANNON. As I understood the agreement limiting debate, it had reference to all items under the head "Department of Justice," on page 16 of the bill, and did not apply to the provisions on page 17, under the heading "Judicial." I desire to offer an amendment pro forma, to strike out the last word, and I do so for the purpose of calling the attention of the committee for a moment to the appropriations recommended for witnesses.

Mr. BURNES. I will not make the point of order on the gentleman from Illinois, but will ask unanimous consent that he be permitted to make his statement,

Mr. CANNON. I did not understand that the agreement covered page 17.

Mr. BURNES. The Chair has already decided that unanimous consent has been given for closing debate on all these paragraphs relating to appropriations for the Department of Justice, including judicial expenses.

The CHAIRMAN. If there has been any misunderstanding as to this, the Chair does not desire to enforce his ruling. He asks the gentleman from Missouri to restate his request, as there seems to have been a misunderstanding as to its extent.

Mr. BURNES. I now ask unanimous consent to terminate debate in five minutes on all the paragraphs relating to the Department of Justice, judicial expenses, and miscellaneous expenses of the United States courts.

Mr. CANNON. I prefer not to be limited.

Mr. BURNES. Well, say ten minutes.

Mr. CANNON. I do not think the debate will run over ten or fifteen minutes. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. NEAL] desires to offer an amendment, and to be heard on it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair begs the attention of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES]. There is some question as to the extent of the request made by that gentleman. The Chair may be in error in regard to that, and does not desire to take advantage of any gentleman by reason of his own error. He desires therefore to know from the gentleman from Missouri the extent of his request.

Mr. BURNES. It was my intention to cover the whole matter relating to these appropriations for the Department of Justice.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair so understood and so submitted the request, and will enforce that agreement.

Mr. CANNON. I was paying particular attention, and I did not understand that the items under the head "Judicial," on page 17, were covered by this agreement. My understanding was that the agreement applied only to those on page 16, under the head "Department of Justice."

Mr. BLAND. The gentleman [Mr. BURNES] first asked that unanimous consent be given to close the debate on all matters in the bill relating to the Department of Justice and on all amendments thereto.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair so understood the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES], and so submitted the question.

Mr. McCULLOGH. Mr. Chairman, it would obviously be impossible for the gentleman to get unanimous consent to curtail debate on matters which had not been read. Any gentleman may have an amendment to submit to some of these items that have not been read.

The CHAIRMAN. The House does many things by unanimous consent.

Mr. BURNES. I am satisfied that the Chair is right, and I am satisfied of my own intention in regard to this matter. Let us, therefore, not be harsh, and, as there was some misapprehension upon the other side, I am willing to meet the gentleman in a spirit of accommodation.

Mr. CANNON. If the Chair understands that I am not entitled to the floor on an amendment on page 17, I can say all that I desire to say on an amendment on page 18. [Laughter.]

Mr. BURNES. Very well.

The Clerk read as follows:

Miscellaneous expenses: For miscellaneous expenses, United States courts, $20,000, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1887.

Mr. SAYERS. I send to the desk an amendment which I desire to come in at that point.

The amendment was read, as follows:

Page 18, after line 4, insert the following:
"Salary of circuit judge: For salary of an additional circuit judge in the second judicial circuit, authorized by the act of March 3, 1887, $5,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Public printing:
To enable the Public Printer to comply with the provisions of the law granting fifteen days' annual leave to the employés of the Government Printing Office, $5,000.

Mr. CANNON. I move to strike out the last word, in order that I may say what I desired to say a few moments ago. I wish to call the attention of the committee to the fact that if the Attorney-General and the officers subordinate to him in his Department who appeared before the Committee on Appropriations can be relied upon, the courts will be closed about the middle of May next under the appropriations for the current year re-enforced by these deficiency appropriations. Take the item of witnesses. If gentlemen will turn to Appendix K, page 25 of the Estimates, they will find the Attorney-General making use of this language:

FEES OF WITNESSES.

The appropriation $550,000 has borne expenses that properly belonged to the year 1887, owing to the failure to pass a deficiency bill at the last session of Congress. The average expense per month from July 1, 1887, to December 1, 1887, five months, is $110,000 a month. If the expenses for the remainder of the fiscal year shall equal this average there will be needed $660,000, thus making the expenses of the appropriation for this year $1,100,000.

Now, I have no doubt from that statement that the expenses for witnesses will be at least $1,100,000, because——

Mr. BURNES. Let me ask the gentleman what becomes of the appropriation for the deficiency of 1887, which was in the bill that we passed the other day?

Mr. CANNON. That is to be expended. I am not now speaking of the sufficiency of the excuse that the Attorney-General gives for this increased appropriation; I am merely reading what he says and calling attention to the fact that this appropriation for witnesses was exhausted on the 1st day of last December, leaving seven months of the year, and if it runs on for the remainder, seven months, as it ran for the first five months it will require $1,320,000. And the gentleman will recollect that when the officials from this Department were before the committee they did not claim that this appropriation of $300,000 would last longer than the middle of May. So that while we have given the full amount of the estimate it appears that the courts will close by the middle of next May unless additional estimates are sent in and additional money given. That is all I wanted to say, and I wanted to say it in the hearing of the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS]. When I made substantially this statement the other day that gentleman said that the statement, coming as it did, was entitled to but little consideration, and I wanted to show that it comes not from me, but from his Attorney-General.

Mr. BURNES. I move that the committee now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and Mr. HATCH having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, Mr. BLOUNT, from the Committee of the Whole, reported that they had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 6437) to provide for certain of the most urgent deficiencies, etc., and had come to no resolution thereon.

Mr. BURNES. Mr. Speaker, I yield now to my friend from New York [Mr. BELMONT], the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

BUSINESS OF COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

Mr. BELMONT. Mr. Speaker, this day was, by special order of the House, assigned for the consideration of business reported by the Committee on Foreign Affairs, subject, under the rules, to the priority of appropriation and revenue bills. Under this provision of the order, the consideration of the deficiency bill has occupied a considerable part of the time which might have been devoted to our business; and the hour is now so late that in justice to important bills reported by our committee, we feel bound to ask the assignment of another day, instead of to-day, for our business. Saturday of this week has already been assigned to us; and on consulting the Calendar we find that Thursday, the 1st of March, is unoccupied. I therefore ask that, in addition to next Saturday, Thursday, the 1st of March, be assigned in place of to-day for the business of the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HATCH). The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent that Thursday, the 1st day of March, be assigned——

Mr. SPRINGER. After the consideration hour.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. After the consideration hour be set apart, in lieu of this day, for the consideration of business reported by the Committee on Foreign Affairs. Is there objection? The Chair hears none; and it is so ordered.

URGENT DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. BURNES. I now move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the urgent deficiency bill.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole (Mr. BLOUNT in the chair) and resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6437) to provide for certain of the most urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888, and for other purposes.

The CHAIRMAN. Unless objection be made, it will be understood that the pro forma amendment which was pending is withdrawn.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. I move an amendment to be inserted as a new paragraph between the first and second subdivisions of the bill in regard to public printing. I ask the Clerk to read the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Public Printer is hereby directed to rigidly enforce the provisions of the eight-hour law in the department under his charge.

Mr. BURNES. Mr. Chairman, I feel constrained to say that this amendment is in my judgment subject to a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will please state his point of order.

Mr. BURNES. I am willing to reserve my point of order if my colleague [Mr. O'NEILL] desires to be heard.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I fail to realize how this amendment can be subject to a point of order, as it does not increase expenses and has a tendency to improve the service. It looks to improving the efficiency of the service at no additional expense of the Government.

The necessity for a provision of this kind arises from the fact that in the Government Printing Office to-day you will find hundreds of men who, under some peculiar system of managing their work as to overtime and extra compensation, are employed and paid for ten, twelve, fourteen, and sixteen hours a day, while you see hundreds of printers walking this town with their toes out of their shoes. The object of this proposition is simply to pare down the bills of men who are taking more than their share of the work. This amendment proposes that they take their equal chances with others.

This clause may very properly be attached to a provision granting privileges to these employés in the Printing Office. We have on our Calendar a bill granting to these employés an additional fifteen days' leave of absence, and I am in favor of that measure. But when workingmen are demanding of us an eight-hour law I demand that they themselves shall live up to it. The spirit of an eight-hour law means that men should not work longer than that time if thereby they deprive others of the opportunity to be brought within the ranks of industry. That is the spirit in which this amendment is offered. It can not be subject to a point of order. It will give us better service and with no additional expense to the Government.

Mr. BURNES. Mr. Chairman, I believe I but state a fact when I say there is now a law regulating this matter. (To Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri:) We have an eight-hour law, have we not?

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. There is a general eight-hour law, which has not been enforced for years.

Mr. BURNES. Well, then, we have such a law.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. The object of this amendment is to enforce the law. You believe in enforcing laws, do you not?

Mr. BURNES. Now, Mr. Chairman, there is a law covering this subject. It seems to me this provision has no place in an appropriation bill. It is either legislation or it is nothing. We have no authority to direct any officer of the Government to enforce diligently the law. That is not our business. If an officer fails to execute the law, we can perhaps deal with him in some form; but I do not see why we should undertake by a provision in an appropriation bill to direct any officer of the Government to enforce strictly the law. It seems to me this provision is clearly out of order, and ought not to be engrafted on this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will ask the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES] to cite the statute in reference to this matter. The gentleman seems to admit with his colleague that there is an eight-hour law applying to this class of labor.

A MEMBER. To the various classes of Government employment.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. There is an eight-hour law, or, rather, there was one. There is one which is frequently invoked just before elections, and forgotten just after them. [Laughter.] There is that sort of an eight-hour law. This is a good time to enforce that law—a very opportune time; and if the Chairman of this Committee of the Whole has that political sagacity for which I give him credit, he will certainly rule on my side of this question [laughter], and give members of this House the chance to show their political sagacity in voting for it. This is a question properly to be submitted to the House.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understood the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES], in charge of the bill, to raise the question of order on the ground that the amendment offered by his colleague changed existing law. The Chair now understands him to admit that it does not change existing law; and if it does not, the Chair would not feel disposed to exclude it.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. I move the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, let us understand precisely the situation of this amendment. The amendment is in order, because the law is that way; that is, it does not change existing law, and is therefore in order. What is the necessity, then, of the amendment, if the law is that way now? What does it accomplish?

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. Let us have a vote on it, so that everybody shall know it is the law, and enforce it.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. Read the amendment.

The amendment was again read.

Mr. CANNON. I wish to ask the gentleman from Missouri his reason for merely mentioning this one office of the Public Printer?

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. I wish to enforce it in every one of them.

Mr. CANNON. The mention of one excludes the other.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. Not necessarily, as they are not all embraced in this section. This is the only one before the House.

Mr. CANNON. The gentleman will repeal the eight-hour law in all of the other Departments of the Government.

Mr. BURNES. I have no objection to putting in anything which pleases the taste and fancy of the House; but I wish to put myself on record against incorporating into one of the general appropriation bills mere directory legislation in regard to any officer of the Government failing or not failing to execute the law. It is not any item of appropriation. It has no place in the bill. It is foreign to the nature and to the purpose of the bill. These items are appropriations to supply deficiencies. This is not any deficiency of appropriation. It seems to be a deficiency as to the execution of the law, and that is the only deficiency there is about it. I hope the House will not place itself in the attitude of appearing to be ridiculous by engrafting the amendment on this appropriation bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The point stated by the gentleman was not raised on the point of order.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. The Public Printer should enforce the law. He did not offer one reason why he should not enforce the whole of it; therefore I have moved that amendment.

Mr. BURNES. In reply to the gentleman from Indiana and to my colleague, I wish to say there has been some talk and some innuendo in regard to the failure of the Public Printer to execute the laws; but that I have yet to learn from any authority, from any one I deemed to be authority, that this officer has really failed to execute the law. My colleague seems to be under the impression that the Public Printer has failed in the execution of the law, but I presume he speaks from the information derived from others. His word would be sufficient for me, but I say that it is not right to assume, in reference to a faithful and efficient officer of the Government, that he is violating the law unless there is some good, substantial authority for making such assertion.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. I have no intention whatever to reflect on the Public Printer, but knowing there is enough—I have had man after man, until they have amounted to dozens of printers who have come to me appealing for aid to get employment in that department, and claiming they could not because they say a certain class of employés, under some system, managed to work fourteen, fifteen, and eighteen hours a day; under their system of paying two hours for one hour at night they could earn pay for eighteen or twenty hours—I say there is proof enough.

Mr. WARNER. How is this done?

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. Of course it is done under the foremen of the Public Printing Office. I do know one thing, that there is a large number of public printers standing around your streets not having the means of livelihood, because of a set of men in there of greedy proclivities absorbing all the revenue of the Printing Office to themselves. When that is the case it is time, in my judgment, to call attention of the House to the necessity of compelling the Public Printer to enforce the law.

Mr. WARNER rose.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. I can not understand why there should be so much trouble about the enforcement of the eight-hour law under the Public Printer; but it is a fact that the law is not enforced.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. I am with the gentleman from Missouri in the proposition which he submits. I wish him to state for the information of the House whether he has any information he regards as reliable that the officer he instructs here is not enforcing the law?

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. I know the law is not being enforced to limit the work to eight hours.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. All the statute-books declare on the part of Congress is that eight hours shall be regarded as a day's work. That is all of it.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. That is it.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. They pay a certain class of employés by the hour, and if they work ten hours they ought to be paid for the ten hours, and if they work for fourteen hours they ought to be paid for fourteen hours. Does the gentleman from Missouri mean to say that a man shall not work for more than eight hours a day if he wants to or the necessities of his family compel him to do so?

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. The meaning of the eight-hour law is to limit a day's work to eight hours, so as to reduce the number out of employment to as great an extent as possible. If I had the power I would prohibit all the Departments from violating the spirit of the eight-hour law, so that an additional number of unemployed labor, out in the country, might be enabled to go to work. That is the spirit of the law.

Mr. WARNER. Is not that the purpose of the amendment—to prevent men working more than eight hours a day?

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. Yes, that is the object of it.

Mr. OATES. Does not the gentleman know that a large number of the employés there work by the piece?

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. This does not apply to them.

Mr. OATES. Does the gentleman think the Government ought to provide work for the people; to take care of them, and say when they shall work or quit work, and how long they may work?

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I happen to know something about laborers in the Public Printing Office. I know that there is a class of men who labor there and do the drudgery of that office who receive a rate of compensation equal to 25 cents an hour. If they work, or are permitted to work, but eight hours, their compensation will be then but $2 per day. These men have house rent to pay, children to educate, families to support, and I undertake to say that if we adopt this amendment these men have either got to suffer or else Congress must increase their compensation.

The other day one of them came to me and said that notwithstanding he had been given fourteen hours a day for many days during the month, that when he paid his little grocery bill, his house rent, and bought some school-books for his children, he had not only been compelled to invest every penny that he had earned, but he had to borrow $2 from a friend to meet the monthly expense. I would be glad to see the day's labor, or the labor of every man, cut down to eight hours if it were possible to do so; and while I favor an eight-hour law I never intend to vote to prohibit men from working just as many hours in a day as they please. That is liberty; it is the liberty of the citizen, and I never will, so far as my vote is concerned, assist in touching the liberty of the laboring man to labor so long as he may find employment with adequate compensation.

This eight-hour law that we talk about is simply a statute that says in the absence of any other or different agreement that eight hours shall constitute a day's labor. That is to say, if the engagement is to labor a day in any public employment, that day shall mean eight hours. That is all it means. It does not say that the bureaus of the Government may not give longer hours employment than that. It does not prohibit it. It ought not to prohibit it, I undertake to say, and the Public Printer is doing exactly right when he permits these poor men laboring at this small pittance of 25 cents an hour to work ten hours, or fourteen hours, or even sixteen hours, if he is prepared to give them work for that length of time at that compensation.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. And let the balance starve.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. The object of the gentleman from Missouri, however, appears to be to establish by his amendment the fact that he is determined to follow the law. Now, I am glad to know that a Democrat occasionally does observe the law, or tries to observe it [laughter], for it is not often that they do so when they can avoid it; but when they do I am opposed to casting any reflections upon them for it. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. What was the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana?

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. My amendment was to strike from the amendment the words "eight hours," so it will read, "the Public Printer shall enforce the law."

The question being taken on the amendment of Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana, the House divided, and there were—ayes 31, noes 30.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. Tellers.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I simply offered my amendment to emphasize the point; and inasmuch as it has prevailed, I will, with the permission of the committee, now withdraw it.

There being no objection, the amendment was withdrawn.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. I now ask the adoption of the resolution I have presented.

Mr. ROGERS. Let it be again reported.

The amendment was again read.

The question was taken; and on a division there were—ayes 60, noes 43.

Mr. RICHARDSON and Mr. OATES. No quorum has voted.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order being made that no quorum has voted, the Chair will appoint tellers.

Mr. RICHARDSON and Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri, were appointed tellers.

Mr. BURNES. With the understanding that we shall have this matter disposed of in the House, I hope my friend from Tennessee will withdraw the call for tellers.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. I am perfectly willing to have a yea and nay vote in the House.

Mr. RICHARDSON. With that understanding I am willing to withdraw the demand.

The CHAIRMAN. If the point of no quorum is withdrawn, the Chair will announce the result. The amendment is agreed to.

Mr. OATES. What was the announcement made by the Chair?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair announced that the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. OATES. I thought there was a call for tellers on the point of no quorum?

The CHAIRMAN. That was withdrawn, as the Chair understands, by some private understanding.

Mr. RICHARDSON. No; not by a private understanding.

Mr. RANDALL. It was withdrawn on a public statement that there might be a yea and nay vote in the House.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. Why should there not be a yea and nay vote?

Mr. RANDALL. Well, if gentlemen want to make the arrangement that there shall be a yea and nay vote, without regard to the requirement of one-fifth of the members demanding it, I see no objection.

Mr. RICHARDSON. This is a very important matter, and that ought to be clearly understood before this demand is withdrawn.

Mr. OATES. I shall certainly object to withdrawing the point of no quorum, unless there is to be a yea and nay vote in the House.

Mr. BURNES. I ask unanimous consent that there be a vote in the House.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that the Committee of the Whole can not bind the House. The matter, however, is in the control of the gentleman in charge of the bill, who has the right, in the House, to ask for a separate vote.

Mr. ROGERS. I rise to a question of order. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. OATES] made the point of no quorum.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order has been made by the gentleman from Alabama that a quorum has not voted. The Chair will appoint as tellers the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. OATES] and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. O'NEILL].

The committee divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 95, noes 58.

So the amendment was adopted.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Insert after the amendment just adopted the following:
"Provided, That no employé in the Government Printing Office shall have employment or pay for more than eight hours for work on any one day."

Mr. BLAND. I make the point of order that that amendment changes existing law. The amendment of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. O'NEILL] made no change of existing law.

I appreciate the remarks of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BROWNE] in which he stated that he would not support any measure that prohibited employés in the Printing Office or elsewhere working over eight hours if their necessities required it. I indorse that sentiment myself. But the amendment of the gentleman from Missouri did not change that, for the eight-hour law provides, as I understand, that employés in that department and others, if they agree and make a contract to that effect, to work over eight hours, may do so, or they may work by the piece. It seems to me this provision looks to changing that part of the law and preventing the very thing which my friend from Indiana a moment ago said he was in favor of.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. I am very much inclined to the opinion that the point of order is well taken. But as I am sure the gentlemen of the majority who voted for the amendment of the gentleman from Missouri intended to have the working people of this country understand that that amendment had some force and did in some way change existing law in favor of the wage-worker, and inasmuch as I suppose it was sought to have them believe that it was intended to limit the number of hours of employés in that office, I thought I would see whether or not the point of order would be interposed to an amendment which crystallized the fact that gentlemen wanted some people in this country to believe that they were doing this thing. If it be true that the amendment of the gentleman from Missouri leaves the law just where it was before his amendment was adopted, then we have put ourselves to a good deal of trouble in occupying the time of the House and the country in doing nothing but manufacturing, I suppose, a very small amount of exceedingly cheap buncombe.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The Clerk proceeded to read the portion of the bill headed "Judgments Court of Claims," beginning on page 19.

Mr. BURNES. There are several pages occupied by these judgments of the Court of Claims. The reading is simply the reading of the names of the judgment creditors and the amounts. I ask unanimous consent that the Clerk may pass them.

Mr. McMILLIN. What do the judgments aggregate?

Mr. BURNES. Three hundred and forty-five thousand dollars.

Mr. McMILLIN. I suggest the propriety of having that portion of the bill read.

The Clerk proceeded to read it.

Mr. SAYERS. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 20, after line 2, strike out the word "dollars" and insert the word "cents;" so that it will read: "Patrick H. Drake and William P. Ward, $483.53."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GLASS. I ask the gentleman who has charge of the bill what is the difference between these claims and the claims on the Private Calendar coming from the Court of Claims? Are these all judgment claims?

Mr. SAYERS. These are judgments rendered under the law which gives the Court of Claims exclusive jurisdiction and makes its judgments final.

Mr. SAYERS. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read the amendment, as follows:

On page 23, after line 11, insert:
"Frederick Frerich, $10,130.31, with interest at 5 per cent. from March 10, 1886.
"George E. Hendee, $3,178.01, with interest at 5 per cent. from March 21, 1887."
And on page 24, in lines 14 and 15, in lieu of the sum proposed, insert "$263,595.52."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read the following paragraph:

For ordnance stores, mounting guns, etc., 1887, $25.50.

Mr. McADOO. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend by inserting after line 10, page 35:
"The claim of the Hoboken Land Improvement Company the sum of $15,800."

Mr. BURNES. I suppose my friend is hardly serious in the presentation of this claim.

Mr. McADOO. I am always serious. Does my friend from Missouri oppose a point of order against the amendment?

Mr. BURNES. No, sir; I shall make no such point.

Mr. McADOO. I desire to state to the House that this claim has been pending against the Government for many years. It has been examined repeatedly by the Treasury Department and allowed. The claim is for a steam ferry-boat owned by the Hoboken Land Improvement Company, of Hoboken, N. J., a corporation in my district, which was contracted for and chartered by the Government during the war.

After she had been chartered by the Government she was put in charge of a Government pilot; she was subject entirely to his control; she was taken down to Hampton Roads, and finally, I believe, to Hatteras Inlet. After she reached Norfolk she collided with another vessel there and was taken up to Baltimore for repairs. The Government disallowed the time that she was being repaired, as well as the time they did not actually use this boat. The collision occurred while she was in charge of the Government pilot, and after she had been repaired the Government saw fit to allow her to remain at the Roads without using her. Now, the claim on the part of the claimants is, that they are entitled to pay for every day that that steam-boat was under the control of the Government, under the terms of their contract and in charge of the Government pilot. I will read from the decision of Judge Maynard, of the Treasury Department, who has examined all the facts of this case. He concludes his report as follows:

It will be seen from the statement of facts in the foregoing report that on December 20, 1861, the claimant was the owner of the steamer Chancellor Livingston, and that upon that day the Government, by its duly authorized agent, entered into an agreement with the claimant, known as a "charter-party of affreightment," whereby the Government immediately took the steamer into its service and employ, and agreed to pay the owner the sum of $200 for each and every day that the steamer was so employed.

It is satisfactorily shown that the steamer remained in the employ of the Government, subject to the control and direction of the military authorities, until September 29, 1862, when she was discharged and returned to her owner.

For the time between February 22, 1862, and March 21, 1862, and between April 6, 1862, and the time of her discharge the owner has been paid for her service at the charter-party rate; but no payment has been made for the time embraced between December 20, 1861, and February 21, 1862, and between March 21, 1862, and April 6, 1862, amounting in all to seventy-nine days.

Inasmuch as it satisfactorily appears that the steamer was in the Government service during all of this time under the charter-party, and that the owner has fully performed all the terms and conditions of the agreement on his part, I am unable to reach any other conclusion than that the United States is indebted to the owner for the service at the price agreed upon, which is correctly stated above.

I. H. MAYNARD, Comptroller.

Now, Mr. Chairman, the whole case is this: This steam-boat was disabled in an accident after she reached Norfolk, while, as I have said, she was under the control of the Government pilot. She was delayed in movements by storms and heavy seas. She was in the Government service at all times; she was subject to the control of the Government during the time that she was being repaired; she was taken out of the very valuable service of her owners as a ferry-boat between Hoboken and New York, to their great loss; and after she was repaired, if the Government saw fit not to use her, or to use her sparingly, or could not from her shape and size use her under all conditions, that was their concern. Her owners lost her services, and I do not see why, in justice and in law, the Government of the United States should not pay for this boat during the time they had her in use or in possession under this solemn written charter-party contract for use and employment.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. BUCHANAN. I will take the floor, and yield to my colleague if he desires further time.

Mr. McADOO. I thank my colleague, but I have said all that I desire to say until I hear from the committee.

Mr. BURNES. Mr. Chairman, I desire to very earnestly call the attention of this committee to the principle that is involved in the amendment submitted by the distinguished gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. McADOO]. Here is a claim originating in the year 1861, a claim which was presented to the Government in the year 1862, which has been before the Congresses of the United States successively, off and on, from that time to the present, and has never been considered without meeting rejection.

The judgment of Congress and the judgment of the country has been uniformly against it. Not only the judgment of the committee, but the judgment of the Forty-eighth Congress, and, I believe, of the Forty-ninth Congress, and of numerous Congresses preceding, has been against this claim. This vessel was chartered at the rate of $200 a day, an extraordinary price, to begin with. Then there were seventy-nine days when, in consequence of unfavorable winds or something else, the vessel was not in the service of the Government. The Government of the United States settled with the parties and paid them at the rate of $200 per day for every day that the vessel was in service; but the claim was made for seventy-nine days when the vessel was not in service. Now, will this Committee of the Whole House of the Fiftieth Congress reverse the judgments of preceding Congresses, reverse the judgments of twenty-seven years of administration of the Government, simply in consequence of a recent adjudication by one of the accounting officers of the Treasury Department? I need not say more than this. If it be the judgment of Congress year after year to meet and throttle this claim and then, after innumerable considerations and rejections of it, then, in the exuberance of our good will and in the abundance of public money in the Treasury, we are now to reverse all precedents and now pay it, let us meet it and do it boldly and bravely.

Let us say that the Departments of this Government were unwilling from year to year for twenty-seven years to pay a just debt; let us say that every administration of the Government in all these years has been unjust and dishonest with regard to this transaction; let us say that preceding Congresses, meeting nearer to the time when the transaction took place than we meet, knew nothing with regard to the subject on which they acted, and that we now take up this twenty-seven-year old claim thus investigated, thus adjudicated, thus settled, and gravely put it in an appropriation bill for payment, when there can be no pretense that it is other than a constructive claim against the Government. When we have paid men or corporations for the time actually employed in the service of the Government; when we have paid every reasonable claim that they can possibly make; when all these tribunals have decided that the Government has done its duty to this Hoboken Land Improvement Company, I do submit in great earnestness to the Committee of the Whole that this amendment should be voted down. I hope that we shall not be compelled year after year and generation after generation to fight these claims which have not received proper sanction from those best qualified to ascertain the facts.

Mr. McADOO. Mr. Chairman, it is only just to say that this claim has never hitherto been before the House. My distinguished friend from Missouri [Mr. BURNES] says that Congress has time and again rejected this claim. Sir, the claim finds voice on this floor now for the first time. It has been passed upon by the Treasury officials time and again, and instead of being rejected has been allowed.

Mr. DUNN. Why did they not pay it?

Mr. BURNES. Let me say to my friend from New Jersey [Mr. McADOO] that I am sure he is mistaken. This claim, within my knowledge, was before the Forty-eighth and Forty-ninth Congresses.

Mr. REED. Before the House?

Mr. BURNES. Before the House once during those two Congresses. It came here in the Forty-ninth Congress as a Senate amendment.

Mr. McADOO. If my friend from Missouri will permit me, I will read the record, which I think will set him right.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, SECOND COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., November 20, 1886.

This claim was originally examined and adjusted by the Third Auditor August 23, 1884, and a certificate made that there was due from the United States to the claimant the sum of $15,800, and the certificate and papers in the case were transmitted to the Second Comptroller, who, on September 2, 1884, confirmed the settlement of the Auditor and certified the balance above stated in favor of the claimant.

That is the first step.

There being no appropriation available for the payment of the amount so certified, the same was reported by the Secretary of the Treasury, under existing laws, to the second session of the Forty-eighth Congress, which adjourned without making any appropriation therefor.

I presume, in other words, the Committee on Appropriations did not put the necessary item in an appropriation bill.

Before again certifying the amount allowed—

Observe the language—

Before again certifying the amount allowed to the first session of the Forty-ninth Congress, the Secretary of the Treasury returned the certificate and papers in the case to the Second Comptroller for re-examination under section 191 of the Revised Statutes, and the claim was thereupon re-examined by me and the former allowance approved, and the claim was again certified to Congress, in Executive Document No. 210, page 22.

That was the second step.

No appropriation was made by the last Congress for its payment, but in the deficiency bill, page 53, the Secretary of the Treasury was directed to cause the proper accounting officers of the Treasury to re-examine this claim—and if it should be again certified to Congress the reasons in full for the certification should be submitted with a detailed statement of the facts upon which the claim originated.

That was Congressional inaction, not action—

Pursuant to that direction, the Secretary of the Treasury has again referred the claim to the Second Comptroller for re-examination; and pursuant to such reference and the authority thus given, I do hereby certify and report that I have re-examined said claim, and again certify the same for allowance, with my reasons in full for such certification, and a detailed statement of the facts upon which the claim originated.

The Third Auditor in his original report upon the claim has presented an exhaustive review of the facts and transactions out of which the claim arose, and being satisfied from a personal examination of the proofs and papers on file with the claim that such report contains a full and fair statement of the facts, for the information of Congress I insert herein a copy of same, which is as follows.

Then follows the statement of facts.

Mr. REED. By whom is that signed?

Mr. McADOO. By Mr. Maynard, then Second Comptroller of the Treasury.

Mr. REED. And at present Second Assistant Secretary of the Treasury?

Mr. McADOO. Yes, sir.

Mr. SAYERS. How long a period elapsed between the time when this claim is said to have accrued and the time when it was first presented to the accounting officers of the Treasury?

Mr. McADOO. So far as this record shows, I presume from the time of the war until 1884. Of that I am not certain.

Mr. SAYERS. How many years was that?

Mr. McADOO. I do not know; the gentleman is an arithmetician and can make his own computation.

Mr. SAYERS. More than twenty years.

Mr. McADOO. Now, sir, here is a fact which can not be gotten away from——

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. BURNES. Mr. Chairman, I find in the report of the Third Auditor this statement:

The Quartermaster-General states that the records of his office show that the services of the steamer terminated on the 29th of September, 1862, and that payment for services from December 20, 1861, to February 22, 1862, and from March 21, 1862, to April 6, 1862, was refused for the reason that proper certificates covering services for those periods were not presented as required by the charter.

Mr. BUCHANAN. But does not the Comptroller, on a review of all the facts, find that the claim is just, and should be paid? The conclusion of the accounting officers of the Treasury is that the claim should be paid.

Mr. BURNES. I have read this statement from the report of the Third Auditor for the purpose of showing that in 1862 the officers of the Treasury solemnly adjudicated that every dollar due to this corporation had been paid.

Mr. REED. Where is that statement? Will the gentleman please read it?

Mr. BURNES. I have just read it.

The Quartermaster-General states that the records of his office show that the services of the steamer terminated on the 29th of September, 1862, and that payment for services from December 20, 1861, to February 22, 1862, and from March 21, 1862, to April 6, 1862, was refused for the reason that proper certificates covering services for those periods were not presented as required by the charter.

Mr. REED. That does not agree with what the gentleman just said.

Mr. BURNES. (Reading:)

The claim presented is for the unpaid time, to wit, 79 days, as stated by the Quartermaster-General, amounting to the sum of $15,800.

Mr. REED. I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that what he has read does not agree with his statement a moment ago, that it has been solemnly adjudicated by the officers of the Treasury that the claim should not be paid.

Mr. BURNES. This is a solemn adjudication——

Mr. REED. What the gentleman has read simply shows that at the time referred to certain certificates had not been presented.

Mr. BURNES. It is stated that payment "was refused for the reason that proper certificates covering services for those periods were not presented as required by the charter."

Mr. REED. That merely shows that at the time in question those certificates had not been produced.

Mr. BURNES. I will say to the gentleman from Maine that this decision of the accounting officers of the Treasury in 1862——

Mr. REED. There is no decision.

Mr. BURNES. There must have been a decision, or the claim would have been paid.

They said there were certain things lacking.

Mr. REED. The present Secretary——

Mr. BURNES. Never mind about the present Secretary; he can take care of himself. The point I wish to call attention to is that this corporation thus refused payment of this claim in 1862, seemingly accepted the judgment of the accounting officers of the Treasury and made no claim, according to the gentleman from New Jersey, who I think is mistaken, until 1884, twenty-two years after this Auditor's decision, or this refusal being made to pay the amount of the claim.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Was the decision of the accounting officers accepted?

Mr. BURNES. My opinion is, and my understanding and belief are, they came several times before Congress with their claim, and when defeated in Congress they subsequently, in 1884, appealed to the accounting officers of the Treasury.

Mr. REED. Is that in the record you have in your hands?

Mr. BURNES. It is not. I will say furthermore that, having passed on so many of these claims during the past year, I may be mistaken as to some of these things and confuse one case with another; but I do not believe I do.

Mr. REED. On what ground did the present Assistant Secretary of the Treasury decide that this claim ought to be paid?

Mr. BURNES. He has made no such decision in the matter.

Mr. REED. But the gentleman from New Jersey has just read it.

Mr. BURNES. I beg pardon, he read from the Third Comptroller.

Mr. REED. No; Third Auditor.

Mr. BURNES. No; Third Comptroller.

Mr. REED. But it is the same one.

Mr. BURNES. It is the same man, but not the same official.

Mr. REED. Yes; it is the same man who is now the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. BURNES. That may be his position now, but his position then was Third Comptroller.

Mr. REED. What was the decision?

Mr. BURNES. That the contract covered seventy-nine days——

Mr. REED. That the money was due?

Mr. BURNES. It was that something ought to be paid; but these certificates have never been furnished to this House.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. McADOO. Mr. Chairman, I think that the gentleman from Maine [Mr. REED] is right, and that the present Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Maynard has given a decision. In point of fact, when I first assumed the floor I read from the decision of Mr. Maynard, wherein he followed in the line of his predecessors in the Comptroller's Office, and in my judgment that decision was a just one.

Now, so far as this case is outside of the record I have no personal knowledge of it. I have never conversed with any of these claimants who live in my district about this matter. I place the case before the House upon the facts which are to be found in the official records.

I presume the silence in reference to this claim was occasioned by the fact that the claimants had not presented a case, but as soon as they presented the facts to the proper accounting officers of the Treasury and they examined them, this claim was unhesitatingly allowed. And when I take up the Book of Estimates of last year, I find the same statement which is in this Book of Estimates, and which was in the book for the year before. It is here now, and I ask the House on voting on this item to be guided by the official estimates incorporated in this book.

But the gentleman says that $200 a day is a large sum to pay for this ferry-boat, and that the owners can afford to lose seventy-nine days when in the employ of the Government and not used by it.

But I call the attention of the House and of the gentleman from Missouri to this fact: This was a steam ferry-boat, plying between two large and populous cities, between Hoboken and the city of New York. She was worth that as a ferry-boat, and especially when we remember the rates of carriage for persons and freight were much higher then than now. She was worth that to this company, and her loss for seventy-nine days on this great ferry route between New York City and Hoboken was a loss of $200 a day to the New York and Hoboken Improvement Company.

If this claim is not just, if you can show me that it is not backed by testimony, that it is unjust, that it is inequitable, not good in law and conscience, I will join with the gentleman in asking the House to reject it; but when the facts bear out the deductions and conclusions of the accounting officers of the Treasury——

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. McADOO. Yes, sir.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Has this claim ever been referred to any committee of the House; and has it undergone the ordinary consideration given to such matters by a committee, and been reported to the House?

Mr. McADOO. I can not answer that question, I will state to the gentleman, because I do not know the secrets of committees.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. The gentleman knows whether it has been introduced in the ordinary way, as such claims are introduced, and gone to a committee and been reported back in the form of a bill, or otherwise.

Mr. McADOO. I know that it has gone to a committee of the House, but whether it has been examined or not I do not know.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Has it ever been introduced in the form of a bill?

Mr. REED. It is introduced by the report which comes to the committee from the Department, and is acted upon in that shape.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. But has this ever undergone an investigation by a committee of the House and been reported back one way or the other?

Mr. McADOO. It has never been introduced as a separate bill that I am aware of; but it has been before a committee.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, a word only in reference to this matter. Whether in fact this amendment has or has not merit, I do not know. I do know, however, that under the law, and from a long-established practice, ever since the organization of the Treasury Department, I may say substantially since the foundation of the Government, the United States has referred under its laws a certain class of claims, covered by contract, for adjudication to the accounting officers of the Treasury. Gentlemen here are familiar with the course of proceeding there. First the Auditor examines and approves the contract and makes a finding, then it goes to one of the Comptrollers, in this case to the Second Comptroller, and the Comptroller has power to overrule or modify or confirm the finding of the Auditor.

Now, in a great many classes of claims presented heretofore, when these officers of the Treasury perform the duties, the judicial duties imposed upon them, and have made their findings, without any further ceremony the claims have been paid under existing appropriations. But lately, with the repeal of permanent appropriations, these claims, known as "audited claims," have been certified to Congress for appropriation, and the rule is that Congress makes the appropriations.

Why take up the bill which is before us? Here are claims covering nearly half of the bill certified for appropriations; claims sounding in contracts adjudicated by the accounting officers of the Treasury, the Auditor and Comptroller, and without further form or ceremony are sent to Congress and the appropriations made by this body.

For instance, I read:

Interior Department (Indian) claims allowed by the Second Auditor and Second Comptroller.

And then follows a list of appropriations under that head, and so on throughout the bill. The bill is full of them. Now, while I am not upon the subcommittee that prepared the bill, and I can not rise here in my place and say that this allowance of these audited claims, amounting to many thousands, yes, hundreds of thousands, of dollars is absolutely correct, for I do not know, yet I must take the facts as I find them. Life is not long enough for me to examine them all; but the judicial authorities of the Treasury under the law, the Auditor and the Comptroller, have investigated the matter under the law, and we are compelled to rely upon them and the performance of their duty, and when we have received their findings we do our duty by appropriating the money to pay them.

I do not say that Congress would be wise in making appropriations for every audited claim. Perchance there may be fraud here or there, or a mistake may be committed; but if fraud is alleged, or a mistake is made upon the part of the judicial tribunal which has charge of the investigation, then it is our duty to go into a full investigation of the matter, and if we can say that there has been gross error or fraud our duty would be to refuse the appropriation. For one I can not say this touching the pending amendment. It stands on the same footing as any claim in the bill that has been audited.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, as I interrupted the gentleman from New Jersey before he got through with his argument, I now take the floor for the purpose of yielding him the time allotted to me so that he shall not suffer by that interruption.

Mr. McADOO. I thank the gentleman from Kentucky, and take the floor by his courtesy for the purpose of answering the question that he has asked me.

The gentleman from Kentucky asked if this claim had been before Congress, and if it had ever received consideration by a committee or had been reported upon; in other words, if it had gone to a committee of the House for investigation. So far as I know, certainly since the beginning of my service in the Forty-eighth Congress, this has never been introduced as a separate and independent proposition, and never has been before any committee in that shape, so far as my knowledge goes, because, as it came from the Treasury Department and was certified in the ordinary way, it was sent direct to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. REED. These audited claims never are submitted in the shape of original bills. They go to the committee in the reports from the Department.

Mr. MCADOO. No; they go in the ordinary course of business to the Committee on Appropriations. Whether this has been analyzed by that committee, before which it was placed, I must leave to the determination of the House, because the committee have been asking me questions in reference to it which it would seem, if they had examined the claim, would have been known to themselves.

Therefore, I take it, with the highest respect for the committee and the gentleman from Missouri, that this claim has simply been passed over by them; that it has been sent up by the Treasury Department with the facts and the deductions and the statements and the official request to appropriate for it. The committee have simply ignored it.

If the claim is unjust let us settle it once for all. I do not want these constituents of mine to come here year after year before Congress with the official certification of those officially bound to pass on such matters saying it is a just claim, if it is unjust; and I know the gentlemen interested in this matter are claimants who do not want this thing if it is an inequitable or unconscionable claim on the Treasury. And I have brought it up to-day that the House may pass upon it, lest the committee in the future, as in the past, may ignore it.

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota. Does this claim depend upon legal evidence or not?

Mr. MCADOO. It is based on a contract, a charter-party. The Government solemnly and in writing contracted for this boat at $200 per day, put her under Government control and kept her so. What they did with her was no matter to the claimant.

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota. Then by lapse of time the evidence is not at all obscured?

Mr. MCADOO. Not at all, because when the claim was made the officers, engineers, and pilots gave their testimony, it is in this book, that she was absolutely under the control of the officers of the Government every day she was away from the company.

Mr. BURNES. I move to strike out the last word. I take my friend from New Jersey [Mr. MCADOO] at his word, and I have as much confidence in him as I have in any man. But I propose to show to this committee absolutely, unconditionally, and beyond all question, that this is an "unconscionable" claim.

To do this I will read a paragraph from the report of the Third Auditor on the claim in which he concludes by recommending its payment. Here is what he says:

> By the charter of the steamer which was executed on the 20th day of December, 1861, the claimant agreed that she should sail at the first good opportunity from the port of New York, or elsewhere, and proceed direct to such ports and places as ordered by the quartermaster or duly authorized agent of the War Department; and the Government was bound to pay during the existence of the contract, as hire of the said steamer, the sum of $200 a day for each and every day she might be employed.

Now, for seventy-nine days she was not employed; and this very auditing officer declares that by the terms of the charter-party, which we have not before us, the owners of the vessel were not to be paid except for the days employed.

Mr. REED. Why, then, did he decide to pay this?

Mr. BURNES. I do not know.

Mr. REED. Let us have both sides of the question presented.

Mr. BURNES. I do not know what made the Auditor decide that they should be paid for the whole time.

A MEMBER. Read what the Auditor says.

Mr. BURNES. Life is too short to read the whole. It is stated by the Third Auditor that that is the law of the contract. Why he reached a different conclusion God knows; I do not. He says the contract was to pay $200 a day for each day she might be employed.

Mr. BUCHANAN. The word is not "running," but "employed."

Mr. BURNES. That is, employed in the business for which she was engaged.

Mr. DUNN. I wish to ask the gentleman from Missouri one question just there. He read from the Auditor's decision in 1862 or the quartermaster's decision, that pay for these seventy-nine days was then refused because the claimant failed to produce certificates of employment for those seventy-nine days. Now these officers who have made this decision twenty-four years later hold that those seventy-nine days ought to be paid for, not because certificates of employment for those days have been furnished, but because their construction of the contract is that it would be equitable to pay it. That is the status of the case as I understand it.

Mr. BURNES. That is true, precisely.

Mr. DUNN. Then this claim is the result of an afterthought and a construction of a contract invented by somebody twenty-four years afterward—I guess by some shrewd attorney.

Mr. BURNES. I suggest to the gentleman from New Jersey if these certificates have been presented for the seventy-nine days during which the vessel was employed in the service of the Government, that he should show them to the committee.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. MCADOO. I have no papers in this case, and have no knowledge of it except the facts officially stated here. I take the gentleman from Missouri at his word. He recites the contract, the charter-party, as saying "for every day she is in the employ of the Government." That is the language recited by the officer who made this decision and after he had examined all the facts; after he had examined this fact, for instance, that every day that that vessel was at Hampton Roads or Hatteras Inlet her engineer reported to the United States authorities what were the orders for the day; and following that very word "employed" Mr. Maynard in his decision says this:

> It is satisfactorily shown that the steamer remained in the employ—

The very word with which the gentleman from Missouri confronts me as against this claim—

> remained in the employ of the Government—

Under a charter contract to be employed under the Government of the United States—

> subject to the control and direction of the military authorities until September 29, 1862, when she was discharged and returned to her owner.

My friend from Arkansas [Mr. DUNN] makes a suggestion; he says the quartermaster decided differently.

Mr. BUTTERWORTH. Let me ask you right there: During those seventy-nine days could the captain have moved his vessel away and used it as he might please without violation of the charter?

Mr. MCADOO. Of course not. Every hour and every minute that that vessel was there she was subject to the control of the Government.

Now, as to the word "employed," does my friend from Missouri [Mr. BURNES] mean to rest his case on the kind of employment, on the quantity of employment, or upon the fact upon which Mr. Maynard makes his decision, that the vessel was employed at all? It does not make any difference as to this case whether she made one trip a day or was working one hour a day or twenty-four hours a day. So long as her owners were deprived of her use, so long as she was subject to the control of the United States, so long as she was used at all and kept in control of the Government, she was employed in the legal meaning of that word as used in this contract, and the Government should pay for her.

Mr. BURNES. Will the gentleman allow me a word?

Mr. MCADOO. Certainly.

Mr. BURNES. This having been an employment by the day, I claim that the words used in the report of the Third Auditor mean that the Government was to pay for every day that the vessel was in use and at work. If I hire a man by the day, and he is to have $2 a day for every day that he is employed, that means every day that he works. But there is another question that I desire to present to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. MCADOO].

Mr. BUCHANAN. Let me ask the gentleman from Missouri a question.

Mr. BURNES. Wait a moment. I now ask the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. MCADOO] if he is not aware of the fact that this vessel was not waiting subject to the orders of the Government during these seventy-nine days? I say to him, and if he will read the record he will ascertain the fact, that a collision took place between another vessel and this boat, which belonged to the owners, whose duty it was to repair it, and that this boat went into the docks and was there undergoing repair during a portion, and perhaps the greater portion, of these seventy-nine days.

Mr. MILLIKEN. Under whose control was she when the collision occurred?

Mr. BURNES. She was the vessel of her owners, the property of her owners; she was chartered by them, by the day, to perform service for the Government, and it was their business to keep their boat in order to do that service, and when a collision took place it was the duty of the owners to repair the boat and keep her in condition to render the service which they had contracted to render. I ask the gentleman from New Jersey if that is not the fact?

Mr. MCADOO. I meet the gentleman in the same spirit of frankness which he manifests. This vessel was under the control of the Government officer at the time the collision occurred. That was the very question of fact that the Treasury Department was dealing with, the question of who controlled the vessel's movements, and after elaborate argument and investigation they found that it was the Government pilot who directed the movements of this vessel, and hence they fastened the responsibility upon the Government.

Now, since the gentleman has called my attention to the word "employed," I have examined a little more carefully the statement of the Comptroller, and I will read what he says about the terms of the contract:

> By the charter of the steamer, which was executed on the 20th of December, 1861, the claimant agreed that she should sail at the first good opportunity from the port of New York or elsewhere, and proceed direct to such ports and places as ordered by the quartermaster or duly authorized agent of the War Department, and the Government was bound to pay during the existence of the contract as hire of the said steamer the sum of $200 a day for each and every day she might be employed.

The charter-party was, in substance, this: That the steamer was to be subject to the control of the Government; that she was to leave the port of New York at a certain date and to be employed in certain work, and during the time that she was away from the control and use of her owners her hire was to be $200 a day. That is the substance of the contract, and that is the basis upon which this claim rests.

Mr. STEWART, of Vermont. And the right of it.

Mr. McADOO. And the right of it.

Mr. BURNES. One word more. I submit that this is an urgent deficiency bill; and as this corporation has slept upon this claim so long, it can not possibly be said that it is a very urgent one. I submit, further, that when we pass upon this claim the contracts ought to be before the House. We do not want to pass, and the law does not authorize us to pass, upon a claim like this on the opinion of an Auditor or Comptroller. They only certify to us for consideration. The general deficiency bill will come up in a few days, and I am so confident that a review of the papers and of the facts will show that this is an unworthy claim that I am ready to prepare all the facts, to demand the charter-party and lay it before the lawyers of this House, and let them and the House determine the question upon the general deficiency bill a month hence.

Mr. McADOO. Will the gentleman allow me at that time to offer this amendment to that bill?

Mr. BURNES. I will allow the gentleman to offer it, as I did to-day, and I submit that this claim ought not to be considered in the absence of the contract.

Mr. McADOO. For myself I would gladly do what the gentleman suggests, but in view of the murmurs of dissent around me I do not wish to take the responsibility.

Mr. REED. Since this Auditor made this decision he has been promoted by the Secretary of the Treasury. [Laughter.]

Mr. BUCHANAN. And very properly promoted.

The question was taken on the amendment of Mr. McADOO, and the Chair announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. McADOO demanded a division, but withdrew the demand.

The amendment was not agreed to.

The Clerk resumed and concluded the reading of the bill.

Mr. SAYERS. I ask unanimous consent that we may return to page 13 in order to adopt the following amendment:

After line 21, on page 13, insert:
"For the examination of surveys heretofore made, $10,000."

There being no objection, the amendment was considered and adopted.

Mr. SAYERS. I now move that the committee rise and report the bill with the amendments to the House.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and Mr. HATCH having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, Mr. BLOUNT reported that the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, having had under consideration House bill 6437, had directed him to report the same back with sundry amendments, and to recommend that it be passed as amended.

Mr. BURNES called the previous question on agreeing to the amendments and on ordering the bill to be engrossed and read a third time.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is now upon agreeing to the amendments reported from the Committee of the Whole. Is a separate vote demanded on each amendment?

Mr. BURNES. I call for a separate vote on two amendments—the one striking out the provisions for clerks in offices of surveyors-general and the amendment inserted on motion of the gentleman from St. Louis [Mr. O'NEILL].

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. I want to correct the gentleman's reference to me. I am from the State of Missouri. I do not claim to represent solely the city of St. Louis. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If there be no objection, the vote will be taken in gross on all the amendments, except the two on which a separate vote has been demanded.

There was no objection, and the remaining amendments were agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. A separate vote has been demanded on the amendment which will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

On pages 12 and 13 of the bill, strike out the following:

"Offices of surveyors-general:

"Office of surveyor-general of Arizona: For salaries of clerks in his office, $1,000.

"Office of surveyor-general of California: For salaries of clerks in his office, $2,000.

"Office of surveyor-general of Colorado: For salaries of clerks in his office, $1,000.

"Office of surveyor-general of Dakota: For salaries of clerks in his office, $3,000.

"Office of surveyor-general of Louisiana: For salaries of clerks in his office, $1,000.

"Office of surveyor-general of Montana: For salaries of clerks in his office for fiscal year 1888, $1,500.

"Office of surveyor-general of Nevada: For salaries of clerks in his office, $1,000.

"Office of surveyor-general of New Mexico: For salaries of clerks in his office, $2,000.

"Office of surveyor-general of Utah: For salaries of clerks in his office, $1,500.

"Office of surveyor-general of Washington: For salaries of clerks in his office, $3,000.

"Office of the surveyor-general of Wyoming: For salaries of clerks in his office, $1,000.

"Office of the surveyor-general of Oregon: For salaries of clerks in his office, $800."

Mr. NELSON. Was there not, in connection with that, an amendment as to the surveyor-general of Minnesota?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is advised that the Clerk has read the entire amendment adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. The amendment just read is recommended by the Committee of the Whole, not by the Appropriations Committee.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is an amendment reported from the Committee of the Whole.

The question being taken on agreeing to the amendment, it was not agreed to; there being—ayes 34, noes 80.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The next amendment on which a separate vote has been demanded will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

After line 9, on page 18, insert the following:
"And the Public Printer is hereby directed to rigidly enforce the provisions of the eight-hour law in the department under his charge."

The SPEAKER pro tempore (having put the question on agreeing to the amendment) said: The noes seem to have it.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; there being ayes 40, noes 72—more than one-fifth voting in the affirmative.

Mr. DUNHAM. As this vote by yeas and nays can be taken in the morning just as well as now, I move that the House adjourn.

Mr. RANDALL. Oh, no.

Mr. DUNHAM. Inasmuch as a session has been ordered for to-night, I will modify my motion so as to take a recess until 8 o'clock this evening.

Mr. RANDALL. That will bring everybody here to-night on this bill.

Mr. DUNHAM. The understanding is that this bill can not come up to-night.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Debate is not in order.

Mr. DUNHAM. I desire to ask a parliamentary question. I understand that under the order of business for the evening session this bill can not come up.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. By unanimous consent the House agreed that when it concluded the business of this day's session, it would take a recess until 8 o'clock this evening, the evening session being set apart for debate upon a certain bill, no other business to be transacted.

Mr. DUNHAM. Then I make my motion for a recess.

Mr. RANDALL. I hope the House will consent to dispose of this bill before we take the recess.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. DUNHAM for a recess, there were—ayes 84, noes 76.

Mr. BUCHANAN. No quorum.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The point being made that no quorum has voted, the Chair will appoint tellers.

Mr. REED. This bill, at any rate, will come up as the first business in the morning.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I desire to know whether this bill will be pressed to-morrow morning to the exclusion of private business.

Mr. RANDALL. It will be pressed constantly until disposed of.

Mr. REED. It comes up without any pressing.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Then I withdraw my point.

Mr. BURNES. This bill provides for at least 10,000 soldiers who have bounty and back pay due them, by the non-payment of which they are suffering.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I asked whether this bill would be pressed to-morrow morning, and on being assured that it would I withdrew my point.

Mr. LONG. Then, Mr. Speaker, has not the recess already been ordered?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. No time was set for taking the recess; the agreement was that when the House should conclude the business of the day session it would take a recess until 8 o'clock.

Mr. LONG. But by the vote just taken the recess has been ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The point was made that no quorum voted.

Mr. LONG. That has been withdrawn.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Being assured that this bill will be pressed to-morrow morning I have withdrawn the point of no quorum.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That point being withdrawn, the motion for a recess is agreed to.

The House accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 5 minutes p. m.) took a recess until 8 o'clock p. m.

EVENING SESSION.

The House reassembled at 8 o'clock p. m., and was called to order by Mr. THOMAS O. TOWLES, Chief Clerk, who had read the following letter:

SPEAKER'S ROOM, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., February 16, 1888.

SIR: Hon. CHARLES H. MANSUR, of Missouri, is hereby designated to preside as Speaker pro tempore at the session of the House this evening.

JOHN G. CARLISLE, Speaker.

Hon. JOHN B. CLARK,
Clerk House of Representatives.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MANSUR in the chair). The House is in session this evening for debate only on bill H. R. 1426, supplementary to the act of July 1, 1862, entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes," and also of the act of July 2, 1864, and other acts amendatory of said first-named act.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Speaker, I had expected the presence of the gentleman from New York [Mr. WHITE] this evening, and that he would make some definite arrangement in reference to the distribution of the time for this debate; but he is not here at this moment, and I will yield the floor to my colleague on the committee, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. ANDERSON].

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, the design of the bill under consideration, briefly stated, is to force the land-grant railroads to resume their telegraph functions in connection with and as part of their respective railroad systems, and to operate their telegraph lines without discrimination against the Government or the public, or against any connecting line of telegraph. In other words, to compel these favored corporations to obey the fundamental laws of their existence.

The bill is the outgrowth of an investigation had by the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads in the Forty-ninth Congress, pursuant to a resolution of that body. The authority for the bill is derived from certain provisions of the acts of Congress incorporating the several Pacific railways. Each of these acts, beginning with the Union Pacific act of July 1, 1862, provided that the railroad company thereby incorporated should "lay out, locate, construct, furnish, maintain, and enjoy a continuous railroad and telegraph, with the appurtenances," etc.

The right of way and authority to use stone, timber, and other materials were granted "for the construction of said railroad and telegraph line;" and "for the purpose of aiding in the construction of said railroad and telegraph line" large subsidies of public lands and bonds were granted. These grants were upon the express conditions that the company should keep "said railroad and telegraph line in repair and use," and "that the whole line of said railroad and branches and telegraph shall be operated and used for all the purposes of communication, travel, and transportation, so far as the public and Government are concerned, as one connected continuous line."

The investigation by the committee disclosed in detail what was already known to the public in a general way, that the land-grant roads had, in one way and another, transferred their telegraphic franchises to the Western Union Telegraph Company. This, I hold, was a violation of their charter obligations. It separated their telegraphic functions from their railroad functions and resulted in a monopoly of the telegraph business, whereas it was the intention of the acts by which they were incorporated to create competing lines of telegraph. They were as much under obligation to maintain and operate a telegraph line for the equal benefit of all as a railroad line. In support of this assertion I need only to read a provision contained in the acts referred to:

That the several railroad companies authorized to construct the aforesaid roads are hereby required to operate and use said roads and telegraph for all purposes of communication, travel, and transportation, so far as the public and the Government are concerned, as one continuous line; and, in such operation and use, to afford and secure to each equal advantages and facilities as to rates, time, and transportation, without any discrimination of any kind in favor of the road or business of any or either of said companies, or adverse to the road or business of any or either of the others; and it shall not be lawful for the proprietors of any line of telegraph authorized by this act, or the act amended by this act, to refuse or fail to convey for all persons requiring the transmission of news and messages of like character, on pain of forfeiting to the person injured for each offense the sum of $100, and such other damage as he may have suffered on account of said refusal or failure, to be sued for and recovered in any court of the United States, or of any State or Territory of competent jurisdiction.

The investigation by the committee originated from complaints made by the Baltimore and Ohio Telegraph Company of gross discriminations against it by the Western Union in the latter's operations of the land-grant wires.

At that time the Baltimore and Ohio was the sole remaining telegraph line in the country which offered competition with the Western Union, all the others having been absorbed by that giant corporation. The evidence showed that wherever the Baltimore and Ohio line connected with a land-grant wire it cost from 30 to 50 cents more to send a dispatch, say, from Washington City to San Francisco, on the Baltimore and Ohio line, than it cost to send the same dispatch on the Western Union, notwithstanding the rates on the Baltimore and Ohio were cheaper than on the Western Union. And this was because the line of the Baltimore and Ohio extended no further westward than Omaha, and from that point the dispatch had to be carried on the wires of the Union Pacific, which were under the control of the Western Union.

Since the adjournment of the Forty-ninth Congress the Baltimore and Ohio, like all the other telegraph lines which dared to cope with the Western Union, has succumbed to the wealth and diplomacy of its all-powerful rival. This is in keeping with the other acts of the Western Union in the deals by which it had acquired possession of other lines of telegraph, notably in the transactions by which it gained control of the wires of the Union Pacific. In its lawsuit with the Union Pacific, which has been referred to in the debate, fearing an adverse decision, it forestalled the action of the court by buying up the Union Pacific and paying half the cost, and the suit was dismissed by mutual agreement. Doubtlessly, in buying up the Baltimore and Ohio, it thought to forestall the action of Congress, as had been so successfully accomplished with the courts. It remains to be seen whether this estimate of the American Congress is correct or not.

The minority report, which accompanies the bill, and the debates on the floor of the House present two questions for our consideration. The one relates to the power of Congress under the Constitution to pass this bill, in view of the effect it would have upon the alleged vested rights of the Western Union; and second, whether there is a demand or public necessity for the proposed legislation. The majority report insists that Congress has the power, and that there is a public necessity for its exercise. Both propositions are denied by the minority, who argue in effect that the bill will commit the Government to harsh and oppressive measures against the Western Union Telegraph Company and the land-grant railroad companies, impairing the rights of the one and compelling the others to violate their obligations solemnly entered into with the Western Union.

The constitutional and legal questions at issue have been ably, and, I think, sufficiently argued by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DOCKERY] and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PETERS].

They have brought to the attention of the House all the prominent features of the committee report and of the evidence accompanying it. I do not care to weary the House by following too closely in the same line of discussion. I will therefore, for the present, take for my text another and a different report. I refer to the report of the Pacific Railway Commission, appointed under the act of Congress approved March 3, 1887, "to investigate the books, accounts, and methods of the railroads which have received aid from the United States, and for other purposes."

The limited time allotted me will not admit of my going far into this report, which is rather voluminous. I think, however, I can cull enough from it to convict these subsidized corporations of having willfully and systematically violated their obligations to the Government and the people, from the time they turned the first shovelful of earth in the construction of their roads up to the present time. In the first place, let us see what the Government has done for these Pacific Railroads. On page 49 I find this statement:

The following is a general statement of the aid extended to these companies by the United States:

Bonds.	Amount.
Union Pacific	$27,236,512
Kansas Pacific	6,303,000
Central Branch Union Pacific	1,600,000
Sioux City and Pacific	1,628,320
Central Pacific	25,885,120
Western Pacific	1,970,560
	$64,623,512

Lands.	Acres.	Rate per acre.
Union Pacific	11,309,844	$1.25	14,137,305
Kansas Pacific	6,000,000	1.25	7,500,000
Central Branch Union Pacific	222,560	1.25	278,200
Sioux City and Pacific	43,336	1.25	54,170
Central Pacific	8,000,000	1.25	10,000,000
Western Pacific	453,794	1.25	567,243
Total	26,029,534			32,536,918
Total bonds and lands				97,160,430

This statement is a refreshing little exhibit of bonds to the amount of more than sixty-four and a half millions of dollars, and public lands which, estimated at $1.25 per acre, amount to over thirty-two and a half millions. And still the whole is not told. The accrued interest on the bonds exceeds the principal. Sum up the whole and it runs so far up into the millions that all actual comprehension of its magnitude is lost in mere verbal sound. This enormous extension of the Government's credit and this lavish expenditure of the public lands could only be justified, if at all, on grounds of the highest public utility. As to that I am content for the purposes of this argument to adopt the language of the Wilson committee contained in its report made on the 20th of February, 1873:

Your committee can not doubt that it was the purpose of Congress in all this to provide for something more than a mere gift of so much land and a loan of so many bonds on the one side, and the construction and equipment of so many miles of railroad and telegraph on the other.

The United States was not a mere creditor, loaning a sum of money upon mortgages. The railroad corporation was not a mere contractor, bound to furnish a specified structure and nothing more. The law created a body politic and corporate, bound as a trustee so to manage this great public franchise and endowments that not only the security for the great debt due the United States should not be impaired, but so that there should be ample resources to perform its great public duties in time of commercial disaster and in time of war.

This act was not passed to further the personal interests of the corporators, nor for the advancement of commercial interests, nor for the convenience of the general public alone; but in addition to these, the interests, present and future, of the Government, as such, were to be subserved. A great highway was to be created, the use of which for postal, military, and other purposes was to be secured to the Government "at all times," but particularly in time of war. Your committee deem it important to call especial attention to this declared object of this act, to accomplish which object the munificent grant of lands and loan of the Government credit was made. To make such a highway and to have it ready "at all times," and "particularly in time of war," to meet the demands that might be made upon it; to be able to withstand the loss of business and other casualties incident to war and still to perform for the Government such reasonable service as might under such circumstances be demanded, required a strong, solvent corporation, and when Congress expressed the object and granted the corporate powers to carry that object into execution, and aided the enterprise with subsidies of lands and bonds, the corporators in whom these powers were vested and under whose control these subsidies were placed were, in the opinion of your committee, under the highest moral to say nothing of legal or equitable obligations to use the utmost degree of good faith toward the Government in the exercise of the powers and disposition of the subsidies.

Here, then, we have it from this high authority that the prime object of projecting these railroads into the remote regions of the West was to provide the Government with military and postal roads. This makes it apparent why the language of the incorporating acts invariably couples telegraph with railroad functions.

Telegraph facilities are not less a military necessity than railroads, and the importance and usefulness of either are increased by having them under one and the same system and management. To accomplish the great enterprise in view, required "a strong, solvent corporation," and upon that ground alone is it attempted by the Wilson committee to justify the Government in having endowed the Pacific railways with such munificent portions of the nation's wealth. In the language of the report, they were "under the highest moral to say nothing of legal or equitable obligations to use the utmost degree of good faith toward the Government in the exercise of the powers and disposition of the subsidies."

It was never intended that their properties and franchises should be made the basis of pooling and stock-jobbing deals by which to defraud the Government, impose on the people, and destroy the solvency of the corporations themselves, to the end that a few unscrupulous individuals might be enriched. The magnitude of the enterprise is not more amazing than the childlike confidence of the Government in delegating to these corporations such high powers and intrusting to them such immense wealth without requiring of them any guaranties or bonds for the faithful discharge of their duties. Let us see in what light they viewed their high moral obligation. I read from page 51:

The Union Pacific Railroad, from Omaha to Ogden, was constructed under three contracts, known as the "Hoxie contract," the "Ames contract," and the "Davis contract." Through the intervention of assignments, made by the holders of these contracts to trustees, and through the intervention of the construction company known as the "Credit Mobilier of America," the profits from these contracts were secured to the officers and promoters of the Union Pacific Railroad itself. The persons who received these profits determined the amount thereof by their own votes. The result of these three contracts was as follows:

Cost to railroad company:
Hoxie contract		$12,974,416.24
Ames contract		57,140,102.94
Davis contract		23,431,768.10
Total		93,546,287.28
Cost to contractors:
Hoxie contract	$7,806,183.33
Ames contract	27,285,141.99
Davis contract	15,629,633.62
		50,720,958.94
		42,825,328.34
To this should be added the amount paid Credit Mobilier on account of 58 miles		1,104,000.00
Total profit on construction		43,929,328.34

The actual profits realized from the three contracts, after reducing the bonds issued to their cash value and charging the stock issued at 30 cents on the dollar, were $23,366,319.81. These profits are stated as follows:

Ames and Davis contracts.

Bonds (cash value)	$11,310,900.00
$24,000,000 stock, at 30	7,200,000.00
Cash	2,346,000.00
	20,856,900.00

The profits on the Hoxie contract, as before stated, were $6,272,232.71.

Treating all of this as stock, except $1,125,000 of first-mortgage bonds, divided as hereinafter stated, the profits, cash values, on this would be as follows:

$1,125,000 first mortgage bonds, at 85	$965,250.00
$5,147,232.71 stock, at 30	1,544,169.81
Total cash profit	23,366,319.81

The benefits arising from the Hoxie contract were secured by an assignment to Thomas C. Durant, Cornelius S. Bushnell, Charles A. Lambard, and H. S. McComb (all directors of the Union Pacific Railroad Company), and Gray.

The profits arising from the Ames contract were secured to the stockholders of the Credit Mobilier, and the contract itself was assigned, in trust, to Thomas C. Durant, Oliver Ames, John B. Alley, Sidney Dillon, Cornelius S. Bushnell, Henry S. McComb, and Benjamin E. Bates, all of whom were stockholders in the Union Pacific Railroad Company.

The profits arising from the Davis contract were secured to the Credit Mobilier stockholders by an assignment to the same trustees.

These officers and promoters of the Union Pacific, these trustees, whose sense of moral obligation had commanded the supreme confidence of the Government, manifested their appreciation of the compliment by accepting the trust with a still keener appreciation of the grand opportunity it afforded for spoils and plunder. By that ingenious contrivance familiar to history as the Credit Mobilier, they secured to themselves out of the construction of the road net cash profits to an amount exceeding twenty-three millions of dollars.

To that extent they impaired the solvency of the Union Pacific, and lessened its capacity for paying its debt to the Government. But that sum does not measure the damage done to the innocent stockholders of the company itself. It necessitated the issuance of many millions more of the company's stock and bonds which could not be floated except at a heavy discount. If the Credit Mobilier were but a single and isolated act of bad faith, we might let the many years which have intervened throw a mantle of silence over it. But we are not permitted to do so, in the light of recent developments, which show that that scheme was only the beginning of a series of like transactions which have followed it, and for which it has served as an example.

The directors of the Union Pacific who were involved in the Credit Mobilier, after being exposed by the investigation of the Wilson committee in 1873, were sued by the United States to make them disgorge their ill-gotten gains. They demurred to the complaint on the ground that the United States had disclosed no cause of action; that the money which they had stolen was not the property of the United States, but was the property of the Union Pacific Company.

The demurrer was sustained, and on appeal the decision was affirmed by the United States Supreme Court.

After this it seems to have become a favorite plan to build railroads by the Credit Mobilier method. When a railroad was to be built certain men, whose names have become famous in railroad circles, would buy a controlling interest in the stock, and at the same time organize themselves into a "construction company," put in a bid for the contract for building the road, then, as directors of the road, vote to accept their own bid. I notice in the report of the Pacific Railway Commission such names as the "Construction Finance Company," "The Western Development Company," "The Pacific Improvement Company," and other names equally as high-sounding. I will only take time to read from the report of the Commission the latest scheme of the kind mentioned. On page 79 I find the following:

The Pacific Improvement Company was subsequently formed for the same general purpose. Its stock was $5,000,000. The ownership was in Stanford, Huntington, Hopkins, and Crocker. No money was paid for the stock of any of these companies, the available funds needed by the company being in the form of direct loans of money or credit by the stockholders to the respective companies. The contract between the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the Pacific Improvement Company for the construction of the California and Oregon Railroad between Delta and the State line was made in October, 1886. This contract was awarded to the Pacific Improvement Company by the votes of Stanford, Huntington, Hopkins, and Crocker.

The consideration for the construction of these 103 miles of railroad and of the equipment, as stated in the contract, was 80,000 shares of the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, $8,000,000, and $4,500,000 of the bonds of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, part of which bonds were issued under a mortgage of the California and Oregon Railroad and part issued under a mortgage of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, dated October 1, 1886. The stock was to be delivered on the execution of the contract, the bonds as the work progressed. The stock was accordingly delivered in October, 1886. All of the bonds have been delivered except $317,000. (See evidence of Douty, volume 5, page 2703.) The amount reserved is sufficient to cover the cost of the completion of the contract. (Same page.)

The average market value of the Central Pacific stock, taken from the actual quotations of the New York Stock Exchange, during the month of October, 1886, was $48. At this rate, the $8,000,000 stock was worth, in cash, $3,840,000. The bonds paid to the Pacific Improvement Company were worth par. They were accepted by the Central Pacific Railroad Company from the Pacific Improvement Company in payment of a loan due by them to the Central Pacific sinking fund. (See evidence of Stanford, volume 5, page 2666.)

The actual cash value then paid to the Pacific Improvement Company for the construction from Delta to the State line, and for the equipment, was—

In stock	$3,840,000
In bonds	4,500,000
Total	8,340,000

The books of the Pacific Improvement Company, showing the actual cost of this construction and of the equipment, were examined by Mr. Stevens, and this cost, exclusive of the unfinished work, which Mr. Douty testified would not exceed the $317,000 of bonds which had been retained, was $3,138,609.32. (See evidence of Stevens, volume 6, page 3528.) The accuracy of the conclusions reached by Mr. Stevens was conceded by the counsel for the Central Pacific road. (See Haymond's statement, volume 6, page 3534.)

In the statement of cost of construction contained in the table at page 3531 the retained $317,000 bonds have been added to the above figure, making the total cost of the completed road and equipment $3,505,609.32. As compensation for this expenditure Stanford, Huntington, and Crocker have voted to themselves stock and bonds of the value, as above stated, of $8,340,000. And this extraordinary transaction is being consummated to-day, in the face of this investigation and in violation of every duty which these directors owe to the stockholders of that company and to the Government as its chief creditor.

This needs no further comment. The slight notice that it has attracted from the press and the public, as compared with the storm of popular indignation which arose on the disclosures of the Credit Mobilier, is a commentary on the times in which we live. I trust that this silence is but an indication of confidence in the determination of the Government to right these wrongs, which will not be disappointed.

Mr. PETERS. If the gentleman from Mississippi will allow me, I would like to put in a word there about a fact which has come to my knowledge since I spoke the other day; that is, as to the cost of the original telegraph line. The Pacific Telegraph Company built the line from Brownsville, Nebr., to Salt Lake City, Utah, 1,100 miles; and the entire cost of that line was $147,000, according to the evidence of Charles M. Stebbins, who was the contractor who built it; and that line, by the management and financiering of two Western Union directors, was capitalized at a million of dollars, and this million of dollars of Pacific Telegraph stock was afterward taken into the Western Union Telegraph Company by issuing therefor two millions of dollars of Western Union Telegraph stock.

The basis, therefore, of that two million of Western Union stock was the $147,000 which was the actual cost of construction of this Pacific Telegraph.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi. I am obliged to the gentleman for supplementing my remarks with that valuable statement.

Now, sir, as a further illustration of the way in which these corporations have performed their obligations, I will read an extract from page 107 of this report:

By the second section of the act of July 2, 1864, the Union Pacific Railroad Company was required to make assessments upon its stockholders of not less than $5 per share, and at intervals not exceeding six months from and after the passage of the act, until the par value of all the shares subscribed should be fully paid. Money only was to be received for any such assessment, or as equivalent for any portion of the capital stock authorized.

The commission reports that this obligation has not been kept by any of the bond-aided railroad companies. The capital stock of the Union Pacific Railway Company now outstanding is $60,868,500. On this amount not more than 16 per cent. has been received in cash.

The stock of the Kansas Pacific Railroad Company before consolidation was $9,687,900. Of this amount no part was issued for cash.

The capital stock of the Western Pacific Railroad Company before consolidation was $7,900,000. Not more than $200,000 was received by the said company for this stock.

The capital stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company now outstanding is $68,000,000. Of this amount not more than $7,000,000 was issued for cash.

The capital stock of the Central Branch Union Pacific Railroad Company was $1,000,000, on which $392,225.53 was received in cash.

I think enough has been said to show that the financial and fiduciary relations of the land-grant companies to the Government have been characterized by wanton and reckless bad faith on the part of the corporations and by wonderful forbearance on the part of the Government. In this connection, however, I want to read an account of a little transaction and call the attention of the House to it—a little episode in which some prominent railroad men figured in more respects than one, but in which Jay Gould was the hero by long odds. It will be borne in mind that Mr. Jay Gould is a gentleman who is appealing to Congress to respect his alleged vested rights in the telegraphic franchises granted by the Government to the Union Pacific Railroad.

I will ask the Clerk to read the marked passage on page 58.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. Will the gentleman from Mississippi please favor us with his authority for the statement that Mr. Gould is appealing to Congress in behalf of his vested rights in the Western Union?

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi. On behalf of the telegraphic franchises of the Western Union acquired from the Union Pacific.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. I desire the gentleman to give his authority for that statement as I have seen nothing of the kind in the record, and I desire his authority for making the statement that we may be prepared to answer it.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi. My authority is the gentleman from New York [Mr. WHITE] himself. His argument the other day was based almost upon the sole ground that the Western Union Telegraph Company, which is nothing more nor less than Jay Gould, had acquired vested rights in the telegraphic franchises of the Union Pacific Railroad Company by virtue of the contract entered into between the two companies.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. I move one step further into the transaction; and I want to know where it appears in the record that Jay Gould and the Western Union Telegraph Company are substantially one and the same.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi. If the gentleman will delay a moment I will come to that.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. I will delay.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi. What I have asked the Clerk to read refers to the consolidation between the three land-grant railroads mentioned just above the marked passage. I ask the Clerk to call them off.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Union Pacific, the Kansas Pacific, and the Denver Pacific.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. Where is the Clerk reading?

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi. From page 58 of the Report of the United States Pacific Railway Commission.

The Clerk read as follows:

The scheme of a consolidation between these three companies appears to have had its inception in the spring and summer of 1879. In October of that year Messrs. Gould, Sage, Dexter, Atkins, F. L. Ames, and Baker addressed a communication to Solon Humphreys and Grenville M. Dodge, requesting them to investigate the three railroads and to report what in their judgment would be a fair plan for consolidation.

Messrs. Ames, Dexter, Atkins, and Baker resided at Boston. Much discussion appears to have occurred during the month of October between these gentlemen and Messrs. Gould, Dillon, and Sage, relating to the subject of consolidation. They all favored consolidation, but differed as to the terms. (See evidence of F. L. Ames, volume 2, page 661; Dexter, volume 2, pages 702 to 704; Atkins, volume 2, page 755; Baker, volume 2, page 739; Oliver Ames, volume 2, pages 612, 613, and 808.)

Early in November negotiations for a consolidation came to an abrupt end. The Boston gentlemen above referred to declined to accept a consolidation on the terms demanded by Mr. Gould. The rupture appears to have been a sharp and angry one. (See evidence of Dexter, volume 2, pages 703, 704; Oliver Ames, volume 2, page 808.)

Mr. Gould immediately went to Kansas, and in an incredibly short space of time effected a purchase of the following railways: On the 13th of November, 1879, apparently without extensive negotiation or deliberation, he bought from Commodore C. K. Garrison the Missouri Pacific Railroad, extending from St. Louis to Kansas City, a distance of about 300 miles, and paid therefor the sum of $3,000,000. (See evidence of Gould, volume 1, page 477; volume 2, page 529.) At the same time, and as part of the same transaction, he purchased a controlling interest in the Kansas Central, a narrow-gauge road about 166 miles long, extending from Leavenworth, Kans., on the Missouri River, about 25 miles north of Kansas City, and extending thence westerly parallel with the Kansas Pacific and at an average distance of 30 miles therefrom. He paid for a controlling interest in the stock and bonds of this road $479,000.

On and shortly after the 7th day of November, 1879, he purchased from Oliver Ames a controlling interest, represented by 7,616 shares of stock, of the Central Branch Union Pacific Railroad Company, extending from Atchison about 50 miles north of the Kansas Pacific, and thence westerly and parallel with the Kansas Pacific, a distance of 100 miles.

The average rate paid by Mr. Gould for the stock of the Central Branch Union Pacific was $238 per share. (See evidence of Gould, volume 1, page 524; Oliver Ames, volume 2, page 807 to 812.) The stock of that company had sold within a year of this transaction as low as 10 cents on the dollar, and there was nothing at all in the financial condition of the company which justified, as a mere business transaction, the payment of any sum approximating in any degree the amount paid by Mr. Gould. (See evidence of Nichols, volume 7, page 4114; see report of Perrenoud, volume 8.)

The object of these purchases by Mr. Gould is explained by him with great clearness in his own evidence. He states that he had formed a plan of constructing a Pacific railway from St. Louis to the Pacific Ocean by extending the Kansas Pacific through the Loveland Pass to Salt Lake City and thence to San Francisco by the Central Pacific. (See evidence of Gould, volume 1, page 505.) At page 509, when asked how great an injury the extension of the Missouri Pacific, according to his views, would have been to the Union Pacific, he answers, "It would have destroyed it."

His purposes were immediately made public, and the effect on the Boston directors, were it not for the magnitude of the interests involved, would appear almost ludicrous. They appear to have been, one and all, terror-stricken. (See evidence of Oliver Ames, volume 2, page 808; Dexter, volume 2, page 704; Baker, volume 2, page 740.)

There followed a series of interviews between these gentlemen and Mr. Gould, which finally culminated in an agreement which led to the consolidation of the companies, effected at the house of Mr. Gould on the evening of January 14, 1880. The witnesses all describe Mr. Gould as being conciliatory, persuasive, and much more reasonable than during the prior negotiations. Persistent efforts on the part of the examiners failed to disclose in what respect, if in any, he modified the terms.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi. Here we find that Mr. Gould, the man who now owns the Western Union Telegraph Company, and the man to be affected by the proposed act, admitting that his purchase of the railroads mentioned was for the purpose of destroying the Union Pacific Railroad, which had been created by the Government as a military and postal road, to subserve the highest ends and interests of the Government. We have it from his own lips that he was bent upon destroying a railroad to which had been intrusted more than $27,000,000 of the people's money, and the earnings of which road afforded the sole chance of the Government to get the money back. And yet he is the man—I repeat it notwithstanding the objections raised by the gentleman from New York [Mr. WHITE]—who is appealing to Congress, while considering this bill, to respect his vested rights. What respect had he for the vested rights of the people in the Union Pacific when he went into that scheme to compel the road to accede to his terms or to go under?

Before laying aside the report of the Pacific Railway Commission I will call attention to another misdeed of the land-grant roads, more iniquitous than any to which I have yet referred. It will be remembered that these roads are solemnly prohibited by their charters from discriminating against the public. They have violated this obligation not less grossly than their obligations to the Government. I have not the time to relate the many acts of this kind which are detailed in the report. The Clerk will please read the marked passages on page 182.

The Clerk read as follows:

When the Commission visited the communities which were served by the Union Pacific Railway Company there was a general complaint of high rates. But the greater complaint made by shippers was against discriminating rates. If rates were uniform, certain, and permanent, a shipper knew that skill, ability, and enterprise would help him on. But when the question became one of favor with the railroad manager then capital was paralyzed.

Farmers complained (see p. 1527) that they could not get rates for shipment to Chicago within 5 or 8 cents of the figure which the elevator men obtained.

The firm of Himebaugh & Merriam, of Omaha, owns thirty-two elevators along the Union Pacific system; and when the farmers at Marysville, Kans., tried to ship directly to the market they found they could not compete with that firm. Their complaint was that three-fifths of the product of their labor went to the railroad company, one-fifth to interest, and one-fifth was left for subsistence. At Marysville, Kans., it was testified (see page 1540) that at one time the Union Pacific Company reduced its rates on corn from 32 cents to 27 cents per 100 pounds, to enable farmers to ship to market; but the rate went back again to 32 cents as soon as the market justified it. It, therefore, mattered little to the farmer whether his crop was large or small. If large, the company appropriated a considerable proportion of it in high rates; if small, it only allowed him enough to live on.

The following is a list of the favored shippers who had the greatest preferences:

Name.	Article.
Omaha and Grant Smelting and Refining Company	Ore and bullion.
Continental Oil Company (Standard)	Oil.
Consolidated Tank Line Company (Standard)	Oil.
Himebaugh & Merriam, Omaha	Grain.
Union Elevator Company, Council Bluffs	Grain.
Union Stock Yards Company (W. A. Paxton)	Cattle.
Utah Forwarding Company (Lyman & Wallace)	Salt and coke.
Adams & Keisel	Salt.
Marshall Consolidated Coal Mining Company	Coal.
Union Pacific Railroad Company, coal department	Coal.

The Omaha and Grant Smelting and Refining Company received rebates of $570,000 in a period of three years, and, in addition, was allowed free switching at its yards, which was worth $15,000 a year, while other smelting companies were forced to pay switching charges. Among the stockholders in this company were Mr. Sidney Dillon and Mr. Frederick L. Ames, directors of the Union Pacific Railroad Company.

When the president of the Union Pacific Railway Company was asked to explain why it had discriminated in favor of the Omaha and Grant Works, he said that the other roads into Denver were backing other smelting establishments, and that the Union Pacific therefore backed the Omaha and Grant Works against all other smelters in that system. He admitted that it was a great evil (see p. 1997), and that it was a vicious way of conducting business, but confessed his utter inability to remedy the evil.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi. These are but a sample of the many acts of like nature recited in the report. There is nothing the magnates of the Pacific railways believe in if not monopoly. They have centralized the most important industries along the line of their roads into the hands of a few, taking care to come in themselves for a share of the profits. The iron and coal mines, the smelting works, the salt works, the quarries, the elevators, the stock-yards are allowed to exist only under this arrangement, and the farmer must be content with one-fifth of his labor. Is it, then, to be wondered at that we find their telegraphic franchises concentrated into the hands of one company, the Western Union?

Mr. Speaker, the bill makes no reference to the Western Union Telegraph Company, nor is it the intention to injure that corporation. It does not devolve on us to consider what effect the bill may have in that respect. We are dealing with the land-grant and bond-aided railroads. We claim that the contracts by which they surrendered the control of their wires to the Western Union are void and vicious so far as the Government and the public are concerned. The bill merely ignores these contracts, or nullifies them, if you please, by amending the charters of the Pacific roads. The power to amend is reserved to Congress by an act passed before any of these roads were built.

The debate so far has had reference particularly to the contract between the Western Union and the Union Pacific, which has been taken as a sample of all the contracts between the Western Union and the land-grant roads. This contract has been spoken of as an assignment by the Union Pacific Railroad Company of its telegraphic franchises to the Western Union. I do not so construe it. In my opinion the contract creates a partnership, pure and simple.

What kind of a partnership is it? In the first place I read from the contract to show that up to the time that it was entered into, on the 1st day of July, 1881, the Union Pacific Railroad Company was exercising its telegraphic functions.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. And is doing so now.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi. Yes, sir; in a certain way—in a way, however, to evade its charter obligations. It is obvious, from all the operations of this company, that so far from carrying out in good faith its obligations to the Government and the public, its whole purpose has been to trim, so as to appear to be complying with them, while at the same time flagrantly violating them.

I will now read the portion of the contract to which I refer.

After the usual whereases is the following:

Now, therefore, for the purpose of providing telegraphic facilities for the parties hereto, and of maintaining and operating the lines of telegraph along the railway company's railroads in the most economical manner in the interest of both parties, and for the purpose of fulfilling the obligations of the railway company to the Government of the United States and the public in respect to the telegraphic service required by the act of Congress of July 1, 1862, and the amendments thereto, and in consideration of the covenants and agreements herein contained, the parties hereto have mutually agreed as follows.

Here is a distinct acknowledgment by both of the high contracting parties, that at the time the contract was entered into, to wit, July 1, 1881, the Union Pacific was under obligations to the Government and the public in respect to telegraphic service. But how unfounded is the pretense that the contract was entered into for the purpose of fulfilling these obligations. There is nothing in the whole range of testimony taken by the committee which shows, or tends to show, that the Union Pacific was unable to fulfill its own obligations. The truth is the Western Union had already got control of the wires of all the other land-grant roads, and the Union Pacific was the only one left which offered competition, and the contract was made to destroy this competition. I want no better evidence than the testimony of Norvin Green, who is the president of the Western Union, to establish what I say. I quote his language from the report of the committee:

The Pacific railroads built their own telegraph lines, and for a long time operated them in competition with the Western Union Telegraph Company. They connected with every opposition that came along, and fought us during the whole time up to 1881.

And the battle was ended by negotiations which resulted in the surrender of the Union Pacific for a consideration. The contract contains the terms of capitulation. It starts out with a declaration of honest purposes as regards the Government and the public, but this is followed and falsified by a series of provisions which secure to the Western Union the telegraphic franchises of the Union Pacific, guarded by stipulations which effectually prevent competition. In the few moments of my time left me I can only briefly state the substance of those clauses of the contract to which I wish to call the attention of the House.

By item third of the contract the railway company assures to the telegraph company the exclusive right of way over its lands and bridges, and binds itself not to transport men or material for any competing line of telegraph, except at the railroad's regular local charges, and not to furnish to any such competing line any facilities which the railway company may lawfully withhold, nor to stop its trains, nor distribute material therefor at any other than regular stations.

Item four provides that no employé of the company shall be employed by or have any connection with any other telegraph company than the Western Union, and that the latter shall have the exclusive right to the occupancy of, and connection with, the railroad company's depots, for commercial and public telegraph purposes as against any other telegraph company. By another provision of the contract the railroad company is permitted to retain from one to three wires to be used exclusively for railroad business, and the railroad is pledged not to transmit any message for any person or any officer of the Government unless expressly required to do so by the person tendering the message.

The evidence shows that the railroad have but few, if any, up-town telegraph offices at Omaha, Kansas City, Cheyenne, and other towns along its line, and that the sign-boards of the Western Union are posted at all the depots and station-houses, while the railroad has no such sign-boards. How shallow, then, is the pretense that the Union Pacific is still carrying on its telegraphic functions for the use of the Government and the public.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. GUENTHER. Mr. Speaker, I have voted in the Committee of the Post-Office and Post-Roads, of which I have the honor of being a member, in favor of this bill, although I should have preferred a bill to place the whole telegraph business of the country under Government regulation, which in my opinion would accomplish more good to the whole people of the United States and remedy all the evils that this bill seeks to accomplish much more effectually, and which would not interfere with any of the alleged vested rights about which the gentleman from New York [Mr. WHITE] and the minority report of the committee speak. But as the committee had only to deal with those railroads and telegraph lines which had received subsidies from the General Government, the committee was not competent to consider the greater and more important subject of regulating the whole telegraph service of the country.

Therefore, when the alternative presented itself either to adopt or reject the bill under consideration, I voted in favor of it, believing that the effect of this legislation would tend to bring about competition, which, owing to the contracts entered into by the Pacific roads and the Western Union Telegraph Company, whereby this company acquired an absolute monopoly, has been impossible.

If this bill becomes law, equal facilities will be afforded to every telegraph company, and competition, heretofore impossible, may at least result. In any event I consider it good and sound policy to require railroad, telegraph, and all other companies, created and aided by the Government, to live up to the stipulations and requirements of their charter.

As to the fine and complicated principles of law and the constitutional questions involved, I do not pretend to address myself. I am not a lawyer, much less a constitutional lawyer, and I trust you will take my word for it as freely as I accept that of the gentlemen who say they are. [Laughter and applause.]

I believe, however, that if this proposed legislation should be in violation of the Constitution and become law, the Pacific railroads and the Western Union Telegraph Company would lose no time to take the question before the courts and have it passed upon by the highest judicial tribunals.

I have observed during this debate, as well as in many others involving the Constitution, that gentlemen of acknowledged legal ability and high standing as jurists differ quite largely. How, then, is it possible for a layman like myself to arrive at an intelligent and sound conclusion? It is, however, a fixed principle with me, in cases like this, where the rights of the people of this country are involved as against powerful and subsidized corporations, to give the benefit of the doubt to the people. If I do err, I want to err on the side of justice to the people. If I do lean, to lean toward them, not toward the power of aggregated capital, knowing that if the slightest injustice is done the courts will give adequate, I think I may say even technical, legal remedies to powerful corporations, which to my mind at least was amply illustrated in the recent decision of Justice Field concerning the power of the Pacific Railroad Investigating Commission.

But no matter what the courts may deem their duty, let us, the representatives of the people of the United States, without distinction of party, justify the confidence reposed in us by them by defending their rights and prerogatives, and by our votes uphold their dignity and their sovereignty, their supremacy, and declare in a manner that can not be misunderstood, that the people of the United States are mightier than the most gigantic corporation; more powerful even than a combination of all of them, and that all the tremendous influence their unlimited wealth can procure, all the legal talent they can command, all the persuasive eloquence they employ, all the sophistry they so adroitly use, count for nothing when arrayed against the law of the land, against the people, the common people of this great Republic. [Loud applause.]

Mr. LIND. Mr. Speaker, when the bill was reported by the committee I did not intend to discuss the measure on the floor of the House. It has occurred to me, however, since it was brought up for discussion, that inasmuch as the principal objection made to the bill is not on the question of expediency, but rather because it is alleged to violate constitutional rights, that I would occupy the time of the House sufficiently long to state my reasons why I think there is absolutely no constitutional question involved in the consideration of this bill. If there is a constitutional question it of course merits the most careful consideration. But, as stated, I think I am justified in saying that there is no such question involved, and to demonstrate this I will cite authorities further on.

Upon the question of expediency, which is always a question of prime importance for legislative bodies to consider, I think there is room for difference of opinion. I do not think, if this bill becomes a law, that it will settle the question of telegraphic communication to the satisfaction of the people of the country, for I do not believe that the solution of the problem lies in the direction of creating competing lines, and this for the simple reason that duplicating your telegraph lines and multiplying the offices, and thereby increasing the employés to be maintained on those lines and the officers necessary, is not going to cheapen the telegraphic service in the aggregate. Hence I believe that the telegraph business, being a natural monopoly—you can make nothing else out of it—and being only another branch of the mail—another method of transmitting intelligence and communications between the people—should be entirely under the control of the Government itself. And in my opinion a postal telegraph, owned and operated by the Government, is therefore the only solution of the problem.

But until Congress shall adopt postal telegraphy or some better system than we now enjoy, it is necessary to have some remedial legislation, and the bill under consideration is a wholesome measure, as far as it goes. So long as the policy of the country is to secure relief by establishing competing lines, and if possible to obtain competition on the Pacific lines, which we have not now, we should legislate to make this system effective. I stated that I did not think that any constitutional question was involved in the consideration of this bill. It was stated the other day, and rather broadly, by a gentleman from the State of Illinois, as I understood him, that the powers of Congress were as supreme in regard to the matters of this kind as the powers of Parliament are, and that it was under no other or greater limitation than Parliament is.

That, perhaps, was stating the question a little too broadly—putting it much too broadly—as a general proposition, but when it comes to regulating either a railroad or telegraph company in the manner of executing its business, or the manner in which it shall execute its trust in serving the people, then I say there is no limitation whatever upon the powers of Congress. So long as Congress exercises, as we may call it, and as the books call it, "the police power," it is not limited. The power "of police"—of regulation—is something that can not be contracted or bargained away, and the question involved in this bill being, as the highest court of the land has already decided, nothing but the attempt to exercise and establish police regulations with regard to the manner of conducting the business of these companies, it can not possibly involve any constitutional question. And upon that point, Mr. Speaker, I ask the indulgence of the House to cite authorities.

In the case of Stone vs. Mississippi, 101 United States Reports, page 817, Chief-Justice Waite adopts and uses this language with approval:

> All agree that the Legislature can not bargain away the police power of the State. Irrevocable grants of property or franchise may be made if they do not impair the supreme authority to make laws for the right government of the State. But no Legislature can curtail the power of its successors to make such laws as they may deem appropriate in matters of police.

So I say it is settled in the Supreme Court of the land that upon questions of "police" there can be no such thing as a violation of charter or contract rights, because they are not involved.

Now, then, the next and only other question that can possibly arise as to this bill is, what does Congress assume to do? Does it assume to exercise these "police powers?" If it does, and if the provisions of the bill are in that direction, as they are, then it is entirely within the powers recognized in the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States which I have just cited. On the point that the provisions of this bill are but the exercise of "police powers," I will cite you to one of the "Granger cases," that all the members are probably familiar with. I refer to Munn vs. Illinois, 94 United States Reports, page 113:

> Under these (the police) powers the Government regulates the conduct of its citizens one towards another, and the manner in which each shall use his own property when such regulation becomes necessary for the public good. In their exercise it has been customary in England from time immemorial, and in this country from its first colonization, to regulate ferries, common carriers, hackmen, bakers, millers, wharfingers, inn-keepers, etc., and in so doing to fix a maximum of charge to be made for services rendered, accommodations furnished, and articles sold. To this day statutes are to be found in many of the States upon some or all of these subjects with the fifth amendment in force. Congress in 1820 conferred power upon the city of Washington "to regulate * * * the rates of wharfage at private wharves, * * * the sweeping of chimneys, and to fix the rates of fees therefor, and the weight and quality of bread" (3 Statutes at Large, 587, section 7), and in 1848 to make all necessary regulations respecting hackney carriages and the rates of fare of the same, and the rates of hauling by cartmen, wagoners, carmen, and draymen, and the rates of commission of auctioneers (9 Statutes at Large, 224, section 2).

It was held in the other Granger cases, which involved the identical proposition that is before the House at this time, that passing the laws involved in those cases was only exercising the "police power;" and on that ground the Illinois and Iowa and all the other "Granger laws" have been sustained, and the Supreme Court has repeatedly reiterated that so far as the exercise of police power is concerned there can be no such thing as the right of one Legislature or one generation to bargain away the rights of the next.

Hence I feel that I am justified in saying that the constitutional question is entirely out of this inquiry, because from any view in which you consider this bill you can not say that it is anything else but an attempt to exercise police powers.

There is one other point I would like to suggest, because I think that in the course of the arguments that have thus far been made some members have, in my opinion, wandered from the real point involved in the question before us. I shall not weary the House by reading long extracts either from the statute or from the reports. I will simply call attention to the status of the railroad scheme and the telegraph companies at the time of the passage of the act which I will cite. The overland telegraph companies were in existence at the time that the laws incorporating the Pacific railroads were enacted. It was thought undoubtedly at the time that it was a great and stupendous undertaking to span this continent with a continuous line of railroad, and so it was—the greatest undertaking that the world had known.

No one had any accurate idea of the amount of money that it would require. The men who were the incorporators and undertook the enterprise, while wealthy, did not have the money in sight to build this road. By the charter which incorporated the railroad companies they were required not only to construct and operate a railroad, but also, in connection with it, to construct and operate a telegraph line. The company was granted vast amounts of aid in the way of bonds and lands to enable it to undertake this great enterprise; and, further, Congress virtually said to them this: "There being already an overland telegraph line, if you can make an arrangement with the companies owning that telegraph line to move it to your right of way we will consider that a compliance with the condition requiring you to construct a line of telegraph."

Congress in effect said, "If you have not sufficient means to construct new lines we will permit you to make use of a 'second-hand' line for the time being (if I may use that expression), and obtaining this 'second-handed' line we will consider a compliance with your charter requirements, so far as construction goes." I submit to any man who will read this statute and consider it in connection with the circumstances and surroundings of the company at the time when it was enacted whether my view is not correct, and whether he will not come to the same conclusion that I have. In support of this I will read section 19 of the act authorizing the construction of a telegraph line between the Atlantic and Pacific States. It provides as follows:

> That the several railroad companies herein named are authorized to enter into an arrangement with the Pacific Telegraph Company, the Overland Telegraph Company, and the California State Telegraph Company, so that the present line of telegraph between the Missouri River and San Francisco may be moved upon or along the line of said railroad and branches as fast as said roads and branches are built; and if said arrangement be entered into, and the transfer of said telegraph line be made in accordance therewith to the line of said railroad and branches, such transfer shall, for all purposes of this act, be held and considered a fulfillment on the part of said railroad companies of the provisions of this act in regard to the construction of said line of telegraph.

Construction, that is the entire extent to which the transfer shall be considered compliance with the requirements imposed upon the company by the charter—nothing else. And if any corporation or any company has assumed to make a contract or secure rights other than those expressed and allowed by the statute it is ultra vires. [To Mr. WHITE, of New York:] You can base no rights upon it; you can assert no claims under it, because it is in violation of law. The Government said, "We are willing you should for the time being serve the public with a 'second-hand' line instead of a new one." But that is the extent and the entire extent to which Congress has as yet spoken on the subject. Then how can you speak of vested rights? It is bosh. There are no vested rights in it. The duty rested on the Union Pacific Railroad Company when it accepted its charter to operate the franchise of telegraphy as much as to conduct its railroad; and it has never been relieved from it. That duty is imposed on the company to-day.

All that we seek to do by this bill is to require them to fulfill the promises that they made and the legal requirements that were imposed upon them. Is that unjust? Is it unreasonable? What contract right do we violate? I assure the House that I would not think for a moment of voting for the violation of a contract even with Jay Gould, but why raise these bugbears of constitutional violations every time that a question in behalf of the rights of the people comes up (as my friend from Wisconsin [Mr. GUENTHER] has suggested)? It is for this reason that I, though a young man, have taken the liberty to speak on this bill, which otherwise I would not have done.

Mr. PETERS. Right there I would like to call the attention of my friend from Minnesota [Mr. LIND] to another proposition of law, namely that in grants from the sovereign to the subject nothing passes by implication; that only passes which is, in clear and unmistakable terms, granted.

Mr. LIND. Yes; and it is a fundamental principle of law that when the exercise of a public right or duty is conveyed to an individual, the grant implies that he shall exercise that right fully and completely and by himself; he can not delegate it to anybody else. Now that the gentleman calls my attention to that proposition of law, I shall weary the House a few minutes longer to express another thought that occurs to me.

Mr. HERBERT. Before the gentleman leaves that point, will he state the date of the passage of the act which he has just quoted?

Mr. WHITE, of New York. July 1, 1862.

Mr. HERBERT. How long after that, if at all, did the railroad companies themselves operate these lines of telegraph that had been moved over onto their right of way?

Mr. LIND. As I understand it, the railroad companies did not operate the lines of telegraph at all over the entire distance from the Missouri River to the Pacific.

Mr. DOCKERY. The gentleman is in error as to that, I think.

Mr. LIND. They operated only over a portion, not over the entire distance.

Mr. DOCKERY. I think the gentleman is in error on that point. The railroad companies operated the telegraph lines, the Central Pacific Railroad until 1877 and the Union Pacific until July 1, 1881. They did construct and did operate their telegraph lines until those dates, respectively.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. Will the gentleman from Minnesota pardon me if I make a suggestion in answer to the question of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HERBERT]?

Mr. LIND. Certainly.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. As I understand the history of these transactions between the railroad companies and the telegraph companies, the railroad companies never did exercise the telegraph functions as companies. The Union Pacific formed the Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Company, which it owned, and that telegraph company operated that portion of the line along the Union Pacific road. The Central Pacific Railroad Company organized the Pacific and Atlantic Telegraph Company, and that telegraph company exercised the telegraph functions on that part of the line, and the two telegraph companies, in combination, exercised those functions in behalf of the railroad companies over the whole line. Those telegraph companies were finally absorbed by the Western Union Telegraph Company, or an arrangement was made between them; but the railroad companies themselves were not engaged at any time in the business of sending through messages, as they were bound to be under their charter, if the law placed that obligation upon them.

Mr. LIND. That is what I understand from the report, that they never did carry on the business of telegraphy over the aggregated road; that is, over the continuous line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean.

Mr. HERBERT. Then they never did at any time comply fully with their obligations, as you understand it?

Mr. LIND. They never did.

Mr. PETERS. The Central Pacific and the Union Pacific proper, exclusive of what was afterwards known as the Kansas Pacific, did construct and operate their own line of telegraph. The only portion of the land-grant roads that did not construct its own telegraph line was the Kansas Pacific for a distance of three hundred and about forty-three miles west from Kansas City, Mo.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Did not the Kansas Pacific, in applying for the aid which it was to receive under the act of 1862, report to the Government commissioners that they had constructed the telegraph line in accordance with the provisions of the charter, and did not the Government extend its aid on the faith of that representation?

Mr. PETERS. Certainly.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. The question of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HERBERT] was not as to construction, but as to operation, and the facts will bear me out in what I have said, to wit, that the railroad companies never did operate as common carriers of commercial messages from one terminus to the other terminus of those lines, that is, as telegraph companies, but they organized a wheel within a wheel, the Atlantic and Pacific from Omaha to Ogden, the Pacific and Atlantic from Ogden to San Francisco, and demitted the telegraph business to those companies.

Mr. HERBERT. Did those railroad companies at any time perform, or cause to be performed, the duties imposed upon them by the act of Congress, or by their charter, which duties they disabled themselves from performing by subsequently making a contract with the Western Union Company?

Mr. WHITE, of New York. Never, sir, as I claim; but others may differ with me about that. It is a question for elucidation.

Mr. DOCKERY. If my friend from Minnesota will yield to me a moment, I wish to say that under the acts authorizing the construction of the Union Pacific Railroad and telegraph line and the Central Pacific Railroad and telegraph line, it was provided that each 40 miles of railroad and telegraph line, as completed, should be received or accepted on the part of the Government by commissioners to be appointed by the President; and the records in the office of the Secretary of the Interior show that the commissioners thus appointed certified to the fact of the completion of the railroads and telegraph lines as each section of 40 miles was received.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. That is conceded.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi. And the officers of the companies had to make affidavit.

Mr. DOCKERY. Certainly; the commissioners in receiving each 40 miles of railroad and telegraph line accepted them on the affidavits of officers of the company.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi. I would like to explain, before the gentleman from Minnesota resumes, that the Union Pacific Railroad extends only from Council Bluffs, Iowa, to Ogden, in Utah Territory, and does not extend to the Pacific coast.

Mr. LIND. That fact, I think, is generally appreciated by members.

Without wearying the House, I wish to make only one additional suggestion. It is immaterial, so far as this bill is concerned, whether the railroad companies did or did not construct these lines in the first instance. If they did construct the lines, then they have already done what the bill in hæc verba requires them to do; they have complied with their charters so far as the construction of these lines is concerned. If they did not construct the lines, and did not fulfill their obligations by having second-hand lines, as I have termed them, placed on their railways, then the bill simply requires them to comply with the original requirements of the law. That is nothing more that what we have a legal right to insist upon, and aside from that, I say that, without reference to any obligations in their charters, we have the common-law right—a right which no previous Congress had the power to alienate from us—to demand of these companies that they carry messages for each and every individual, whether a corporate or a natural person, without discrimination, and upon equal, fair, and reasonable terms, and that is virtually all that this bill demands.

Mr. WHITE, of New York, rose.

Mr. LIND. Under these circumstances, what can be urged against this bill? I will yield to the gentleman from New York for a question, if he wishes.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. I did not wish to ask a question. In reply to the gentleman's suggestion as to the requirement that these companies transact their business without discrimination and upon equal and reasonable terms, I was about to remark, so say we all of us. Of course they are bound so to do.

Mr. LIND. If that is conceded by the gentleman, then I will sit down. [Applause.]

Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I consider this one of the most important measures that can be presented to this Congress. I do not know, however, that I ought to say anything upon it, because the minority, who have opposed the bill, seem to have been so completely routed that they have fled from the field. I always have a great deal of sympathy for the "under dog," and for this reason I feel almost inclined either to say nothing or to take the other side of the question, if my conviction would permit me to do so.

This bill, which I had the pleasure of voting in our committee to report favorably to the House, seeks to compel the railroad companies, known as the "land-grant railroads," to do certain things. I think but one question can arise in the consideration of this measure; and that is, was there any legal obligation on the part of these companies to do what this bill seeks to have done? If I could be brought to the conviction that no such obligation existed, I certainly would oppose the measure. I do not believe in fastening upon corporations any more than individuals, requirements which do not rest upon any legal obligation.

In this connection I will remark that I do not share in the extremely hostile feeling that some persons entertain toward corporations—a feeling which inclines them to antagonize such companies whenever the occasion will permit. I believe that individuals and corporations, when they exercise their functions in the proper manner, as some of them have done, are a blessing to the country. I believe that when an individual or a collection of individuals use their money in a creative sense in developing the resources of the country, as has been done in a great many cases, they are entitled to the consideration of the people. But, on the other hand, I feel that when a corporation has sought favor of the people and has received it, it ought, of all others, to be compelled to discharge its legal obligations. In looking at the act to which reference has been made, we can readily see whether any legal obligation rests upon these companies to do what this bill seeks to enforce.

The act of 1862 requires these companies to construct, maintain, and operate railroads and telegraph lines. There is no distinction between them; they are put upon the same footing. Under the law the obligation is just as urgent for these companies to maintain and operate a telegraph line and conduct public business upon it in the manner specified as it is to conduct the railroad business. The language is so plain that no person, however warm an advocate he may be of these railroad and telegraph lines, can gainsay this position.

We have, then, first, this obligation imposed upon these companies in the manner provided in the acts. As a part of the consideration for the discharge of these obligations, these companies have received large assistance from the Government, and the obligation is one which they can not lay aside or abandon at their will or pleasure. The only remaining question is, then, whether they have in any manner performed this obligation or done that which exempts them from what this bill proposes to require.

As I understand, the minority of the committee take the position that section 19, which authorized the overland telegraph lines which were in existence at that time to be removed to the line of these railroads as they were constructed, under such arrangements as could be made between the companies, lifted the obligation from the railroad companies to maintain these telegraph lines themselves. Now, in my view, there was in the mind of the National Legislature at that time some reason for that provision. It is well known that at that time no individual or company could construct a line across our western plains which would be a productive line. Congress knew that the moment a railroad was constructed through that section of country the necessities of the people in the cities and towns which would be built up along the line of the railroad would require telegraphic accommodations. And inasmuch as the overland roads had been assisted in building by Government aid, it was considered a public advantage to give them permission to remove their lines there. It was never intended, it was never thought, that by doing that it would remove the obligations of these railroad companies to carry on, to operate, and to maintain, as required by the statute, their own telegraph lines.

When these lines were removed over there (and I agree with the gentleman from New York [Mr. WHITE] in his position in reference to the manner in which these companies have acted—that they have not attempted to comply with the law); I say after they removed their lines over there, they made an arrangement by which these lines were removed over there, and they were allowed to operate them for the public. That was continued until competition arose. We can trace this throughout.

There were a number of them, but the principal competing lines were, first, the United States line, under which it sought to avail itself of the advantages of this section. When they had built their line to reach the western termini of these lines, which ought to have been built and maintained for the benefit of all without discrimination—when they sought to avail themselves of the advantage of this they found that the land-grant companies had not fulfilled the obligations of law and they could make no connection for the simple fact that the Western Union had swallowed up the overland telegraph line, and their only method of competing with them through to the Pacific coast was by building a line themselves through the non-productive section of the country known as the plains.

I say that no individual, and no company, could afford to do that, and the reason of this provision in the statute was wisely meant to meet that necessity. They knew no company could compete with any line built by Government aid through those vast plains. That was the reason the statute required them to maintain a telegraph line in connection with the railroad. The Western Union having swallowed up those overland lines stood in the attitude of refusing to allow the United States Company to have the same advantages they were getting from the railroad companies. The result was that the United States Company, not being able to compete, was swallowed up.

Another company was organized in the State of New York, the Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Company, I think, with $5,000,000, which built its lines to Chicago and made an arrangement by which they extended them to Omaha. That company did get in a position to compete with the Western Union by the terms of this statute by making an arrangement with the Central Pacific Railroad Company. The history of the competition that followed there will explain the whole attitude of this measure. With their line to Chicago and through lines tc Omaha, and their contract with the Central Pacific Railroad Company, they have stood in the position of competing with the Western Union. What was done then?

The Western Union and the Central Pacific Railroad Company, in the face of the statute, in the face of the obligation resting on the Central Pacific, entered into a contract by which they cut off the privileges of the Atlantic and Pacific and made a monopoly for the Western Union. That competition was so vigorous before this contract was entered into between the Western Union and Central Pacific that a telegram of ten words from New York to Kansas City only cost 25 cents. It was a bitter competition, and the only manner in which the Western Union could oppose it was by persuading the Central Pacific to evade the law, and in face of the law and in defiance of its obligations, to enter into a contract by which they cut off the privilege they were entitled to under the statute, and enter into a contract with the Central Pacific to cut them off. The end was that the Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Company was also swallowed up.

Mr. OATES. What was required of these companies by the granting act in respect to the operations of these lines of telegraph, and wherein is the present method of operating a departure from or failure to comply with what was required in the granting act?

Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois. Under the act of 1862, under which these railroads were built, they were required to construct in connection with their railroad lines telegraph lines, so that their eastern termini would receive telegraph business from every individual and company, without discrimination. They were obliged to maintain and operate them for the public benefit, without discrimination or favoritism to anybody. These companies had a right to expect——

Mr. OATES. Can you give the language of that part of the act?

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi. I think the same provision applies to all of these land-grant railroads.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois. It is found in section 3 of the act:

That messages received from any individual, company, or corporation, or from any telegraph lines connecting with this line or either of its termini, shall be impartially transmitted in the order of their reception, excepting that the dispatches of the Government shall have priority.

Now, these companies that were organized after the Western Union had swallowed up the Atlantic and Pacific were governed by that provision; but I will answer the question by referring to this in another way. Another company was organized, called the American Union Telegraph Company. It built its branches and lines from the east until it reached the eastern terminus of the railroad lines, and expected when it reached the eastern termini of the land-grant roads to have its messages received by the railroads operating telegraph lines, according to the obligations resting upon them under the statute. They went to that expense and built their lines in order to make connection with the eastern termini of the railroad lines.

When they got there and demanded that these roads should live up to the obligations of the statutes and receive for transmission their messages over their lines, they found that the railroads were not operating telegraph lines at all, and that their messages could not be received. They were simply told, "We are not doing any telegraphic business; this is in the hands of the Western Union Company, and you must contract with them." The American Company, after working with the officers of the several roads and the Western Union, found that the only terms upon which their messages could be transmitted was by paying an increased amount on their messages.

Mr. PETERS. Will the gentleman permit me to interrupt him, to state that in addition to that the evidence taken before the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads shows that these land-grant railroad companies had no telegraph office at all at Kansas City or Omaha?

Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois. Yes, sir; I was going to state that. When the Western Union offered to take their messages, that is to say, when a message sent from Washington City, for instance, reached Omaha or Kansas City, they added to it an additional amount; and their excuse for this was that they had to repeat the name of the city and the date, and charged an additional amount, making the tariff so heavy that the telegraph companies were absolutely cut off from doing anything at all over these land-grant lines.

Mr. DOCKERY. Will you state what was the additional amount required?

Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois. I think it was from 30 to 50 cents additional on each message; so that if the gentleman from New York [Mr. WHITE] takes the position that the Western Union was operating so as to discharge these railroad companies from their obligations to the public and to the Government under their charters, then he ought to show that this Western Union Company was doing what was required of the railroad companies which it claimed the right to succeed in this business.

Mr. OATES. Or, in other words, that the public did not suffer by the arrangement made with the Western Union.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois. Yes, sir; and he can not do that because all this testimony shows that there was a discrimination. In other words, that the telegraph lines were turned over to the Western Union, and they dictated the terms in their own interest to cut off all competition.

At that time, it must be remembered, Mr. Speaker, that it was absolutely unreasonable to require this new company to build its line across that part of the country. It would not have been possible to do so. They could not have done it, because they were not in the line of competition, unless they were favored by Congress and were voted money to build the line with. The reason of this grant was manifestly to protect all lines that wanted to reach the Pacific, and to give each of them the benefit of what the Government had done for these other companies. So that the reason of this action on the part of the Western Union was manifestly to get all the benefits itself of what Congress had done for all these companies by destroying all possible competition. That ended the American Union Company.

It had constructed its line, at a considerable expense, up to the eastern termini of the land-grant railroads, assuming, as I have said, that they were operating telegraph lines according to the terms of the statute, but found they were mistaken.

Mr. LIND. Will the gentleman allow me to interrupt him for a moment, to read one passage from the contract entered into between the Western Union and the Union Pacific Railroad system, which bears particularly upon this point?

No employé of the railway company shall, while in its service, be employed by or have any connection with any other telegraph company than the telegraph company party hereto.

That is, the Western Union.

And the telegraph company shall have the exclusive right to the occupancy of and connection with the railway company's depots or station-houses for commercial or public telegraph purposes as against any other telegraph company.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois. Now, Mr. Speaker, when the American Union Telegraph Company found that they could not receive the benefits expected under this section of the statute, and to which they were entitled, they wrote a very pertinent letter to the officials of these roads, and demanded of them that they comply with the requirements of the statute. That called forth from the attorneys of these railroad companies, the eminent counsel, Mr. Dillon and Mr. Bartlett, a rather lengthy opinion, in which they stated to both the railroad companies that the obligation resting upon them to maintain and operate telegraph lines in connection with the railroad lines was just as much of an obligation as the maintenance of the road itself.

At once they saw that something must be done, and then it was that they took forcible possession of the telegraph line that led to the injunction that my friend from Kansas spoke of the other day. This brought about this condition of affairs. When the railroad companies found that their legal advisers took the position that they were violating the statutes, and the obligation to maintain the line of telegraph rested upon them, and could not be avoided, in order to fortify themselves and come within the statutes they took forcible possession of the first telegraph line constructed on this right of way.

They applied for an injunction, and Judge McCrary, in passing upon this question——

Mr. OATES. Who applied for an injunction?

Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois. The Western Union applied for an injunction restraining these Pacific railroads from interfering with or taking possession of their lines. Judge McCrary, in passing upon that, says that the obligation resting upon the railroad companies to maintain these telegraph lines is as binding as that of maintaining the railroads, and that it can not be abandoned, and that any contract entered into with these railroads by the Western Union was ultra vires; that they had no power, no legal authority to make such a contract. That question also came up before Justice Miller, of the Supreme Court, and he reiterates the language of Judge McCrary and says the same thing; that although they had entered into a contract with the Western Union by which they sought to abandon the requirements of operating or maintaining a telegraph line and turn over the whole thing to the Western Union, yet, says Justice Miller, of the Supreme Court of the United States, that was a matter they had no power to do; they could not abandon their obligation, and any contract with that end in view was ultra vires.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. Will the gentleman from Illinois explain why Justice Miller continued that injunction?

Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois. I will. He passed upon the question between the two parties, the equities between the railroad and the Western Union. It was not a question as to the rights of the public, as to whether the railroad company had abandoned its obligation or was violating the statute. But in passing upon the equities between the two companies he said he thought the railroad company had treated in its acts the Western Union Company in such a manner that it was entitled to some consideration at least; but he did not in all of his decision, or in any part of it, in passing upon the question of the contract between these two companies and the equities between them—he did not in passing upon that feature of the question touch the question of the legal obligation resting upon these railroads to maintain and operate their telegraph lines.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. Has the gentleman got Justice Miller's opinion before him?

Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois. I have.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. Will you please read where he made that decision?

Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois. It is quite a long decision.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. There are only a few words bearing upon that question. I will find the part which I should like to have read.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois. Here is what Judge McCrary says:

This suit was brought to prevent the Union Pacific Company from ousting the telegraph company, the railroad company having so attempted because of the written opinion of Counsel Sidney Bartlett and John F. Dillon to the effect that it was the duty of the railroad company under its charter to operate its telegraph lines without discrimination for the business of all corporations.

He says further:

In my judgment—

This is quoted from page 750, 1 Federal Reporter, giving the opinion of Judge McCrary—

In my judgment the act of July 1, 1862, and its amendments must be construed as chartering the Union Pacific Railroad Company and devolving upon it individually and personally the power and duty of constructing, operating, and maintaining a line of telegraph as well as a railroad. This is made manifest by the consideration that the Government endowed the corporation with large grants of land and bonds to aid in the construction of these lines, and impressed upon the company the duty of reimbursing the Government from the earnings of the road and telegraph line.

I can not find Justice Miller's decision just now, but he says in substance this: "I concur in what Judge McCrary has said." And there is not one single syllable—I say, the gentleman from New York notwithstanding, there is not one single syllable in Justice Miller's opinion that is contradictory to this. He affirms it and says in specific words, "I concur in what Judge McCrary says."

There were certain things required of this company. Their mortgage covers both the railroad and the telegraph lines. And I wish to say right here, there were commissioners appointed, and it is a strange and I might say an unfortunate commentary upon the officers of this Government that this state of affairs should have existed so long as it has done without detection.

Officers who were appointed especially to look to this matter and see that these statutes were complied with, commissioners whose duty it was to see that this law was enforced—I say they stood blindly, and were in some manner or other put to sleep by the Pacific railroads, so that they were absolutely blind to what was being done; and it was only brought out by the competition of telegraph companies struggling to compete with the Western Union. I say it is strange, and it is unfortunate, and it is sad to think that with all the officials that had to do with this matter it rested with the telegraph companies themselves to bring on this fight.

Now, the American Union Telegraph Company, as I was saying, was swallowed up by the Western Union when it found that it could not reach the Pacific coast. On top of that another company struggled to compete, the Baltimore and Ohio Company. They built their lines through at a large expense, expecting, and having the same right to expect, that they would find open lines to the Pacific when they had reached the eastern termini of these railroads; and when they had reached Kansas City and Omaha, respectively, they let that fact be known, and asked the railroad companies where they would connect and upon what terms their business was to be received. Week after week and month after month for six months did the officers of the Baltimore and Ohio Company pursue the officers of the Pacific railroads and of the Western Union Telegraph Company before they could get them to admit that the railroad companies had not a single telegraph office.

In all this immense line stretching along these railroads not one single telegraph office under the control of the railroads or operated by them was open to public business. Over the doors of all the offices was the sign of the Western Union Telegraph Company, and finally the railroads had to admit that there was no place where they could receive the business of the Baltimore and Ohio Telegraph Company, and then the Baltimore and Ohio people carried the fight to Congress and brought on the investigation that has disclosed to the public this state of facts. It seems to me that any person cognizant of all these facts and believing that the laws ought to be upheld has certainly very warped views if he can undertake to justify the conduct of these railroad companies.

For one I believe that these companies, who have been favored by the public, whose roads have been built by Government aid upon condition that they should accommodate the public—I believe, I say, that they ought to be held to the strictest account and ought to be made to live up to the very letter of the law. Yet we find gentlemen here who know full well the amount of aid that these roads have received, and that it was granted and received with the express understanding that they should afford facilities to the public and construct and maintain telegraph lines for the benefit of the public, and who, I am sure, can not possibly persuade themselves into believing that the companies have fulfilled, or intend to fulfill, if they can help it, the requirements of the law—we find gentlemen knowing all this who are yet willing to stand upon the floor of this House and justify and defend these companies. It seems to me very strange indeed.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. I thought you said in the opening of your speech that the representatives of the other side had disappeared—that they were all gone.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois. Probably that is the answer.

Mr. GUENTHER. There is the minority report, though.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois. But, Mr. Speaker, I would go further than I have stated. If gentlemen will examine the statutes they will find that in 1864, before any part of this work was done, there was an amendatory act passed which contained a penal clause; and I, for one, believe not only that these railroad companies ought to be compelled to do what they were obligated by law to do, what they undertook to do, and what they received compensation for doing—not only that, but that they ought to be punished for violating the law, and punished to the utmost extremity of the law.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that I have now found the portion of Judge Miller's opinion to which I referred awhile ago. The gentleman can read it, or I will read it myself.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois. The gentleman may read it.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. I read from page 215 of the report of the committee:

I concur with Judge McCrary in the opinions delivered by him on the former applications before him to dissolve this injunction: that on the face of the acts of Congress of 1862 and 1864, called "the Pacific railroad acts," the obligation of building a telegraph line along its right of way, and of operating that line or having it operated under the control of the railroad company, was an obligation which they could not abandon, and which was inconsistent with the contract made in this case, so far as those two acts are concerned; and that if the case rested on the provision of these original Pacific railroad acts, namely, the act of 1862 and amendatory act of 1864, the present contract would be void, as in violation of the obligation imposed upon the railroad company by those acts; and I do not propose to add anything to what he has said on that subject. If, therefore, there are no other acts of Congress on the subject, nor anything else that will remove that inherent vice in the contract between the two companies, the injunction ought to be dissolved and the railroad company permitted to operate the telegraph in accordance with the obligations which those acts impose upon it for the benefit of the public.

The amended bill, however, which was not before Judge McCrary when he decided that proposition, sets up an act approved July 2, 1864, entitled "An act for increasing the facilities of telegraph communication between the Atlantic and Pacific States and the Territory of Idaho," and claims that by virtue of that statute the present contract is a valid one. The first section of that act declared that "the United States Telegraph Company and their associates were authorized to erect a line of magnetic telegraph between the Missouri River and the city of San Francisco, in the State of California, on such route as they may select, to connect with the lines of said United States Telegraph Company now constructed and being constructed through the States of the Union." It gave the right of way over the public lands of the United States and the right to draw materials for the construction of the line from the same public lands.

The fourth section is as follows: "That the several railroad companies authorized by the act of Congress of July 2, 1862, are authorized to enter into an arrangement with the United States Telegraph Company, so that the line of telegraph between the Missouri River and San Francisco may be made upon and along the line of said road and branches as fast as said road and branches are built. And if said arrangement be entered into and the transfer of said telegraph line be made in accordance therewith, to the line of said railroad and branches, such transfer shall, for all purposes of the act referred to, be held and considered a fulfillment on the part of said railroad companies of the provision in the act in regard to the construction of telegraph lines. And in case of disagreement said telegraph company is authorized to remove their line of telegraph along and upon the line of railroad therein contemplated, without prejudice to the rights of said railroad companies."

The allegation of the amended bill is, that the Western Union Telegraph Company was at the time it made the contract for the erection of the telegraph line now in question with the Kansas branch of the Pacific Railroad Company, the successor in right and in power of the United States Telegraph Company mentioned in this act.

And thereupon, upon the act of July 2, 1864, added to the original acts of 1862 and 1864, Judge Miller continued the injunction, and held that if these facts were successfully controverted on the final hearing there might be a decree in favor of the railroad company, but that if such were not the case the injunction would have to be continued.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois. I yield to my friend [Mr. HOPKINS] to answer the gentleman from New York and to address the House on this bill.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, in the inception of my remarks I will refer to the question put by the gentleman from New York [Mr. WHITE] as to the decision of Judge Miller, promising that later, if it will not trespass too much upon the House, I shall state clearly my position on that question. But, sir, every person who has read the decision of Judge Miller just quoted by the gentleman from New York knows that that opinion was predicated upon the state of facts presented by the telegraph company; that a demurrer was interposed by the railroad company admitting those facts to be true as between the railroad company and the telegraph company; and Judge Miller, while he indorsed all that had been said by Judge McCrary in the decision referred to by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ANDERSON], said that in view of the claims and allegations of the telegraph company predicated upon what is known as the "Idaho act," he would grant a preliminary injunction, not for the purpose of passing upon the question, but simply to give himself an opportunity to investigate it; and while the railroad company was admitting everything claimed by the telegraph company, Judge Miller was so guarded in his position that he used this language:

I am not prepared to say with any degree of assurance that if this case comes to a final hearing, and no more evidence is then given of the corporate existence of the first United States Telegraph Company of New York, and of the transfer of the powers granted to it by the act of Congress of 1864—

The Idaho act already referred to—

to the Western Union Telegraph Company than has been presented on this hearing, that the contract can be sustained under the act of 1864.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PETERS] when on the floor on the day before yesterday stated what is the fact, that all the conditions on which the opinion of Judge Miller was predicated are denied to-day by the railroad company and by the public, and that the Western Union Telegraph Company does not now claim that those charges and allegations are true. That statement was made in the presence of the gentleman from New York, and went unchallenged, I understand.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. The time for "challenging" will come by and by.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. It is a safe thing, Mr. Speaker, for a man, when his position is an untenable one, to reserve his fire until his opponents have no chance to reply. I commend the discretion of the gentleman.

Mr. OATES. Will the gentleman from Illinois allow me a question?

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Yes, sir.

Mr. OATES. Did not Judge Miller continue the injunction upon the ground that as the act of 1864 permitted, as the railroads were completed, these telegraph lines to be removed upon them, such removal was a compliance with the requirements of the granting act so far as construction went, but left the question of operating untouched?

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Yes, sir.

Mr. OATES. And the question of operating is the real question involved in this bill, is it not?

Mr. WHITE, of New York. I want to say just one word in reply to the remark of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS] in regard to "reserving the shot." I would like to inquire—it is a sort of a parliamentary inquiry—whether the gentlemen having charge of this bill will not have the right to close the debate? Am I not right in that?

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. That does not apply to gentlemen who have spoken upon this question, and to whom the gentleman from New York claims he is reserving his time to reply.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. Does the gentleman impute to the manager of this bill incompetency to reply to the arguments which shall be made by those who may speak in support of the minority report?

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Not at all.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. I imagine the gentleman in charge of this bill will have the "last shot."

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. I claim that that gentleman is not only capable of replying, but will do so in a manner which will completely satisfy the gentleman from New York, if reason and argument and law will satisfy him.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi. In this connection I would like to read a brief extract from the testimony of Mr. Norvin Green, the president of the Western Union Telegraph Company. Referring to these injunction cases, he says:

The railroad immediately repudiated it, and connected with the American Union Telegraph Company, then running in opposition to our company. They went further, and attempted to cut our lines off from their bridge at Council Bluffs, and to restrain us from doing business on the road. We got an injunction restraining them from interfering with our lines or our business, and predicated our injunction, as far as we could, upon that contract, also upon our rights under the charter. The decisions, which were never final, but which squinted adversely, were altogether in respect of that contract.

We were very willing to have that contract dissolved, because we would then get back our two millions and a half in stock, or its equivalent in money, which was worth more to us than their connection. Although all the decisions perpetuated our injunctions and we carried our point in every instance before the courts, still there were intimations that that contract was one that the railroad company had no right to make.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, when this bill was brought before the House the other day by the gentleman from Missouri, I had not had an opportunity to examine the majority and minority reports of the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, and of course was compelled to rely for the time being upon the statements of parties representing the majority and minority of the committee as to the facts at issue and the law. In listening to the debate I felt constrained to take issue with the statement of law announced by the gentleman from New York, the champion of the minority report in this case. I had occasion during the debate to state that the Dartmouth College case, cited by him, did not, in my judgment, apply to this class of cases; that the people of this country are supreme upon all questions of this kind, and their rights can not be legislated away. I found, Mr. Speaker, that my position was criticised by men for whose good opinion I care much; and this has caused me to examine more carefully not only the report of the committee, but the evidence before the committee in the Forty-ninth Congress and the law which governs the case. This investigation has not only confirmed me in the view which I took of the law while the debate was in progress, but has caused me to dissent from the statement of facts as given by the gentleman from New York on behalf of the minority of the committee. I take issue with him as to the rights of the Western Union Telegraph Company—not only as to the facts upon which he claims there is a valid contract between that company and these railroad companies, but as to the law itself.

The Dartmouth College case has ever since 1819 been invoked in aid of the rights of corporations, little and big; but the principle involved in that case is not, in my judgment, applicable here. As stated by Mr. Webster in his celebrated argument before the Supreme Court of the United States, the Dartmouth College was not a civil, although it was a lay, corporation. He claimed that it was an eleemosynary corporation and it was for private charity. The argument made by Mr. Holmes and the Attorney-General of the United States in opposition, attempted to enforce as a fundamental proposition that it was a public corporation, and therefore subject to the legislation attempted to be enforced in the State of New Hampshire. Mr. Hopkinson, who was associated with Mr. Webster in the argument in that case, in replying to Mr. Holmes and the Attorney-General, took issue with them on that question and insisted, as did Mr. Webster, that it was a private corporation, eleemosynary in character, and therefore had certain vested rights which could not be legislated away.

I have not the time to read that decision here this evening, or to go on and show wherein that case is not applicable. Any person who has examined the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States in this class of questions knows that from the time of the case of Munn vs. Illinois, which is reported in 94 United States Reports, and even long before that, the broad ground assumed by the gentleman from New York [Mr. WHITE] has been limited and curtailed. That and the Granger cases, referred to during the debate by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. LIND], hold that on all questions of a public character which relate to the welfare of the people no Congress nor State Legislature can grant vested rights.

I, sir, spoke in the language of the law when I took the position I did the other day in that debate, and now, with the time given me to investigate this subject, will, with the indulgence of the House, challenge the attention of the gentleman from New York and the members of the House to decisions of the courts which sustain my position.

This proposition, Mr. Speaker, comes under what are known as the police powers of the Government. In the License cases, 5 Howard, decided when Chief-Justice Taney was on the Supreme bench of the United States, in speaking of police powers, that learned justice gave this definition, which in my judgment is comprehensive enough to cover the question involved in the pending bill. The definition is as follows:

> But what are the police powers of a State? They are nothing more nor less than the powers of government inherent in every sovereignty to the extent of its dominions. And whether a State passes a quarantine law, or a law to punish offenses, or to establish courts of justice, or requiring certain instruments to be recorded, or to regulate commerce within its own limits, in every case it exercises the same power, that is to say, the power of sovereignty, the power to govern men and things within the limits of its dominion (License case, 5 How ard, 583).

In the opinion of the court in the Munn case, to which I have referred, Chief-Justice Waite used the following language:

> From this source (referring to the maxim sic utere tuo ut alienum non lædas) come the police powers, which, as was said by Mr. Chief-Justice Taney in the License cases, 5 How., 583, "are nothing more nor less than the powers of government inherent in every sovereignty, that is to say, the power to govern men and things." Under these powers the government regulates the conduct of its citizens one toward another, and the manner in which each shall use his own property, when such regulations become necessary for the public good.

In the opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States, in Stone vs. Mississippi, 101 United States, 814, after referring to the Dartmouth College case, where the court held that a charter to a private corporation may contain a contract which can not be impaired by subsequent legislation, it is said:

> In this connection, however, it is to be kept in mind that it is not the charter which is protected, but only any contract the charter may contain. If there is no contract there is nothing in the grant in which the Constitution can act. Consequently the first inquiry in this class of cases always is, whether a contract has in fact been entered into, and, if so, what its obligations are.

And after discussing the terms of the charter, which authorized the maintenance of a lottery for the term of twenty-five years for an express pecuniary consideration, the opinion proceeds:

> If the Legislature that granted this charter had the power to bind the people of the State and all succeeding Legislatures to allow the corporation to continue its corporate existence, there is no doubt about the sufficiency of the language employed to effect that object. * * * Whether the alleged contract exists, therefore, or not, depends on the authority of the Legislature to bind the State and the people of the State in that way. All agree that the Legislature can not bargain away the police power of a State.

The court then quote with approbation the following from Metropolitan Board of Excise vs. Barrie, 34 N. Y., 657:

> Irrevocable grants of property and franchise may be made if they do not impair the supreme authority to make laws for the government of the State; but no Legislature can curtail the power of its successors to make such laws as they deem proper in matters of police.

And further on (page 820) the court lay down these general propositions, the soundness of which ought never to be questioned:

> But the power of governing is a trust committed by the people to the government, no part of which can be granted away. * * *

I may remark in passing that in the case to which I have just called the attention of the House the question presented was whether the State of Mississippi, in its sovereign capacity, could bind itself irrevocably by a contract to permit a certain corporation, for a limited number of years, to receive subscription and sell and dispose of certificates of subscriptions which would entitle the holders thereof to any land, books, paintings, etc., or any other property or things, etc., awarded to them by the casting of lots, or by lot, chance, or otherwise.

It is undisputed that under such an arrangement the Legislature of the State of Mississippi chartered a lottery company, having all the powers incident to such a corporation for a limited number of years, and that the corporation paid into the State treasury $5,000 in consideration of such chartered privileges.

A subsequent Legislature attempted to repeal the law granting these rights to that lottery company; and it claimed, as the gentleman from New York [Mr. WHITE] claims here, that it had obtained vested rights under a charter of the Legislature of the State, and that that contract could not be violated by subsequent legislation. The question came to the Supreme Court of the United States, and they gave expression to the construction of that contract which I have just read to the House, and in that decision held that those powers could not be granted away by any Legislature.

Now, I desire to call the attention of the members of the House to the situation of these parties under the contract that is claimed by the Western Union Telegraph Company.

As was stated by the gentleman from New York the other day, some of these telegraph companies were first in the field; that is, under the act of Congress of 1860. These land-grant railroads, the Central Pacific and the Union Pacific roads, were built under the acts of 1862 and 1864. Now, in this case the incorporators were required to construct, maintain, and operate a telegraph line precisely the same as they were required to construct, maintain, and operate the railroads. These two propositions were integral parts of the same great object in view.

In section 4 of the act of 1862 it was provided that if the incorporators under these several land-grant acts would go on and comply with them in the spirit and letter of the legislation, that whenever 40 miles of road was constructed and 40 miles of telegraph line was constructed in compliance with it, and a report made to the Government, that commissioners would be appointed to go out and examine the constructed portions and make reports thereon, and then aid would be granted them in accordance with the original stipulations in the charters.

Now, Mr. Speaker, every one of these land-grant railroads, I care not which one it may be, claimed in every instance that the telegraph line was constructed and operated precisely as the railroad was constructed and operated, and it was upon that representation, and that representation alone, that the United States granted this aid by giving them millions of acres of land, and thousands, and even millions, of money.

I hold, sir, that whatever the subsequent facts may be, these railroad companies are bound by the representations they made to the General Government at the time they procured the land grants and the money aid. I claim that the doctrine of estoppel applies here, and these parties can not be heard to say when the Congress of the United States undertakes to enforce their charter duties and obligations and compel them to maintain and operate the telegraphlines, as they are compelled to operate and maintain the railroads, that they have made any contract with the Western Union Telegraph Company or any other telegraph company. That doctrine is as old as the common law itself. It is a doctrine that will commend itself to the judgment of every man. Every lawyer in the House knows that it applies in the most primary and every-day transactions of life.

Mr. Speaker, if my colleague here sitting at my left [Mr. ROWELL] is the owner of a fine horse and carriage, and I am with him, and some person comes along and desires to buy the horse and carriage, and I assume the ownership or right to make a contract and the right to sell the horse and carriage in the presence of my colleague, who permits the contract to be made without dissenting, the law comes in with its estoppel and says that he shall not be heard after that to claim that property from the person to whom I had sold it; and that I can not repudiate my assumed ownership to escape any claim the purchaser may bring against me. And so I insist that where these railroads have come to the General Government and claimed to have complied with their charter obligations, and on the faith of that obtained aid from the Government, that they can not be heard in Congress or in the courts to deny that statement when the General Government attempts to enforce its reserved rights under the terms of their charter.

Mr. PETERS. Will the gentleman permit me to interrupt him a moment to say that that position is still stronger if it is shown, as in this case, that the Western Union is the successor of these telegraph lines and was privy to that condition of things?

Mr. BRUMM. In other words, they have made false statements by which they secured Government aid, and they can not take advantage of their own fraud. That is the proposition.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Yes, sir; that is correct.

All of these facts were known to the telegraph companies that the Western Union claims under as having vested rights in the premises. This was all known, as has just been stated by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PETERS].

I stated, Mr. Speaker, that on investigation I was constrained to dissent from the facts as presented by the gentleman from New York [Mr. WHITE]. If I understood his argument the other day, he claims that, as a matter of fact, under what is known as the Idaho act, certain portions of these land-grant railroads at least took advantage of that act and instead of constructing a line of telegraph along their roads, as required by the statutes of 1862 and 1864, made contracts with telegraph lines by which these lines were conveyed to the right of way of the railroad companies, and that thereby they had complied with all the requirements of the General Government, and then had power to enter into the contract which the Western Union Telegraph Company claims as the contract of 1881. If I am not correct in stating the position of the gentleman, I ask him to set me right.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. I did not intend to be so understood. I will state the legal proposition in a word or two, if the gentleman desires.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. I ask the gentleman to state the facts.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. Then I will state the facts. I have not claimed that there was any attempt made at the time to take advantage of the nineteenth section of the act of July 1, 1862, on the part of either the railroad company or the telegraph companies.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. What do you claim, then?

Mr. WHITE, of New York. I will state what I claim. I stated that the right was granted by the acts of July 1, 1862, and of July 2, 1864, to these railroad companies to enter into an arrangement with the telegraph companies that the telegraph companies should be operated or constructed over their right of way; and that those laws are unrepealed to-day, and it was so held by Judge Miller when he continued the injunction at Topeka, Kans.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. My answer to the gentleman from New York on that branch of the case is this: That those rights under the provisions of the acts of 1862 and 1864 that the gentleman speaks of were simply as to the construction of the telegraph lines. Now, if the railroad companies, which were required to construct and maintain telegraph lines along their railroad lines as an integral part of their obligation to the Government and the people, did not take advantage of that in the construction of their lines, then the power ceased under those sections; and after that any contract that might be made would be in violation of the chartered rights of these companies. And I am glad to have the gentleman from New York state as frankly as he has done to-night his position, because it cuts away the last vestige of ground from under him, both in law and in fact.

There is no lawyer who has studied carefully these acts and the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States who will ever sustain him in his position either in this House or out of it.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. Was Justice Miller's professional standing up to the concert pitch in 1880, when that decision was made, when he continued the injunction, the vitality of which depended solely upon the act of 1864, giving the right to the Union Pacific Railroad Company to make a contract with the telegraph companies—was that eminent jurist's standing at that time sufficient to satisfy the gentleman?

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Judge Miller is one of the greatest legal lights of this country.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. So I think.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. He is a man for whose great legal learning and high character I have the greatest respect; and I believe Judge Miller will be found as vigorously dissenting from the position taken by the gentleman from New York to-night, if that question is brought before him, as I have done in my weak way.

Justice Miller does not in his decision take the position the gentleman has assumed for him. I want to state in defense of that great man's character and integrity and legal learning, that his position in that opinion is not the position that is assumed for him by the learned gentleman from New York. I stated when I was first upon the floor that that opinion of Judge Miller was predicated upon the truthfulness of the charges made in the bill filed by the Western Union Telegraph Company.

Mr. PETERS. I call the gentleman's attention to another fact, that the final demurrer by the railroad company admitted the facts for the purposes of the demurrer.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Yes. I stated further, Mr. Speaker, that the railroad company, which now seems to be aiding and abetting the telegraph company, came into court before Judge Miller and admitted as true all of these charges and allegations which were made in that bill. Judge Miller stated that if these allegations were true, the law would be so and so; but as I read when I was on the floor before, Judge Miller said that even then if, on the final hearing, the telegraph company did not bring more proof to show the organization of the United States Telegraph Company and its transfer to the Western Union, he should be constrained not to continue the injunction. That is the substance of his decision.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. In other words, Judge Miller did not decide the case finally, because it was a preliminary motion to dissolve the injunction, but he stood prepared to decide it according to the facts as they should be put in proof upon the trial of the case, and held, prima facie, that the averments of the bill were sufficient, and that the act of July 1, 1864, did grant the power to the railroad companies to give the telegraph companies the right to operate over their right of way.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, that statement of the gentleman is the worst kind of special pleading, because every lawyer knows that where a party goes into court and asks for a preliminary injunction, and a demurrer is interposed, it admits as true the facts stated——

Mr. WHITE, of New York. I have heard of that demurrer a good deal, and I now call upon the gentleman to show that there was a demurrer. The hearing was upon a motion to dissolve, upon the bill. It may be in the nature of a demurrer, but there was no demurrer.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. I will ask the gentleman if a motion to dissolve an injunction has not, in legal parlance, the same effect as a demurrer?

Mr. WHITE, of New York. It may have, or it may not. A man may contradict the facts or he may support them by affidavits, and he does not sign away his case.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. How was it in this case? Were there any affidavits filed?

Mr. WHITE, of New York. I don't know, sir.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Do you not know, from the reading of the case, that if it was a motion it had the same force and effect as a demurrer?

Mr. WHITE, of New York. I know this——

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Don't you know that, sir? Answer my question.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. I have answered your question once.

Mr. ROWELL. Is not a motion to dissolve on a bill without answer equivalent to a demurrer?

Mr. WHITE, of New York. If there are no affidavits in the case, yes. If there are affidavits, no.

Mr. ROWELL. I said on the bill. Is not that equivalent to a demurrer?

Mr. LIND. The record shows this to have been on the bill.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. The record shows that it was on the bill, and I was trying to get the gentleman from New York, who has announced such extraordinary law here, to admit the fact.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. My law is of the most ordinary kind, such law as is dealt out by the Supreme Court of the United States. It is not extraordinary law at all. Now, I do not wish to interrupt the gentleman any further. I have stated with the utmost candor my reasons for believing that this bill is unconstitutional, and I predicate my belief upon Judge Miller's decision, to which I have called attention. When I come to discuss the pending bill, I will cite that decision and show the gentleman and the committee its bearing and force in relation to this question.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. I have read Judge Miller's decision carefully.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. So have I.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. And I say that it does not decide any question in this case. As was shown by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PETERS] the other day, that decision was predicated upon a series of "ifs," a series of contingencies, none of which the facts show to exist; and, as suggested by the gentleman from Kansas, even the Western Union Telegraph Company does not now claim that they exist.

Now, if that be true, how absurd it is to invoke the great name of Judge Miller before the members of this House in support of a proposition that can not be sustained either upon the law or upon the facts. Why, Mr. Speaker, I hold in my hand the opinion of two of the attorneys of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, one of whom, as I understand, drew this contract of 1881 between the Western Union Telegraph Company and the Union Pacific Railroad Company, wherein they both say to the president of this great railroad corporation that under these acts of Congress the railroad company has no power to make any lease or any contract with the Western Union Telegraph Company, or with any other company. In that opinion they hold that the right or duty to construct, operate, and maintain a telegraph line is an integral part of the great object had in view by Congress in granting these rights, and that that right or duty can not be delegated to any other corporation.

That decision is found on page 19 of Executive Document No. 2, and, with the indulgence of the House, I will call attention to the exact language which was used by Mr. Dillon and Mr. Sidney Bartlett:

> The Pacific railroads were authorized by Congress to construct, maintain, and manage a continuous railroad and telegraph from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean. Lands were granted, and bonds issued by the Government to aid in the construction of the railroad and telegraph lines. It was only on the completion and equipment of said railroad and telegraph lines that the companies became entitled to lands and bonds from the Government.

Now, mark that! As these attorneys themselves claim, it was only on the completion of the telegraph line, as well as the railroad, that the companies were entitled to the bonds and lands which in the acts to which I have referred the Government agreed to give them.

> One of the conditions of the grants by Congress is that the companies shall keep said railroad and telegraph lines in repair and use, and shall at all times transmit dispatches over said telegraph lines. The companies were, moreover, required to operate and use said roads and telegraphs for all purposes of communication, travel, and transportation, so far as the public and Government are concerned, as one continuous line, without discrimination of any kind; and it was expressly enacted not to be lawful for the proprietors of any line of telegraph authorized by this act to refuse or fail to convey messages and news for all persons requiring such transmission.
>
> On well-known principles of law, such franchises are inalienable without express legislative authority. Not only is there an absence of such authority, but its existence is plainly negatived by the nature of the rights reserved to the Government and the special duties toward the Government and the public enjoined on the companies, which they alone can perform. It results, therefore, that no valid lease or other contract can be made by the companies to surrender or to devolve on other parties their duty to maintain, control, and manage their respective lines of telegraph. They can no more do this in respect of their lines of telegraph than they can in respect of their lines of railway. Any lease or contract to that effect is, in the language of the law, ultra vires.

This opinion, Mr. Speaker, was rendered upon the 22d of February, 1880, three years after the contract of 1877 was made. This opinion was given by two of the great constitutional and corporation lawyers of this country, with full knowledge of all the rights and powers guaranteed under the several acts of 1862 and 1864 and the Idaho act to which I have referred. This opinion was rendered, if I remember correctly, after the decision of Judge Miller.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. You will find by reference to the minority report that October, 1880, was the date of Judge Miller's opinion.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. That point is immaterial. This opinion was rendered by these attorneys to the railroad company prior to the contract of 1881, under which the gentleman from New York claims the Western Union Telegraph Company has "vested rights." I speak of this to show to members of the House, and all interested in this subject, that the railroad company and the telegraph company entered into this contract with a full knowledge of what was understood as being the object and scope of the legislation which had preceded this contract.

To show that the Western Union Telegraph Company had full knowledge as to what was claimed, I call attention to section 3 of this contract which is so sacred in the eyes of the gentleman from New York. I find there this language:

> The railway company, so far as it legally may, hereby grants and agrees to assure to the telegraph company, etc.

Thus the very question at issue was reserved in this contract. The managers of the railroad company had before them this opinion of these lawyers, their own attorneys, that they had no authority whatever to enter into a contract of this kind; and by the language of the contract itself they recognized the limitations on their power in this respect.

But again, the gentleman says, rights were acquired under previous contracts and by other telegraph companies which have been absorbed by the Western Union. I call attention to the closing sections of this contract of 1881, where the Union Pacific Railroad Company expressly dissents from the claims which are made by the Western Union Telegraph Company, and denies that it has any lawful contract with it by which it can control and operate these telegraph lines to the exclusion of the railroad.

Mr. Speaker, the lateness of the hour admonishes me that I should draw my remarks to a close. This bill is a matter of prime importance to the people of this country. When these acts were passed this country was going through a crucial period, the like of which has not been seen in any other nation, ancient or modern. These acts were intended, not for the benefit of private individuals, but for the purpose of cementing and uniting the different portions of this great country.

The object was, by aid of steam and electricity, to make the people upon the Pacific coast and in the southwestern portion of our country brethren and friends with those in the Middle and New England States. Congress hedged about these grants in a manner which they supposed would protect the people. They did all that could be done. It has only been by the inertness of subsequent Congresses that these great corporations like the Western Union have been able to make contracts in violation of law, of justice, and of the commercial rights of mankind.

I would not take a dollar from the Western Union Telegraph Company, but when it makes a contract which under the law of the land is unlawful, when and by virtue of which it claims a right inimical to the interest of the American people, then I say, as a representative of a portion of those people in this Congress, that it is my duty to do what I can to check its growing power and to see that these land-grant companies shall be compelled to carry out their charter obligations and duties to the American people.

Mr. BUCKALEW. Mr. Speaker, I should like to inquire of the gentleman who spoke last, whether I am in error in supposing these railroad charters reserved the power in Congress to amend, alter, and repeal the charters which they have granted to these companies?

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Yes, that power is reserved to Congress in every one of these charters. I did not speak on that point of the case, because it was gone over so fully by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PETERS] in his remarks.

Mr. BUCKALEW. I submit, then, the debate on the abstract power of Congress to pass this bill is irrelevant, because no doctrine is clearer or of more general acceptance than that where the power is reserved by Congress or a State to amend, alter, or repeal a charter under the provision of the Constitution and the decisions of the courts, the question of the sacredness of a contract is entirely out of the question. I do not see, therefore, why this debate in its future progress in the House need cover that field of inquiry. If this power is reserved by Congress it holds it independently. The simple question is whether the proposed amendment to the charters of these companies is obnoxious to some other objection?

Mr. WHITE, of New York. I feel my sense of obligation to the gentleman in outlining to me the course I should pursue in this matter, and if I do not take his advice it will not be from want of personal respect for him, but because of difference of judgment.

Mr. BUCKALEW. I may be allowed to say the observations just made by the gentleman from New York were not called for by anything said by me. My remarks were general, and had no reference to him more than to any other member of the House.

Mr. DOCKERY. Before submitting the motion to adjourn, I ask, by unanimous consent, that members desiring to do so may have the privilege of printing their remarks on this bill in the RECORD.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

Mr. DOCKERY. I had intended to say something on the first section of the bill, but as the hour is growing late I will defer it for the present. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at 11 o'clock p. m.) the House adjourned.

PRIVATE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED AND REFERRED.

Under the rule private bills and joint resolutions of the following titles were introduced and referred, as indicated below:

By Mr. ATKINSON: A bill (H. R. 7316) granting a pension to Mary P. Thompson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BELDEN: A bill (H. R. 7317) for the relief of Mrs. Jane Lester, widow of William H. A. Lester—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7318) for the relief of Richard Good—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7319) for the relief of Emory R. Seward—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BLISS: A bill (H. R. 7320) for the relief of Margaret Malloy—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7321) granting a pension to Phebe A. Romaine, widow of Joseph Romaine—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CHEADLE: A bill (H. R. 7322) granting a pension to James G. W. Hardy—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7323) granting a pension to Robert C. Spurlock—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FORD: A bill (H. R. 7324) to remove the charge of desertion and to grant an honorable discharge to Elijah J. Mingis—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. GLASS: A bill (H. R. 7325) directing the Secretary of War to remove the charge of desertion from all soldiers mustered into the Seventh Tennessee Infantry, and for other purposes—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. GLOVER: A bill (H. R. 7326) for the relief of Frank Backof—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7327) for the relief of D. H. Silver—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7328) for the relief of the officers and crew of the United States steamers Forest Rose and Argosy, late of the Red River expedition—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7329) for the relief of O. H. Applegate—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7330) for the relief of Frederick Linnes and others—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7331) granting a pension to John F. Smith—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7332) granting a pension to Michael Caulfield—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HATCH: A bill (H. R. 7333) granting a pension to Joseph S. Wickham—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LIND: A bill (H. R. 7334) granting a pension to Mary A. Canfield, widow of Job A. Canfield—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LODGE: A bill (H. R. 7335) granting a pension to Mrs. Zelinda Hill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McCOMAS: A bill (H. R. 7336) for the relief of Ellery C. Folger—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SENEY: A bill (H. R. 7337) granting a pension to Lydia Harringer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7338) for the relief of John P. Howenstine—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. STONE, of Kentucky: A bill (H. R. 7339) for the relief of James Oakley—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7340) authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at Hickman, Ky.—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. G. M. THOMAS: A bill (H. R. 7341) for the relief of Eli Davis—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. VOORHEES: A bill (H. R. 7342) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to refund to Charles A. McDaniel the sum of $2,959.55—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WALKER: A bill (H. R. 7343) relieving William Howard of the disability of a prior homestead entry—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. WICKHAM: A bill (H. R. 7344) granting a pension to Henrietta Waldron—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. STEELE: A bill (H. R. 7345) for the relief of Samuel J. Jackson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Changes in the reference of bills improperly referred were made in the following cases, namely:

A bill (H. R. 6406) for the relief of Thomas McDonald—from the Committee on Invalid Pensions to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 359) for the relief of John S. Boswell—from the Committee on Claims to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 3876) for the relief of Jeremiah Rumsey—from the Committee on Pensions to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 2956) to repeal section 4716 of the Revised Statutes—from the Committee on Pensions to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 2576) granting a pension to John F. Neville—from the Committee on Pensions to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk, under the rule, and referred as follows:

By Mr. ADAMS: Petition of the Cigar-Makers' International Union, No. 15, of Chicago, Ill., for speedy settlement of the internal-revenue tax reduction question—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. C. H. ALLEN: Petition of John F. Kimball, Adams & Co., Putnam & Co., and 80 others; of William Shepard, F. Nickerson, and others; of W. M. Sawyer, E. B. Patch, Aug. Fels, and others; of Charles E. Carter, F. P. Spalding, and others, and of Staples Bros., P. O. Heam, and others, citizens of Lowell, Mass., in aid of a public building for that city—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. E. P. ALLEN: Protest of the West Branch Lumberman's Exchange, of Williamsport, Pa., against the repeal of the duty on lumber—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. A. R. ANDERSON: Petition of the faculty of Amity College, College Springs, Page County, Iowa, favoring fuller security to literary property, and asking the speedy enactment of an international copyright law—to the Committee on Patents.

Also, resolution of the Republican Club of Creston, Union County, Iowa, for a pension to each Union soldier who served in the Mexican or the late war, on sole condition of an honorable discharge—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, joint resolution of the General Assembly of Iowa, as to when Federal judgment shall constitute a lien on real estate—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Dorus M. Fox, for pension relief—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. C. S. BAKER: Petition of citizens of Rome, and of citizens of Rochester, N. Y., in favor of the bill to reduce letter postage—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. BARNES (by request): Petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Georgia, for the repeal of the internal-revenue tax on all alcoholic liquors—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of William Gibson, administrator of Sterling Gibson, of Warren County, Georgia, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BINGHAM: Petition for reduction of letter postage from 2 cents to 1 cent an ounce—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. C. R. BRECKINRIDGE: Petition of J. A. McEven, heir of A. M. McEven, of Pope County, Arkansas, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. W. C. P. BRECKINRIDGE: Petition of the Typographical Unions of Frankfort and Lexington, Ky., asking that the employés of the Government Printing Office be paid the rates paid prior to March 4, 1877—to the Committee on Printing.

By Mr. T. H. B. BROWNE: Petition of Capt. John E. Parker and other citizens of Accomack County, Virginia, for continuing the improvement of Onancock River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. BUCHANAN: Joint resolution requesting an appropriation for the removal of Smith's or Windmill Island from the Delaware River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. BUTTERWORTH: Petition of the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce and Merchants' Exchange of Cincinnati, Ohio, against the importation of adulterated articles of food—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. FELIX CAMPBELL: Six numerously signed petitions from the Society of Old Brooklynites, of Brooklyn, N. Y., for the erection in that city of a monument to commemorate the prison-ship martyrs—to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. CAREY: Petition and memorial of residents of Sundance, Wyo., for a land office at that place—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. CASWELL: Petition of the faculty of Racine College, for the passage of an international copyright law—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. COGSWELL: Petition of the heirs of Michael Coughlin, a sailor in the American Navy, in the war of the Revolution, for certain prize-money—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. COX: Memorial of the mayor, aldermen, and commonalty of New York, praying for the passage of a bill to pay the claim of said city for principal and interest on bonds issued to the Union defense committee of that city in 1861 and 1862 for necessary equipments, etc., of troops engaged in the service in pursuance of the requisition of the President of the United States—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, memorial of the authorities of Sing Sing, N. Y., for discontinuing the present system of appropriations for public buildings, and favoring a general appropriation bill for Government post-office buildings in every city and town of the Union of 3,000 inhabitants or over—to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. CUTCHEON: Petition of citizens of Pentwater, Mich., in favor of increase of pay of crews in Life-Saving Service—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. ENLOE: Petition of Martha A. Robinson, administratrix of William L. Robinson, of Madison County, and of George W. Differ, administrator of Moses Differ, of Henderson County, Tennessee, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. ERMENTROUT: Petition of West Branch Lumberman's Exchange of Williamsport, Pa., against free lumber—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, memorial of the Reading (Pa.) Board of Trade and Labor Council, against abolishing the internal-revenue tax on cigars—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, memorial of James Vick, for reduction of postage on seeds—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, memorial of E. L. Goff and others, for reduction of postage on seeds, and for fractional currency—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. FISHER: Petition of Frank Emerick and 39 others, and of W. A. French and 18 others, for a harbor of refuge at False Presque Isle, Michigan—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. FORD: Petition of V. W. Seely, Jacob Baar, and others; of R. B. Vanderhoef, W. S. Walker, and others, and letter of V. W. Seely, for increased compensation for keepers and surfmen in the Life-Saving Service—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, memorial of the Grand Rapids (Mich.) Board of Trade, for a survey of a water route from said city to Lake Michigan—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. FORNEY: Petition of citizens of St. Clair County, Alabama, for national aid to education and in favor of the Blair bill—to the Committee on Education.

By Mr. GEST: Memorial from the cities of Bushnell and Monmouth, Ill., concerning the erection of Government buildings—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. GIFFORD: Petition of Lincoln Evans and 20 others, of William M. Penwell and 10 others, of A. A. Faust and 20 others, of Rudolph Clander and 13 others, of James O. Dean and 35 others, of C. Christianson and 12 others, of C. R. Waters and 14 others, of George Bainey and 13 others, of John Dickinson and 15 others, of S. W. Melcher and 20 others, of Lewis Peterson and 10 others, of W. F. Lott and 8 others, of Charles G. Brown and 95 others, of P. E. Anderson and 20 others, and of W. A. Drake and 8 others, citizens of Dakota, for a postal-telegraph system—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. GLASS: Petition of James Burress, of Gibson County, and of H. H. Mahon, administrators of Josiah B. Moss, of Crockett County, Tennessee, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. GLOVER: Petition of workingmen employed in the manufacturing of painted and stained glass, relative to tariff on stained glass—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of citizens of the Ninth district of Missouri, for a Government system of telegraph—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. GROUT: Resolutions of Pomona Grange, of Royalton, Vt., for reduction of postage on seeds, bulbs, etc.—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. HAYES: Petition of J. M. Huston Post, No. 394, of Victor, Iowa, for a service-pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HIRES: Joint resolution for an appropriation for the removal of Smith's or Windmill Island from the Delaware River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. S. I. HOPKINS (by request): Petition of the West Branch Lumberman's Exchange, against placing lumber on the free-list—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. JACKSON: Petition of David F. Enoch and 35 others, citizens of Washington County, Pennsylvania, against the admission of Utah as a State—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. J. T. JOHNSTON: Petition of J. L. Sebring and 57 others, soldiers and citizens of Sullivan County, Indiana, for the passage of House bill 5052, or a similar one—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. LAIRD: Petition of faculty of Doane College, Crete, Nebr., for removal of duty on books—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of same, for an international copyright law—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. LYMAN: Papers in support of House bill No. 7014, for relief of John Dungan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McCOMAS: Petition of the faculty of Frederick College, Maryland, for an international copyright—to the Committee on Patents.

Also, petition of the heirs of Jesse Hinckle, of Alleghany County, Maryland, for payment of their claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, memorial of the Modern Language Association of America, for repeal of tariff on foreign books—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Henry Show, of Washington County, Maryland, for payment of his war claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. McKINLEY: Petition of citizens of Bucyrus, and of Wyandotte and Carey, Ohio, for speedy action on the petition for protection to the wool-growers and woolen manufacturers of this country—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, joint resolution of the Legislature of Ohio, urging the passage of Senate bill No. 260, to reimburse the several States for interest paid on war loans, and for other purposes—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, memorial of the Society of Friends in conference at Richmond, Ind., September, 1887—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. MAISH: Petition of Mary Gibson, for increase of her pension—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. MILLIKEN: Petition of C. M. Bailey and others, for the settlement of international disputes by arbitration—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. MOFFITT: Memorial of the Eastern Iron Ore Association, protesting against any reduction from the present duty on iron ore—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. NEAL: Petition of W. R. Henson, administrator of John Henson, of Sequatchie County, Tennessee, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Mr. NORWOOD: Petition of Mary E. Cullane and Gertrude Power, of Harry Hayne, and of Levi Lilienthal, of Georgia, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. O'DONNELL: Petition of the Central City Soap Company, of Jackson, Mich., G. F. D. Bennett, president, for removal of the duty on tin-plate—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, protest of the West Branch Lumberman's Exchange, of Williamsport, Pa., against the repeal of the duty on lumber—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CHARLES O'NEILL: Joint memorial of the Board of Trade, Commercial, Maritime, Drug, Grocers', and Importers' Exchanges, Vessel-Owners and Captains' Association of Philadelphia, Pa., urging the removal of Smith's and Windmill Islands and the shoals, etc., so as to improve the channel of the Delaware River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. OSBORNE: Petition of William Schaus, in regard to the tariff on imported works of art—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. PEEL: Petition of Samuel Gollaher, heir of Henry Gollaher, of Washington County, Arkansas, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. PENINGTON: Petition of William Schaus, on the subject of the tariff—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. RICHARDSON: Petition of P. M. Butler, administrator of T. O. Butler, of Rutherford County, and of Clement A. Featherstone, of Franklin County, Tennessee, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. C. A. RUSSELL: Memorial from the authorities of Danielsonville, Conn., in favor of erecting Government post-office buildings in places of 3,000 inhabitants or over—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. SENEY: Petition of A. G. Brown and 20 others, of Seneca County, Ohio, favoring the wool schedule as agreed upon by the Wool Growers and Woolen Manufacturers' Convention at Washington, January 14, 1888—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, joint resolution of the General Assembly of Ohio, favoring Senate bill No. 260, to reimburse the States for interest paid on war loans—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. SHAW (by request): Petition of William Schaus, of New York, for placing imported paintings and sculptures on the free-list—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HENRY SMITH: Petition of Lafayette Brockway, for increase of pension (House bill 6804)—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SPRINGER: Address to Congress by the constitutional convention of Dakota, relative to division of said Territory and its admission into the Union—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. STAHLNECKER: Petition of the West Branch Lumberman's Exchange, of Williamsport, Pa., respecting their interests and tariff changes—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. STEPHENSON: Memorial of the authorities of Stevens Point, Wis., for a general appropriation for erecting public buildings in cities of 3,000 or over—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. J. W. STEWART: Petition of Thomas Ryan and others, to increase pay of court bailiffs in southern district of New York—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. G. M. THOMAS: Petition of Eli Davis, to accompany bill for his relief—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition to accompany bill for the relief of John G. Harmon—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. VANDEVER: A bill for the survey of the harbor of San Buenaventura, Cal., and an estimate of the cost of making it a harbor of refuge—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. WHITTHORNE: Petition of Mrs. Canyada Brewer, of Wayne County, Tennessee, for reference of her claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WICKHAM: Memorial of authorities of Mansfield, Ohio, for a general act for the erection of post-office buildings in cities and towns of 3,000 inhabitants or over—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

The following petitions for an increase of compensation of fourth-class postmasters were severally referred to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads:

By Mr. HOGG: Of A. J. Cunningham and 23 others, of Pleasants County, West Virginia.

By Mr. HOUK: Of 31 citizens of Sevier County, Tennessee.

By Mr. KENNEDY: Of Francis Harper and 54 other citizens of Logan County, Ohio.

By Mr. WHITTHORNE: Of James McGhee and others, of Wayne County, Tennessee.

The following petitions, praying for the enactment of a law providing temporary aid for common schools, to be disbursed on the basis of illiteracy, were severally referred to the Committee on Education:

By Mr. C. H. ALLEN: Of 327 citizens of Middlesex County, Massachusetts.

By Mr. DAVENPORT: Of 232 citizens of Ontario County, New York.

By Mr. ELLIOTT: Of 423 citizens of Beaufort County, South Carolina.

By Mr. FLOOD: Of 280 citizens of Schuyler County, New York.

By Mr. HAUGEN: Of 259 citizens of Pierce County, Wisconsin.

By Mr. MAISH: Of 390 citizens of York County, Pennsylvania.

By Mr. MORROW: Of 112 citizens of San Francisco, Cal.

By Mr. NELSON: Of 155 citizens of Morrison County, Minnesota.

By Mr. PAYSON: Of 132 citizens of Livingston County, Illinois.

By Mr. SAWYER: Of 483 citizens of Genesee County, New York.

By Mr. SHAW: Of 220 citizens of Baltimore County, Maryland.

By Mr. WICKHAM: Of 599 citizens of Lorain County, Ohio.

By Mr. THOMAS WILSON: Of 100 citizens of Fillmore County, Minnesota.

The following petitions, asking for the passage of the bill prohibiting the manufacture, sale, and importation of all alcoholic beverages in the District of Columbia, were severally referred to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic:

By Mr. DINGLEY: Of 123 citizens of the Second district of Maine.

By Mr. GRANGER (by request): Of 254 citizens of the Fourth district of Connecticut.

By Mr. HAUGEN: Of 109 citizens of the Eighth district of Wisconsin.

By Mr. MAISH: Of 100 citizens of the District of Columbia.

By Mr. MOORE. Of 129 citizens of the District of Columbia.

By Mr. ROWELL: Of 172 citizens of the Fourteenth district of Illinois.

By Mr. WEBER: Of 135 citizens of the Thirty-third district of New York.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, February 17, 1888.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by Rev. Dr. BRUSH, president of Dakota University.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

IMPROVEMENT OF PATUXENT RIVER, MARYLAND.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, reports of examinations and surveys of Patuxent River, in Maryland; which was referred to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed.

SENATE BILL REFERRED.

The SPEAKER, under the rule, laid before the House the bill (S. 371) to aid in the establishment and temporary support of common schools; which was read a first and second time, and referred to the Committee on Education.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. PENINGTON, indefinitely, on account of sickness in his family.

To Mr. HIESTAND, for six days, on account of important business.

ALABAMA AGRICULTURAL AND MECHANICAL COLLEGE.

Mr. OATES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to discharge the Committee of the Whole House from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 4082) for the relief of the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Alabama, and put it upon its passage.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Alabama that, as shown by the Journal, a bill comes over this morning as unfinished business to be first disposed of.

Mr. OATES. I ask unanimous consent that this be considered now, as it will take but a very short time.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read subject to objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to relieve the Agricultural and Mechanical College at Auburn, Ala., from all money responsibility for so much of the ordnance and ordnance stores issued to said college under its bond dated February 9, 1886, as was destroyed by fire on June 24, 1887.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. BURROWS. I would like some explanation of this, first.

Mr. OATES. This bill, I think, will require but a very brief explanation. The Agricultural and Mechanical College of Alabama obtained from the War Department 135—I think was the number—muskets for the use of the cadets in that school.

Last summer the main building of the college was destroyed by fire. This bill is simply to relieve the college from liability for this loss; that is all. It is the unanimous report of the Committee on Military Affairs.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. OATES moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

REPORT ON THE PANAMA CANAL.

Mr. WHITTHORNE, by unanimous consent, introduced a concurrent resolution to authorize the printing of 3,000 copies of Lieut. C. C. Rogers's report on the Panama Canal; which was referred to the Committee on Printing.

FICTITIOUS TRANSACTIONS IN AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. Speaker, on Monday last I introduced a bill by request, House bill 7051, entitled "A bill to prohibit fictitious and gambling transactions on the price of articles produced by American farm industry." I indorsed on the bill the request that it be referred to the Committee on Agriculture. As I said on a previous occasion, when this subject was introduced, I did not hear the Chair change the reference of that bill to the Committee on the Judiciary.

I desire to call the attention of the Chair to the fact that I was governed in this reference by the action of the then occupant of the chair, on January 23, 1888, in referring House bill 5689, a bill introduced by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. ENLOE], entitled "A bill to punish dealings in futures in agricultural products," and which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture. The subject-matter of these two bills is identical, and the Committee on Agriculture having the subject-matter of the bill of the gentleman from Tennessee before them, when the subsequent bill was presented by me I asked that it also be referred to the same committee, being upon the same subject, so that both might be considered together. Now, if it is the intention of the House to adhere to the reference of these matters to the Committee on the Judiciary, then it follows that both bills should go to that committee.

Mr. REED. Is this debatable?

The SPEAKER. It is not. The Chair understood the gentleman to be making a statement simply.

Mr. HATCH. I am stating the facts for the information of the Chair and the House.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Missouri that it was of the impression that the bill introduced by the gentleman from Tennessee was referred to the Committee on Agriculture by a vote of the House.

Mr. HATCH. I find by reference to the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of that date the following:

FUTURES IN AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS.

Mr. ENLOE introduced a bill (H. R. 5689) to punish dealing in futures in agricultural products; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Agriculture, and ordered to be printed.

There is nothing in the RECORD to show that the House took any action further than the action of the Speaker in referring it to that committee in the presence of the House. But the gentleman from Tennessee can speak for himself on that point.

Mr. OATES. The motion of the gentleman from Missouri to change this reference was stopped by my objection, or rather by my calling for the reading of the bill. I have since examined the bill, and while it is properly referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, yet it might have been referred, and very properly, to the Committee on Agriculture.

It is of that character where either of those committees may take jurisdiction, and I withdraw any objection to the change of reference.

Mr. ENLOE. I wish to make a statement as to the reference of the bill which I introduced. I called the attention of the chairman of the Judiciary Committee to it and submitted it for his inspection, and he suggested the proper reference was to the Committee on Agriculture. I indorsed on the bill that reference, and it was made.

The SPEAKER. The Chair still thinks, under the rule of the House, the bill to which the gentleman from Missouri refers belongs to the Committee on the Judiciary; but that gentleman moves to refer it to the Committee on Agriculture. Of course the House has power to send it to the Committee on Agriculture.

The motion of Mr. HATCH was agreed to, and the bill was referred to the Committee on Agriculture.

SIGNAL CORPS.

Mr. CUTCHEON, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. 7346) to increase the efficiency of the Signal Corps of the Army; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

LOUIS JACOBSON.

Mr. FELTON. I ask unanimous consent to take from the Private Calendar, for present consideration, the bill (H. R. 1158) for the relief of Louis Jacobson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the sum of $217.70 be, and hereby is, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to reimburse Louis Jacobson, postmaster at Redwood City, San Mateo County, State of California, for money stolen from the post-office at that place on the night of August 21, A. D. 1886, the said sum of money so stolen being the proceeds of stamps sold by him at said place.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. RANDALL. I do not want to make an arbitrary objection, but I think the right to object should be reserved, that we may inquire whether there has been a report by a committee in favor of this claim.

Mr. FELTON. The bill is favorably reported by the Committee on Claims. I ask that the report be read.

Mr. RANDALL. Is the report unanimous?

Mr. FELTON. Yes, sir.

The report (by Mr. LAIDLAW) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1158) for the relief of L. Jacobson, beg leave to submit the following report:

The claimant was postmaster at Redwood City, Cal.; his post-office was broken open by burglars August 21, 1886, and $624.78 of postage-stamps, postal funds, and money-order funds were stolen by the burglars.

The burglary was examined into by a post-office inspector, and it appeared from his report that all of the stamps and funds aforesaid were kept in an iron safe, which had been broken open, and that there was no negligence on the part of the claimant in keeping the stamps and funds.

That he made a claim on the Department for credit for his loss as follows:

For postage-stamps	$294.30
For postal funds	217.70
For money-order funds	112.78
Total	624.78

The Post-Office Department gave him credit for the $294.30 for postage-stamps; also for $112.78 for money-order funds, less $20, for which they did not give him credit, because it was not deposited promptly, as was claimed; but the Department refused to give him credit for the $217.70 for postal funds, upon the sole ground that there was no provision of law under which the Postmaster-General could allow him the credit.

The claimant made oath that the postal funds amounted to the sum now claimed, to wit, $217.70; and that is about the amount he would reasonably have on hand, compared with his former sales of stamps; and the committee find that he lost said sum of $217.70, and that his claim is just and reasonable and should be paid; and they respectfully recommend that the bill do pass.

Mr. FELTON. I simply desire to say, in addition to what has just been read, that all that is set forth in the report is a matter of record in the courts of the State of California. There is no question as to the justice of the claim.

Mr. RANDALL. Does the Post-Office Department recommend this bill?

Mr. FELTON. No, sir; the Post-Office Department has made no recommendation.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. FELTON moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. LANHAM. I call for the regular order.

Mr. HENDERSON, of North Carolina. I wish to offer a resolution for reference.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is demanded by the gentleman from Texas.

SUGAR TRUST IN NEW YORK.

Mr. MILLIKEN. I rise to a privileged matter. On the 7th day of this month I introduced a resolution in the House directing the Secretary of the Treasury, through the collector of the port of New York, to make an investigation of the sugar trust in New York. That resolution was referred to the Committee on Manufactures. The committee has not yet reported; and from the best information which I can get I do not see any prospect that they will report it. I move that the committee be instructed to report that resolution back to the House on next Monday.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maine, as a matter of privilege, moves to instruct the Committee on Manufactures to report back next Monday a resolution of inquiry directed to the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. RANDALL. The rule requires that and should be obeyed.

The SPEAKER. The rule requires the report to be made in one week. The gentleman from Maine says the report has not been made, and he therefore makes this motion.

The question being put, the motion was agreed to.

Mr. MILLIKEN. On the suggestion of one of the members of the committee, that the chairman of the Committee on Manufactures is not present, and that the committee can not get together as soon as next Monday, I desire to amend the motion by substituting "Friday."

Mr. MCKINNEY. I desire to make a statement. The Committee on Manufactures did not have a meeting this morning, but adjourned for one week, and will assemble at half-past 11 o'clock next Friday. It is for that reason I asked to have the motion modified so that when we get together we may act upon the resolution.

There was no objection, and the motion was modified by substituting "Friday" for "Monday."

URGENT DEFICIENCY BILL.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is demanded, which is the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 6437) to provide for certain of the most urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the services of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1887, and for other purposes. The pending question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. O'NEILL], which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

After line 9, page 18, to insert:
"And the Public Printer is hereby directed to rigidly enforce the provisions of the eight-hour law in the department under his charge."

The SPEAKER. On this amendment the yeas and nays have been ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 182, nays 53, not voting 88; as follows:

YEAS—182.

Adams,	Dalzell,	La Follette,	Romeis,
Allen, C. H.	Darlington,	Laidlaw,	Rowell,
Allen, E. P.	Davidson, R. H. M.	Lane,	Ryan,
Anderson, A. R.	Davis,	Lind,	Sawyer,
Anderson, G. A.	De Lano,	Lodge,	Scott,
Arnold,	Dingley,	Lyman,	Scull,
Atkinson,	Dockery,	Lynch,	Shaw,
Baker, C. S.	Dorsey,	Macdonald,	Smith,
Baker, Jehu	Dunham,	Mahoney,	Sowden,
Barnes,	Farquhar,	Mansur,	Spooner,
Bingham,	Felton,	Mason,	Springer,
Bliss,	Finley,	Matson,	Stahlnecker,
Blount,	Fuller,	McAdoo,	Steele,
Boothman,	Gaines,	McComas,	Stewart, Charles
Bound,	Gallinger,	McCormick,	Stewart, J. W.
Boutelle,	Gear,	McCreary,	Stockdale,
Bowden,	Gest,	McCullogh,	Stone of Ky.
Bowen,	Glover,	McKenna,	Struble,
Breckinridge, C. R.	Greenman,	McKinley,	Taylor, E. B.
Brewer,	Grout,	McKinney,	Taylor, J. D.
Brower,	Guenther,	McShane,	Thomas, G. M.
Brown, C. E.	Harmer,	Merriman,	Thomas, O. B.
Browne, T. H. B.	Hatch,	Montgomery,	Thompson, A. C.
Browne, T. M.	Haugen,	Morrill,	Tracey,
Brumm,	Hayden,	Morrow,	Turner, E. J.
Bryce,	Heard,	Neal,	Vance,
Buchanan,	Henderson, D. B.	Nichols,	Vandever,
Burrows,	Henderson, J. S.	O'Donnell,	Wade,
Butler,	Hermann,	O'Ferrall,	Walker,
Bynum,	Hires,	O'Neall, J. H.	Warner,
Campbell, Felix	Hitt,	O'Neill, Charles	Weaver,
Campbell, J. E.	Hogg,	O'Neill, J. J.	Weber,
Campbell, T. J.	Holman,	Osborne,	Wheeler,
Candler,	Holmes,	Outhwaite,	White, S. V.
Cannon,	Hopkins, A. J.	Owen,	Whiting, J. R.
Caswell,	Hopkins, S. I.	Patton,	Wickham,
Cheadle,	Houk,	Payson,	Wilber,
Clark,	Hovey,	Perkins,	Wilkinson,
Cockran,	Howard,	Peters,	Williams,
Cogswell,	Jackson,	Phelan,	Wilson, Thomas
Compton,	Johnston, J. T.	Phelps,	Wilson, W. L.
Cooper,	Johnston, T. D.	Pidcock,	Yardley,
Cowles,	Kean,	Post,	Yoder,
Cox,	Kelley,	Randall,	Yost.
Crouse,	Kennedy,	Reed,
Cutcheon,	Kerr,	Rockwell,

NAYS—53.

Abbott,	Dougherty,	Hutton,	Perry,
Allen, J. M.	Dunn,	Jones,	Rice,
Anderson, C. L.	Elliott,	Laffoon,	Richardson,
Blanchard,	Enloe,	Lanham,	Robertson,
Breckinridge, WCP	Forney,	Latham,	Rogers,
Buckalew,	Glass,	Martin,	Rowland,
Burnes,	Granger,	McClammy,	Sayers,
Clements,	Grimes,	McRae,	Stewart, J. D.
Cobb,	Hall,	Mills,	Taulbee,
Cothran,	Hare,	Moore,	Turner, H. G.
Crain,	Hemphill,	Morgan,	Washington,
Crisp,	Hooker,	Newton,	Whitthorne.
Culberson,	Hudd,	Oates
Dargan,		Peel

NOT VOTING—88.

Anderson, J. A.	Butterworth,	Ermentrout,	Hayes,
Bacon,	Carleton,	Fisher,	Henderson, T. J.
Bankhead,	Caruth,	Fitch,	Herbert,
Barry,	Catchings,	Flood,	Hiestand,
Bayne,	Chipman,	Foran,	Hopkins, S. T.
Belden,	Clardy,	Ford,	Hunter,
Belmont,	Collins,	French,	Ketcham,
Biggs,	Conger,	Funston,	Kilgore,
Bland,	Cummings,	Gay,	Lagan,
Brown, J. R.	Davenport,	Gibson,	Laird,
Bunnell,	Davidson, A. C.	Goff,	Landes,
Burnett,	Dibble,	Grosvenor,	Lawler,
Lee,	Norwood,	Seney,	Thomas, J. R.
Lehlbach,	Nutting,	Sherman,	Thompson, T. L.
Long,	Parker,	Shively,	Tillman,
Maffett,	Penington,	Simmons,	Townshend,
Maish,	Plumb,	Snyder,	West,
McMillin,	Pugsley,	Spinola,	White, J. B.
Milliken,	Rayner,	Stephenson,	Whiting, William
Moffitt,	Russell, C. A.	Stone of Mo.	Wilkins,
Morse,	Russell, J. E.	Symes,	Wise,
Nelson,	Rusk,	Tarsney,	Woodburn.

So the amendment was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. LANHAM, the reading of the names of members voting was dispensed with.

The following-named members were announced as paired until further notice:

Mr. TOWNSHEND with Mr. GROSVENOR.
Mr. BACON with Mr. DAVENPORT.
Mr. WILKINS with Mr. GOFF.
Mr. PENINGTON with Mr. HIESTAND.
Mr. ERMENTROUT with Mr. BELDEN.
Mr. FORAN with Mr. KETCHAM.
Mr. BARRY with Mr. PUGSLEY.
Mr. CHAPMAN with Mr. COOPER.
Mr. TILLMAN with Mr. PARKER.
Mr. SPINOLA with Mr. THOMAS, of Illinois.
Mr. TARSNEY with Mr. PATTON.
Mr. STONE, of Missouri, with Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas.

The following were announced as paired until Monday next:

Mr. CLARDY with Mr. RUSSELL, of Connecticut.
Mr. CUMMINGS with Mr. MOFFITT.

The following were announced as paired for this day:

Mr. HERBERT with Mr. FITCH.
Mr. MILLIKEN with Mr. DIBBLE.
Mr. CARUTH with Mr. JOHN R. BROWN.
Mr. SENEY with Mr. LONG.

The following were announced as paired on this vote:

Mr. NORWOOD with Mr. HUNTER.
Mr. RUSSELL, of Massachusetts, with Mr. BUNNELL.

Mr. MILLIKEN. Mr. Speaker, I am paired for this day with Mr. DIBBLE. If I were not paired, I should vote "ay."

Mr. MOFFITT. Mr. Speaker, I am paired with Mr. CUMMINGS. If I were not, I should vote "ay."

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. BURNES moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. LONG, for one week, on account of important business.

To Mr. JOHN R. BROWN, indefinitely, on account of extreme illness in his family.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. LANHAM. I call for the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the call of committees for reports.

Mr. LANHAM. I move to dispense with the call.

The motion was agreed to.

INVESTIGATION OF INTERNAL-REVENUE FRAUDS.

Mr. HENDERSON, of North Carolina, offered the following; which was read, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations:

Whereas the Attorney-General in his last annual report states, for the information of Congress, that "a fund which was annually appropriated for years for the use of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in the investigation of frauds has been reduced largely, and the service of the bureau has to a limited extent been thrown upon the judiciary appropriation in the matter of making arrests of illicit distillers. * * * The expenses are payable from fees and expenses of marshals, as employés of the revenue agent are temporarily commissioned as deputy marshals:" Therefore,

Resolved by the House of Representatives, That the Attorney-General be called upon to inform the House in what districts, to what persons, and in what amount and for what purposes such expenses have been paid or incurred, and by what authority of law any portion of the judiciary appropriation has been used in paying the employés of revenue agents.

SOUTHERN JUDICIAL DISTRICT OF GEORGIA.

Mr. GRIMES, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. 7347) to create a new division in the southern judicial district of Georgia; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed.

BRIDGE ACROSS TRAIL CREEK, INDIANA.

Mr. DUNHAM, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 2097) to authorize the construction of a bridge across Trail Creek, in the city of Michigan City, State of Indiana; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

BRIDGES ACROSS RED RIVER, DAKOTA.

Mr. DUNHAM also, from the Committee on Commerce, reported, as a substitute for House bill 4421, a bill (H. R. 7348) granting to the city of Grand Forks, Dak., the right to build two free bridges outside of the city across the Red River; which was read a first and second time, referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

The original bill (H. R. 4421) was laid on the table.

BOUNDARY LINE BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND MEXICO.

Mr. CRAIN, by unanimous consent, introduced a joint resolution (H. Res. 112) requesting the President of the United States to negotiate with the Government of Mexico for the creation of an international commission to determine, according to the rules of the Washington convention of November 12, 1884, all questions touching the boundary line between the United States and Mexico where it follows the bed of the Rio Grande and Colorado Rivers; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. LANHAM. I call for the regular order.

NATHANIEL M'KAY AND OTHERS.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is advised that a bill comes over from last Friday, with the previous question ordered upon its passage. Therefore it now comes up for consideration. It is the bill (H. R. 2477) for the relief of Nathaniel McKay and others.

Mr. LANHAM. Do I understand the Chair to hold that the first thing in order now is the vote upon the passage of House bill No. 2477, which was considered in Committee of the Whole on last Friday, reported to the House, and advanced, I believe, as far as the engrossment and third reading, or probably the previous question may have been ordered on the passage?

The SPEAKER. If the previous question was ordered on the passage of the bill, it comes up now for consideration. If not, it will come up as unfinished business when the Committee of the Whole rises to-day. The Chair will cause the Journal to be examined. [A pause.] The Journal shows that the previous question was ordered on the passage of the bill. The Chair was under the impression that it had been ordered on the engrossment and third reading.

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire to call attention to the proceedings on this bill as they appear in the RECORD. I think there was a mistake in the Journal at that time. The proceedings as reported in the RECORD will be found on page 1128. The previous question was ordered on the engrossment and third reading of the bill, not upon its final passage. This is what the RECORD shows. I ask that the proceedings as they appear in the RECORD be read.

The SPEAKER. The Journal of the House is the official record of its proceedings.

Mr. SPRINGER. This is also an official record of its proceedings; and if a mistake has occurred I think the House should not act on that mistake. I am satisfied that the Official Reporters have reported everything that was done and said at the time. I ask to have read what the RECORD shows the proceedings to have been.

Mr. DINGLEY. I call the attention of the gentleman from Illinois to the fact that the statement was made at the time to the House by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MILLS] that the previous question had been ordered on the passage of the bill, and that the bill would come up the first thing to-day.

Mr. SPRINGER. The gentleman from Texas made that statement, but he was mistaken, as will be seen by the reading of the RECORD.

Mr. LANHAM. I make the point——

The SPEAKER. Of course the Chair is governed by the Journal of the House; but the gentleman from Illinois may have the RECORD read. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

NATHANIEL M'KAY AND OTHERS.

The next bill reported from the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 2477) for the relief of Nathaniel McKay and the executors of Donald McKay.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I move the previous question on the bill and amendments.

The previous question was ordered.

The amendments reported by the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and was read the third time by its title.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is now on the passage of the bill.

Mr. SPRINGER. I call for the yeas and nays on that question.

On ordering the yeas and nays there were—ayes 15.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair one-fifth have not voted in favor of the call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. SPRINGER. I ask for tellers on ordering the yeas and nays.

Tellers were not ordered, only 18 voting in favor thereof.

Mr. SPRINGER. I demand the reading of the engrossed bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That is in order; the gentleman has the right to make that demand. The previous question has been ordered.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, if the House should adjourn now, would not this bill come up as unfinished business?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It would come up on the next day when the same class of business is in order—that is next Friday.

Mr. MILLS. I suggest to the friends of the measure to let the bill go over until next Friday, as it will take some time to engross it. It will come up as unfinished business next Friday, and can be passed the first thing. I move that the House adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; there being—ayes 128, noes 37.

So (at 4 o'clock and 20 minutes p. m.) the House, in accordance with its previous order, adjourned until Monday next.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, I think the Journal and the RECORD correspond substantially. I call for the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is governed by the Journal.

Mr. SPRINGER. I call the attention of the Chair and the gentleman from Texas and the House to the fact that at the time when this bill was last under consideration the Clerk, the Speaker pro tempore, and the gentleman from Texas were laboring under the impression that the motion made by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. STONE] for the previous question on the bill and amendments (which applied only to the question of ordering the bill to be engrossed and read a third time) included the previous question on the final passage of the bill. As the RECORD shows, the motion for the previous question was agreed to; then the amendments were agreed to; the bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and there was never another motion made for the previous question; but it was assumed that the previous question as already ordered covered the bill clear on to its passage, which was a mistake. That error was naturally fallen into from the fact that the previous question was called "upon the bill and amendments." I was watching the proceedings very closely, desiring when the bill should come up again to be permitted to show at this stage that the bill ought not to pass and to make a motion to recommit. Therefore I know the RECORD is correct.

Several MEMBERS. Regular order!

The SPEAKER. The regular order is demanded. The gentleman from Illinois makes no motion.

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire to move that the bill be recommitted.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. Is that motion now in order?

The SPEAKER. Under the rules of the House it is in order to recommit a bill, either with or without instructions, pending the motion for the previous question on the passage of the bill or after the previous question has been ordered.

Mr. SPRINGER. Before my resolution is read I desire to ask whether the Chair holds that the previous question was ordered on the passage of the bill or merely moved.

The SPEAKER. The Journal of the House shows that the previous question was ordered on the passage of the bill.

Mr. SPRINGER. That is not correct. I ask the Clerk to read the resolution which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the bill be recommitted to the Committee on War Claims with instructions to investigate the claims of a similar character heretofore presented to the Navy Department and the amount involved in such claims.

Mr. SPRINGER. Pending the motion to recommit I ask unanimous consent to have read a letter from the Secretary of the Navy in reference to this subject.

Several members objected, and called for the regular order.

The question being taken on agreeing to the resolution of Mr. SPRINGER, there were—ayes 35, noes 72.

Mr. SPRINGER. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, there being—ayes 27, noes 81; more than one-fifth voting in the affirmative.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the negative—yeas 63, nays 168; not voting 92, as follows:

YEAS—63.

Abbott,	Crain,	Hudd,	Oates,
Allen, J. M.	Dargan,	Hutton,	O'Neall, J. H.
Anderson, A. R.	Davidson, A. C.	Johnston, J. T.	Perry,
Anderson, C. L.	Dockery,	Jones,	Rogers,
Baker Jehu	Elliott,	Kerr,	Rowland,
Bankhead,	Forney,	Kilgore,	Sayers,
Barnes,	French,	Landes,	Shively,
Bland,	Glass,	Lane,	Springer,
Blount,	Hall,	Lanham,	Stewart, J. D.
Breckinridge, WCP	Hare,	Latham,	Turner, H. G.
Buckalew,	Hatch,	Martin,	Washington,
Burnes,	Hayes,	Matson,	Weaver,
Bynum,	Hemphill,	McMillin,	Wheeler,
Campbell, J. E.	Henderson, J. S.	Mills,	Whitthorne,
Cobb,	Holman,	Moore,	Wise.
Cowles,	Hopkins, S. I.	Morgan,

NAYS—168.

Adams,	Brown, C. E.	Clark,	Enloe,
Allen, C. H.	Brumm,	Cockran,	Farquhar,
Allen, E. P.	Bryce,	Cogswell,	Felton,
Anderson, G. A.	Buchanan,	Compton,	Finley,
Arnold,	Bunnell,	Cooper,	Flood,
Atkinson,	Burnett,	Cox,	Fuller,
Bingham,	Burrows	Crouse,	Funston,
Bliss,	Butler,	Cutcheon,	Gaines,
Boothman,	Butterworth,	Dalzell,	Gallinger,
Bound,	Campbell, Felix	Darlington,	Gear,
Boutelle,	Campbell, J. E.	Davis,	Gest,
Bowen,	Candler,	De Lano,	Glover,
Brewer,	Caswell,	Dingley,	Grimes,
Browne, T. H. B.	Catchings,	Dougherty,	Grout,
Browne, T. M.	Cheadle,	Dunham,	Guenther,

Harmer,	Lynch,	Payson,	Stockdale,
Haugen,	Macdonald,	Perkins,	Stone, of Ky.
Hayden,	Mahoney,	Peters,	Struble,
Heard,	McAdoo,	Phelan,	Taulbee,
Henderson, D. B.	McComas,	Phelps,	Taylor, E. B.
Hitt,	McCreary,	Pidcock,	Taylor, J. D.
Hogg,	McCullogh,	Pugsley,	Thomas, G. M.
Holmes,	McKenna,	Reed,	Thomas, O. B.
Hooker,	McKinley,	Rice,	Thompson, A. C.
Hopkins, A. J.	McKinney,	Richardson,	Tracey,
Hopkins, S. T.	McRae,	Robertson,	Turner, E. J.
Houk,	McShane,	Rockwell,	Vance,
Hovey,	Merriman,	Romeis,	Wade,
Howard,	Montgomery,	Rowell,	Walker,
Jackson,	Morrill,	Russell, J. E.	Warner,
Johnston, T. D.	Morrow,	Ryan,	Weber,
Kean,	Morse,	Sawyer,	White, J. B.
Kelley,	Neal,	Scull,	White, S. V.
Kennedy,	Newton,	Shaw,	Whiting, J. R.
La Follette,	Nichols,	Sherman,	Wickham,
Laffoon,	O'Donnell,	Snyder,	Wilber,
Lagan,	O'Ferrall,	Sowden,	Wilkinson,
Laidlaw,	O'Neill, Charles	Spooner,	Williams,
Lee,	O'Neill, J. J.	Stahlnecker,	Wilson, Thomas
Lehlbach,	Osborne,	Steele,	Yardley,
Lodge,	Owen,	Stewart, Charles	Yoder,
Lyman,	Patton,	Stewart, J. W.	Yost.

NOT VOTING—92.

Anderson, J. A.	Culberson,	Hunter,	Randall,
Bacon,	Cummings,	Ketcham,	Rayner,
Baker, C. S.	Davenport,	Laird,	Russell, C. A.
Barry,	Davidson, R. H. M.	Lawler,	Rusk,
Bayne,	Dibble,	Lind,	Scott,
Belden,	Dorsey,	Long,	Seney,
Belmont,	Dunn,	Maffett,	Simmons,
Biggs,	Ermentrout,	Maish,	Smith,
Blanchard,	Fisher,	Mansur,	Spinola,
Bowden,	Fitch,	Mason,	Stephenson,
Breckinridge, C. R.	Foran,	McClammy,	Stone, of Mo.
Brower,	Ford,	McCormick,	Symes,
Brown, J. R.	Gay,	Milliken,	Tarsney,
Cannon,	Gibson,	Moffitt,	Thomas, J. R.
Carleton,	Goff,	Nelson,	Thompson, T. L.
Caruth,	Granger,	Norwood,	Tillman,
Chipman,	Greenman,	Nutting,	Townshend,
Clardy,	Grosvenor,	Outhwaite,	Vandever,
Clements,	Henderson, T. J.	Parker,	West,
Collins,	Herbert,	Peel,	Whiting, William
Conger,	Hermann,	Penington,	Wilkins,
Cothran,	Heistand,	Plumb,	Wilson, W. L.
Crisp,	Hires,	Post,	Woodburn.

So the motion to recommit was not agreed to.

During the roll-call,

Mr. COX moved, by unanimous consent, to dispense with the reading of the names.

The motion was agreed to.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Mr. GRANGER with Mr. LAIRD, for the rest of the day.

Mr. DAVIDSON, of Florida, with Mr. HUNTER, for the rest of the day.

The vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. SPRINGER. I ask for the reading of the engrossed bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore, (Mr. MCMILLIN in the chair). The question is on the third reading of the engrossed bill.

Mr. SPRINGER. The reading of the engrossed bill is demanded.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The bill will be read.

Mr. SPRINGER. I demanded the reading of the engrossed bill previous to the adjournment on Friday of last week. I want it read now.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The engrossed bill will be read.

The engrossed bill was read.

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Speaker, I now make the point of order that this is the first time the bill has been read a third time. The question is now, shall the bill pass? No previous question could have operated upon the passage of the bill until after it had been read the third time. I demanded the third reading of the engrossed bill last Friday, just before the adjournment. The question now is upon the passage of the bill; and I make the point that no previous question could have been ordered upon it, and therefore that I have the floor to discuss the question whether the bill shall pass or not.

Since the bill has been read a third time no member has taken the floor to demand the previous question on its passage. It was never read a third time until this moment; and until it was read the third time it was not in order for any member to take the floor and demand the previous question on its passage.

Mr. STEELE. We do not want to hear the bill discussed any further.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The present occupant of the chair is advised that the previous question has been ordered on the passage of the bill; and that being so, debate is not now in order.

Mr. SPRINGER. The previous question could not have been ordered on the passage of the bill until after the reading of the engrossed bill, and the third reading of the engrossed bill has just taken place. It was the only time when the bill could have been read the third time. I took the floor immediately, and since then no previous question has been ordered upon the passage of the bill, the only time, I insist, when it could have been demanded.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The present occupant of the chair was not in the chair when the order was made, but he is informed the previous question was ordered on the passage of the bill. That being so, the Chair is of the opinion that debate is not in order.

Mr. SPRINGER. That would have been true if the bill had been read a third time; but I demanded the third reading of the engrossed bill, at which time an adjournment took place.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The demand for the third reading of the bill did not occur, as the Chair is informed, before the demand for the previous question was made and ordered. It was the right of the gentleman to have the engrossed bill read. The engrossed bill has been read, and, as the Chair is advised, the previous question is now operating upon the passage of the bill, which cuts off debate.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I ask for a vote.

Mr. SPRINGER. I demand the yeas and nays on the passage of the bill.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 38.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Not one-fifth of the last vote.

Mr. SPRINGER. Count the other side.

The other side was counted, and there were 116.

So the yeas and nays were ordered, one-fifth voting in favor thereof.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment House bills of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. 120) for the relief of Charlotte Caroline Hackleman;

A bill (H. R. 221) increasing the pension of John C. Johnston;

A bill (H. R. 363) granting a pension to Mrs. Eliza L. Mace;

A bill (H. R. 365) granting a pension to John Humes;

A bill (H. R. 440) granting a pension to Mary C. Knight;

A bill (H. R. 880) granting a pension to Mary Everingham Brown;

A bill (H. R. 2457) to increase the pension of Hubert M. Potter; and

A bill (H. R. 2467) to amend chapter 191 of the private acts of the Forty-ninth Congress, passed at the second session thereof, concerning James H. Young.

Also, that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House was requested, namely:

A bill (S. 147) for the relief of S. D. Barclay, G. D. Adams, and William Kimbrew;

A bill (S. 1283) making an appropriation for the erection of a lighthouse on or near Diamond Shoal, Cape Hatteras, North Carolina;

A bill (S. 39) granting an increase of pension to Frederick Beno;

A bill (S. 40) granting an increase of pension to Margaret E. Pierce;

A bill (S. 42) granting a pension to Lizzie Wright Owen;

A bill (S. 43) granting a pension to Polly H. Smith;

A bill (S. 74) to increase the pension of Thomas Chapman;

A bill (S. 121) granting a pension to Tobias Baney;

A bill (S. 122) granting a pension to Samuel Lane;

A bill (S. 123) granting a pension to Mrs. Virginia Grier;

A bill (S. 124) granting a pension to Henry F. Kaiser;

A bill (S. 167) granting an increase of pension to Ann E. Tew;

A bill (S. 168) granting a pension to Mary E. Crimmins;

A bill (S. 169) to increase the pension of Abby J. Slocum;

A bill (S. 170) granting a pension to Mary A. Mykins;

A bill (S. 172) granting a pension to Abbie M. Hay;

A bill (S. 173) granting a pension to Henry B. Very;

A bill (S. 174) granting a pension to Mary Martin;

A bill (S. 175) granting a pension to Eleanor S. Lawson;

A bill (S. 286) granting an increase of pension to Stephen R. Smith;

A bill (S. 293) granting a pension to Mrs. Arabella Coddington;

A bill (S. 303) granting a pension to Mattie Graziani;

A bill (S. 330) granting a pension to Manon Vangordon;

A bill (S. 331) granting a pension to John Kalbfleisch;

A bill (S. 333) granting a pension to Reuben Brownmiller;

A bill (S. 334) granting an increase of pension to Charles F. Allgower;

A bill (S. 335) granting a pension to C. R. Thomas;

A bill (S. 337) granting a pension to Mary E. Johnston;

A bill (S. 338) granting a pension to Samuel Brooks;

A bill (S. 339) granting a pension to Eliza Douglass;

A bill (S. 381) for the relief of Col. Jesse H. Strickland;

A bill (S. 393) for the relief of Frances Ann Pyne Ricketts;

A bill (S. 404) for the relief of Margaret S. Murray;

A bill (S. 413) granting an increase of pension to Oscar S. Collins;

A bill (S. 433) granting an increase of pension to General S. W. Price;

A bill (S. 450) for the relief of Thomas S. Hopkins, late of Company C, Sixteenth Maine Volunteers;

A bill (S. 451) granting a pension to Hannah C. DeWitt;

A bill (S. 465) granting a pension to William Sackman, sr.;

A bill (S. 472) granting a pension to Eliza Summers;

A bill (S. 549) granting a pension to Hannah R. Langdon;

A bill (S. 550) granting a pension to William C. Wait;

A bill (S. 626) granting an increase of pension to Albert Franklin, alias McKee;

A bill (S. 647) for the relief of W. A. Lemaster;

A bill (S. 656) granting increase of pension to James Jackson Purman;

A bill (S. 679) granting a pension to Henry Stafford;

A bill (S. 703) granting a pension to M. T. Lindsey, of Oregon;

A bill (S. 733) granting a pension to Abbie S. Hutchinson;

A bill (S. 737) granting a pension to Berry Day;

A bill (S. 738) granting a pension to the guardian of Enos J. Searles;

A bill (S. 739) granting a pension to Johanna Loewinger;

A bill (S. 749) granting a pension to Louise Paul;

A bill (S. 752) to grant a pension to Mrs. Elvira L. Johnson;

A bill (S. 753) granting a pension to James D. Whaley;
A bill (S. 765) granting an increase of pension to Edward Durant;
A bill (S. 801) granting a pension to Basile Champagne;
A bill (S. 803) granting a pension to Delia U. Peck;
A bill (S. 805) granting a pension to Melvina Greenwood;
A bill (S. 806) granting a pension to William Healey;
A bill (S. 809) granting a pension to Betsey Mannsfield;
A bill (S. 811) granting a pension to Lydia D. Holtz;
A bill (S. 815) granting a pension to Angerone P. Cole;
A bill (S. 816) granting a pension to Amastasia Walter;
A bill (S. 817) granting a pension to Peter Stusse;
A bill (S. 819) granting a pension to Christopher Wisemiller;
A bill (S. 820) granting a pension to David A. Servis;
A bill (S. 821) granting a pension to John Vertessy;
A bill (S. 822) granting a pension to Sarah Errickson;
A bill (S. 824) granting a pension to John Geibel;
A bill (S. 830) granting a pension to David Williams;
A bill (S. 835) for the relief of Elisha Griswold;
A bill (S. 838) granting a pension to Mary Sullivan;
A bill (S. 842) granting a pension to Julia A. Rhoads;
A bill (S. 854) granting a pension to Sarah E. Branson;
A bill (S. 860) granting a pension to Stephen Singleton;
A bill (S. 895) for the relief of Mrs. Betsey Winterbottom;
A bill (S. 930) to grant a pension to Oscar F. Carpenter;
A bill (S. 944) increasing the pension of Mrs. Elizabeth G. Scott;
A bill (S. 1070) granting a pension to Mrs. Mary R. Armstrong;
A bill (S. 1086) granting a pension to Jacob Kintz, alias John Walters;
A bill (S. 1096) granting a pension to James Lucas;
A bill (S. 1111) granting a pension to Mary J. Davis;
A bill (S. 1298) granting a pension to Mary Gammell;
A bill (S. 1300) granting a pension to Cordelia R. Jones;
A bill (S. 1317) for the relief of Francis McNeil Potter;
A bill (S. 1354) granting a pension to Helen Randolph;
A bill (S. 1412) granting an increase of pension to Mary B. Hook;
A bill (S. 1413) to increase the pension of James Coey;
A bill (S. 1477) granting a pension to Harlow B. Hyde;
A bill (S. 1478) granting a pension to George W. Peavey;
A bill (S. 1506) for the relief of Addie Bell;
A bill (S. 1613) granting an increase of pension to John F. Ballier;
A bill (S. 1614) granting a pension to Phillipe Ray;
A bill (S. 1638) granting a pension to William Richardson;
A bill (S. 1665) granting a pension to Theresa B. Hoffman;
A bill (S. 1717) granting a pension to Emma Von Bernewitz;
A bill (S. 1784) granting a pension to Ida M. Welton;
A bill (S. 1785) granting a pension to Stephen D. Redfield;
A bill (S. 1884) granting a pension to Louisa Provost; and
A bill (S. 1985) granting an increase of pension to Mrs. F. Selina Buchanan.

NATHANIEL M'KAY AND OTHERS.

Mr. SHAW. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MCMILLIN). The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SHAW. Is the question on the passage of the bill as amended?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the final passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 156, nays 72, not voting 95; as follows:

YEAS—156.

Adams,	Dalzell,	Kean,	Richardson,
Allen, C. H.	Darlington,	Kennedy,	Rockwell,
Allen, E. P.	Davis,	Laffoon,	Romeis,
Anderson, A. R.	De Lano,	La Follette,	Rowell,
Arnold,	Dorsey,	Laidlaw,	Russell, J. E.
Atkinson,	Dunham,	Lee,	Ryan,
Baker, C. S.	Enloe,	Lehlbach,	Scull,
Bingham,	Farquhar,	Lodge,	Shaw,
Bliss,	Felton,	Lyman,	Sherman,
Boothman,	Finley,	Macdonald,	Spooner,
Bound,	Flood,	Mahoney,	Stahlnecker,
Boutelle,	Ford,	Mason,	Steele,
Bowden,	French,	McComas,	Stewart, J. W.
Brewer,	Fuller,	McCormick,	Stone of Ky.
Brower,	Funston,	McCullogh,	Struble,
Browne, T. H. B.	Gaines,	McKenna,	Taulbee,
Browne, T. M.	Gallinger,	McKinley,	Taylor, E. B.
Brown, C. E.	Gear,	McKinney,	Taylor, J. D.
Brumm,	Gest,	Merriman,	Thomas, G. M.
Bryce,	Glover,	Montgomery,	Thomas, O. B.
Buchanan,	Greenman,	Morrill,	Tracey,
Bunnell,	Grimes,	Morrow,	Turner, E. J.
Burnett,	Grout,	Neal,	Vance,
Burrows,	Guenther,	Nichols,	Wade,
Butler,	Hall,	O'Donnell,	Walker,
Campbell, Felix	Harmer,	O'Ferrall,	Warner,
Campbell, J. E.	Haugen,	O'Neill, Charles	Weber,
Campbell, T. J.	Hayden,	O'Neill, J. J.	Wheeler,
Cannon,	Heard,	Osborne,	White, J. B.
Caswell,	Henderson, D. B.	Outhwaite,	White, S. V.
Catchings,	Hitt,	Owen,	Whiting, J. R.
Cheadle,	Holmes,	Patton,	Wickham,
Clark,	Hooker,	Payson,	Wilber,
Cockran,	Hopkins, S. T.	Perkins,	Wilkinson,
Cogswell,	Houk,	Peters,	Williams,
Compton,	Hovey,	Phelan,	Wilson, Thomas
Cooper,	Howard,	Pugsley,	Yardley,
Cox,	Jackson,	Reed,	Yoder,
Crouse,	Johnston, T. D.	Rice,	Yost.

NAYS—72.

Abbott,	Cowles,	Johnston, J. T.	Newton,
Allen, J. M.	Crisp,	Jones,	Oates,
Anderson, C. L.	Culberson,	Kerr,	O'Neall, J. H.
Anderson, G. A.	Dargan,	Kilgore,	Peel,
Baker, Jehu	Davidson, R. H. M.	Lagan,	Perry,
Bankhead,	Dockery,	Landes,	Pidcock,
Barnes,	Elliott,	Lane,	Rogers,
Bland,	Forney,	Lanham,	Rowland,
Blount,	Glass,	Latham,	Sayers,
Breckinridge, C. R.	Hare,	Lynch,	Shively,
Buckalew,	Hatch,	Martin,	Simmons,
Burnes,	Hayes,	Matson,	Smith,
Bynum,	Hemphill,	McClammy,	Sowden,
Candler,	Henderson, J. S.	McMillin,	Springer,
Carlton,	Holman,	McRae,	Stewart, J. D.
Clements,	Hopkins, S. I.	McShane,	Turner, H. G.
Cobb,	Hudd,	Moore,	Weaver,
Cothran,	Hutton,	Morgan,	Whitthorne.

NOT VOTING—95.

Anderson, J. A.	Dougherty,	Long,	Scott,
Bacon,	Dunn,	Maffett,	Seney,
Barry,	Ermentrout,	Maish,	Snyder,
Bayne,	Fisher,	Mansur,	Spinola,
Belden,	Fitch,	McAdoo,	Stephenson,
Belmont,	Foran,	McCreary,	Stewart, Charles
Biggs,	Gay,	Milliken,	Stockdale,
Blanchard,	Gibson,	Mills,	Stone of Mo.
Bowen,	Goff,	Moffitt,	Symes,
Breckinridge, WC P	Granger,	Morse,	Tarsney,
Brown, J. R.	Grosvenor,	Nelson,	Thomas, J. R.
Butterworth,	Henderson, T. J.	Norwood,	Thompson, A. C.
Caruth,	Herbert,	Nutting,	Thompson, T. L.
Chipman,	Hermann,	Parker,	Tillman,
Clardy,	Hiestand,	Penington,	Townshend,
Collins,	Hires,	Phelps,	Vandever,
Conger,	Hogg,	Plumb,	Washington,
Crain,	Hopkins, A. J.	Post,	West,
Cummings,	Hunter,	Randall,	Whiting, William
Cutcheon,	Kelley,	Rayner,	Wilkins,
Davenport,	Ketcham,	Robertson,	Wilson, W. L.
Davidson, A. C.	Laird,	Russell, C. A.	Wise,
Dibble,	Lawler,	Rusk,	Woodburn.
Dingley,	Lind,	Sawyer,

So the bill was passed.

Mr. LANHAM. I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the names be dispensed with.

There was no objection.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Mr. RANDALL with Mr. BUTTERWORTH, on all political questions, for this day.

Mr. STEWART, of Texas, with Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio, for the rest of the day.

Mr. COLLINS with Mr. WEST, for the remainder of the day.

Mr. DUNN with Mr. DINGLEY, for the remainder of the day.

Mr. HOGG. I was absent on important business in my committee. I desire to vote.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Was the gentleman within the bar when his name was called?

Mr. HOGG. I was not.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Then the gentleman's vote can not be recorded.

Mr. HOGG. If present, I should have voted "ay."

The result of the vote was then announced as above stated.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky, moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

Mr. SPRINGER. Pending the latter motion, I move to amend the title, and on that motion I desire to be heard. I move to amend by adding to the title the following words: "And for other purposes."

I call the attention of the House to a letter I have received from the Secretary of the Navy in reference to this claim and other claims of a similar character which are pending before the Navy Department or in Congress at this time. I send the letter to the Clerk's desk, and ask the careful attention of the House to its contents.

Mr. LANHAM. Will it not satisfy the gentleman from Illinois to send it to the desk simply to have it printed in the RECORD?

Mr. SPRINGER. No; it is very important and ought to be listened to.

The Clerk read the letter, as follows:

NAVY DEPARTMENT, Washington, February 16, 1888.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 10th instant, inclosing a copy of H. R. bill No. 2477, "for the relief of Nathaniel McKay and the executors of Donald McKay," and requesting information as to the amount involved in the claims therein specified, and as to the number of cases of contractors similarly situated whose claims may be presented in the event of the bill referred to becoming a law.

In reply I have to state that it appears from the report of the board of officers convened by the Department pursuant to a resolution of the Senate of March 9, 1865 (Ex. Doc. No. 18, first session Thirty-ninth Congress), "to inquire into and determine how much the vessels of war and steam machinery contracted for by the Department in the years 1862 and 1863, cost the contractors over and above the contract price and allowance for extra work," that the contractors referred to in the bill did not present their claims to that board for examination, although notified to do so. But their claims were considered by a board appointed under authority of the act of Congress approved March 2, 1867, directing the Secretary of the Navy "to investigate the claims of all contractors for building vessels of war and steam machinery for the same under contracts made after the 1st day of May, 1861, and prior to the 1st day of January, 1864," and the following report in relation to the United States steamers Squando,

Nauset, and Ashuelot was made by the board, and communicated to Congress by the Department November 26, 1867, and all other information required by the act referred to (Senate Ex. Doc. No. 3, second session Fortieth Congress):

	McKay & Aldus, for Squando.	Donald McKay, for Nauset.	Donald McKay, for Ashuelot.
Contract price	$395,000.00	$386,000.00	$275,000.00
Whole increased cost of the work over the contract price as claimed by the contractor	337,329.46	314,768.93	81,447.50
Amount of such increased cost caused by the delay and action of the Government, as determined by the board to be due	None.	None.	None.
Amount already paid the contractors over and above the contract price (obtained from the bureaus)	194,535.70	192,110.98	22,415.92

From the foregoing statement it will be seen that the contractors therein named presented claims to the Department for compensation for an alleged increase of cost of the work of building the Nauset, the Squando, and the Ashuelot over and above the contract prices therefor; that the contract price for said three vessels was $1,056,000; that the Department had already paid at that time over and above the contract price the sum of $409,062.60, and that the contractors made the further claim of $323,483.29, which the board appointed at that time upon said claims reported as not due.

From these figures the amount of the present claim upon each boat may be stated as follows:

SQUANDO.

Amount claimed	$337,329.46
Amount allowed by the Department	194,535.70
Amount involved in present claim	142,793.76

NAUSET.

Amount claimed	314,768.93
Amount allowed by the Department	192,110.98
Amount involved in present claim	122,657.95

ASHUELOT.

Amount claimed	81,447.50
Amount allowed by the Department	22,415.92
Amount involved in present claim	59,031.58

Referring to the report made to Congress by the Department November 26, 1867, hereinbefore mentioned as contained in Executive Document No. 3, second session Fortieth Congress, which shows the names of all the contractors whose claims were examined under authority of the aforesaid act of March 2, 1867, the names of the vessels built, and the description of work contracted for, the following statement will afford you information as to the aggregate sums involved in the claims presented on account of and connected with the building of said vessels, including the three to which said bill relates, namely:

Total of contract prices under the several contracts	$14,201,050.00
Aggregate amount of claims presented by the contractors for increased cost of the work over the contract price	10,184,592.50
Aggregate amount paid the contractors by the Department over and above the contract price	5,282,847.92
Aggregate amount determined by the board as due to the contractors for increased cost of the work over and above the contract price, and in addition to the sums allowed by the Department	187,475.56
Aggregate amount of the sums claimed as due over and above the contract price, the allowances made by the Department, and the amounts determined by the board	4,714,269.02

I deem it proper to state for your further information that the several sums found due the contractors, as reported by the board, were appropriated by the act of Congress approved July 13, 1868 (Stats. at Large, vol. 15, page 379), and that the case of Nathaniel McKay and others was reported upon by the Senate Committee on Naval Affairs during the second session of the Forty-fourth Congress (Senate Report No. 639).

Very respectfully,

W. C. WHITNEY,
Secretary of the Navy.

Hon. WILLIAM M. SPRINGER,
House of Representatives.

Mr. SPRINGER. I ask the Clerk to return to me that communication.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I make the point of order that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois is not germane.

Mr. SPRINGER. The point of order is made too late. We have been discussing this amendment for some time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair thinks that after discussion has proceeded it is too late to make the point of order.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. In support of the point of order I submit that the discussion had not commenced. The letter had been sent up to be read, but I made the point of order before the discussion commenced. And I submit that this being a private bill and for a specific purpose, the amendment to add the words "and for other purposes" can not be entertained.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is of opinion that the letter could only have been read as partaking of the nature of debate. The Chair understood the gentleman from Illinois to send it up to be read as occupying part of his time and the Chair has charged that gentleman with the time consumed in its reading. The Chair would not have recognized the right to have the paper read except as debate. The Chair is of the opinion that the point of order comes too late.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I only desire that there should be some discussion of the point of order.

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire the attention of the committee and I will be as brief as I possibly can.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois will suspend for a moment. The Chair will state that he has no desire to cut off the gentleman from Kentucky from discussing the point of order if he desires to be heard.

Mr. SPRINGER. But not in my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Of course not.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I do not want to take up time, but I wish to have this question decided and to know whether after a bill has passed the House, and thereby had the indorsement of the House, an amendment which is clearly not germane to the subject of the bill can be used as an instrument by which the business of this House shall be delayed and the consideration of other bills behind this one shall be hindered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair remembers a case analogous to this, the decision in which covers this question. A Representative from Kentucky, Mr. White, adopted the same course as has now been taken by the gentleman from Illinois, and the point of order was made that he could not be recognized to debate the question on the motion to amend the title. It was decided then and has since been held by the Chair that debate on the motion to amend the title was in order.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. The only point I desire to make is that this amendment is not germane, and it does not seem to me that it can ever be too late to make that point.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair would have been glad to consider that point if it had been made at the time the gentleman from Illinois presented his amendment, but the amendment having been offered and discussed, the Chair can not now entertain the point.

Mr. STEELE. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to have the floor to proceed with my remarks.

Mr. STEELE. Mr. Speaker, is there no way of getting rid of the speech of the gentleman from Illinois? [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair knows none under the rules.

Mr. SPRINGER. I hope the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. STEELE] will not undertake to steal the floor from me. [Laughter].

Mr. COX. You stole it from the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. STONE].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois is entitled to the floor.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. What is the question under consideration?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] to amend the title of the bill that has just been passed.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. By adding to the title the words "for other purposes?"

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Yes.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. And the discussion, therefore, proceeds to the amendment?

Mr. SPRINGER. Yes. I want to show that it is for other purposes, and I want to show what other purposes are involved. Mr. Speaker, I ask the attention of the committee to what I am about to say, and I shall be as brief as possible in stating the facts.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. My inquiry is whether I did not have the floor and was not recognized as having the floor when the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] rose to offer his amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. STONE] moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed, and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table. The latter motion not being debatable, it took the gentleman off the floor. Pending that motion, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] made a motion, which at that stage was in order, that is to amend the title of the bill. The motion of the gentleman from Kentucky will come up in order to be voted upon.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. The question I wish the Chair to decide is, whether I can be taken from the floor by the gentleman from Illinois rising to offer an amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman took himself off the floor when he made an undebatable motion, and then acquiesced in the motion of the gentleman from Illinois, making no point of order against it till after it had been debated for some minutes; and whatever right there might have been to make the point of order, it now comes too late.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. That is all true, sir; but the question I ask the Chair to decide is whether or not the recognition of the gentleman from Illinois for the purpose of making a motion to amend took away my right to the floor.

Mr. COX. You being the man who has charge of the bill, too.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. Yes; I being the man who has charge of the bill. My question is whether the recognition of the gentleman from Illinois deprived me of my rights at that time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman was recognized and made his motion, which, as stated before, was not debatable; and then the motion of the gentleman from Illinois was in order.

Mr. COX. Oh, yes; he was on the floor.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair was of the opinion that the gentleman from Kentucky merely desired to move the reconsideration of the vote, and the gentleman from Illinois moved to amend the title.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. But I did not yield the floor for the gentleman's speech. My purpose was to bring action upon the bill to a close, and I yielded only for the purpose of the motion to amend being made, not for a speech or an argument on the bill or on the amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois is entitled to the floor.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I ask to have my question decided, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has stated the order in which the motions were made, and it is evident that under all the circumstances the gentleman from Illinois is entitled to the floor for the purpose of discussing the matter.

Mr. SPRINGER. The motion which I have made is——

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I appeal from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. SPRINGER. I do not think I can be taken from the floor after I have been on it for ten minutes. After I have taken the floor and have had this letter from the Secretary of the Navy read in my time, no point of order can be made that will deprive me of the floor.

Mr. COX. The point of order can always be made. The gentleman from Illinois is flying in the face of the sentiment of the House; he has committed a sort of a ravishment [laughter] on the gentleman from Kentucky and on a lot of statistics, and I propose that a vote on the appeal of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. STONE] from the decision of the Chair shall now be had. We have some rights on private bills.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair desires to state again, in order that there may be no misunderstanding on this point, that the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. STONE] moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed, and to lay that motion on the table; the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] then rose and moved to amend the title of the bill, and the Chair recognized him for that purpose. The gentleman from Kentucky made no protest against the recognition, and the gentleman from Illinois proceeded to debate the question by having read at the Clerk's desk what could not be read otherwise than as debate. And, as a matter of fact, seventeen minutes have elapsed since the discussion began. The gentleman from Kentucky, holding that the gentleman from Illinois was not entitled to the floor, desires now to appeal from the ruling of the Chair.

Mr. REED. I suggest to the gentleman from Kentucky that we have already got rid of seventeen minutes of this time, and it really would be cheaper in point of time, although in nothing else, to let this go on. [Laughter.]

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I withdraw the appeal.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Kentucky withdraws his appeal from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. SPRINGER. I am much obliged to the gentleman from Maine [Mr. REED].

Now, Mr. Speaker, if gentlemen will give me their attention, I think they will agree with me that this title ought certainly to be amended, even if the bill should be passed. I have no desire to interpose any factious opposition to this bill. I am perfectly willing that it should pass upon the vote of the majority of the House, if gentlemen will give me their attention long enough to understand a little further the facts in regard to this claim and other claims similarly situated. That is all I desire, and if the House will bear with me patiently for a few minutes, I shall have said all I wish to say; and then the responsibility for the passage of the bill will rest with those who have recorded themselves in favor of it.

The first question involved here was the amount covered by the bill, as to which no gentleman could give me accurate information when the bill was last under consideration. The Secretary of the Navy states in the letter which has just been read that the whole amount claimed by the two parties who are claimants in the pending bill, under the original contract with the Government, amounted to $1,056,000; that they filed a claim much in excess of this amount for extras; that the Navy Department by a board, or in some other way, passed upon those extras, and allowed on that account $409,000, making $1,465,000, which the claimants were paid on a contract involving originally $1,056,000. They have claimed in addition to the amounts audited by the Navy Department the further sum of $323,483, which, according to the statement of the Secretary of the Navy, is the amount that these claimants would ask in the Court of Claims if this bill should pass.

I asked the Secretary of the Navy also what other claims were in a similar situation to this, and in this letter he states in reply that other contracts were let for the building of gun-boats during the war at about the same period that these claims arose; that the whole amount involved in the contracts as originally let was $14,201,000; that the claimants presented claims for extras amounting to $10,184,000; that the Navy Department, by the adjudications of a number of boards, ending in the ordinary way, passed upon these claims of liability of the Government for extras, and finally, in the aggregate, allowed to these claimants the sum of $5,282,000 in addition to the contract prices of their work. So that, it seems, on contracts for the expenditure of $14,000,000, the contractors received that sum, and also received in addition, for extras ordered by the Government, $5,282,000. They have received, under the action of the Marchand board, the further sum of $147,000, leaving $4,714,000 as the amount of the claims of these gentlemen still unpaid. This is the amount of the claims they are now presenting, or would present, in the Department and before Congress, if this bill and the other bills in precisely the same category should be passed.

As I said before, this matter has been in controversy for a great many years. As far back as 1866 the cases were reported to the Senate favorably, the report being made by Mr. Nye, then Senator from Nevada. At that time Mr. Grimes, then Senator from Iowa, than whom no more honest or able Senator has ever represented that State in the Congress of the United States——

Mr. HAYDEN. Was not Senator Hendricks an equally good man?

Mr. SPRINGER. I can not be interrupted now. There was debate in the Senate at that time on the subject, and in that debate Senator Grimes made this statement, to which I call the attention of his friends on this floor:

> Let it not be supposed by any Senator that after we shall have passed this bill, which includes about two and a quarter millions of money—

That was on one of those contract bills—

> we are therefore absolved from making any future appropriations for contracts entered into between private individuals and the Government under precisely similar circumstances, for I have upon my desk an abstract of contracts between the Government and contractors, made under similar circumstances, upon which there would be claims as much entitled to consideration as almost any that are embraced within the bill now under consideration, amounting to nearly $60,000,000. If there be a loss upon that property equal to the amount which it is claimed has been lost by the contractors provided for in this bill, then the amount which hereafter will be claimed from the Government by these contractors will exceed the sum of $12,000,000.

That was the amount claimed by gun-boat contractors whose cases were in precisely the same condition as these cases. I wish now to call attention to a report made to this House in the Forty-fifth Congress by Mr. John Hanna, of Indiana, at that time representing in this House the Indianapolis district, a gentleman well known to all who were then members, and especially to members of the Indiana delegation. Mr. Hanna was a member of the subcommittee of the Committee on Naval Affairs of this House, and reported several cases of similar import to this, and among them, I believe, the one now before the House.

By the unanimous report of that committee in the Forty-fifth Congress, second session, Mr. Hanna, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, submitted the following report on the claim of Secor & Co. and Perine, Secor & Co.:

> The Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom were referred the petition and statement of Secor & Co. and Perine, Secor & Co., respecting the claims for losses sustained in building the harbor and river monitors Tecumseh, Mahopac, and Manhattan, also in relation to sundry payments received by them as "extras" on those vessels, having considered the same, respectfully submits the following report:
>
> Your committee finds that the contract price for the building of each of said vessels was the sum of $460,000; that said contract price has been fully paid; that, in addition to the contract price, the claimants have been paid, on account of said three vessels, the sum of $614,312.56; being an average of $204,770.85 for each vessel above the contract price.
>
> A brief history of what has been done by the Navy Department, as well as by Congress, with reference to these three vessels, is as follows:
>
> On the 9th of March, 1865, the Senate passed the following resolution:
>
> "Resolved, That the Secretary of the Navy be requested to organize a board of not less than three competent persons, whose duty it shall be to inquire into and determine how much the vessels of war and steam machinery contracted for by the Department, in the years 1862 and 1863, cost the contractors over and above the contract price and allowance for extra work, and report the same to the Senate at its next session. None but those that have given satisfaction to the Department to be considered."
>
> Under this resolution Thomas V. Selfridge, Montgomery Fletcher, and C. H. Eldredge were appointed as members of the board. That board convened, and, among other claimants and contractors, heard the statement of Zeno Secor, one of the firm of Secor & Co. and Perine, Secor & Co., and also heard the statement of James F. Secor, an employé of said firms. This board, in their report, concluded by saying:
>
> "The board, after a critical examination of the bills of cost presented by the several contractors for vessels and steam machinery contracted for in the years 1862 and 1863, who have appeared and made sworn statements, has determined the excess of cost in the several cases, over and above the contract price and allowance for extra work, to be as follows:

Name of vessel.	Contractor.	Excess of cost determined by board.
Tecumseh	Z. & F. Secor	$119,020.57
Mahopac	Z. & F. Secor	119,020.57
Manhattan	W. Perine, Z. & F. Secor	119,020.57

> It appears that the report of this board was not carried into effect, and is therefore alluded to as the judgment of one tribunal.
>
> Afterward, on the 2d of March, 1867, Congress passed an act providing for the creation of a board, who by the law were empowered "to ascertain the additional cost which was necessarily incurred by each contractor in the completion of his work by reason of any changes or alterations in the plans and specifications required, and delays in the prosecution of the work occasioned by the Government which were not provided for in the original contract; but no allowance for any advance in the price of labor or materials shall be considered, unless such advance occurred during the prolonged time for completing the work rendered necessary by the delay resulting from the action of the Government aforesaid, and then only when such advance could not have been avoided by the exercise of ordinary prudence and diligence on the part of the contractor."

Under this act of Congress a board, consisting of J. B. Morehouse, J. N. King, and Edward Foster, was organized. These same claimants submitted their claim to this board, who found that the contract price for the construction of the three vessels was the sum of $460,000 each, or $1,380,000; that the whole increased cost of the work over the contract price, as claimed by the contractors, was the sum of $1,236,101.22; amount of such increased cost caused by the delay and action of the Government as determined by the board to be due, $115,539.01; amount already paid the contractors over and above the contract price, $521,195.58.

Afterwards, on the 6th of August, 1869, by order of the Secretary of the Navy, another board was organized, consisting of Thomas S. Boggs, Charles H. Lowry, and J. W. Easby, for the purpose of examining the claims of Messrs. Secor & Co. and Perine, Secor & Co. for charges extra to the contracts in the construction of the harbor and river monitors Tecumseh, Manhattan, and Mahopac.

This committee or board performed the duty assigned them and made report to the Secretary of the Navy. The Secretary of the Navy, in a letter to the Chief of Bureau of Construction and Repair, under date of December, 1869, says:

"The board appointed by the Department by order dated August 6, 1869, to examine and report in writing concerning the claims of Secor & Co. and Perine, Secor & Co. for charges extra to the contracts in the construction of the harbor and river monitors Tecumseh, Manhattan, and Mahopac, having reported, under date of August 20, 1869, that they have examined the matter submitted and find that there is due from the Department to the said persons the sum of $93,116.98, and recommend the payment of the same, and I having myself examined the said reports and the bills and papers, and finding the said claims so due to be for work actually done and accepted, and finding also the previous orders of the Department that all bills of this character to the various contractors be paid alike, and that other parties have been paid bills under like circumstances, I hereby approve the report of said board and direct that the sums thereby reported due and recommended paid to the said firms, amounting in the aggregate to $93,116.98, be paid to them, respectively, in accordance with said reports, and the bills will be made out and paid accordingly."

Your committee further find that this sum of $93,116.98 has since said report been fully paid, and this sum, added to the amount found by the Morehouse board, makes the said sum of $614,312.56, the sum paid over and above the contract price.

Now, in view of all these facts, the claimants come again and ask Congress to authorize the Court of Claims to take jurisdiction of these alleged claims and ascertain whether or not some additional sum can not be had out of the Treasury. First, they get the contract price. Second, their claim for extra work, as adjusted by the officers of the Navy, is received. Third, the amount found to be due by the Morehouse board is received, and a receipt given in full discharge of all claims against the United States on account of the vessels upon which the board made the allowance as per their report under the act of March 2, 1867. The act of Congress of July 13, 1868, providing for the payment of these awards required that the receipts so given should thus be a finality. Fourth, the Boggs board, created by the Secretary of the Navy, make an additional allowance of $93,116.98, and that has been paid.

Pray when are we to have a finality? The alleged claim is barred by the statute of limitation. It has been adjusted by a board created at the instance of claimants, and the award received was receipted for in manner and form as stated. The claimants are estopped by every rule of law or equity from further asserting lawful claim. With full payment, limitations, and estoppel staring us in the face, we are asked to consent that the whole matter may be relitigated. To consent would be to trifle with public justice.

Your committee report adversely.

Following immediately after that report from the same Committee on Naval Affairs at the same session of the same Congress, the second session of the Forty-fifth Congress, Mr. Hanna, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, submitted the following report on the claim of Nathaniel McKay (the claim now before Congress), in which he says:

The Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred bill H. R. 1969, having considered the same, respectfully submit the following report:

This is a bill for the relief of Nathaniel McKay, who claims "further compensation for the construction of the light-draught monitor Squando, one of the vessels referred to and embraced in the act entitled 'An act for the relief of certain contractors for the construction of vessels of war and steam machinery,' approved March 2, 1877." The bill proposes to refer this claim to the Court of Claims for adjudication, vesting that court with "authority and jurisdiction" in the premises.

Under the facts and the law, should the prayer for relief be granted?

Without going into all the details, it is sufficient to say that during the late war the Secretary of the Navy was authorized and empowered by law to contract for the construction of a number of a certain class of vessels, of which the monitor Squando was one. Your committee find that McKay & Aldus were the contractors; that the contract price was $395,000; that the whole increased cost of the work over the contract price as now claimed by the contractors is the sum of $337,329.46; that the contractors have been paid the full contract price, and in addition thereto have also been paid the sum of $194,535.70.

From all the information which your committee has been able to obtain, it seems that the contract provided for the payment of a specific sum of money, and then in case of changes or modifications of plans or unreasonable delays caused by the Government, such additional sum as they might fairly be entitled to. Upon settlement with the Secretary of the Navy, it appears that, in addition to the contract price, they were paid and they received from the Government the sum of $194,535.70, as the sum found fairly due them in addition to the contract price on account of changes, modifications, etc. Then they claimed $337,329.46, but that claim was investigated and passed upon by officers provided by law, and the sum found fairly due and owing by virtue of the terms and provisions of the contract was $194,535.70, and this sum was paid to and accepted by the contractors.

Thus the matter was first adjusted in manner and form as by law provided. It appears that afterward, on the 2d of March, 1867, Congress passed an act entitled "An act for the relief of certain contractors for the construction of vessels of war and steam machinery;" that to carry into effect the provisions of this act the Secretary of the Navy, on the 6th of July, 1867, appointed a board, to whom claims of this character should be referred for re-examination and report to Congress. That board consisted of Marchand, King, and Foster. On the 4th of December, 1867, the Secretary of the Navy communicated to Congress the report of that board. It appears that McKay & Aldus submitted to that board their claim for remuneration. The board found and reported the contract price; that it had been paid the amount overpaid by reason of changes and modifications of plans; but that nothing additional was due the claimants on account of the matters complained of. Thus for the second time has this claim been acted upon in manner provided by law. Competent and lawful authority has twice settled this matter adversely to the claimants.

Your committee is clearly of opinion that the claim is without merit; that it has no foundation in either law or equity.

Having arrived at this conclusion upon the merits, it is deemed unnecessary to present the questions of limitations and estoppel, each of which would be fatal to the claim.

Courts regard with favor statutes of repose, and do not favor reopening matters of controversy in the absence of fraud. The time has come when this claimant and all of the same class should distinctly understand that they have had their day in court, and that it will be fruitless to attempt further recognition. The Government, by no known rule of law or equity, ought to consent that claimants of this class may enter her courts for further hearing. Such policy would not subserve the ends of justice.

More, further exhibits were made in this case, but it is not necessary I should go over them at this time.

Another report was submitted by Mr. Hanna, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, for the relief of certain naval contractors. It was submitted February 28, 1878, and is as follows:

The Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1264) for the relief of certain contractors for the construction of vessels of war and steam machinery, having considered the same, submit the following report:

All the matters of law and fact necessarily embraced in the consideration of this bill have been duly considered by the committee. The reports submitted on bill H. R. 1969, "A bill for the relief of Nathaniel McKay," and on the memorial of Secor & Co. and Perine, Secor & Co., present fully the views and conclusions to which your committee have arrived. The original contract price appears, in every instance, to have been paid. All lawful charges for extra work appear to have been fully paid. A board created by law, at the special instance of these contractors, have heard and determined all the matters complained of, and in all cases where said board found any sum due the contractor such sum has been received and receipted for in full of all claims. In some instances no sum whatever was found to be justly due. Your committee are of the opinion that all the claimants who are seeking further relief by virtue of the provisions of this bill have had their day in court; that great wrong and injustice might and would be done the Government to in any manner further recognize the existence of any legal or equitable claim against the Government; that by well-settled rules of law these alleged claims are not only barred, but in fact are without merit. Your committee therefore report adversely.

Further, I find in the same book the report submitted by the same gentleman with regard to the claim of Donald McKay, one of the claimants involved in the pending proposition, in reference to which they say briefly:

This bill is of a similar character to House bill No. 1969, and the law and the facts applicable thereto are the same to all intents and purposes.

Therefore on that bill the committee also reported adversely.

Mr. BLAND. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. SPRINGER. I will.

Mr. BLAND. I notice the name of Secor amongst the claimants to which you have referred, and I would like to ask if the pending bill proposes to pay any portion of that claim.

Mr. COX. Not a dollar.

Mr. BLAND. I am acquainted with the fact that a certain distinguished Secretary of the Navy acquired that prefix to his name because of a certain connection, or alleged connection, with that claim, which was denounced throughout all parts of the country and especially by the Democratic press. If this is the same claim, or if it is involved—of course, I do not know—we ought to investigate and ascertain the facts in relation to it. For if there ever was a claim that received severe denunciation, and especially from the Democratic side of the House and press, this is the one.

Mr. SPRINGER. The Secretary of the Navy in the letter I have had read uses this language:

Referring to the report made to Congress by the Department November 26, 1867, hereinbefore mentioned as contained in Executive Document No. 3, second session Fortieth Congress, which shows the names of all the contractors whose claims were examined under authority of the aforesaid act of March 2, 1867, the names of the vessels built, and the description of work contracted for, the following statement will afford you information as to the aggregate sums involved in the claims presented on account of and connected with the building of said vessels, including the three to which said bill relates.

Then following is presented a table, showing the several sums claimed.

Now I have that executive document referred to there before me, and I find this caption to a table of those claims:

Tabulated statement showing the action of the board appointed July 6, 1867, by the honorable Secretary of the Navy to examine the claims of certain contractors for the construction of vessels of war and steam machinery, under the act of Congress approved March 2, 1867.

And the very first name in this tabulated statement is the name of Secor & Co., and Perine, Secor & Co., for the monitors Manhattan, Tecumseh, and Mahopac, and the contract price was $1,380,000.

The Government paid, however, in addition to the contract price, for extras ordered by the Government, the sum of $521,000, and also by the Marchand board $115,000, and they have still claims, I presume, according to what it is said the extras would cost, amounting to something over a million of dollars in addition.

Mr. O'FERRALL. Let me ask the gentleman if this is one of the claims to which he refers?

Mr. COX. There, you have got him.

Mr. SPRINGER. I will answer the gentleman. The claim in the bill is for building the Ashuelot, the Squando, and one other vessel, and the contract price is specified for the three. But the Secretary of the Navy refers to the list of claims which are similarly situated; that is, claims which stand upon the same basis as those to which he refers in that letter. The Secretary referred me to the executive document which I hold in my hand as showing the claims similarly situated, which the Secretary states would amount to an extra claim above the amount already allowed by the Government of $4,700,000.

Mr. COX. Now, will the gentleman yield a moment?

Mr. SPRINGER. Yes; for a question.

Mr. COX. I desire to be heard for a few moments.

If the claim now pending is not one of the class of claims to which you refer, why do you argue it?

Mr. SPRINGER. I will show you why.

Mr. COX. Let me say something before you show it.

Mr. SPRINGER. I can not yield now.

If it is right to grant the relief asked to McKay, that is one question; but it is a claim exactly in the same predicament as the other class of claims to which the Secretary refers, and I will show that we are already called upon to do the same thing in several other cases of this kind. I desire to call the gentleman's attention to the fact that there is pending now House Report 147 from the Committee on War Claims upon the case of Perine & Co., which was one of the Secor claims, and will come following quickly along in the track of this one if this is passed. There is also the case of Alexander Swift & Co., one of the claims similarly situated, which will be pushed along in a few days, if we go on with the Private Calendar.

Mr. COX rose.

Mr. SPRINGER. I yield for a question to oblige my distinguished and courteous friend.

Mr. COX. I thought the gentleman had concluded. I want to be heard a moment.

Mr. SPRINGER. I will yield later.

Mr. BLAND. Do I understand that the Secretary of the Navy puts all of these claims upon the same footing?

Mr. COX. But they are not in this bill.

Mr. BLAND. They are claims of the same class. There is no difference between them.

Mr. COX. But they are not in this bill at all.

Mr. BLAND. Whether they are or are not, they are claims of the same class, and it is so stated by the Secretary of the Navy.

Mr. COX. They do not come in this category at all.

Mr. KERR. May I ask the gentleman from Illinois a question?

Mr. SPRINGER. Yes, sir.

Mr. KERR. Is the same principle involved in this bill as is involved in the other cases to which the gentleman has been referring?

Mr. SPRINGER. Precisely so. If we grant the relief asked by this claimant we can not in conscience refuse any other man who comes and asks to have his case reopened, unless this man is to be peculiarly favored and others turned away empty who ask for relief. I call the attention of the House to the opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States on a claim similar to that now pending.

Mr. LANHAM. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. SPRINGER. Yes, sir.

Mr. LANHAM. I think I understood the gentleman to make a statement that a bill for the relief of these claimants was vetoed.

Mr. SPRINGER. Yes, sir.

Mr. LANHAM. On what grounds was it vetoed?

Mr. SPRINGER. There was a veto of a bill which allowed all the persons embraced in this list, numbering fifteen, twenty, or more, to go to the Court of Claims.

Mr. PAYSON. What was the ground of the veto?

Mr. SPRINGER. President Grant vetoed the bill on the ground that it allowed these parties to show that some of the damages were caused by the increased prices brought about by the inflation of the currency. The President thought that was not a good ground for relief, and vetoed the bill.

Now, as to another case, the case which was before this House in the Forty-seventh Congress. The gentleman from Georgia, Mr. Hammond, on two separate Fridays made speeches in opposition to the passage of the bill for the relief of that claimant. And in that Republican Congress, after that distinguished gentleman had shown the injustice of that bill, the committee rose, and the House without division recommitted it to the Committee on War Claims; and it has never been heard of since in this House.

There was another case of the same kind, where a claimant was asking to be heard, in the Forty-seventh Congress. A bill was passed for the relief of one of these gun-boat contractors. It went to the Court of Claims; from the Court of Claims it went to the Supreme Court of the United States, and it was decided by Mr. Justice Miller, or rather Mr. Justice Miller pronounced the unanimous judgment of the court. To that decision I ask the attention of the lawyers on this floor who desire to do justice to the Government as well as to the claimant in this matter.

A MEMBER. What case is that?

Mr. SPRINGER. It is the case of Charles P. Chouteau, surviving partner of the firm of Chouteau, Harrison & Valle, and William A. Steel, appellants, vs. The United States, found in 95 United States Reports.

Mr. O'FERRALL. Will the gentleman from Illinois allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. SPRINGER. Yes, sir; but I do not desire to be diverted from my present point.

Mr. O'FERRALL. I want to understand this. I understand the gentleman from Illinois is not now discussing the case at present before the House. He is discussing other cases. When he gets through discussing them I would like to know where is the similarity between those cases and this case.

Mr. SPRINGER. The similarity is this: In the beginning of the war the Government passed an act authorizing the construction of gunboats, and appropriating some ten or fourteen million dollars for that purpose. Contracts were let about the same time to parties in different cities, and the work progressed for some months. After the work was completed it was found there had been great delays and extras ordered; and all the contractors came forward and demanded extra pay. They were paid extra. That did not satisfy them, and they got a general bill passed to allow them all to go to the Court of Claims. That bill President Grant vetoed. Since then these claimants have been seeking relief in separate bills, as does the claimant in this bill; and there are other cases on the docket arising under the same circumstances, which will be up for consideration in the Committee of the Whole House as we progress in the consideration of the Private Calendar.

One of these cases went to the Court of Claims by virtue of a special act of Congress and thence it went to the Supreme Court. And the Supreme Court in that case held as follows:

> It is very clear that both parties contemplated the probability that the work would not be completed at the precise period of eight months from the date of the contract. They also contemplated that changes would be made in the construction of the battery. They made such provision for these matters as they deemed necessary for the protection of each party. For the reasonable cost and expenses of the changes made in the construction payment was to be made, but for any increase in the cost of the work not changed no provision was made.
>
> There was a provision for delay, by which the contractor was to submit to pay $4,500 for every month of that delay. This provision, the only one on that subject, if strictly enforced, might have made him a still greater loser, but it seems to have been waived. But we are very clear that without any such provision he must be held to have taken the risk of the prices of the labor and materials which he was bound to furnish, as every other contractor does who agrees to do a specified job at a fixed price. It is one of the elements which he takes into account when he makes his bargain, and he can not expect the other party to guaranty him against unfavorable changes in those prices.
>
> The judgment of the Court of Claims is affirmed.

The argument is given at length upon this particular case, and the particular question involved, which was raised in this case on last Friday, as to whether the receipt was a bar to the claim, was passed upon by the court in that case, where a receipt was produced, and the court was of the opinion that the receipt was a bar to any further right on the part of the claimant to present a claim against the Government. That was the opinion of the court in a case under precisely the same condition of affairs that exists in the case now pending.

Mr. CASWELL. Let me remind the gentleman that these were contracts for a class of monitors, all in the same class, all alike; the Government was not conversant with their construction, but was obliged to change the plans from time to time. In the Forty-fifth Congress Mr. Hanna went to the very bottom of the question and made an exhaustive report, and the House was disposed to agree with his conclusions as to this class of claims and went against the bill.

Mr. SPRINGER. It is true, Mr. Speaker, that these cases were exhaustively treated in the Forty-fifth Congress, in a report made by Mr. Hanna, which received the unanimous approval of the House at that time.

Mr. CASWELL. And he was one of the ablest lawyers in this House.

Mr. SPRINGER. Yes; gentlemen who knew Mr. Hanna know that he was one of the ablest lawyers in the State of Indiana, and one of the ablest lawyers upon the floor of this House at that time.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I have said all that I desire to say in regard to this case. I only want to ask the House to treat this as a serious matter of business. These parties have had their day in court. They have shared liberally of the bounty of the Government. They received their pay. At a time when the Government was in possession of all the facts, when the witnesses were alive, the claimants were heard in at least two distinct boards, which were provided for the hearing of these cases. After that Mr. Robeson was Secretary of the Navy, and he assisted one of these claimants in furthering his claim for larger compensation; and gentlemen know that the result of that effort on his part has caused the name of Secor to be regarded with distrust throughout the country.

That Secor case was just as meritorious as this is, so far as the right to go before the Court of Claims for a new hearing is concerned, and if you pass this bill you must pass every bill where a claimant comes here and says to you that he is not satisfied with the judgment of the tribunal which was created to pass upon cases like his which sat close to the scene, and at the time of the contract, and which finally, and, as I had supposed forever, adjudicated these claims. But if the Government is never to have relief, if we are to be harassed with these matters at every session of Congress, then pass this bill, pass this claim, pass others similarly situated, undo all the adjudications of the war, and you will soon arrive at the condition which Senator Grimes predicted in the Senate of the United States many years ago when he said that claimants similarly situated and having an equal right to a rehearing of their claims, would come in and demand of the Government at least $60,000,000 upon matters long since disposed of and supposed to forever be settled. I thank you, gentlemen of the House, for your very kind attention.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, ever since I came into the House of Representatives, more than two years ago, I have continually found upon this floor gentlemen who seek to make reputation with their constituents at home, in order that they may be re-elected to seats here, by producing enormous arrays of figures whenever a claim against the Government is presented. Pushed to the last extremity, they surround every claim that comes before this House with a mass of figures and a bringing in of names obnoxious to the country, for the purpose of trying to defeat not only the bill under consideration at the time, but every other bill that is pending before the House for the payment of any claim against this Government. Gentlemen who have listened attentively to the remarks of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] must see clearly that those remarks are made, not for the purpose of showing even the shadow of an objection against the justice of this claim, but for the purpose of casting discredit upon it by coupling it with other claims which have arisen out of the building of other vessels, and in connection with which there has been more or less scandal in the country. The claimants in this case have never received any pay at the hands of the Marchand board.

These are an entirely distinct class of cases. The only resemblance between the two classes of cases is in the fact that they both originated in the construction of a vessel or a set of vessels. The gentleman has read here adverse reports that have been made on other claims, what the Secretary of the Navy has said and what certain gentlemen have said in their speeches, and in every one of them the McKay case is referred to simply as one of a class of cases originating out of the building of vessels. That is all. I call the attention of the House to the bill in this case. It is guarded at every point. There is no chance for the Government to become liable for a single solitary dollar if it can be shown that these claimants have already been paid for their extra labor.

Mr. SPRINGER. Will the gentleman allow me to make a suggestion?

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. No, sir; I will not. Just please sit down and keep quiet. [Laughter.] I am running this side of the machine.

Mr. SPRINGER. All right.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. The gentleman has attempted to make the House believe that this is an outrage which is attempted to be practiced upon the country; that we are here attempting to pass a bill by which enormous frauds are to be perpetrated, a bill injurious to the best interests of the country.

That is not true; not a word of it is true. This bill has passed the House, and by such a majority as indicates that members have examined the question and have become satisfied as to the merits of the measure.

In addition to that, I will say there have been favorable reports on this very bill and on bills very much harder to defend than this. There have been six reports from six Committees on War Claims in this House, and eight favorable reports in the Senate of the United States. Four times has this proposition passed the House and six times has it passed the Senate. Yet gentlemen who oppose this bill would have you believe that it is an enormity; that it is favorably reported to the House for the first time; that it is an attempt to accomplish something which would involve the country in an immense expenditure. There is no obligation resting upon the House to pass any bill with regard to any other claim, because perchance this bill may pass.

But, gentlemen, these claimants have not been paid; that is what they assert, that they have not been paid. They come to Congress and ask to be allowed to go to the Court of Claims and show whether they have been paid or not. The bill is so well guarded that every dollar which the claimants have ever received will be charged against them in the settlement of their accounts; and if nothing is found to be due to them, they will get nothing. If all this array of stuff which has been brought in here by the gentleman from Illinois can be shown to be relevant to the McKay case, then the McKays will get nothing.

I, for one, am willing, where men make a reasonable show of a just claim, to allow them to go to the courts for a determination whether or not they have such a claim. That is all there is in this case. The speech of the gentleman from Illinois has been gotten up for the purpose simply of delaying the business of the House——

Mr. SPRINGER. Oh, no.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. And of exhibiting the gentleman before the country as opposing fraudulent claims. He has succeeded in destroying, for practical business purposes, another day allotted to the people of the country, the only day in every week on which needy claimants may come before Congress asking relief. The rest of the week is taken up, Mr. Speaker, with attempting to discuss questions of great national importance, which go down from one Congress to another and are never acted upon finally, because the two "wings" upon either side of the House do not happen to "flap together." Yet, too often this one day of the week, which is of so much importance to the people of the country, in order that they may have their private rights determined here, is destroyed, as this day has been, and for no other purpose than to keep claimants like these from having a proper hearing before Congress or the courts.

Mr. Speaker, I have said all on this question that I want to say. I am not here to advocate improperly the payment of the claims of Mr. McKay or any other man, but so long as I am in Congress I am willing to raise my voice in behalf of allowing men who have the showing of a just claim against this Government—not to have their cases passed on in Congress upon ex parte testimony, but to have them examined by a court, and the question judicially determined whether they are entitled to anything or not.

Mr. COX rose.

Several MEMBERS. Demand the previous question.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. How much time does the gentleman from New York want?

Mr. COX. Only a few moments.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I yield to the gentleman such time as he may wish.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, at the conclusion of my remarks I shall demand the previous question, so as to save, if possible, some part of to-day for valuable business purposes.

When the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] the other day defied the House, and said that he did not care, that he would speak his hour or three-quarters of an hour at his pleasure, I almost wished the incident had occurred in the English Parliament——

Mr. PAYSON. I rise to a question of order. We are all desirous to hear what the gentleman from New York says, and he can be easily heard if gentlemen will remain in their seats.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The House will come to order. Gentlemen will take their seats.

Mr. COX. I will make my remarks very brief. The gentleman from Illinois evidently thought to-day to make the impression by his large array of quarto upon folio that the Secor case and other cases which are odious belong to the same category as the McKay case. The gentleman knows that this bill is supported by gentlemen here to day who voted all the way through against the Secor cases; and I am one of them. But I never voted, and never will vote, to defeat a claim against this Government upon a contract when the Government has changed the plans upon which the contract was based, and by doing so has raised the cost of the work to the contractor. There is the equity of this case. Does the gentleman from Illinois get at the equities of the case? Have these cases ever been decided upon equitable considerations? Never. The very point of this bill, which is guarded by half a dozen provisos, is all the way through that the contractor shall have, as a matter of equity, the benefit of such additional allowance as should properly be made by reason of changes in the plans of the vessels after the contract was made.

On this matter I take the view which any fair man engaged in ordinary business must do. I have sometimes made contracts with builders for the erection of a house; I have had occasion to do so in this city; and if, after making the contract, I change the plan of my parlor, or my basement, or my attic, if I had one, like the gentleman from Illinois [laughter], I would not expect the cost of these changes not contemplated by the contract to be thrown upon the builder. I would pay him extra for the additional expense of the change. I would be an honest man by paying him for the change. I would not be the unreasonable person to go around and make changes in the building of my house and expect the builder to pay for them. I would give the man quid pro quo; that is the Turkish for quantum meruit. [Great laughter.] A man who does not stand up for equity, who undertakes to ring in old cases which have no relevancy to this case, ought to have the previous question called on him. [Great laughter.] And I call it now.

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. COX. No; I have taken up so much time already.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman declines to yield.

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota. I hope he will not decline to yield to me.

Mr. BLAND. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BLAND. What is the question pending?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question pending is the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] to the title of the bill, upon which the gentleman from New York has demanded the previous question.

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota. May I ask the gentleman from New York one question?

Mr. COX. I have demanded the previous question; I will not take up the time of the American Congress——

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota. I hope there will be no attempt to choke off the fullest debate on this subject.

Mr. BLAND. Why was not this claim paid twenty years ago?

Mr. COX. Because some person was derelict.

Mr. SPRINGER. Four hundred thousand dollars additional have been paid already on these cases.

Mr. HOUK. The fault has been with this House that they have not been paid.

The previous question was ordered.

Mr. SPRINGER'S amendment to the title was disagreed to.

The question recurred on the motion of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. STONE] to lay the motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed upon the table.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 111, noes 22.

Mr. BLAND. No quorum has voted.

The SPEAKER pro tempore appointed as tellers Mr. BLAND and Mr. STONE, of Kentucky.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 147, noes 17.

Mr. SPRINGER. I demand the yeas and nays on the motion to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

Mr. COX. I demand tellers on the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Those in favor of tellers on the yeas and nays will rise. [After a pause.] Tellers are not ordered, 8 only having risen.

Mr. COX. I withdraw the demand for tellers.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the affirmative—yeas 154, nays 74, not voting 95; as follows:

YEAS—154.

Adams,	Crouse,	Howard,	Rogers,
Allen, C. H.	Dalzell,	Jackson,	Romeis,
Allen, E. P.	Darlington,	Kean,	Rowell,
Anderson, A. R.	Davis,	Kelley,	Russell, J. E.
Arnold,	De Lano,	Kennedy,	Ryan,
Baker, C. S.	Dingley,	Laidlaw,	Sawyer,
Bayne,	Dougherty,	Lee,	Scott,
Bingham,	Dunham,	Lehlbach,	Scull,
Blanchard,	Enloe,	Lind,	Shaw,
Bliss,	Farquhar,	Lodge,	Sherman,
Boothman,	Felton,	Lyman,	Snyder,
Bound,	Finley,	Macdonald,	Spooner,
Bouteile,	Fisher,	Mahoney,	Stahlnecker,
Bowden,	Flood,	Mason,	Steele,
Bowen,	French,	McComas,	Stewart, J. W.
Breckinridge, C. R.	Fuller,	McCormick,	Stone of Ky.
Brewer,	Funston,	McCullogh,	Struble,
Brower,	Gaines,	McKinley,	Taulbee,
Browne, T. H. B.	Gallinger,	McKinney,	Taylor, J. D.
Browne, T. M.	Gear,	Merriman,	Thomas, G. M.
Brown, C. E.	Gest,	Montgomery,	Thomas, O. B.
Bryce,	Glover,	Morrill,	Tracey,
Buchanan,	Greenman,	Morrow,	Turner, E. J.
Bunnell,	Grimes,	Neal,	Wade,
Burnett,	Grout,	Newton,	Walker,
Burrows,	Guenther,	Nichols,	Warner,
Butler,	Hall,	O'Donnell,	Weber,
Butterworth,	Harmer,	O'Neill, J. J.	White, J. B.
Campbell, Felix	Hayden,	Osborne,	White, S. V.
Campbell, J. E.	Henderson, D. B.	Outhwaite,	Whiting, J. R.
Campbell, T. J.	Henderson, T. J.	Owen,	Wickham,
Cannon,	Hires,	Peters,	Wilber,
Catchings,	Hogg,	Post,	Wilkinson,
Cheadle,	Holmes,	Pugsley,	Williams,
Clark,	Hooker,	Reed,	Wise,
Cogswell,	Hopkins, A. J.	Rice,	Yardley,
Compton,	Hopkins, S. T.	Richardson,	Yost.
Cooper,	Houk,	Robertson,
Cox,	Hovey,	Rockwell,

NAYS—74.

Abbott,	Crisp,	Kerr,	O'Ferrall,
Allen, J. M.	Culberson,	Kilgore,	O'Neall, J. H.
Anderson, C. L.	Dargan,	La Follette,	Peel,
Anderson, G. A.	Davidson, A. C.	Lagan,	Perkins,
Atkinson,	Dockery,	Landes,	Sayers,
Baker, Jehu	Elliott,	Lane,	Shively,
Bankhead,	Forney,	Lanham,	Smith,
Barnes,	Glass,	Lynch,	Sowden,
Bland,	Hatch,	Maish,	Springer,
Breckinridge, WCP	Hayes,	Martin,	Stewart, J. D.
Buckalew,	Heard,	Maison,	Turner, H. G.
Bynum,	Hemphill,	McClammy,	Washington,
Candler,	Henderson, J. S.	McMillin,	Weaver,
Carlton,	Holman,	McRae,	Wheeler,
Caswell,	Hopkins, S. I.	McShane,	Whitthorne,
Clements,	Hudd,	Moore,	Wilson, Thomas
Cobb,	Hutton,	Morgan,	Wilson, W. L.
Cothran,	Johnston, J. T.	Nelson,
Cowles,	Jones,	Oates,

NOT VOTING—95.

Anderson, J. A.	Ermentrout,	Mansur,	Rusk,
Bacon,	Fitch,	McAdoo,	Seney,
Barry,	Foran,	McCreary,	Simmons,
Belden,	Ford,	McKenna,	Spinola,
Belmont,	Gay,	Milliken,	Stephenson,
Biggs,	Gibson,	Mills,	Stewart, Charles
Blount,	Goff,	Moffitt,	Stockdale,
Brown, J. R.	Granger,	Morse,	Stone of Mo.
Brumm,	Grosvenor,	Norwood,	Symes,
Burnes,	Hare,	Nutting,	Tarsney,
Caruth,	Haugen,	O'Neill, Charles	Taylor, E. B.
Chipman,	Herbert,	Parker,	Thomas, J. R.
Clardy,	Hermann,	Patton,	Thompson, A. C.
Cockran,	Hiestand,	Payson,	Thompson, T. L.
Collins,	Hitt,	Penington,	Tillman,
Conger,	Hunter,	Perry,	Townshend,
Crain,	Johnston, T. D.	Phelan,	Vance,
Cummings,	Ketcham,	Phelps,	Vandever,
Cutcheon,	Laffoon,	Pidcock,	West,
Davenport,	Laird,	Plumb,	Whiting, William
Davidson, R. H. M.	Latham,	Randall,	Wilkins,
Dibble,	Lawler,	Rayner,	Woodburn,
Dorsey,	Long,	Rowland,	Yoder.
Dunn,	Maffett,	Russell, C. A.

So the motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the reading of the names was dispensed with.

The following additional pairs were announced until further notice:

Mr. PIDCOCK with Mr. GROSVENOR.

Mr. TOWNSHEND with Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania.

The following were announced as being paired for this day:

Mr. THOMPSON, of California, with Mr. WOODBURN.

Mr. MCADOO with Mr. HERMANN.

Mr. HARE with Mr. ATKINSON.

Mr. ROWLAND with Mr. MCKENNA.

Mr. LAWLER with Mr. BRUMM.

Mr. MILLS with Mr. PHELPS.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, inasmuch as we have consumed so much time to-day in roll-calls and discussion that it will be now practically impossible to make any substantial progress during the balance of the afternoon with the Private Calendar, I move that the House now take a recess until half past 11 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. STEELE. I hope the gentleman will allow us to make reports on private bills first.

Mr. BAYNE. I ask the gentleman to yield to me to pass a resolution, which will take but a moment.

Mr. LANHAM. Very well.

OBSTRUCTIONS IN THE DELAWARE RIVER.

Mr. BAYNE. I ask unanimous consent to pass the joint resolution I send to the desk.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to appoint a board of three engineers to examine and report in relation to the Delaware River between the city of Philadelphia, Pa., and Camden, N. J., and for other purposes.

Be it resolved, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to immediately appoint a board of three engineers from the United States Army, whose duty it shall be to examine in all their relations to commerce the islands known as Smith's Island, Windmill Island, and Petty's Island, in the Delaware River, between the city of Philadelphia, in the State of Pennsylvania, and the city of Camden, in the State of New Jersey; which board shall forthwith report to the Secretary of War as to whether said islands or any shoal in the said river between or adjacent to the said islands, or any of them, constitute an obstruction to the commerce of the Delaware River, or to the passage of vessels between the said States, and with a view to removing said islands and shoals; to report a plan with the estimate of cost for their removal in whole or in part, and for the improvement of the harbor of the port of Philadelphia, including the probable cost to the Goverment of said islands, so as to secure free and uninterrupted commerce upon the said Delaware River and the unobstructed passage of vessels to and from and between the said States; and the sum of $5,000, or so much thereof as shall be necessary, is hereby appropriated, to be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to defray the expense of such survey and report.

Mr. BAYNE. Mr. Speaker, this joint resolution is unanimously reported from the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. MACDONALD. I object.

Mr. DOCKERY. Regular order!

Mr. LANHAM. I now insist upon my motion.

Mr. STEELE. I hope the motion of the gentleman from Texas will be voted down.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Let members have an opportunity of submitting reports from committees.

Mr. LANHAM. I will withdraw the motion for that purpose.

Mr. BAYNE. I hope the gentleman from Minnesota will not insist upon his objection. This, as I have said, is reported unanimously from the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and is a matter that should be promptly attended to.

Mr. MACDONALD. Very well; I will withdraw the objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there further objection to the consideration of the joint resolution?

There being no objection, the joint resolution (H. Res. 113) was read a first and second time, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, and being read the third time, was passed.

Mr. BAYNE moved to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. LANHAM. At the request of a number of gentlemen, I withdraw the motion I made a short time since.

Mr. DOCKERY. I demand the regular order.

Mr. ROGERS. I ask unanimous consent to make a report from the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. STEELE. I hope we can be permitted to submit reports on private bills.

PROTECTION OF UNITED STATES OFFICIALS IN INDIAN TERRITORY.

Mr. ROGERS, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported back with amendments the bill (H. R. 4920) for the protection of the officials of the United States in the Indian Territory; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

J. Q. BARTON.

Mr. BOUTELLE, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, reported back with amendments the joint resolution (H.

Res. 68) in favor of J. Q. Barton; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the amendments and accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

SARAH C. MORRISON.

Mr. BOUTELLE also, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, reported back with an amendment the bill (H. R. 5550) for the relief of Sarah C. Morrison; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the amendment and accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

THOMAS W. LORD.

Mr. STEELE, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 409) for the relief of Thomas W. Lord; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

BRIDGE ACROSS STATEN ISLAND SOUND.

Mr. CRISP, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 5929) to extend the time for the completion of a bridge across Staten Island Sound; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOHN A. HEARD.

Mr. STOCKDALE, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 5589) for the relief of John A. Heard; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

GEORGE L. KEY.

Mr. STOCKDALE also, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 753) for the relief of George L. Key; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

GEORGE A. NORTON.

Mr. GAINES, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on War Claims, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 651) for the relief of George A. Norton; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

IMPORTATION OF FOREIGNERS UNDER CONTRACT.

Mr. BINGHAM, by unanimous consent, introduced (by request) a bill (H. R. 7381) to amend an act to prohibit the importation and immigration of foreigners and aliens under contract or agreement to perform labor in the United States, its Territories, or the District of Columbia; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

BUSINESS OF LABOR COMMITTEE.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on Labor, reported with the recommendation that it be adopted the following resolution; which was read, and referred to the House Calendar:

Resolved, That Tuesday the 13th and Wednesday the 14th day of March, 1888, immediately after the hour for the consideration of bills, be set apart for the consideration of bills and resolutions from the Committee on Labor, and that pending the consideration of such bills and resolutions the speeches be limited to fifteen minutes.

PROTECTION OF FISHERMEN.

Mr. DINGLEY. I ask unanimous consent to present a communication for reference. It is the report of United States Commercial Agent Robertson, at Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, suggesting the importance of measures to protect fishermen sent out in dories from vessels engaged in fishing. I ask that the report be referred to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, and that it be printed.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

EXPENDITURES OF FISH COMMISSION.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky, from the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, reported back, with the recommendation that it be adopted, the following resolution:

Resolved by the House of Representatives, That the Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries be, and he is hereby, directed to report to this House as soon as practicable the expenditures of the Fish Commission for the fiscal year from July 1, 1886, to June 30, 1887, and from July 1, 1887, to February 1, 1888, the number of persons employed and the salaries paid; the property held by the commission, its cost, value, and location; the stations occupied by the commission, and the amount of unexpended appropriations, and for what purpose said appropriations were made.

The resolution was adopted.

SARAH C. MORRISON.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I ask unanimous consent to call up from the Private Calendar for consideration at this time the bill (H. R. 5550) for the relief of Sarah C. Morrison, which has been reported by the Committee on Naval Affairs with an amendment.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Sarah C. Morrison, during her lifetime, all pay and allowances due and to become due to George F. Morrison, lieutenant-commander United States Navy (retired), now in the Government Hospital for the Insane, as long as he may live; excepting therefrom the sum of $100 per annum heretofore directed by the Secretary of the Navy to be paid to the superintendent of said hospital.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope there will be a word of explanation in regard to it.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Having reported this bill from the Committee on Naval Affairs I can briefly explain what its purpose is. This officer is now an inmate of the Government Hospital for the Insane and is permanently disabled. This bill provides that the mother, who is the guardian of the officer, but who now is unable to apply any of his salary except the $100 provided by order of the Secretary of the Navy for maintenance in the hospital—that the mother being the only dependent, the officer having no wife or child, may receive the pay and devote the portion of it not required for the maintenance of the officer to her own support.

Mr. HOLMAN. Does the bill provide that this shall be paid to her during her life?

Mr. BOUTELLE. It provides that it shall be paid to her as long as this officer may live.

Mr. MACDONALD. Are the committee satisfied that this officer is afflicted by an incurable malady?

Mr. BOUTELLE. The committee made an investigation as to that, and got a report from the surgeon that the malady is what is called chronic dementia.

The amendment reported by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 3, strike out "Treasury" and insert "Navy."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. WILLIAMS moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take up the bill (H. R. 1070) for the relief of J. A. Wilson.

Mr. BLAND. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Missouri, that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, I rose to make a motion, and yielded the floor temporarily.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The floor can not be yielded conditionally, but the Chair will entertain the motion which the gentleman from Texas desires to make, he having stated that he rose for that purpose.

Mr. LANHAM. I move then, sir, that the House do now take a recess until half past 11 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. BLAND. I renew my motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas moves that the House take a recess until to-morrow at half past 11 o'clock, and pending that the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BLAND] moves that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. BURROWS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to make a suggestion to the gentleman from Texas.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. A motion to adjourn or to take a recess is not debatable, and the gentleman from Michigan can proceed only by unanimous consent.

Mr. BURROWS. I merely want to suggest to my friend that instead of taking a recess until 11 o'clock to-morrow, it seems to me that we might, by unanimous consent, have gentlemen recognized alternately on each side of the House for private bills, and might pass a good many more of those bills this afternoon than we can to-morrow. There is a large number of them to which there is no objection.

The question was taken on the motion to adjourn; and on a division there were—ayes 40, noes 87.

So the House refused to adjourn.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question now is on the motion of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM] to take a recess until half past 11 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. HOOKER. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HOOKER. My inquiry is this: The House, by a former order made on a former day, designated yesterday and to-morrow as days for the consideration of reports from the Committee on Foreign Affairs. The whole of yesterday was occupied by other matters, and subject-matters reported from that committee were excluded from consideration, and if this proposed recess is taken it will effect the same object to-morrow. I see no reason for it at all. These matters on the Private Calendar can be considered in the order in which they occur.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That is a matter of argument and not a parliamentary inquiry. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM] to take a recess until half past 11.

Mr. HOOKER. Pending that motion, I move that when the House adjourns it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

The question was taken on the motion of Mr. HOOKER, and there were—ayes 101, noes 47.

Mr. TAULBEE. No quorum.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The point being made that no quorum has voted, the Chair will appoint to act as tellers the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HOOKER] and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM].

The tellers took their places, and the division began.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I now move that the House adjourn.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That motion is not in order, because since the last motion to adjourn was decided no business has intervened, and, besides, the House is now dividing.

Mr. LANHAM (before the report of the tellers). I will withdraw the motion made by me to take a recess until half past 11 o'clock to-morrow, and will move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. TAULBEE. I make the point of order that the House is now dividing and that the gentleman's motion is not in order, and if he withdraws his motion for a recess I will renew it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE] renew the point that no quorum has voted?

Mr. TAULBEE. No, sir. It is not necessary to renew it. I made it and it has not been withdrawn.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair understood the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HOOKER] to withdraw his motion.

Mr. HOOKER. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM] withdraws his motion, and I withdraw mine, and he moves that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. TAULBEE. I move that the House take a recess until half past 11 to-morrow.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HOOKER] withdraws his point of order; the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM] withdraws his motion, and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE] renews it.

Mr. TAULBEE. I do.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I made the point of order, and I have not withdrawn it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair understood that the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HOOKER] had made it, and on that account appointed him a teller. The Chair begs pardon of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BLAND]. The point of order being insisted upon, the tellers will resume their places.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, as I understand it, the gentleman from Mississippi withdraws his motion and I withdraw the point of order.

Mr. STEELE. I move that when the House adjourn it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE] renews the motion that the House take a recess until half past 11 o'clock to-morrow, and, pending that, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. STEELE] moves that when the House adjourn it be to meet on Monday next.

Mr. LANHAM. Pending that, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The motion to fix a day to which the House will adjourn takes precedence of a motion to adjourn, and the question is on the motion of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. STEELE] that when the House adjourn it be to meet on Monday next.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore declared that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. TAULBEE. I call for a division.

The question being again taken,

The SPEAKER pro tempore said: On this question the ayes are 97, the noes 33.

Mr. BLAND. No quorum.

Mr. TAULBEE. No quorum.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The point being made that no quorum has voted, the Chair appoints as tellers the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE] and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM].

Mr. BURROWS. We may as well have the yeas and nays on this question. I demand the yeas and nays.

Several MEMBERS. Oh, no!

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BURROWS] demands the yeas and nays on this question.

Mr. TAULBEE. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. TAULBEE. As I understand, the motion on which we just voted was that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That is correct.

Mr. TAULBEE. If that motion be carried, will it give any rights to the Foreign Affairs Committee under the special order?

Several MEMBERS. Oh, no!

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If this motion should be agreed to, the House would not be in session to-morrow.

Mr. LANHAM. The reason I withdrew my motion for a recess was because the Committee on Foreign Affairs had had to-morrow specially assigned for their business.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. On this question the yeas and nays are demanded.

The question having been put on ordering the yeas and nays,

The SPEAKER pro tempore said: Only 19 have voted in the affirmative—not one-fifth of the last vote.

Mr. TAULBEE. On what question was the House dividing?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. On the proposition that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet on Monday next. There not being one-fifth of the last vote in favor of ordering the yeas and nays, the yeas and nays are refused. The gentleman from Kentucky and the gentleman from Texas will take their places as tellers.

Mr. LANHAM. Is it in order to move that the House now adjourn?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state that the motion to fix the day to which the House shall adjourn is of higher privilege than the motion to adjourn.

Mr. LANHAM. But on that motion no quorum has voted.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The point being made that no quorum voted, it is competent for the House to take a vote on the motion to adjourn. No quorum appearing on the motion to adjourn over, and the point of order being insisted upon, there are, under the rules, only two motions in order, the motion to adjourn and the motion that there be a call of the House.

Mr. TAULBEE. I withdraw the point of no quorum.

Mr. LANHAM. I move that the House adjourn.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (having put the question on the motion to adjourn) said: The noes seem to have it.

Several members called for a division.

The SPEAKER pro tempore proceeded to put the question again on the motion to adjourn; and announced—ayes 57.

Mr. MACDONALD (before the count of the negative vote on the motion to adjourn). I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. What will be the result of this motion if adopted?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If adopted, the House will at once adjourn; if not, it will remain in session.

Mr. PERKINS. Adjourn till when? I submit the adjournment must be till Monday; for certainly the House has adopted that order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. But the point was made that no quorum voted on that question. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Texas, that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. BUCHANAN. But, Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The House is dividing on that motion.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Was not the motion adopted that when the House adjourns it adjourn to met on Monday next?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It was not; no quorum voted, and the point of order was insisted upon that there was no quorum voting.

Mr. PERKINS. The point of "no quorum" was withdrawn, and therefore upon the vote which had been taken the motion must have carried.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The House will be in order.

Mr. HOOKER. I rise to a point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Mississippi will state his point of order.

Mr. HOOKER. My point is this: The gentleman from Kentucky made a motion that when the House adjourns, it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

Mr. STEELE. I made that motion.

Mr. HOOKER. Very well; the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. STEELE] made that motion. Now, while the House was dividing on that motion, as I understand, it was withdrawn.

Several MEMBERS. Oh, no!

Mr. HOOKER. And then the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LANHAM] moved that the House adjourn, which, if agreed to, would of course be an adjournment until 12 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. STEELE. I rise to a point of order. I submit that until my motion is disposed of the motion to adjourn until to-morrow is not in order. I made a motion that when the House adjourns it adjourn until Monday next; the vote of the majority was in favor of that motion; the point of "no quorum" was made, which point was subsequently withdrawn, and hence my motion carried.

Mr. PERKINS. The announcement of the result of the vote on the motion to adjourn till Monday had not been made by the Chair.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. As the Chair now remembers, the final result had not been announced.

Mr. PERKINS. No, sir. As the point that no quorum voted was withdrawn the Chair should have announced the result; and the motion to adjourn is not in order until that is done.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair understood that the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BLAND] made the point that no quorum voted.

Mr. PERKINS. Oh, no; the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAUL-

BEE] made the point and withdrew it; and then the result should have been announced.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will announce the result of that vote. The ayes are 97, the noes 33. The ayes have it, and the motion prevails.

Mr. BLAND. What motion is that?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

Mr. BLAND. I made the point of order that no quorum voted on that motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BLAND] makes the point of order that no quorum voted. The Chair will state that there could be no point made until the announcement of the result of the vote.

Mr. TAULBEE. I rise to a point of order. My point is that when the Chair announced the number voting on the motion of the gentleman from Indiana, that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet on Monday next, I made the point that no quorum had voted. Tellers were then ordered. Afterward I withdrew the point of "no quorum," and the Chair has announced the result. I submit that it is now too late for the gentleman from Missouri to make his point of order.

Mr. BLAND. I made the point at the same time as the gentleman from Kentucky. I desire to say, Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The House will be in order, and the Chair will recognize no gentleman until it does come to order.

Mr. RYAN. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will entertain the motion of the gentleman in due time. The Chair will state that having announced the vote in the House on the motion that when the House adjourns it adjourn to meet on Monday next, there being 97 in the affirmative and 33 in the negative, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BLAND] and probably others then made the point that no quorum had voted.

Mr. STEELE. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE] made that point.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It makes no difference who made it; that point is now before the House.

Mr. TAULBEE rose.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will recognize the gentleman in a moment.

The Chair appoints as tellers the gentleman from Missouri and the gentleman from Kentucky. The gentleman from Kentucky will now be recognized.

Mr. TAULBEE. My point is this: When the number voting on the motion of the gentleman from Indiana had been announced, I made the point that no quorum had voted, and the Chair then appointed the gentleman from Texas and myself as tellers. Whether or not the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BLAND] made the point of order is now immaterial, from the fact the Chair proceeded to announce the result of that division, and did announce it, and therefore the point of order of the gentleman from Missouri, that no quorum had voted, comes too late.

Mr. BLAND rose.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BLAND] rose in his place and insisted that he made the point at the time that the gentleman from Kentucky made it. The Chair is bound to take the statement of the gentleman from Missouri——

Mr. TAULBEE. I make the further point that it is now immaterial whether or not he made the point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Missouri after the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. TAULBEE. My point of order is that it is now immaterial whether or not the gentleman from Missouri made the point that no quorum had voted as the result of the vote had been announced by the Chair [confusion in the Hall], because of the fact of my withdrawal of the point of order which I had made. [Laughter and confusion.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair begs to state that if not successful in preserving order he will be compelled to resort to other means provided by the rules. [After a pause.] The Chair appointed the gentleman from Missouri and the gentleman from Kentucky to act as tellers. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BLAND] having insisted that he made his point of order in time, the Chair is bound to accept his statement as conclusive, and therefore the tellers will resume their places.

Mr. DUNHAM. Is the motion to adjourn in order? [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Not pending a division of the House on a motion to adjourn over.

Mr. TAULBEE and Mr. BLAND resumed their places as tellers.

The House divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 109, noes 18.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the point of no quorum insisted upon?

Mr. TAULBEE. I withdraw it.

Mr. HOOKER. I make the point that no quorum has voted.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will recognize no one until order is restored.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I demand the yeas and nays on the motion to adjourn over.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Missouri insists upon the point that no quorum has voted, and pending that, there being no quorum present and the point of order being insisted on, the gentleman from Kansas moves that the House adjourn.

The House divided, and before the result was announced—

Mr. STEELE. I move when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That is not in order pending the announcement of the vote on the motion to adjourn.

Mr. BURROWS. Why, Mr. Speaker, it has been decided over and over again that pending the motion to adjourn, even after the call of the roll on such motion is completed, but before the announcement of the result, a motion is in order to fix the day to which the House will adjourn. The motion of the gentleman from Indiana is clearly in order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Upon reflection the Chair thinks the gentleman from Michigan is correct.

The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. STEELE] now moves that when the House adjourns to-day it be to meet on Monday next.

The motion was agreed to.

The result of the vote on the motion to adjourn was then announced, there being—ayes 99, noes 49; and accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 45 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until Monday.

PRIVATE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED AND REFERRED.

Under the rule private bills and joint resolutions of the following titles were introduced and referred as indicated below:

By Mr. BLAND: A bill (H. R. 7349) for the relief of James Morgan—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BLOUNT: A bill (H. R. 7350) for the relief of Mrs. Mary S. Stone, administratrix—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BUTLER: A bill (H. R. 7351) granting a pension to Mary M. Smith, widow of J. A. Smith—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7352) granting pension to Jasper Brown—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7353) granting a pension to Elizabeth J. Johnson, widow of William H. Johnson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7354) for the relief of the legal representatives of Miranna Jennings—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. CANNON: A bill (H. R. 7355) for the relief of Charles Lee—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. COCKRAN: A bill (H. R. 7356) to provide for the payment of the mayor, aldermen, and commonalty of the city of New York—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. COMPTON: A bill (H. R. 7357) for the relief of Henrietta V. Minnix—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. FINLEY: A bill (H. R. 7358) for the relief of Stephen J. Watts—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HERMANN: A bill (H. R. 7359) for the relief of P. B. Sinnott, late Indian agent at Grande Ronde agency, State of Orggon—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. HUTTON: A bill (H. R. 7360) granting a pension to Thomas M. Swearinger—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McCOMAS: A bill (H. R. 7361) for the relief of John Joseph Bradshaw—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7362) for the relief of John Heflebower—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MERRIMAN: A bill (H. R. 7363) for the relief of the legal representatives of James Hale—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. MORSE: A bill (H. R. 7364) for the relief of Joseph Richardson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. NELSON (by request): A bill (H. R. 7365) for the relief of John W. West—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. J. H. O'NEALL: A bill (H. R. 7366) granting relief to Miles Ragsdale—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7367) for the relief of Daniel Monaghan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7368) for the relief of John W. Wainman—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. OSBORNE: A bill (H. R. 7369) for the relief of Jabez C. Jackson—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. PEEL: A bill (H. R. 7370) for the relief of Elizabeth Fitzhugh—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7371) for the relief of Thomas I. Hicks—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7372) for the relief of Mahala Fields—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7373) granting a pension to Charlotte C. Evans—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PUGSLEY: A bill (H. R. 7374) granting a pension to Samuel Withrow—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. J. D. TAYLOR: A bill (H. R. 7375) for the relief of Francis Hammond—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WILLIAMS: A bill (H. R. 7376) to place the name of Edward Drury on the pension-roll—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GLASS: A bill (H. R. 7377) to remove the charge of desertion against John G. Alstrom—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HOLMES: A bill (H. R. 7378) granting a pension to Edwin D. Partridge—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. VANDEVER: A bill (H. R. 7379) granting a pension to Charles H. Edmonds—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. S. V. WHITE: A bill (H. R. 7380) granting a pension to Mary Fillyrave—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Changes in the reference of bills improperly referred were made in the following cases, namely:

A bill (H. R. 1152) for the relief of the legal representatives of Eliza M. Ferris—from the Committee on Pensions to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6410) for the relief of Frank W. Webster—from the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 575) for the relief of Payne, James & Co.—from the Committee on Claims to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 2954) to grant a pension to William T. Williams—from the Committee on Pensions to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 167) for the relief of Daniel T. Hedges and Edward B. Spalding, executors of Charles E. Hedges—from the Committee on Claims to the Committee on War Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk, under the rule, and referred as follows:

By Mr. J. M. ALLEN: Papers in the claim of Daniel Brown, of Tishomingo County, Mississippi—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. C. S. BAKER: Petition of citizens of Conostoga, N. Y., in favor of the bill to reduce letter postage—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. BANKHEAD: Petition of Jonathan Sides, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BLANCHARD: Papers in the claims of Ezra B. Towne, of Euphrazee Carlin, of Louisa B. Martin, of John J. Gardiner, of Emil V. Glover, of Jeff. J. Caffery, of Jane Hopkins, of Carter Carr, of Zuline Augamar, of John Mocbins, administrator of Irena Brown, of Jasper Gall, of Celestine Dauterive, of Mary E. Jones, of Johanna Unkle, of Thomas K. Smith, of Benjamin Temple, of Jane M. Anderson, and of Francis Bouligny, of Louisiana—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BOWDEN: Petition of S. G. Webb and others, for survey of Chuckatuck River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. W. C. P. BRECKINRIDGE: Petition of Joseph L. Flood, of Elizabeth Demaree, of James Cobline, of Parkham Calloway, of William A. Bohannon, of Stephen Scobee, of Harrison Robert, of William Pollard, of Francis Ford, of J. M. McClelland, of Chistie Scobee, and of Paschall Rucker, of Kentucky, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. T. M. BROWNE: Memorial of 456 citizens of Richmond, Ind., for an appropriation of $100,000 for the erection of a public building in that city—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. BRUMM: Petition of the borough of Ashland, Pa., for a general law for public buildings—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. BURNETT: Memorial of the selectmen of Milford, Mass., for the Government to own its post-offices, etc.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. BURROWS: Petition of clerks in the post-office at San Francisco, Cal., for increase of salary—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. BUTLER: Petition of Rebecca Bowers, for relief—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of John Gilbert, of Hancock County, and of William T. Smallman, and of John Holt, sr., of Hamblen County, Tennessee, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BUTTERWORTH: Petition of Proctor & Gamble, Emery Candle Company, M. Werk & Co., and others, manufacturers, of Cincinnati, Ohio, for increase of duty on glycerine—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Mary Dammert, of Cincinnati, Ohio, widow of the late William Dammert, of the First Regiment Ohio Battery, for a pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of the Western Tract Society, of Cincinnati, Ohio, for reduction in postage on monthly periodicals—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, resolution of the Chamber of Commerce, recommending increase of appropriations for improvement of the Kentucky River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. FELIX CAMPBELL: Petition of members of the Society of Old Brooklynites of Brooklyn, N. Y., for the erection of a monument at that city in memory of the prison-ship martyrs—to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. CANNON: Petition of John Price and others, of Fairmount, Ill., to pension Charles Lee, late of Company I, Thirty-fifth Regiment Illinois Volunteers—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CLARDY: Petition of 25 plate-glass blowers, and of 20 plate-glass blowers, of Jefferson County, Missouri, for retention of tariff on plate-glass—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, paper to accompany House bill 6013, for the relief of Anthony Connolly—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of 28 window-glass workers, of St. Louis County, Missouri, against reduction of tariff on window-glass—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Cigar-Makers' Union, of St. Louis, protesting against the repeal of the tax on cigars—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. COCKRAN: Petition from 190 woolen and worsted mills of the United States and 110 merchants of New York City, for the classification of worsted as woolen cloth—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. COGSWELL: Petition of Richard Matthews, for a pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. COMPTON: Petition of John Hughes, of N. Brewer, executor, and of Thomas J. Franklin, of Anne Arundel County, Maryland, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. COX: Papers in the case of Hugo Wedeles, for relief—to the Committee on Indian Depredation Claims.

By Mr. CUTCHEON: Memorial of Bricklayers' Union, of Muskegon, Mich., recommending John T. Lynch—to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. DE LANO: Petition from the S. L. Judd Grand Army of the Republic Post, No. 377, of Windsor, N. Y., for the passage of the service-pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DINGLEY: Petition of John J. Frye and others, of Maine, for settlement of disputes between the United States and Great Britain by arbitration—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. ERMENTROUT: Memorial of J. W. Bird, M. D., for the passage of the bill to reduce postage on seeds, plants, and bulbs—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. FISHER: Petition of F. H. Brooman and 25 others, and of F. W. Gilchrist and 28 others, requesting that salary of keepers of Life-Saving Service and surfmen be increased—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, petition of the common council of Petoskey, Mich., for public buildings in all towns of 3,000 inhabitants and over—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. FRENCH (by request): Petition of members of Mad River Grange, No. 71, Patrons of Husbandry, of Waterbury, Conn., for reissue of fractional currency—to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. FULLER: Petition of Dorus M. Fox, for a pension from date of disability—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of the faculty of Upper Iowa University, of Iowa, for an international copyright law—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. GIFFORD: Petition of Ralph Ely Post, No. 45, Grand Army of the Republic, of Dakota, for the passage of dependent pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GROUT: Petition of the Grand Lodge of Good Templars of Vermont, for a commission to inquire into the alcoholic liquor traffic—to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

Also, petition of same, for prohibitory constitutional amendment—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, protest of West Branch Lumberman's Exchange, of Williamsport, Pa., against reducing the duty on lumber—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolutions of a meeting of citizens of San Francisco, Cal., demanding the exclusion of Chinese—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. HARMER: Two memorials of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, in favor of declaring Washington's birthday a legal holiday—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HAUGEN: Petition of the Red Cedar Assembly, No. 5448, of Menomonee, Wis., for relief—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. J. S. HENDERSON: Petition of William Schaus, for placing paintings and sculptures on the free-list—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, memorial of the Laundrymen's National Association, in favor of the Mitchell anti-Chinese bill—to the Committee on Foreign Afairs.

Also, resolutions of citizens of San Francisco, Cal., for the exclusion of Chinese from the United States—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, memorial of the Board of Trade and others, of Philadelphia, for an international maritime conference—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. T. J. HENDERSON: Petition of Emma Sanger and others, of Amboy, Ill., for a pension to Louis Sanger—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. S. I. HOPKINS: Petition of John M. Stewart, administrator of Richard Parsons, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, papers in the claim of Thomas Y. Mosby, of Bedford County, Virginia—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. S. T. HOPKINS: Memorial of the authorities of Kingston, N. Y., for discontinuing the present system of appropriations for public buildings, etc.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. HOUK: Petition of A. A. Caldwell, of Jefferson County, and of D. H. Willis, administrator of Dr. R. Snead, of Knox County, Tennessee, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. HUDD: Petition of James Bell, mayor of Sheboygan, Wis., and the aldermen and citizens of said city, for the erection of a public building at that place—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. JACKSON: Evidence in the case of George H. Rider—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, evidence in the cases of George Harkin and of William P. Withrow for relief—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. LAIDLAW: Petition of the Thirty-fourth district of New York, relating to the tariff on wool—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LAFFOON: An act of the General Assembly of Kentucky relative to the improvement of the Green and Barren Rivers—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. LEE: Papers in the claim of Peter and Anson B. Nodine—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. McADOO: Joint resolution for an appropriation for the removal of Smith's, or Windmill Island, from the Delaware River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. McCLAMMY: Petition of J. T. Foy, son and heir of Mary A. Foy, late of Pender County, North Carolina, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. McCOMAS: Petition of Charles G. Biggs, administrator of B. F. Rohrback, of Washington County, Maryland, for reference of his claim—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MORGAN: Papers in the claim of Georgie C. Greer, of Panola County, Mississippi—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. NEWTON: Petition and protest of citizens of Madison, La., against the Dawes bill for suppression of cotton-seed oil in its use as a substitute for hog lard—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. CHARLES O'NEILL: Protest of the West Branch (Pa.) Lumberman's Exchange, against the change in the duty on lumber—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, memorial of the Paint Club, of Philadelphia, for a survey and an appropriation for the removal of Smith's, or Windmill, and Petty's Islands from the Delaware River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. OSBORNE: Resolutions of West Branch Lumberman's Exchange, of Pennsylvania, protesting against removal of duty on lumber—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, joint memorial of the Board of Trade, Commercial Exchange, etc., for an international maritime conference to be held in the United States—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of citizens of San Francisco, Cal., relating to Chinese immigration—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. PEEL: Papers in the claim of John Miser, of Bruten County, Arkansas—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. PERKINS: Petition of John F. Thompson, J. P. Slaughter, and others, citizens of Chetopa, Kans., for a Government system of telegraphy—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. PHELAN: Petition of Henry M. Green, of Fayette County, Tennessee, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. PUGSLEY: Petition of William H. Glen and 199 other members of the John M. Barrier Post, Grand Army of the Republic, for the repeal of the second section of the arrearage-of-pension act of March 3, 1879—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of S. S. Wells and 83 others, citizens of Bainbridge, Ross County, Ohio, for the passage of a 1 cent per day pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RANDALL: Petition of Lawrence Johnson & Co., Pennsylvania Warehousing and Safe Deposit Company, and others, that duties on imported merchandise deposited in bonded warehouse be assessed upon the quantity delivered from, instead of quantity entering into, the warehouse—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolution of the Junior Order United American Mechanics, of Philadelphia, Pa., asking that the 22d day of February be declared a legal holiday—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. RICE: Resolution of the Chamber of Commerce of Minneapolis, Minn., protesting against certain proposed legislation with respect to commerce between the United States and Canada, and amendments to the interstate-commerce law—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. RICHARDSON: Petition and papers of Eth. B. Wade, heir of Levi Wade, of Rutherford County, Tennessee, for reference to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of James J. Ward, of Rutherford County, Tennessee, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. SCULL: Memorial of the authorities of the borough of Tyrone, Pa., relative to public buildings—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. STAHLNECKER: Joint memorial of the Board of Trade, Commercial, Maritime, and Drug Exchanges, Vessel-Owners and Captains' Associations, calling for an act authorizing an international maritime conference in the United States—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. STEELE: Petition of citizens of Blufftown, Ind., that instead of spending so much money for large cities, Congress appropriate, say, $2,000 for each 1,000 people for public buildings in towns of 3,000 inhabitants—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. J. D. TAYLOR: Petition of 11 old soldiers from Hendrysburgh, Belmont County, Ohio, for a service pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. G. M. THOMAS: Petition of T. H. Bellany, for relief—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Seth Parker Post, No. 63, Grand Army of the Republic, and others, in favor of the bill to remove the limitation of arrearages of pensions—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. E. J. TURNER: Papers in the case of Thomas Foster, for relief—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WASHINGTON: Petition of heir of James W. Hoggett, of Davidson County, Tennessee, for reference of his case to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WEBER: Petition and joint memorial for an international maritime conference—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. WHEELER: Papers in the claim of heirs of L. E. Wilkerson, of Harriet M. Jones, of F. D. Hurt, and of David B. Johnson, of Alabama—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of heirs of Jesse T. Trice, of Jackson County; of A. Eckeberger and of Henry C. Rice, of Lawrence County, and of Mary M. Westmoreland, of Lauderdale County, Alabama, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WHITTHORNE: Petition of H. C. Moses, of Giles County, Tennessee, for reference of his case to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. W. L. WILSON: Petition of George Deck; of Mary A. Kile; of Anna P. Myers, administratrix of James Myers; of James W. Glenn, administrator of William Grove; of John Beck; of John M. Harmon; of John W. Gardner, heir of Francis Gardner; of Hannah T. F. Butler; of John W. Gardner; of Louisa Eichelberger, widow of George W. Eichelberger; of W. H. Neargs, executor of Aaron Bean; of A. H. Tanguary, administrator of David Fry; of George Shaw; of Moses C. Bayler, and of Andrew Aldrige, of West Virginia, for reference of their claims to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. YOST: Memorial of the Board of Trade, etc., of Philadelphia, Pa., for an act authorizing the calling of an international marine conference in the United States—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, resolutions of the West Branch Lumberman's Exchange of Williamsport, Pa., protesting against placing lumber on the free-list—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

The following petitions for an increase of compensation of fourth-class postmasters were severally referred to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads:

By Mr. COWLES: Of citizens of Mulberry, Wilkes County, North Carolina.

By Mr. ERMENTROUT: Of J. M. Stonerod, of Birmingham, Pa.

By Mr. T. D. JOHNSTON: Of Barah Wright and others, of Short Off, and of J. L. Burchfield and others, of Tito, N. C.

By Mr. McCLAMMY: Of citizens of Montrose, Cumberland County, North Carolina.

By Mr. PATTON: Of 56 citizens of Salona, Clinton County, Pennsylvania.

By Mr. ROWLAND: Of citizens of Wharey, Cabarrus County, North Carolina.

By Mr. WHEELER: Of W. J. Swann and 7 others, of Jackson County, Alabama.

The following petitions, praying for the enactment of a law providing temporary aid for common schools, to be disbursed on the basis of illiteracy, were severally referred to the Committee on Education.

By Mr. C. R. BRECKINRIDGE: Of 141 citizens of White County, Arkansas.

By Mr. BUNNELL: Of 240 citizens of Beaver County, Pennsylvania.

By Mr. GALLINGER: Of 137 citizens of Hillsborough County, New Hampshire.

By Mr. GROUT: Of 419 citizens of Windham County, Vermont.

By Mr. HALL: Of 397 citizens of Mercer County, Pennsylvania.

By Mr. S. T. HOPKINS: Of 215 citizens of Delaware County, New York.

By Mr. WEBER (by request): Of 271 citizens of Erie County, New York.

The following petitions, asking for the passage of the bill prohibiting the manufacture, sale, and importation of all alcoholic beverages in the District of Columbia, were severally referred to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic:

By Mr. SCULL: Of citizens of the Seventeenth district of Pennsylvania.

By Mr. GRANGER (by request): Of citizens of the Fourth district of Connecticut.

By Mr. PATTON: Of 118 citizens of the Twentieth district of Pennsylvania.

SENATE.

MONDAY, February 20, 1888.

Prayer by Rev. WILLIAM BRUSH, D. D., president of Dakota University, Mitchell, Dak.

The Journal of the proceedings of Thursday last was read and approved.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATION.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Postmaster-General, transmitting copies of the new parcels post convention between the United States and the Bahamas; which, with the accompanying documents, was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

CHARLES R. WESTBROOK.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, in response to a resolution of January 31, 1888, a copy of the stenographic notes of the testimony of Charles R. Westbrook as assistant district attorney for the southern district of New York; which was read.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, in response to a resolution of January 31, 1888, the facts attending the employment and compensation of Charles R. Westbrook as assistant district attorney for the southern district of New York, together with copies of correspondence on the subject.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. These communications, with the accompanying papers, will lie on the table until the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE] comes in.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a petition of citizens of the United States, respecting the opening of what is known as the Neutral Strip, and asking for the establishment of a land district and the location of a land office at Central City; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

He also presented the petition of C. M. Bellows, of New York, praying for the appointment of a commission to investigate the alleged charges against the Roman Catholic priesthood because of the practice of auricular confession; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a petition of 24 citizens of New London, Conn., praying that the salary of the keepers of the Life-Saving Service be increased to $1,000 a year; also that the pay of surfmen of that service be raised to $75 a month; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

He also presented the petition of J. J. Parker, Fredonia, Kans., praying for the abolition of the internal-revenue system of taxation, for the removal of restrictions from American shipping and commerce by repealing registration laws, for the removal of the duty on wool used in carpet manufacture, and for the removal of the duty on garden and other seed; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented resolutions of the National Temperance Society, in favor of the passage of the bill prohibiting the liquor traffic in the District of Columbia; which were referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. QUAY presented a petition of Union soldiers and sailors of Tioga County, Pennsylvania, praying for the passage of a service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a petition of citizens of New Jersey, praying for the passage of a law prohibiting the taking of fish for any other purpose than for food within 3 miles of the Atlantic coast; which was referred to the Committee on Fisheries.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I present the memorial of Governor E. J. Ormsbee, of Vermont, Oliver Ames, governor of Massachusetts, and Charles H. Sawyer, the governor of New Hampshire, and of the directors of the Bennington Battle Monument Association, setting forth the state of the moneys that have been raised and appropriated by Congress and by these several States and by private citizens to that object, the progress they have made, and stating in substance that some further moderate appropriation is necessary for the purpose of erecting an iron staircase in the monument and having an iron or bronze door at the entrance at the bottom, and putting on what they suggest, the effigies of two or three of the Revolutionary heroes who were engaged in that battle; which, together with an accompanying paper of the engineer in charge, I commend to the favorable consideration of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom I move that the memorial be referred.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I present the petition of a large number of citizens of the First and Second Congressional districts of Vermont, praying for the passage of the bill prohibiting the manufacture and sale of alcoholic drinks in this District. I move that the petition be referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN presented a petition of the soldiers and sailors' convention, Geauga County, Ohio, praying for the passage of the service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Ohio, praying that Union soldiers confined in rebel prisons without compensation or pay be granted a pension of not less than $12 a month and $2 a day for time of imprisonment; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[House joint resolution No. 8.]

Joint resolution requesting Congress to pass a law granting a pension to every honorably discharged Union soldier who was confined in rebel prisons, and the payment of an additional $2 per day for every day so imprisoned.

Resolved by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, That the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States are requested by the Sixty-eighth General Assembly of the State of Ohio, to pass a law providing that all honorably discharged Union soldiers of the late war who were confined in rebel prisons be placed on the pension-rolls of the United States at not less than $12 per month, and that they receive the sum of $2 per day for the time they were so imprisoned.

Resolved, That the governor of the State of Ohio forward a copy of this resolution to the Senate and House of Representatives.

ELBERT L. LAMPSON,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
WM. C. LYON,
President of the Senate.

Adopted February 10, 1888.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, OHIO,
Office of the Secretary of State:

I, James S. Robinson, secretary of state of the State of Ohio, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of a joint resolution adopted by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio on the 10th day of February, A. D. 1888, taken from the original rolls filed in this office.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto subscribed my name and affixed my official seal at Columbus, the 10th day of February, A. D. 1888.

JAMES S. ROBINSON,
Secretary of State.

EXECUTIVE CHAMBER, Columbus, Ohio, February 11, 1888.

In compliance with the request contained in the resolution above set forth, I have the honor to transmit a certified copy of the same herewith.

J. B. FORAKER, Governor.

Mr. SHERMAN presented a petition of 29 soldiers of Mercer County, Ohio, praying for the passage of the one cent a day pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a resolution of the Cincinnati (Ohio) Chamber of Commerce, urging the prevention of the importation of adulterated articles of food or drink under any other names than those which legitimately pertain to them; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a joint resolution of the General Assembly of Ohio in favor of the passage of the bill to grant arrears of pension to soldiers drawing pensions for loss of limb or limbs; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[Senate joint resolution No. 7.]

Joint resolution instructing our Senators and requesting our Representatives in Congress to use all honorable means to secure the passage of Senate bill No. 913.

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That from and after the passage of this act, all persons on the pension-rolls of the United States who are drawing pensions on account of loss of limb or limbs shall be entitled to receive arrears of pension from date of discharge or disability, and covering all the time up to the passage of the act or acts authorizing the issuance of their last pension certificate, at the same rate per month to which the certificate entitles them:" Therefore,

Be it resolved by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, That our Senators in Congress are instructed and our Representatives in Congress are requested to use all honorable means to secure the passage of such bill, and that the governor be requested to forward a copy of this resolution to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

ELBERT L. LAMPSON,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
THEO. F. DAVIS,
President pro tempore of the Senate.

Adopted February 1, 1888.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, OHIO,
Office of the Secretary of State:

I, James S. Robinson, secretary of state of the State of Ohio, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of a joint resolution adopted by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, on the 1st day of February, A. D. 1888, taken from the original rolls filed in this office.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto subscribed my name and affixed my official seal at Columbus, the 2d day of February, A. D. 1888.

JAMES S. ROBINSON,
Secretary of State.

EXECUTIVE CHAMBER, Columbus, Ohio, February 3, 1888.

In compliance with the request contained in the resolutions above set forth I have the honor to transmit a certified copy of the same herewith.

J. B. FORAKER, Governor.

Mr. SHERMAN presented a petition adopted at a mass meeting in the First Colored Baptist Church of Richmond, Va., praying for the passage of the bill to reimburse the depositors of the Freedman's Savings and Trust Company; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of soldiers and sailors of the Union Army and Navy, of Guernsey, Ohio, praying for the passage of what is known as the one cent a day pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a petition of citizens of Henderson, Ohio, praying for the removal of the duty on salt; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of citizens of Virginia, praying that Joseph Passeno be allowed $25 per day for ferriage across the Potomac River until the Aqueduct bridge is completed; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a resolution of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, in favor of a liberal appropriation for the improvement of slackwater navigation on the Kentucky River; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented a petition of the Chicago Laundrymen's Association, praying for the passage of a law to prohibit Chinese immigration; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a joint resolution of the General Assembly of Ohio, in favor of the passage of Senate bill No. 1206, to equalize the bounties of soldiers, sailors, and marines of the late war for the Union; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[House joint resolution No. 14.]

Joint resolution requesting Congress to pass Senate bill No. 1206, Fiftieth Congress, first session, to equalize the bounties of soldiers, sailors, and marines of the late war for the Union.

Whereas unjust discrimination was used in granting and payment of bounties by the United States Government to the volunteer soldiers, sailors, and marines of the late war for the Union;

Whereas there are many soldiers, sailors, and marines suffering at this time from said unjust discrimination: Therefore,

Be it resolved by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, That it is the sense of this General Assembly that Congress should, at the earliest possible opportunity, pass the above-named Senate bill No. 1206, popularly known as the "Logan bill," and recently reintroduced by Senator PLUMB, of Kansas.

Resolved, That the governor be requested to forward to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress a copy of these resolutions.

ELBERT L. LAMPSON,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
THEO. F. DAVIS,
President pro tempore of the Senate.

Adopted February 1, 1888.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, OHIO,
Office of the Secretary of State:

I, James S. Robinson, secretary of state of the State of Ohio, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of a joint resolution adopted by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio on the 1st day of February, A. D. 1888, taken from the original rolls filed in this office.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto subscribed my name and affixed my official seal at Columbus, the 2d day of February, A. D. 1888.

JAMES S. ROBINSON,
Secretary of State.

EXECUTIVE CHAMBER, Columbus, Ohio, February 3, 1888.

In compliance with the request contained in the resolutions above set forth I have the honor to transmit a certified copy of the same herewith.

J. B. FORAKER, Governor.

Mr. SHERMAN. I present the petition of the widow and daughter of Dr. Charles Francis Hall, late an Arctic explorer, praying to be allowed a pension. I ask that this very interesting paper be printed as an ordinary document, and that it be referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be so ordered, if there be no objection.

Mr. SHERMAN presented a petition of the General Assembly of Ohio, praying for the passage of the pleuro-pneumonia bill; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[House joint resolution No. 15.]

Joint resolution requesting our Senators and Representatives in Congress to support Senator T. W. PALMER's bill relative to the eradication of contagious pleuro-pneumonia among cattle.

Whereas the danger to the cattle industry of this country from contagious pleuro-pneumonia is so great as to necessitate the most thorough means of eradication of this insidious disease; and

Whereas the bill indorsed by all the cattle-breeders' associations and introduced by Senator T. W. PALMER, in the United States Senate, is the only adequate measure devised for the swift and sure stamping out of this disease: Therefore,

Be it resolved, That this General Assembly commend this measure, thus indorsed by the cattle growers of America, and request our Senators and Representatives in Congress to give said bill their support.

Resolved, That the governor be requested to transmit a copy of these preambles and resolutions to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

ELBERT L. LAMPSON,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
THEO. F. DAVIS,
President pro tempore of the Senate.

Adopted February 1, 1888.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, OHIO,
Office of the Secretary of State:

I, James S. Robinson, secretary of state of the State of Ohio, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of a joint resolution adopted by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio on the 1st day of February, A. D. 1888, taken from the original rolls filed in this office.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto subscribed by name and affixed my official seal at Columbus, the 3d day of February, A. D. 1888.

JAMES S. ROBINSON, Secretary of State.

EXECUTIVE CHAMBER, Columbus, Ohio, February 4, 1888.

In compliance with the request contained in the resolutions above set forth, I have the honor to transmit a certified copy of the same herewith.

J. B. FORAKER, Governor.

Mr. BUTLER presented resolutions adopted by citizens of Beaverhead County, Montana Territory, remonstrating against any change of the boundary lines of the Territory; which were referred to the Committee on Territories.

He also presented a memorial of citizens of the district of Alaska, remonstrating against the passage of the bill providing for a Territorial form of government for the district of Alaska; which was referred to the Committee on Territories.

Mr. MCPHERSON presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of New Jersey, favoring an appropriation for the removal of Smith's or Windmill Island from the Delaware River; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. PALMER presented a petition of 107 citizens of the Fifth, Seventh, and Tenth Congressional districts of Michigan, praying for prohibition in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a petition of the heirs of Henry Bradley, praying to be relieved from the payment of certain taxes; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a resolution of the Board of Trade of Detroit, Mich., in favor of the passage of the bill to organize a naval reserve corps upon the Northern lakes; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented a petition of the officers of the Farwell Transportation Company, and other citizens of Michigan, and a petition of S. B. Grummord and other citizens of Michigan, praying for a survey and estimate of cost of a harbor of refuge at False Presque Isle, Lake Huron; which were referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented the petition of G. G. Hartung and 25 other citizens of Macomb County, Michigan, praying for the better protection of wool-growing and woolen manufacturing industries; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. CHACE presented a petition of 129 citizens of the District of Columbia, praying for prohibition in that District; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. PADDOCK presented a petition of the Bricklayers' Union, No. 3, of Beatrice, Nebr., praying that the labor organizations be recognized in the construction of the Congressional Library building; which was referred to the Select Committee on Additional Accommodations for the Library of Congress.

He also presented the petition of William Schaus, of New York, praying that certain imported works of art shall be placed on the free-list; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. HISCOCK presented a petition of 30 citizens of Hudson, N. Y.; a petition of 41 citizens of Alpine, N. Y.; a petition of 72 citizens of Cortland, N. Y.; a petition of 68 citizens of Windsor, N. Y., and a petition of 49 citizens and ex-soldiers of Philadelphia, N. Y., praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. COKE presented a petition of citizens of Texas, praying for a reduction of the tariff duties on books, periodicals, pamphlets, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. FARWELL presented a memorial of citizens of Alaska, remonstrating against the passage of the bill providing a Territorial form of government for the district of Alaska; which was referred to the Committee on Territories.

He also presented a petition of the Chicago Board of Trade, praying for the passage of a law requiring refiners and dealers to brand adulterated lard "compound lard;" which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. HAMPTON presented a petition of citizens of South Carolina, praying that an appropriation be made for the development of the Congaree River; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. VOORHEES. I present a petition numerously signed by surviving soldiers and sailors of the Union Army and Navy, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill. I move the reference of the petition to the Committee on Pensions.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. DAVIS presented the petition of Frank Waldorf and other citizens of Minnesota, praying for the removal of the duty on salt; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented the petition of Albert Swift and others, citizens and ex-Union soldiers and sailors of Minnesota, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. STOCKBRIDGE presented a memorial of citizens of Alaska, remonstrating against the passage of the bill providing a Territorial form of government for the district of Alaska; which was referred to the Committee on Territories.

He also presented a petition of ex-Union soldiers and sailors of Michigan, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented resolutions of the Pomona Grange No. 10, Patrons of Husbandry, of Hillsdale, Mich., praying the passage of a bill giving protection to innocent purchasers of patented articles; which were referred to the Committee on Patents.

He also presented a petition of the mayor and other citizens of Owosso, Mich., praying for the passage of a general bill for the erection of public buildings; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. SAWYER presented a petition of 158 citizens of the First, Seventh, and Eighth Congressional districts of Wisconsin, praying for prohibition in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. BLAIR. I present the petition of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, officially signed, representing 200,000 members, praying for a submission to the States of a prohibitory amendment to the Constitution. This is signed officially by the president, Frances E. Willard; Caroline B. Buell, corresponding secretary; Mary A. Woodbridge, recording secretary, and Esther Pugh, treasurer. I move the reference of the petition to the Committee on Education and Labor.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BLAIR presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Indian Territory, officially signed, and a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Eastern Washington Territory, praying for the submission to the States of a prohibitory amendment to the Constitution; which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. BLAIR. I present a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, by the general officers thereof, under the instruction of the national convention, praying for further legislation for the suppression of the crime of rape, and that the age of possible consent on the part of females be raised to eighteen years, to be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. The petition is brief, and I will read it. It is in these words, addressed to the Senate and House of Representatives:

> The increasing and alarming frequency of assaults upon women and the frightful indignities to which even little girls are subject have become the shame of our boasted civilization.
>
> A study of the statutes has revealed their utter failure to meet the demands of that newly-awakened public sentiment which requires better legal protection for womanhood and girlhood.
>
> Therefore we, the general officers of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, do most earnestly appeal to you to enact such statutes as shall provide for the adequate punishment of crimes against women and girls. We also urge that the age at which a girl can legally consent to her own ruin be raised to at least eighteen years, and we call attention to the disgraceful fact that protection of the person is not placed by our laws upon so high a plane as protection of the purse.

The petition is signed by Frances E. Willard, president; Caroline B. Buell, corresponding secretary; Mary A. Woodbridge, recording secretary; Esther Pugh, treasurer, and L. M. N. Stevens, assistant recording secretary, the general officers, by direction of the national convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, assembled during the last autumn, and represents the action of the whole union, which numbers more than 200,000 active members, resident in every State and Territory and in the District of Columbia.

In connection with that petition, I present also another larger petition, signed by these same general officers, in their personal capacity, and also by about 15,000 others, mostly male citizens of the United States. This petition was circulated throughout the country by direction of the national convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and they have also been assisted in its circulation by the Knights of Labor, which ordered it to be distributed among the assemblies of the order, and who were largely instrumental in obtaining these signatures, the two great organizations thus acting in unison for the promotion of this good object.

I may say in this connection that our civilization seems to have developed almost an unknown phase of crime in the annals of the race, and to-day the traffic in girls and young women in this country, especially in our large cities, has come to be more disgraceful and worse than ever was that in the girls of Circassia. It has attracted public attention, and it must be known to Senators that even now there are developments in one of our great cities which show how grievously girlhood and young womanhood are in absolute need of the protection of law as prayed for in this petition.

I believe, in fact I may say I feel and I know, that this appeal of the womanhood of the country to the protection of its manhood and statesmanship will not be in vain.

I ask that the petitions be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, with the bill which accompanies it, which I ask unanimous consent to introduce at this time, so that they may go together to the committee. It is a bill draughted by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, proposing increased protection of the law against crimes by force against women, and raising the age of consent to eighteen years throughout the jurisdiction of the United States.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will lie on the table until that order is reached, and the petitions will be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. BERRY presented a petition of the Little Rock (Ark.) Medical Association, praying for the removal of import duties from all medicines and surgical appliances, and from everything required in the treatment or diagnosis of disease; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. CULLOM presented a petition of citizens of Alaska, remonstrating against the passage of the bill providing a Territorial form of government for the district of Alaska; which was referred to the Committee on Territories.

He also presented a petition of 43 citizens of Meredosia, Ill., dairymen, dealers in and consumers of dairy products, praying for the removal of the duty on foreign salt; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of the village authorities of Kewanee, Ill., praying Congress to make provision by a general law for the erection of post-office buildings in every city of over 3,000 inhabitants; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

He also presented a petition of 24 dairymen, dealers in and consumers of dairy products, residents of Trenton, Ill., praying for the removal of the duty on foreign salt; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of the board of directors of the Chicago Board of Trade, officially signed, praying for the enactment of such laws as will compel refiners and dealers to brand all adulterated lard in such a way as to plainly distinguish the pure from the impure article; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. STEWART presented a memorial of citizens of Alaska, remonstrating against the passage of the bill providing for a Territorial form of government in the district of Alaska, and asking for the passage of such laws as will be applicable to the condition of that district; which was referred to the Committee on Territories.

Mr. DAWES presented a petition of Government laborers and others, praying for the adjustment of their claim under the eight-hour law; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. FAULKNER. I present a petition of the authorities of the city of Martinsburgh, W. Va., under the corporate seal and signed by C. O. Lambert, mayor, and C. A. Young, clerk, praying Congress to discontinue the practice of passing appropriation bills for Government buildings, and instead thereof to enact a general law providing for the erection of Government post-office buildings in every city and village of the Union of 3,000 inhabitants or over. I move the reference of the petition to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. SPOONER presented a petition of the faculty of Racine College, at Racine, Wis., praying for the passage of an international copyright law; which was referred to the Committee on Patents.

He also presented the petition of John Gould and other citizens of Trempealeau, Wis., praying for speedy action on the subject of protection to the wool-growing and woolen manufacturing industries of the country; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented resolutions adopted by the Board of Trade of La Crosse, Wis., urging upon Congress the favorable consideration of the resolutions in favor of river improvements adopted by a convention held at Dubuque, Iowa, January 17 and 18, 1888; which were referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. MANDERSON presented a petition of 30 post-office clerks at Omaha, Nebr., praying for an increase of the salaries of post-office clerks; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented a petition of citizens of Lincoln, Nebr., praying that an appropriation be made for paving the street in front of the post-office in that city; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, presented a petition of dairymen, dealers in and consumers of dairy products, citizens of Bancroft, Iowa, praying for the removal of the duty on salt; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. TELLER presented a petition of the Board of Trade of Sterling, Colo., and a petition of the Board of Trade of Colorado Springs, Colo., praying that an appropriation be made for the construction of reservoirs for irrigation purposes in Colorado; which were referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. PLUMB presented a memorial of citizens of Alaska, expressing disapprobation of the bill to provide for a Territorial form of government for the district of Alaska; which was referred to the Committee on Territories.

Mr. MITCHELL. I present a memorial of the Laundrymen's National Association showing the nature and extent of the laundry interest in the United States, and the extent to which such industry is being degraded from a respectable American to a dangerous and hostile pagan avocation.

The memorial asserts that there are in operation in the United States to-day 6,243 American laundries, employing 93,645 hands, and paying to these $29,217,240 in wages annually; having $14,730,000 capital employed and doing $65,027,200 worth of business annually.

It is further stated that these figures, enormous as they are, very inadequately indicate the real interests which the mass of the people have in these humble and quiet establishments.

It is further represented that from these laundry establishments, so far as conducted by American citizens, emanate no immoral influences and the seeds of no physical, moral, or religious leprosy, but, on the contrary, they are healthful factors in the great civilizing organization of American industry.

The memorial further suggests that the Chinese Empire, which was for so many centuries closed against the enlightenment of true civilization and shut up as a vast hot-bed of monstrous political, social, moral, and superstitious propagation, having, unfortunately for the rest of the world, opened its national doors, appears now to be ridding itself of a large surplus population by a strong organic effort to cast the poisonous fruitage of its corrupt system upon our shores.

It is stated, moreover, as the belief of the Laundrymen's National Association that the 250,000 Chinese at present forced upon us are but the avant-couriers of an army to come unless the wise provisions of the Chinese exclusion bill introduced by myself in this body are adopted.

It is further asserted as a fact that a much larger proportion of Chinese immigrants than that of any other foreign element gravitates naturally into the laundry business. It is stated that of the 250,000 Chinese now here, 98,500 are laundrymen, and their laundries to-day number 12,973, more than double the number of those conducted by Americans; that they employ no American help; that three-fourths of them are controlled by the Chinese syndicate known as the Six Companies, whose agents are in every hamlet in the land, making weekly collections from each laundry, and reminding these pagan people, wherever they go, that they are still the slaves of the Chinese Government as they are of the hideous vices with which that country's effete society is reeking.

The memorial further states that of the $26,983,840 which they draw annually from this country, giving back no return in taxes or any form of loyalty, many millions are expended in China for the means to indulge their national vices and to hire what is really slave labor to compete with American laborers.

It declares that the meagerness of their business expenditures, from which this country could alone realize any benefit in their presence, is indicated by the estimate that their total laundry outfit costs less than $325,000, while many of their laundries are opium dens of the lowest type.

The further suggestion is made in this memorial that the 60,000 wage women now employed in American laundries might have their number more than quadrupled if these Chinese seed-beds of leprosy could be closed. And in this connection it is asserted that one form of the Chinese laundryman's business economy is the temporary conversion of customers' clothing into beds, where they absorb every form of filth.

It is further stated that all the arguments against Chinese immigration, drawn from economic or other physical considerations, are really trifling compared with the gross immoralities which everywhere attend them and the pagan rites with which they continually insult and tend to debauch every Christian sentiment.

The memorial declares that the Chinese, in short, are the one people among all our representatives of foreign nationalities from whom our country has the least to hope and the most to fear. The more intimately they and their imperial customs and national characteristics become known among us, the more fixed is the wise determination of our native population that Mongolian character and rites shall not be incorporated into our nationality; and it is said that side by side with this determination is the clear conviction that the only way to prevent this immeasurable evil is to absolutely close the door against Chinese immigration.

The memorial further attracts attention to the fact that while heretofore the chief opposition to the influx of this hopelessly degraded people has existed on the Pacific coast, now they are rapidly spreading themselves over all parts of the country, and especially through the thickly populated regions of the Atlantic seaboard, where the opposition to their coming is arising at every point where their character and national purposes and personal practices become known, and in this connection it is said in this memorial the East is now vying with the West in demanding their total exclusion.

The memorial concludes as follows:

To avert all these evils and dangers, therefore, we solemnly pray you to grant the relief herein which all classes of American citizens are asking, by adopting and enacting as law the Mitchell anti-Chinese bill now pending before your honorable body.

Signed on behalf of all American citizens and all American institutions, as well as of the association we represent.

OLIVER K. REED,
President, Philadelphia, Pa.
C. N. CARR, Philadelphia, Pa.,
J. A. BOWDEN, Columbus, Ohio,
C. H. JEWETT, Salem, Mass.,
C. A. ROYCE, Springfield, Mass.,
T. SYERS, Louisville, Ky.,
Executive Committee of the Laundrymen's National Association.

And attested by—
B. W. ECCLESTON,
Secretary, Philadelphia, Pa.

I move that the memorial be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. MITCHELL. I also present a memorial adopted at a mass meeting of the citizens of San Francisco, held at Metropolitan Hall, in that city, December 28, 1887, earnestly protesting against further immigration of Chinese to this country and praying Congress to pass a law absolutely excluding all such immigration in the future.

As reasons, they characterize the Chinese in our midst as distinct in their civilization; un-American in their habits and customs; in dress, religion, and language as entirely distinct as it is possible for two peoples to be—one hoary with age, the other a youth full of life and hope; one a democrat, the other a slave; a people whose mode and system of living enable them to successfully compete against any other human labor, displacing, therefore, and ruining all who come in contact with them.

The memorial asserts that as a result of this competition—

Mr. BECK. Mr. President, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kentucky will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. BECK. My inquiry is whether the Senator from Oregon is making a "brief statement" of the contents of these petitions. I do not hear any part of the statement he is making, but it seems to take a good while for a "brief statement." I call attention to the rule.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair would state to the Senator from Oregon that the rule requires that when a petition is presented it shall be accompanied by "a brief statement of its contents, made by the Presiding Officer or the Senator presenting it."

Mr. MITCHELL. The Senator from Oregon is perfectly familiar with the rule. For that reason he is conforming to the rule strictly in making a brief statement of the contents of the memorial.

This memorial, Mr. President, asserts—it is not long—that as a result of this competition, low wages prevail, preventing a civilized people from living in comfort, respectably rearing their families, giving their children a proper education, making them good citizens, and providing for themselves in old age; that this competition furthermore deprives thousands of our people of legitimate employment and robs our children of an opportunity of earning an honest living, driving many of them to crime and shame.

The memorial declares that the present laws respecting the admission of Chinese are so inefficient as to not materially impede their admission, and to open wide the doors to fraudulent and corrupt practices, making the intent of the law a mere sham. Furthermore, that the class of Chinese thus admitted contrary to the intent of our existing laws, consists largely of coolies imported substantially as slaves, of criminals of the most vicious and brutal kind, and of prostitutes or young women sold into slavery to become such.

It is further declared that the absolute disregard which these people have for any law, oath, truth, or decency prevents our own judiciary from having any hold on them, while they maintain a system of jurisprudence of their own among us, enforcing their own illegal edicts by blackmail and murder, and resorting to every device and trickery that their low cunning is possible of devising, to frustrate and resist the successful prosecution of their criminals in our own courts.

The memorial further sets out that their gambling hells, opium joints, and dens of iniquity and vice serve to entice our boys and girls, prompted by inducements too great to resist, while our laws seem powerless to suppress them; and yet the entire taxes paid by the Chinese population are insufficient to cover the cost of maintaining the Chinese prisoners of the State.

The memorial further advises Congress that the resources of the Pacific coast are so great that millions may be furnished homes where now there are but thousands; but by reason of this terrible Asiatic curse our progress is retarded, our development checked, our industries dwarfed, and a healthy increase of our American population discouraged, while at the same time our very free and liberal institutions are menaced by the unwholesome and corrupt influences at work by these people, who are determined to maintain the foothold they now have in this country.

The memorial concludes with a resolve as follows—two lines:

That we consider exclusion the only practical remedy, the present restriction laws having presented no bar to their entrance.

I move that the memorial be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CAMERON presented resolutions of the Board of Trade, the Commercial Exchange, the Maritime Exchange, the Drug Exchange, and the Vessel-Owners and Captains' Association, all of Philadelphia, favoring the passage of an act of Congress authorizing the calling of an international maritime conference; which were referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented resolutions of the West Branch Lumberman's Exchange, of Williamsport, Pa., remonstrating against the reduction of the duty on lumber; which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a resolution adopted at a meeting of the representatives of the several commercial organizations of Philadelphia, in favor of the enactment of a law that will permit the improvement of the harbor of the port of Philadelphia, Pa.; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented a petition of members of the faculty of Lebanon Valley College, at Annville, Pa., praying for the speedy enactment of an international copyright law; which was referred to the Committee on Patents.

He also presented a petition of Pennsylvania dairymen and others, praying for the removal of the duty on foreign salt; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of surviving soldiers and sailors of the late war, residents of Tioga County, Pennsylvania, praying for the immediate passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Pennsylvania, officially signed, praying for such legislation as shall provide for the adequate punishment of crimes against women and girls; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a petition of 354 citizens of the Ninth, Twelfth, Twenty-third, Twenty-fifth, and Twenty-seventh Congressional districts, and a petition of 136 citizens of the Fourth, Nineteenth, and Twenty-fifth Congressional districts of Pennsylvania, praying for prohfbition in the District of Columbia; which were referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented the petition of Joseph S. Wilson, of Oxford, Pa., praying for the passage of a bill granting him an invalid pension; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a petition of the members of William S. Thompson Post, Grand Army of the Republic, of Oxford, Pa., praying for the passage of a bill granting a pension to Joseph S. Wilson; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. TURPIE presented a petition of J. M. Drake Post, No. 484, Grand Army of the Republic, of Lima, Ind., praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. DOLPH. I present a petition addressed to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, signed by several hundred citizens of Alaska, praying for the extension of the land laws over that district; also praying for public buildings; that the district be provided with proper mail facilities; and praying for the passage of laws applicable to the social and political condition of the people of Alaska. Although there are several subjects embraced in the prayer of the petition, as the Committee on Public Lands has under consideration a bill proposing to extend the land laws over Alaska, I move the reference of this petition to that committee.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. EVARTS presented a petition of 10 surviving soldiers and sailors of the Union Army and Navy; a petition of 58 surviving soldiers and sailors of the Union Army and Navy; a petition of 83 surviving soldiers and sailors of the Union Army and Navy, and a petition of 40 surviving soldiers and sailors of the Union Army and Navy, praying for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. BROWN. I present the petition of the Savannah Volunteer Guards, reciting that the Adjutant-General of the United States Army having in his last annual report to the Secretary of War recommended the detail during the winter of officers of the regular Army to instruct the volunteer forces throughout the country, and the great advantages to be derived from such skilled military tuition being manifest, the petitioners ask their Senators and Representatives to do all that can possibly be done to secure the passage of a bill carrying out the recommendation of the Adjutant-General. I move that the petition be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BROWN. I present the petition of James Mitchell, of Atlanta, Ga., praying for Federal aid to education, and suggesting an improvement of the school bill. As the bill has passed the Senate, I move that the petition lie on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BROWN presented a petition of the Medical Society of Atlanta, Ga., praying Congress, in the cause of humanity, to remove all import duties from all medicines, medical and surgical appliances, and from everything used in the treatment or diagnosis of disease; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. BROWN. I present the petition of J. O. Matthewson & Co., of Augusta, Ga., general agents of the Pacific Guano Company of South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, and Tennessee. The petitioners recite in substance that they oppose the passage of the bill which has been introduced to prohibit seine fisheries for menhaden fish on the Atlantic coast. They recite that the menhaden fish furnish the ammonia for the Pacific Guano Company's fertilizer. After the oil is expressed the fiber and bone yield from 5 to 10 per cent. of ammonia more potent than any other.

They state that there are 343 vessels employed in the business, 3 per cent. of them steamers. The capital invested is $2,550,000; the fish taken last year numbered 563,327,000, equal to 1,877,767 barrels, and the product was 53,625 tons of compressed fiber and bone, which furnished for farm use 7,507,500 pounds of ammonia in the best possible organic form. This quantity of ammonia is equal to nearly 26,000 tons of Chincha Island Peruvian guano, worth in gold $1,560,000. Besides the ammonia these fish furnished nearly 1,072,500 pounds of phosphate of lime, equal to nearly 23,000 tons of Peruvian guano. In addition to all this, in 1875 there were produced 2,681,487 gallons of oil.

Professors Baird and Goode say that the catch has only taken one out of every million million.

The Pacific Guano Company, of Boston, Mass., with works at Wood's Holl, Mass., and Charleston, S. C., has used this fish for ammonia in the soluble Pacific guano for twenty-three years. It has a capital of $1,000,000, and the superiority of its fertilizer is due to the menhaden fish.

The petitioners then state that it is thought the bill resisted originated with a fishing club of Philadelphia, who fish for sport.

As the petition relates to fisheries in the Atlantic Ocean, I intended to move that it be referred to the Committee on Commerce, but it is suggested that it had probably better go to the Committee on Fisheries. I move that it be referred to the Committee on Fisheries.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. VEST presented a memorial of 800 citizens of Alaska, remonstrating against the passage of the bill providing a Territorial form of government for the district of Alaska; which was referred to the Committee on Territories.

Mr. BECK presented the petition of G. D. Burdett and other dairymen, of Garrard County, Kentucky, and the petition of B. N. Stansifer and other dairymen, of Key West, Ky., praying that salt be placed on the free-list; which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. CALL. I present the petition of Hon. J. M. Tolbert, of Columbia County, Florida, relating to the Arredondo grant and the entries upon it in the State of Florida. The petition states that there is a large amount of land within this grant that ought to be subject to homestead entry, and prays for the passage of a different bill from that introduced by myself, praying that Senate bill No. 239, in relation to that subject, may not be passed by the Senate. I ask the consent of the Senate to have the petition printed as a miscellaneous document, and in connection with it the exhibit contained in the report to Congress in the Forty-eighth Congress at its first session, being Executive Document No. 154, which contains the names of the persons who have entered land during the last forty years upon this grant.

There are perhaps several thousand people located upon portions of this grant, and I ask that it be printed in order that they may be advised of the precise state of facts in regard to their title. I therefore move that the petition, with the accompanying exhibit, be printed for the use of the Senate and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

My colleague and myself only desire to have such a bill passed as will satisfy the people, protect such equitable rights as have grown up under ancient possession, and will open as large a part of the grant as may be done consistently with prior possession and prior right to homestead entry and settlement.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. DANIEL presented the petition of David E. Porter, of Falls Church, Va., praying for reinstatement as a captain in the United States Army; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented the petition of George Dillman, late private in the Fourth Regiment United States Infantry, praying to be allowed a pension; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. DOLPH presented petition of citizens of Washington County, Oregon, praying that an appropriation be made for the improvement of the Tualitin River; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. COCKRELL presented a petition of 145 citizens of the Third, Eleventh, and Twelfth Congressional districts of Missouri, praying for prohibition in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas, presented a petition of the Little Rock (Ark.) Medical Society, praying that the import duty be removed from all medicines, medical and surgical appliances, and from everything used in the treatment or diagnosis of disease; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolution; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 1158) for the relief of Louis Jacobson;

A bill (H. R. 2477) for the relief of Nathaniel McKay and the executors of Donald McKay;

A bill (H. R. 5550) for the relief of Sarah C. Morrison;

A bill (H. R. 4082) for the relief of the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Alabama;

A bill (H. R. 6437) to provide for certain of the most urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888, and for other purposes; and Joint resolution (H. Res. 113) authorizing the Secretary of War to appoint a board of three engineers to examine and report in relation to the Delaware River between the city of Philadelphia, Pa., and Camden, N. J., and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6439) authorizing the appointment of eleven division superintendents of railway mail service.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (H. R. 6439) authorizing the appointment of two additional division superintendents of railway mail service; and it was thereupon signed by the President pro tempore.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. RANSOM, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them adversely; and they were severally postponed indefinitely:

A bill (S. 536) to provide for ascertaining and settling private land claims in certain States and Territories;

A bill (S. 894) to establish a United States land court, to define its jurisdiction and duties, and to provide for the settlement of private land claims in the Territory of Arizona and New Mexico and the State of Colorado;

A bill (S. 1796) to establish a United States land court, and to provide for the settlement of private land claims in certain States and Territories; and

A bill (S. 1845) to provide for the appointment of justices of the supreme court of the Territory of New Mexico authorized to determine the validity of Spanish and Mexican land grants in said Territory.

Mr. RANSOM. I am also instructed by the Committee on Private Land Claims, in lieu of these various bills, to report an original bill; and the Senator from Vermont [Mr. EDMUNDS] requests me to say that as a member of the committee he has not agreed to this bill.

The bill (S. 2042) to establish a United States land court and to provide for the settlement of private land claims in certain States and Territories was read twice by its title.

Mr. CHACE, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (S. 116) to incorporate the American Trust Company of the District of Columbia, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. SAWYER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 766) granting an increase of pension to John Moore, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. FRYE. I am instructed by the Committee on Foreign Relations to report back sundry petitions for a maritime congress. I have already reported in behalf of the committee a bill providing for a maritime congress. I report these petitions back, and ask that the committee be discharged from their further consideration, and that they lie on the table.

The report was agreed to.

Mr. PADDOCK, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1588) to amend an act entitled "An act to provide additional regulations for homestead and pre-emption entries of public lands," approved March 3, 1879, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 758) for the relief of purchasers and other grantees of the United States of certain swamp and overflowed lands, and to reimburse and indemnify certain States, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. HISCOCK, from the Committee on Interstate Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 285) to prevent the issue of passes to official persons, and for other purposes, asked to be discharged from its further consideration, and that it be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary; which was agreed to.

Mr. HARRIS, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the joint resolution (S. R. 42) extending the provisions of an act entitled "An act relating to arrears of taxes in the District of Columbia," approved March 3, 1887, reported it without amendment.

Mr. PLUMB, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2005) to provide for the disposal of the Fort Wallace military reservation, in Kansas, reported it without amendment.

Mr. VEST, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1941) for the erection of a public building at Helena, Mont., reported it with amendments.

Mr. MANDERSON. I am directed by the Committee on Military Affairs to report back the bill (S. 160) authorizing the Secretary of War to have an iron bridge constructed from the Naval Observatory grounds across the Potomac River to the Arlington estate. The Committee on Military Affairs instruct me to request that they be relieved from the further consideration of this bill and that the same be referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, it having had heretofore the investigation of this proposition. We have, however, accompanied the bill with a report, which I ask may be printed.

The report was ordered to be printed, the committee was discharged, and the bill referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. MANDERSON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3957) for the relief of Peter March, Thomas J. Wright, administrator, and others, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1593) for the relief of Giles B. Overton, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was agreed to, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. MANDERSON. I am also instructed by the Committee on Military Affairs to report back unfavorably the bill (S. 1445) for the relief of Emma H. Fish. While there is an unfavorable report I believe it is the desire of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. PALMER] that the bill be placed on the Calendar. I ask that that action be taken.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be placed on the Calendar with the adverse report.

Mr. MANDERSON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 283) to amend sections 2474 and 2475 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, setting apart a certain tract of land lying near the headwaters of the Yellowstone River as a public park, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. STEWART, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the petition of Chancy M. Payne, of Chicago, Ill., praying a correction of his military record, asked to be discharged from its further consideration; which was agreed to.

Mr. FAULKNER, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the joint resolution (S. R. 26) to arbitrate and settle the questions at issue between the District of Columbia and Samuel Strong, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. COCKRELL, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4556) to confirm New Madrid location survey No. 2889, and to provide for issue of patent therefor, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. WALTHALL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1481) making an appropriation to construct a road and approaches from Pineville, La., to the national military cemetery near that town, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom were referred the following bills, submitted adverse reports thereon; which were agreed to, and they were severally postponed indefinitely:

A bill (S. 1538) to establish the rank of Andrew R. G. Smith, of Whitefield, Me., as assistant surgeon of the Second Regiment of Maine Cavalry, on the 1st day of December, 1865;

A bill (S. 984) to remove the charge of desertion against Levi Beer; and

A bill (S. 520) for the relief of Benwood Hunter.

Mr. QUAY, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1338) granting an increase of pension to Kate Q. Dalzell, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PALMER, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, reported a bill (S. 2083) to provide for the establishment of a bureau of animal industry, and to facilitate the exportation of live-stock and their products, to extirpate contagious pleuro-pneumonia and other diseases among domestic animals, and for other purposes; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. PALMER. I will say that hereafter a written report, possibly a majority and minority report, will be submitted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MANDERSON in the chair). The bill will be placed on the Calendar awaiting the written report.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on the 17th instant approved and signed the act (S. 274) authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at some accessible point in the county of St. Charles, in the State of Missouri, below the city of St. Charles; and on the 18th instant the act (S. 1346) to authorize the Choctaw Coal and Railway Company to construct and operate a railway through the Indian Territory, and for other purposes.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. PLUMB (by request) introduced a bill (S. 2043) authorizing the removal of certain obstructions in the Hudson River opposite Poughkeepsie, in the State of New York; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. HOAR introduced a bill (S. 2044) in aid of the erection of a monument to the memory of General Joseph Warren, who fell at the battle of Bunker Hill; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Library.

Mr. VOORHEES introduced a bill (S. 2045) for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon in the city of La Fayette, Ind.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2046) granting a pension to William H. Fletcher; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2047) granting a pension to Lucinda Brunson; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2048) to regulate and fix the compensation of employés of the Government Printing Office; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Printing.

Mr. MCPHERSON introduced a bill (S. 2049) to equalize the grades of officers of the Marine Corps; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. CULLOM introduced a bill (S. 2050) granting a pension to Mrs. Bridget Hackett; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. FARWELL introduced a bill (S. 2051) for the relief of John C. Phillips; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2052) for the relief of Bridget A. Murphy; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2053) for the relief of Frederick Parker; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2054) for the relief of Ernst Shillinger; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PALMER introduced a bill (S. 2055) for the relief of Mrs. Catherine E. Whitall; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. EVARTS introduced a bill (S. 2056) to provide for the payment of the claim of the mayor, aldermen, and commonalty of the city of New York; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2057) for the relief of Nehemiah Osburn; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2058) to increase the pension of John Taylor; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PADDOCK introduced a bill (S. 2059) for the relief of John T. Sechler; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2060) granting a pension to John R. Duey; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. DOLPH introduced a bill (S. 2061) granting a pension to Sarah M. White; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. HISCOCK introduced a bill (S. 2062) for the relief of the heirs of the late Solomon Spitzer; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2063) to provide for the payment of the mayor, aldermen, and commonalty of the city of New York; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2064) granting a pension to Titus Wilder; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2065) granting a pension to ex-soldiers and sailors at rates as within set forth; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. REAGAN introduced a bill (S. 2066) for the relief of Lucy A. Hopkins; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. BECK (by request) introduced a bill (S. 2067) granting a pension to William O. Doyel; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. VEST introduced a bill (S. 2068) for the relief of Jacob Kearn; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. CAMERON introduced a bill (S. 2069) granting a pension to Penrose Frank; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2070) to increase the pension of Peter Elser; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2071) granting a pension to Mary S. Wells; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. FRYE introduced a bill (S. 2072) for the relief of Henry Clay Wood; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2073) granting a pension to Margaret Blades; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. BLAIR introduced a bill (S. 2074) to amend the Revised Statutes relating to the crime of rape within the territorial, admiralty, and maritime jurisdiction of the United States; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. QUAY introduced a bill (S. 2075) granting a pension to Stephen Summers; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. CHANDLER introduced a bill (S. 2076) to make the Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries an officer of the Navy Department; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Fisheries.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2077) to provide for the supervision of the affairs of the District of Columbia by the Secretary of the Interior; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2078) to restore correct rank to certain graduates of the United States Naval Academy; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. DANIEL introduced a bill (S. 2079) for the relief of George Brown; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2080) for the relief of Mrs. Margaret Longshaw, dependent mother of William Longshaw, late assistant surgeon United States Navy; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2081) for the relief of John J. Shipman; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas, introduced a bill (S. 2082) for the relief of Mitchell Trotter; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. VOORHEES. I ask leave to present a paper in connection with the bill I have heretofore offered in the Senate for the construction of a public building at Madison, Ind. I move that it be referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

The motion was agreed to.

AMENDMENTS TO BILLS.

Mr. CHANDLER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the urgent deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. TELLER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 1458) to amend an act entitled "An act authorizing the citizens of Colorado, Nevada, and the Territories to fell and remove timber on the public domain for mining and domestic purposes," approved June 3, 1878; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. MITCHELL submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the urgent deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

REPORT ON INSECTICIDES.

Mr. PALMER submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That a report on insecticides, being an exhaustive treatment of the different remedies for insects injurious to vegetation, be printed without illustrations, and that 10,000 additional copies be printed, of which 3,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate, 6,000 for the use of the House, and 1,000 for the use of the Department of Agriculture.

BREAKWATER AT HOUSATONIC RIVER'S MOUTH.

Mr. PLATT submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be, and he hereby is, directed to report to the Senate any information in his possession concerning the utility of a breakwater at the mouth of the Housatonic River, in the State of Connecticut, together with such facts and considerations as he may deem important respecting the same.

EDUCATIONAL LAND GRANTS.

Mr. STEWART submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior be requested to inform the Senate what amount of business has accumulated in his Department under the various grants to States and Territories for educational purposes, and how long it will require to dispose of such business with the present clerical force at his command, and what additional force, if any, is necessary to dispose of such business, and also to dispose of the current business under said grants.

TREATMENT OF PETITIONS.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I submit a resolution, which I ask may be referred to the Committee on Rules.

The Chief Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That it shall not be in order for Senators to offer petitions or memorials in the Senate, nor shall there be any call therefor, but all petitions and memorials shall be placed in a box provided for that purpose and placed at the Clerk's desk, with indorsement stating the nature or purpose of the petition or memorial, together with the name of the Senator presenting the same and the committee to which reference is to be made. The title of each petition and memorial, the committee to which referred, and the name of the Senator introducing it shall appear in the RECORD of the succeeding day.

Mr. HARRIS. I desire to suggest to the Senator from Kentucky that that is not quite the form of reaching the object of the Senator's resolution.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I do not know but what the suggestion of the Senator from Tennessee may have force in it. I only submit whether the Committee on Rules, if they shall conclude to adopt the views suggested here, may not perfect the proposition and put it in the most effective shape.

Mr. HARRIS. That is certainly true; but I was going to say that if the Senator would for the present withhold the resolution, I should like to confer with him about it; and we might be able to put the proposed rule in shape and give the necessary notice, and then refer it.

Mr. BLACKBURN. If that will expedite things, I have no preference about it, but I took it for granted the Committee on Rules would determine for itself when making its report.

Mr. SHERMAN. I think it had better be referred at once to the Committee on Rules. Then they will have jurisdiction of the subject.

Mr. HARRIS. I have no objection to the reference of the resolution.

Mr. SHERMAN. My own conviction is that there is no trouble with the present rule if Senators will simply obey it. The rule forbids anything beyond a simple abstract of what the purpose of a petition is. I think that is the better way, far better than the House practice, because it gives the people at large, through the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, knowledge of the current of petitions coming to the Senate, while if they are printed at the end of our proceedings they are not seen. My attention has often been called to the fact that a petition introduced into the Senate gets a conspicuous notice in the RECORD, but it does not in the House, because, as you know, it is put at the end of a great mass of stuff. If we observe the rule, there is no trouble.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I submit to the Senator from Ohio, in the light of his long experience as a Senator and even in the light of his recent observation of this morning, whether there is not too much of the time of the Senate occupied outside of the rule as it stands to-day.

Mr. SHERMAN. I agree to that, but I think we can get along if we adhere to the rule.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be referred to the Committee on Rules.

DEPENDENT PENSION BILL.

Mr. DAVIS. I move that Senate bill 181, being a general pension bill, be made the special order for to-morrow at 2 o'clock.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The title of the bill will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. Order of Business 130, bill S. 181, granting pensions to ex-soldiers and sailors who are incapacitated from the performance of manual labor, and providing for pensions to dependent relatives of deceased soldiers and sailors.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Minnesota moves that this bill be made the special order for to-morrow at 2 o'clock. The question is on that motion.

The motion was agreed to, two-thirds of the Senators present voting in the affirmative.

RESTORATION OF FORT MOULTRIE.

Mr. BUTLER submitted the following resolution; which was read:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, directed to report to the Senate estimates for restoring the quarters and buildings of Fort Moultrie, Charleston harbor, so as to place said fort in condition to be occupied by a garrison of United States troops, and to report what changes, if any, should be made in the plan of said fort to place the same in the highest state of strength for defensive purposes.

Mr. BUTLER. I ask for the present consideration of the resolution.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I ask the Senator from South Carolina if the resolution is to be put on its passage without debate.

Mr. BUTLER. I take it so. It is simply one of inquiry.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I do not want to object, but I am in charge of a bill of much more importance than this resolution, which I am waiting for the morning business to be completed so that I can present it to the Senate. I will not make any objection, but I should like to have an end to the morning hour.

Mr. BUTLER. This is simply a resolution of inquiry. I can not see how it is to lead to any debate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY.

Mr. HOAR submitted the following resolution, and asked for its present consideration:

Resolved, That on Wednesday, February 22, the Farewell Address of Washington be read to the Senate by the Presiding Officer after the conclusion of the morning business, and that thereafter the Senate will proceed with its business as usual.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution offered by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR]?

Several SENATORS. Let it be again read.

Mr. HOAR. Of course it will go over one day if any Senator objects to its present consideration.

Mr. VOORHEES. Let it be read again. Perhaps there will be no objection to it. It was not heard in this part of the Chamber when read.

The resolution was again read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. VOORHEES. I do not object to its consideration. I should like it better if it said that at the conclusion of the reading of the Farewell Address of Washington the Senate should adjourn.

Mr. HOAR. It will be in the power of the Senate to do so if it see fit.

Mr. VOORHEES. I should be glad to have it incorporated in this resolution, so that we may know exactly what we are to do. I think it a proper mark of respect to the day, and if the Senator from Massachusetts is willing I should do so I will move——

Mr. HOAR. I shall agree to strike out that portion about proceeding with business as usual.

Mr. VOORHEES. Very well; that will do.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be read as modified.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That on Wednesday, February 22, the Farewell Address of Washington be read to the Senate by the Presiding Officer after the conclusion of morning business.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills from the House of Representatives were severally read twice by their titles, and referred as indicated below:

The bill (H. R. 1158) for the relief of Louis Jacobson—to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

The bill (H. R. 2477) for the relief of Nathaniel McKay and the executors of Donald McKay—to the Committee on Claims.

The bill (H. R. 5550) for the relief of Sarah C. Morrison—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

The bill (H. R. 4082) for the relief of the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Alabama—to the Committee on Claims.

The bill (H. R. 6437) to provide for certain of the most urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the services of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888, and for other purposes—to the Committee on Appropriations.

The joint resolution (H. Res. 113) authorizing the Secretary of War to appoint a board of three engineers to examine and report in relation to the Delaware River between the city of Philadelphia, Pa., and Camden, N. J., and for other purposes—to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. HOAR. The Chair just laid before the Senate—I listened for the title, but it escaped me as it was read—a bill for the relief of Nathaniel McKay and the executors of Donald McKay. I have reported a bill similar to that bill from the Senate Committee on Claims, and it is upon the Calendar. I should like, therefore, to have this bill lie on the table. I am not aware that it will require a reference to the Committee on Claims.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The order of reference will be withdrawn, and House bill 2477, having been read twice, will lie on the table.

WASHINGTON CABLE ELECTRIC RAILWAY.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I move to take up the bill (S. 931) to incorporate the Washington Cable Electric Railway of the District of Columbia.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Virginia moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill named by him. [Putting the question.] The noes appear to have it.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BECK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will remind the Senator from Kentucky that the motion is not debatable.

Mr. MORRILL. Can we not have the bill read before we vote?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The roll-call will proceed.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CULLOM (when his name was called). The Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY] has been called away, and I am paired with him. I do not know how he would vote on this question if present.

Mr. MANDERSON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN], but I understand he would vote for taking up this bill if present, and therefore I vote "yea."

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. WALTHALL (after having voted in the negative). I am paired generally with the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER]. As he has not voted I withdraw my vote.

The result was announced—yeas 29, nays 14; as follows:

YEAS—29.

Aldrich,	Davis,	Ingalls,	Riddleberger,
Allison,	Evarts,	Jones of Arkansas,	Stewart,
Brown,	Farwell,	Jones of Nevada,	Teller,
Butler,	Faulkner,	Manderson,	Vest,
Cameron,	Frye,	Mitchell,	Wilson of Iowa.
Chandler,	Gibson,	Morrill,
Coke,	Harris,	Palmer,
Daniel,	Hoar,	Platt,

NAYS—14.

Bate,	Cockrell,	McPherson,	Voorhees,
Beck,	Edmunds,	Pugh,	Wilson of Md.
Berry,	George,	Sherman,
Call,	Hampton,	Vance,

ABSENT—33.

Blackburn,	Eustis,	Paddock,	Sawyer,
Blair,	Gorman,	Pasco,	Spooner,
Blodgett,	Gray,	Payne,	Stanford,
Bowen,	Hale,	Plumb,	Stockbridge,
Chace,	Hawley,	Quay,	Turpie,
Colquitt,	Hearst,	Ransom,	Walthall.
Cullom,	Hiscock,	Reagan,
Dawes,	Kenna,	Sabin,
Dolph,	Morgan,	Saulsbury,

So the motion was agreed to.

Mr. HARRIS. I ask unanimous consent that the first or formal reading of the bill may be dispensed with, so that the committee's amendments may be acted on as they are reached during the reading of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Tennessee asks that the pending bill be read for amendment, the amendments reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia being acted on as they are reached in the reading of the bill. Is there objection?

Mr. BECK. Is the motion of the Senator from Tennessee debatable?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks it is.

Mr. HARRIS. I asked unanimous consent.

Mr. BECK. When I rose to object to the motion to take up the bill proposed by the Senator from Virginia [Mr. RIDDLEBERGER], out of order as it turned out, I did not rise for the purpose of objecting to that particular bill, for I knew nothing about it. It comes from the Committee on the District of Columbia, but it stands on the Calendar after perhaps one hundred and fifty other bills that have been reported, and I am one of those who believe that the only way to get through the business of the Senate is to take up the Calendar regularly, so that we can have the bills before us, the reports before us, and we shall know what is coming up on the Calendar that is before us every day. Then we know how to look over the bills and look over the reports and see whether we desire to object to them or debate them or not, whereas when a particular bill that is not expected to be brought up is called up on motion, we have neither the bill before us, nor the report before us, nor any information in regard to it, and it becomes then a general scramble among Senators as to who can get the eye of the Chair and who can be recognized to bring up the matters that he considers it important enough to get precedence for over the Calendar of cases that have been already reported.

I do not believe that is an orderly way to do business, but I want to give notice now that the vote of the Senate to-day has indicated that to be the mode of proceeding sanctioned by a two-thirds majority, and from this time on I will vote for every motion to take up bills, and I will endeavor to get in a general scramble myself for five or six that I have been ordered to report, if I can secure the attention of the Chair, and I hope I can. I will do as much scrambling as anybody else. I feel instructed by the vote to-day that the first one to get the attention of the Chair is to be sustained by two-thirds of the Senate to bring up any bill that he thinks important enough to have taken up.

I merely want to say to gentlemen whose bills are in my hands of a private character from the Committee on Finance and the others that I have been ordered to report, that I will do my best to get them up in the general scramble.

Mr. PLATT. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Kentucky is right in saying that we ought to proceed with the Calendar. I did not understand that this was a question between taking up this bill and proceeding with the Calendar.

Mr. BECK. It was.

Mr. PLATT. If that point had been made, it is very possible that the vote of the Senate would have been different; but as we have been going on here, it has been quite a matter of courtesy to vote to take up a bill that any Senator asked to have taken up. I think whenever the Senator from Kentucky makes the point that we shall go regularly to the Calendar, he will find that he is sustained by the Senate.

Mr. BECK. I will just say that I have no desire to interfere with this bill or its consideration; but at the close of morning business to-morrow I shall move to proceed to the Calendar regularly, and hope Senators will agree to it. Let us go on for a while with that without any of us trying to get the advantage of the others.

Mr. PLATT. That is right.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will state that after the conclusion of morning business until 2 o'clock the Calendar is in order, without a motion, for the consideration of bills to which there is no objection; but a majority of the Senate have a right to depart from that order upon the motion of any Senator who desires to proceed to the consideration of any bill not regularly in order.

Mr. BECK. I understand that, and it is because that is the rule that the Calendar is up to-day, as I understand, in regular order, and a gentleman moves to take up a special bill and is sustained by two-thirds of the Senate as against the Calendar. If we are going to do that every morning when the Calendar comes up it is in the power of any gentleman to move to take up a bill and the Calendar is at once put aside, and you can not prevent, under the rule of the Senate, any Senator making such a motion.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. Allow me to tell the Senator that this bill has been on the Calendar long before many of the bills that are now on the Calendar. It has been passed by the Senate twice.

Mr. BECK. I am not talking about the Senator's bill.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. No; you are talking so as to consume the time up to 2 o'clock.

Mr. BECK. I hope what I do say will have as much purpose as some other speeches I have heard made on this floor, and I know it is quite as much in order. All I desire to say is that I want to give bills on the Calendar a chance. Now, let this bill be read in full, so that we can catch something of what it is, and let the report be read as well.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Tennessee asks unanimous consent that the formal reading of the bill be dispensed with and that the bill be read for amendment, the reported amendments to be acted on as the reading proceeds. Is there objection to that suggestion?

Mr. COCKRELL. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill, then, will be read at length.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT ROANOKE, VA.

Mr. DANIEL. Before that is gone into, as it will take considerable time, I ask unanimous consent to call up Senate bill 1294, for the erection of a public building in the city of Roanoke, Va.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Virginia asks that the pending order may be informally laid aside to enable him to ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of Order of Business 307, being the bill (S. 1294) for the erection of a public building in the city of Roanoke, Roanoke County, Virginia. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds with amendments.

The first amendment was, in line 6, after the word "post-office," to strike out "internal-revenue offices;" so as to read:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase a site for, and cause to be erected thereon, a suitable building for the accommodation of the post-office and other Government offices in the city of Roanoke, Roanoke County, Virginia.

The amedment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 31, before the word "thousand," to strike out "one hundred" and insert "fifty;" so as to read:

For the purpose of this act the sum of $50,000 is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the same to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. Is there any report with the bill?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is. The report will be read if the Senator desires to have it read.

Mr. COCKRELL. If it is not too long.

The Secretary read the following report, submitted by Mr. DANIEL February 13, 1888:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to which was referred the bill (S. 1294) for the erection of a public building in Roanoke City, Roanoke County, Virginia, for the accommodation of the Government offices, at a cost of $100,000, respectfully report the same with a substitute appropriating $50,000 instead of $100,000 for said building.

Roanoke City is situated in the valley of Southwest Virginia, at the junction of the Norfolk and Western and Shenandoah Valley Railroads. It is a new city that has rapidly developed within a few years. It is in the midst of a rich mineral and agricultural region, and it has the prospect of large increase of population.

POPULATION.

In 1881 it was a village of 600 inhabitants, known as Big Lick. In 1882, upon the completion of the Shenandoah Valley Railroad, it was incorporated as Roanoke.

PUBLIC REVENUES.

The receipts of the post-office there at this time amount to about $11,000 per annum, and the receipts of the internal-revenue office to about $26,000; aggregate, $37,000; and those sources of revenue are both upon the increase, as the following tables show:

A statement of the revenues collected at Roanoke City, Va.

[Wholly from tobacco.]

From July 21, 1885, to July 1, 1886	$15,335.32
From July 1, 1886, to July 1, 1887	21,033.20
From July 1, 1887, to January 1, 1888 (six months only)	13,757.02
Total	50,125.54

H. SHEPPERD, Collector.

LYNCHBURGH, VA., January 24, 1888.

No data at hand for 1884.

Comparative annual increase of postal receipts at Roanoke, Va.

Years.	Stamp sales.	Box rents.	Total receipts.
1882	$3,123.66	$282.00	$3,405.66
1883	7,642.69	645.00	8,287.69
1884	7,700.95	915.00	8,615.95
1885*	7,145.61	965.43	8,111.04
1886	8,014.25	965.00	8,979.25
1887	10,148.48	945.00	11,093.48

*In 1885 the decrease in gross receipts is explained by the fact that the internal-revenue offices of this district were removed from Roanoke.

Thus in 1887 the gross receipts of the Roanoke, Va., post-office are shown to have been $11,093.48, against $3,405.66 in 1882, or more than three times as great as in that year, an increase of more than 300 per cent. in five years, and an increase in the last year of more than 25 per cent. over the preceding year (1886), while stamp sales for the month of January indicate for the ensuing year a larger increase than 25 per cent. over the gross receipts of 1887.

MONEY-ORDER BUSINESS.

In this branch the increase has also been great, averaging in 1887 about twenty-three per day for the latter portion of the year, besides the international orders, and aggregating an average of about $1,000 a week, while in 1882 the number issued makes an average of less than ten a day.

REGISTRY BUSINESS.

This is not less increased than the money-order business in an even proportion. Approximate number, 1886, 920; for 1887, 2,204.

LETTER MAIL.

In 1882 the entire mail deposited in and dispatched from the Roanoke office, according to the calculation upon stamp commissions, was less than one-third the number of letters alone dispatched in 1887 by actual count, as shown in the following statement:

Year.	Per day.	Per week.	Per month.
1882 (including every article of mail).....	401	2,806	11,220
1887 (letters only).....	1,325	9,725	37,100

In this statement the mail matter of every description is calculated in the statement of number of articles dispatched in 1882, while only letters are counted in statement of 1887, to the exclusion of all postal-cards, papers, packages, registered matter, etc., which would nearly double the figures in the foregoing table.

"I hereby certify that the foregoing statement of business of the Roanoke, Va., post-office is correct, to the best of my knowledge and belief, and are careful calculations from the records of this office.

"OSCAR D. DERR, Postmaster.

"ROANOKE, VA., February 2, 1888."

During a portion of the time between the years 1882 and 1885 the postal business was largely augmented by the presence here of the central offices of the United States internal revenue for the sixth district. Since 1885 the increase in gross receipts and general business is the outcome of permanent increase in business and population of Roanoke.

STEADY ANNUAL INCREASE OF STAMPS.

The foregoing comparative statements show the steady annual increase of business in every branch, which gives an index to the increase for the coming year, and in five years this would indicate more than double the present revenue and general business without any additional business interests being established here. But the enterprises which have already been commenced and will in one or more years be in full operation insure an increase more than treble as great as these figures would reach.

Besides, the business in the present month has already shown an increase of more than 25 per cent. in business for the year 1888.

With either or both the railroads which are being now surveyed to Roanoke the increase of postal business will be more than 100 per cent. within the next two years.

INCREASED POST-OFFICE ACCOMMODATIONS NEEDED.

The great increase in business and population here already demands increased post-office room. The present house is totally inadequate to the demands of business.

The Government now pays a rent of $600 per annum for this meager quarter, and will have to pay largely in excess if proper house room is provided.

The large increase in the receipts of the post-office at Roanoke, Va., will entitle that place to a free delivery in May, 1888, and to provide for a free delivery larger and better office accommodations must be provided.

From less than $8,000 the sale of stamps will have increased to upwards of $12,000 within the past year to May 30, 1888. And with all the new enterprises now planting themselves here and those prospecting for that purpose, the indications point to an increase to double that amount in the next fiscal year.

ENTERPRISE.

Roanoke City has now a population of about 10,000 people. Its enterprises are numerous and varied. The largest at present are the locomotive and car-erecting shops, which employ from 1,000 to 1,500 men.

Several tobacco factories make an annual output of 700,000 pounds of manufactured tobacco. Besides, the leaf-dealers ship an average of 1,000,000 pounds of tobacco in the raw state.

The steel and iron furnace here employs about 200 people, besides a large number of miners.

Several other mining companies have opened their headquarters here and commenced operations in the vicinity, which, as soon as developed, will add largely to the business as well as to the population of Roanoke.

Among the early probabilities are the Roanoke and Southern Railroad, running from Atlanta, Ga., through North Carolina and South Carolina and the finest mercantile and mineral belt in the country, and terminating at Roanoke, where it will connect through to Philadelphia by means of the Shenandoah Valley line and other roads connecting therewith. Work is now commenced upon this road, and the charter is such as to require the principal offices and works to be located in Roanoke.

A rolling-mill company has been organized, and capital paid up for an enterprise which will soon be in operation, employing 300 men.

A Philadelphia syndicate contemplates the erection of a large steel plant in the coming spring, which will employ about 200 or 300 men. Besides they will operate mines near the city with a large force of hands.

A silk manufacturer has also selected a site in Roanoke upon which his industry is to be established and conducted upon a large scale.

In brief, Roanoke has the plant of a considerable and prosperous city, and is destined to become a manufacturing center. A furnace and car works and tobacco factories, fruit canneries, stock-yards, spoke factories, box factories, lumber mills, bottling works, machine-shops, carriage and plow factories are already established, and the building now recommended will soon be needed, and will in no wise surpass the calls of the public service.

Appended is the letter of the Supervising Architect, inclosing a communication from the postmaster of Roanoke on the subject.

"TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
"OFFICE OF THE SUPERVISING ARCHITECT,
"Washington, February 9, 1888.

"SIR: I have the honor to inclose herewith the report of the postmaster relative to the necessity for a public building at Roanoke, Va., for your information.

"Respectfully, yours,

"WILL. A. FRERET.
"Supervising Architect.

"Hon. JOHN W. DANIEL,
"United States Senate."

"UNITED STATES POST-OFFICE,
"Roanoke, Va., February 7, 1888.

"SIR: In response to your interrogatories concerning the necessity for construction of a public building here, I beg to submit in detail the following maturely considered and carefully prepared reply:

"1. The amount of room now occupied for post-office purposes is only 1,250 square feet on the ground floor.

"2. This room is totally inadequate to the demands of present business and has been so reported to the Post-Office Department by inspectors who have been sent here to examine it. The embarrassment to business has been temporarily relieved by leasing another much larger building, about 4,500 square feet in area.

"3. To meet the present demands of business a building containing 5,000 or 7,000 square feet of room will be necessary, according to internal design and arrangement. But in view of the rapid and continuously increasing growth of this place, and consequent increase of postal business, the demands of the near future indicate 10,000 square feet of room to be a safe and conservative estimate for the size of a suitable building, and to guard against the necessity for constructing an addition within the next ten years. When it is considered that this place but five or six years ago was a wheat-field and is now a city of more importance than any other in Southwest Virginia, and destined by its geographical situation to be the commercial and manufacturing center of the southwest, to which it is rapidly progressing, it will be seen that this estimate is a most conservative one.

"Not having at hand the data for ten years back, I hereto append a statement showing the increase in postal receipts for the past six years.

"Increase by years.

Years.	Gross receipts.	Years.	Gross receipts.
1882.....	$3,405.66	1885.....	$8,111.04
1883.....	8,287.69	1886.....	8,979.25
1884.....	8,615.95	1887.....	11,093.48

"From this increase, shown in six years, from $3,405.65 in 1882, to $11,093.48 in 1887, it is a safe estimate, based upon the natural pro rata increase without the addition of the usual per cent. from aggregated increases, that ten years hence the postal revenue at this place will be $66,560.98 per annum. This is calculated upon the simple pro rata increase in revenue of the past six years, and were it calculated upon the increase for the past ten years in the same manner it would be much greater. So it is safe to say, that while this estimate may fall short of what the amount of postal receipts will in that time reach, it can not be in excess of the gross receipts at that time.

"4. The number of regular employés in Government pay is only four. But this number is totally inadequate to the demands of the postal business, and has to be supplemented by assistants paid out of my private means. In the coming spring, when free delivery shall have been put in operation here, the force will of necessity be largely increased, as will also the demand for more room.

"5. The amount of rent now paid is $600 per annum. Upon the basis of increase of value of real estate and in proportion to the rent now demanded the increase of rent for postal accommodations will be $3,500 or $5,000 per annum.

"INTERNAL REVENUE.

"6. The internal-revenue collections through the collector here have been increased 50 per cent. in the past three years. His collections, wholly upon tobacco, from $15,335 in 1885 arose to $26,000 in 1887. Whisky revenue is at present all collected through the office at Lynchburgh, Va.

"Office room at present is scarcely 1,200 square feet.

"This is insufficient and should be three times its present size, as an increase of facilities would increase the gross receipts.

"In three years the gross receipts have been augmented 50 per cent., or just double in that time. In ten years the increase will be about 200 per cent.

"COST OF SUITABLE SITE.

"The cost of suitable site, centrally located, for the erection of a public building to meet the demands of business here will not exceed $12,000 if purchased within the coming year; but owing to the rapid enhancement of values difficult to approximate the cost for a greater period than this mentioned.

"Respectfully,

"OSCAR D. DERR, Postmaster.

"Col. W. A. FRERET,
"Supervising Architect."

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MANDERSON in the chair). The Chair calls the attention of the Senator from Virginia to that which he thinks needs an amendment in the bill as to the amount. In one part of the bill the amount is "$100,000," and elsewhere the bill says "$50,000."

Mr. DANIEL. I move the amendment according to the report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator moves that the bill be amended in line 11 by striking out "$100,000" and inserting "$50,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There seems to be necessity for another change, in line 20, page 2, by striking out "$100,000" and inserting "$50,000." The bill will be so amended if there be no objection. The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WASHINGTON CABLE ELECTRIC RAILWAY.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill (S. 931) to incorporate the Washington Cable Electric Railway of the District of Columbia is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole, and will be read.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS] made some suggestion as to the amendments, most of which are very immaterial, and it is suggested that as we go on with the reading of the bill they be acted on. For instance, in the first section, line 6, the name "R. W. Jackson" should be "I. N. Jackson." That is one committee amendment. If it is agreeable the amendments may as well be acted on as the bill is read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The first amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. In section 1, line 3, after the name "C. J. Bell," the Committee on the District of Columbia report to insert the name "John W. Thompson."

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHIEF CLERK. The next amendment reported by the committee is in section 1, line 6, to strike out the initials "R. W." before the name "Jackson," and insert "I. N.," so as to read, "I. N. Jackson."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. Is there any report with the bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed that there is no report.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I beg pardon of the Chair. There is a report, which has been printed and laid on the desks of Senators.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask that the report be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the following report, submitted by Mr. RIDDLEBERGER February 15, 1888:

The Committee on the District of Columbia, having considered Senate bill No. 931, respectfully report thereon as follows:

The object of this bill is to incorporate a company and authorize it to construct and operate a street railway, to be supplied with all the modern appliances and equipments, and to propel its cars by cable or electric power. The bill also designates the streets and highways over and along which the road is to be constructed and operated.

Your committee report that the route contemplated by this bill is along streets upon which no street cars are operated, save and except at one or two central points where the road will occupy a short section of a given street in common with the other roads simply to make the line continuous, in which cases the bill provides for joint use; but with these exceptions the line does not interfere with nor infringe upon the rights of any existing street-car line. We also report that it furnishes facilities for the traveling public along substantially the whole line not provided by any of the lines now in existence. Nearly all the trading, marketing, and business portions of the city are limited to parts of few streets; hence the people from all other parts of the city need a rapid public conveyance to accommodate them, and existing lines do this now in limited portions of the city only.

It is our opinion that these additional facilities are needed by the people of the city. It will not cost the city or its people anything, but will increase the value of all property adjacent to the lines. It will place the city along with other prosperous, progressive, and enterprising cities of the country in the matter of street travel. This system will furnish more rapid transportation and improve facilities for clerks and citizens for reaching cheap homes in the suburbs, greater accommodations as to cars and carrying capacity, greater cleanliness in the streets, will relieve the town from the filth and stench incident to the horse-car lines, and will add largely to the revenues of the District, owing to the large tax imposed upon the gross receipts of the company.

This proposition does not seek to destroy existing lines, but confers like privileges in the carrying trade for market and business points in the city upon a fair living basis. The bill secures the completion of the work of construction of the main lines within two years and the branch lines within four years, and provides that unless work is commenced and prosecuted in good faith on the main lines within six months from the passage of this bill the charter shall become void, and also secures the continuous and successful operation of the same when built.

The names of the incorporators comprise exclusively citizens of the District, and are a sufficient guaranty of the good faith of the enterprise. They represent ample financial ability to construct and operate the road successfully. We also report that all the restrictions, requirements, and exactions found in any of the charters of existing lines are incorporated in this bill, and in addition thereto there are several requirements found therein not imposed on any other road.

One change in this regard is that requirement which exacts payment of 50 per cent. in cash of all stock subscribed, a requirement not exacted of any other company; which limits the amount of bonds that may be issued, gives Congress the power to control passage rate, and reserves to Congress the right to alter, amend, or repeal the charter. The bill is substantially the measure which, after full discussion and careful consideration, passed the House of Representatives in the last session of the Forty-ninth Congress by more than a three-fourths vote, and was supported by a petition of over 20,000 citizens of the city. The committee, having in view the possibilities of electricity, have thought best to include it as a permitted motive power for the cars on this line; although it is not yet demonstrated to be a success for this purpose, yet it is within the range of possibility in the near future; they have also provided the cable power for this purpose, because it is demonstrated by the concurrent testimony of the mayors of all the cities in this country where it is in use to afford the best known means to this end. Not the least of the advantages afforded by the cable system is its undoubted cleanliness, an object not to be overlooked in this beautiful city.

It is also proposed by the incorporators that grooved rails of the latest improved pattern shall be used; that no wood shall be used in the construction, but that the track shall be laid in concrete; thus insuring the most permanent structure, avoiding frequent repairs, and reducing interruption of ordinary street travel to the minimum. We conclude from all the testimony before us, that cable or electric motive power is especially desirable for this city for the following reasons:

1. The accommodations are more satisfactory to the traveling public than horse-car.

2. They give the maximum of constant and continuous service under all conditions, and in point of fact are as little liable to serious interruption as horse-cars, when all conditions are considered.

3. They cause less inconvenience and destruction to other modes of travel than horse-cars.

4. They result in less tearing up of the streets when once constructed, and require less repair than the horse system.

5. They present no obstruction to other travel not incident to horse-cars, and in point of cleanliness and reliability are incomparably better.

The committee present this bill as one which it believes should be passed by the Senate at an early date, in order that should it become a law these much-needed improvements may be begun as soon as possible.

We recommend the passage of the bill with the amendments proposed by the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The reading of the bill will be resumed for action on the amendments.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask for the reading of the bill in full. Objection was made to unanimous consent for acting on the amendments as they were reached.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be read at length.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. Does the Senator from Missouri wish to interfere with the amendments being considered at this time, changing the names of corporators?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The reading will proceed, and after the reading the amendments can very readily be disposed of.

The Secretary resumed and continued the reading of the bill to the end of line 74 of section 1.

Mr. MCPHERSON. Before we depart from the particular section just read, relative to the routes over which the electric railroad is proposed to pass, I should like to ask a question of the Senator who has charge of the bill.

I see in lines 19 and 20, as near as I can judge from the reading of the bill, it is proposed to occupy almost the entire line of K street. I see also in lines 39 and 40 it is proposed to occupy almost the entire line of Massachusetts avenue—two important thoroughfares that have been laid, and very well laid, with asphalt pavement, the only two driving avenues in the city of Washington leading from one end of the city to the other in this direction. I find that it appears to be intended to occupy both these avenues. I wish to say that in my opinion never should there be a horse-car line or a cable road permitted on either of these avenues.

The great fault and misfortune of most of our cities—and certainly it would be a great misfortune in the city of Washington after having gone to the expense of properly paving these avenues, not too wide even for driving purposes, to now permit a cable company to tear up and absolutely destroy the pavement, and in that way destroy the only two available avenues for carriages between the further end of the city and this.

Judging from the reading of the bill so far, it practically surrenders both K street and Massachusetts avenue to this cable company. I ask the Senator from Virginia if he can give us any information on that point. I made inquiry of a member of the committee and was informed that it was not intended to occupy either K street or Massachusetts avenue, except a small portion to make some connections; but by the reading of the bill, as I understand it in the particular lines to which I have referred, I am certainly unalterably opposed to granting any such power to any company.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I know that these general names are used, but I beg the attention of the Senator from New Jersey to the fact that this road goes only a short distance on K street, not more than the second square this side of the K street bridge leading to Georgetown. It does not come this side. It takes that part of K street that is not built up by residences; I think it only takes from Twenty-sixth street down to the bridge.

Now, as to Massachusetts avenue, I think the incorporators here know how anxious the District people would be when there was any suggestion of laying down a railroad on one of the prominent avenues. I call the attention of the Senate to the fact that the use it is proposed to make of Massachusetts avenue is only where you find the little provision that allows the cable road to join the North Capitol street and the O street line, and get around the Capitol onto B street, and thence onto Eleventh street east, and from Eleventh street east down to the navy-yard. It does not touch Massachusetts avenue at any important part. There is just a little triangular park where it comes onto the North Capitol and O street road. It is utterly impossible to get to Eleventh street east in any other way. We have Eleventh street west now with a railroad, close to where I live, and yet we have Eleventh street northeast, and it is 2 miles from one to the other, and no connection. Senators should get their geography into their minds to understand this bill. There is no railroad on that Eleventh street, and it is proposed by this line to utilize it in getting to the navy-yard. It does not touch anybody's residence on Massachusetts avenue. It only comes in, as I say, at a little triangular space, and then comes around on the North Capitol and O street route to B, and thence to Eleventh street, passing large tracts of land on which there is not a brick. On the whole line of Eleventh street down to the navy-yard you will find almost farms.

These men give you the assurance that 50 per cent. of their money shall be paid up, and the further assurance that they shall commence the work within six months or forfeit their charter; and in the event of commencing within six months they shall complete the work within two years or then forfeit the charter; and the Congress of the United States has the right to regulate the fare, and under no circumstances shall their rate exceed 5 cents on the entire route. It comes in conflict with no other railroad traffic except that which I have just spoken of which comes in at Massachusetts avenue on the North Capitol and O street line up to Eleventh street, conserving the purpose of all the people who live on the streets. It goes out on T street, where there is no line of communication, and it comes back on S street, utterly and totally undeveloped so far as property is concerned. It goes down Twenty-sixth and Twenty-fourth streets, Twenty-first street, and takes K street only for one or two squares up to K street bridge to get over to Georgetown, in order that the people there may get the advantage of going up Twenty-ninth street and back on Thirtieth street, where there is now no railroad communication and where even a cart does not run now—a descending plane that never brings a cart to the wharf.

I beg the Senator's pardon if I have answered his question a little more at length than he expected, but that is all the use expected to be made of K street.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The reading of the bill will proceed.

The Secretary resumed the reading of the bill at line 75 of section 1, and concluded the same.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments proposed by the Committee on the District of Columbia will now be acted on, treating the action previously had as a nullity.

The first amendment reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia was in section 1, line 3, after the name "C. J. Bell" to insert "John W. Thompson," and in line 6 to strike out the initials "R. W." before the name "Jackson" and insert "I. N.;" so as to read:

That A. T. Britton, C. J. Bell, John W. Thompson, William W. Dudley, Austin H. Herr, George E. Lemon, E. K. Johnson, O. G. Staples, H. D. Cooke, M. M. Parker, J. L. Barbour, George W. Cochrane, and I. N. Jackson, of Washington, D. C., and their associates, successors, and assigns, be, and they are hereby, created a body corporate under the name of the Washington Cable Electric Railway Company of the District of Columbia.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in section 1, line 17, after the words "and the," to strike out "engineer commissioner" and insert "commissioners;" so as to read:

With authority to construct and lay down a single or double track railway, with the necessary switches, turnouts, and other mechanical devices, and sewer connections necessary to operate the same by cable or electric power, in the District of Columbia, through and along the following avenues and streets, with the privilege of entering the Capitol grounds under such restrictions as the Architect of the Capitol and the commissioners of the District may prescribe.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in section 1, line 34, after the words "Fifteenth street," to insert:

Provided, No additional space beyond 18 inches on one side of the street shall be occupied by the company than is now occupied by the tracks of the Washington and Georgetown Railroad Company.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 37, after the amendment just inserted, to strike out the words "along New York avenue to Fourteenth street," and in line 38, after the word "along," to strike out "Fourteenth" and insert "Fifteenth;" so as to read:

Along Fifteenth street to G street; along G street to Massachusetts avenue; along Massachusetts avenue to North Capitol street; along North Capitol street to B street northeast; along B street to Eleventh street northeast; along Eleventh street northeast and southeast to M street southeast; along M street southeast to Tenth street southeast; along Tenth street to Georgia avenue, and along Georgia avenue to Eleventh street southeast; also, commencing at Sixth street and Boundary northwest, with a double track, along Sixth street to the Potomac River.

Mr. GORMAN. It strikes me that there is very serious objection to this amendment. At the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Fifteenth street the street way is quite narrow, and all the traffic from two-thirds of the town centers there. There are three different lines of cars, the avenue railroad, which is the line from the navy-yard to Georgetown, and their branch that goes up Fourteenth street, and the Columbia line; and I think every gentleman who has resided in Washington must see the impropriety of putting another railroad track there.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I should like to hear what the Senator from Maryland says, but I can not.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will please be in order.

Mr. GORMAN. There is no more contracted space, none more difficult to pass to-day, than that point at the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Fifteenth street, and it seems to me that if we are to have in addition to the present lines another there propelled by steam or electricity, it will be an intolerable nuisance.

I should like to have some explanation why it is that this line is not to be built to continue on down New York avenue, which is a very wide street, to Fourteenth, and then down Fourteenth to G. I think the time must come before very long when, even with the present railroads occupying Fifteenth street, with the immense business that centers there from the whole northwestern part of the city, that point shall be freed from the obstruction of railroads and the street widened.

I trust this amendment of the committee will not be adopted. I think it would be a great outrage upon the public to encumber Fifteenth street at that point with another line. Think of the immense number of people from all the Departments crossing that point in the afternoon. There is great danger in crossing there as it is to-day. Now, add a steam railroad or one run by electricity, which I for one will never consent to, because we have not advanced far enough yet to be sure that it will be safe, and it would incommode everybody who passes along on foot or in a carriage. I therefore trust the amendment will not be adopted. If the road is to be built, let it pass down New York avenue, which is wide, to Fourteenth street, and then go on Fourteenth street to G.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question recurs on the amendment last read.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I have sent for the map, which I propose to lay before the Senator from Maryland, to be used by him at his leisure, for I am sure that he misapprehends the object of this amendment of the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending amendment will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. In section 1, line 37, after the word "company," it is proposed to strike out "along New York avenue to Fourteenth street;" and in line 38, after the word "along," to strike out "Fourteenth" and insert "Fifteenth;" so as to read:

Along Fifteenth street to G street.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on this amendment.

Mr. GORMAN. I should like to have the yeas and nays on that amendment. It seems to me very important, and I am confident that every Senator knowing the location with a map before him or on an inspection of this point must see that nobody would vote for it without further consideration.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. Let us see the map.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland has the floor.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I submit that whatever argument ought to be introduced should be addressed to the Chair. There is no opportunity to hear it unless it is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Maryland yield the floor?

Mr. GORMAN. I have been examining the map. There is not a Senator who has passed by the junction of the avenue and Fifteenth street, nor a resident of this city, who does not know that there is a greater crowd passing up Fifteenth street at the junction there of Pennsylvania avenue and New York avenue than at any other point in the city of Washington. It is the one point which all the persons coming from the northwestern section of the city and Georgetown necessarily pass. I have no statistics to show the number of people, but I do know the fact that with the present railroad tracks and with the present condition there is no more difficult point to pass with a carriage or on foot than this very point.

The bill, as originally drawn by those who projected the road, continued it after reaching Fifteenth street straight down New York avenue, which is a very wide avenue, until it came to Fourteenth street, and then down that street to G. If this road is to be built, that original route is the proper one, and it would incommode an immense number of people and be a great nuisance if the amendment of the committee should be adopted. If it is permitted to make a short turn opposite the Treasury Department, and thence by the Riggs House down G street, the money saved to the company will be a mere nothing; and the distance, according to the map furnished me by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. EDMUNDS], of going on New York avenue to Fourteenth street will be very slight, and the additional cost to the company a mere nothing, but to the public it would be a great convenience to have it off Fifteenth street, and I therefore ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I prefer that the yeas and nays be called. The contest which the Senator from Maryland makes is the gist of this whole matter. The monopoly of the city is from Seventeenth to Fifteenth street. You had just as well say that there should be one railway system here, as say that no other railway shall come down on Pennsylvania avenue from Seventeenth street to Fifteenth street.

Mr. GORMAN. I do not say that.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. You had as well say it. I beg pardon for using the pronoun "you" in that way, without addressing the Chair.

The President of the Senate will recollect that three or five years ago the people of the District asked for these railways, and they were refused them because it was said they could not stand two more tracks on that piece of road. Now they are to give up 18 inches on one side, and there are four carriage ways on each side of that. The Washington and Georgetown Railroad Company now has the exclusive right of the use of the avenue between Seventeenth and Fifteenth streets, and you can not get on that portion of the avenue except over their lines, and they stand here all the time refusing to allow any other company to use their lines.

The people of this District are ready to-day to accept this cable system and cover the Washington and Georgetown line, but they can not lay a cable unless they go with it a distance from the center of their track, and they ask only 18 inches.

Who opposes it here? Anybody from Washington City? Is there anybody here representing the Washington people opposing it? My observation has been within five years that the people of Washington want this cable system, and they do not want it obstructed or retarded by the fact that 18 inches of Pennsylvania avenue lying between Fifteenth and Seventeenth streets may be taken up in order to allow a cable to be laid to the left on one side or the right on the other.

There is a bill lying behind this that proposes to do the same thing. Senators on this floor, if I may be permitted to say it, have appeared before the committee and urged the passage of a bill that proposes to appropriate this piece of avenue for the same purpose in the interest of another corporation. This one came in three or four years ago. This bill has been passed twice by the Senate. Twice the company has changed its route to conform to the views of the monopoly system of street railways in this city, and at this session there comes in a proposition to steal the entire map of the city. That is what it amounts to.

This railway company that I am telling you here proposes to build this road is not touching any other railway in the city, except from Seventeenth to Fifteenth streets, and there is no proposition here to charter any other one that does not propose to do the same thing, and then to tap the North Capitol and O Street Railway on Massachusetts avenue, as I have already stated.

After they have gone into this matter for three years, and twice have passed this bill through the Senate, they are now confronted with competitive propositions of irresponsible people who want to get a pocket charter to sell. I say that this charter never was excelled in all of its requirements by any that was ever passed by a legislative body. They are required to pay in 50 per cent. of their money, and even the bond subscription is limited by the very amendment that is proposed by the Senator from Maryland. Everything is guarded.

Now, so far as the Senator from Vermont is concerned or his map of Duluth—I know he was going to develop that, for he seems to be fond of parading photographs and maps—that Duluth which he parades is avoided entirely by the change that is made in this bill and made to conform to the views of the existing monopoly in this city. Last year it was proposed to run this road down Louisiana avenue. That was objected to on the ground that it would be competing with the Seventh street railway system, and that it would bring on some sort of dangerous crossing at Seventh street and Louisiana avenue. I tried to combat it, and did so as well as I could; and finally this railroad company said, "We will abandon Louisiana avenue." Now they come down to the principal corner in this city, and we are told that nothing can have any right there but the cobble-stone and the horse railway in the city of Washington. It makes three turns there, if you may so call them, but certainly two. I examined it on Saturday morning; it has not the twist as my friend from Maryland seems to think. Out of consideration for the people of the District I stood with my foot on the box of a shoe boy in order to count, and I counted sixteen herdics making that turn while six cars did the same. The cable railway makes but a short turn from the avenue around to G street, and it comes along G street to the North Capitol and O street line, and goes down Eleventh street to the navy-yard, and gives people on the hill a service they have never had by wild-cat charters with incorporators brought here from points remote from the District of Columbia who want to speculate upon the Congressional franchise.

Mr. President, the point I want to make in the Senate is that if the Senator from Maryland can impress upon this body that the railway system shall not come down Pennsylvania avenue from Seventeenth street to Fifteenth street, he seals the power of the Congress of the United States to legislate at all for the relief of the people who want to ride on a cheap railway system. You can not get to G street in any other way, and the suggestion of New York avenue is too ingenious not at least to elicit, I will not say suspicion, but consideration. I think there are two tracks on New York avenue now, piled up like a mound. You can not go over them with a carriage or a herdic.

These tracks are an obstruction that ought to be taken out of the middle of that avenue, and there should be built there a surface railway; and the people who will put up their money to do it will be benefactors to this city, and especially to those who have to use street-car travel in preference to carriages. You can not get down New York avenue now with any comfort. That is an ingenious suggestion to defeat the whole policy of this proposed system of railway that comes in conflict with no other in the whole District except as it strikes Pennsylvania avenue from Seventeenth street to Fifteenth street and where it strikes the North Capitol road to go up B street, and then it develops an undeveloped part of the city.

As to the K street matter, that street is only used to get to Georgetown over High street, developing things there with the whole acclaim of the people of North and West Washington; but we are met here with the idle suggestion that it can not be done because between the White House and Fifteenth and G streets is the crooked part of Pennsylvania avenue, where we only ask to go in order to be relieved of the obligation that would rest on this company, that proposes to give five times the service that a horse railway can give, tearing up the cobble-stones of the streets and the avenues of Washington and requiring this company, as the committee amendments do, to lay asphalt pavement between their own tracks. They have no center-bearing track, have nothing that a carriage can not pass over as smoothly as it would pass over this floor. And yet a proposition like that is met with objection and the ingenious suggestion that they shall have all the privileges they want if they will give up that only line which will give them a connection between Northwest and Northeast Washington.

Mr. President, accustomed as I am to standing a good deal of talk in the discussion of amendments I can not fail to understand what it means, because to adopt the proposition made by the Senator from Maryland would be the absolute destruction of this bill. It would be to say to the citizens of the District of Columbia, "You can not have another railway system without the imprimatur of the Washington and Georgetown Railroad Company." That is what it amounts to. They have got more than the pavement necessary for a car-track between the two tracks on that street; yet I am told here, not directly, but in the way in which it comes to me to-day, that nothing more can pass over Pennsylvania avenue from Seventeenth to Fifteenth streets. "Thus far shalt thou come, but no farther," says the Washington and Georgetown Railroad Company. "Touch me nowhere."

Let them have all the advantages they have been accumulating from that peculiar legislation which has emanated from the two Houses of Congress, and I say that the people of this neglected section of this District should have railway facilities that will bring them around this Capitol and take them to the Northwest and will let the people of K street and Twenty-fourth, and Twenty-fifth, and Twenty-sixth streets, and the people over in Georgetown up to Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets be able to get here and back again.

The men interested in this bill ask nothing from this Government except the poor privilege of building this railroad under a charter guarded in such a way as that I undertake to say the Senator from Maryland would hardly allow himself to be an incorporator. They are limited in the number of bonds with such guardianship as is thrown around no other corporation in the District.

Now, then, give me some other reason, if you can, or give the Senate some reason why you should repel these people who are asking for this franchise, than the one that they can not get the privilege of laying a track on either side of the present railway between Seventeenth and Fifteenth streets on Pennsylvania avenue, owned by the Washington and Georgetown Railway Company.

I repeat, for it is sometimes necessary to repeat things in order to fasten them in the minds of men, that the suggestion of New York avenue to get to G street is ingenious. I give the Senator from Maryland credit for contriving it, for he knows that there are two tracks now on New York avenue, and that there is no public concern there that is not served by the present railway tracks.

I hope it will be the pleasure of the Senate to keep this bill under consideration until it shall be passed or defeated. Whatever may be the judgment of the Senate, of course we must acquiesce in. It is necessary, if passed at all, that the bill should be passed quickly. It is necessary for the reason that the company are confined within certain limits; and I believe that we are conserving the interests of nine-tenths of the people of the District of Columbia when we pass this bill, if we shall do it in time to send it to the other House and let them act upon it as their judgment shall dictate to them.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President, I am not content to allow the remarks of the Senator from Virginia to go without a word of reply. It seems he has made a great mistake as to what my real position is. He seems to be laboring under the impression that my suggestion covers that portion of the avenue now occupied by the Washington and Georgetown Railroad Company from Twenty-sixth street to Fifteenth street. It does not. It has no reference to that branch of it whatever. This road, if constructed, must of necessity use that portion of Pennsylvania avenue. I agree to that. So the Senator is entirely mistaken as to the purport of my suggestion.

He describes it as an ingenious suggestion. Here are people who come to Congress for a great franchise, a valuable one, one that ought never to be granted unless we tax them as other cities tax them and make them pay a large proportion of the cost of running the District government. It is a valuable franchise, and I am not opposed to giving the franchise upon proper terms. I am not opposed to giving them the right to use that portion of the avenue between Fifteenth and Seventeenth streets. It is a necessity to the scheme; but these ingenious men who are looking after their own interests, when they made their proposition to Congress, had not the hardihood themselves to ask to come up G street to Fifteenth street and use a portion of Fifteenth street opposite the Treasury Department, the corner where Riggs's Bank and the Treasury Department are on opposite sides. So when they came to Congress they had their bill drawn to run the line from G street to Seventeenth street, thence to Pennsylvania avenue, and along Pennsylvania avenue to Fifteenth street, and then along New York avenue to Fourteenth street, and down Fourteenth street, and then down G street. That was their original proposition. If the road is to be constructed—and I am not arguing against the road—their original proposition was exactly right in the interest of the people of this city.

Now, the Senator lays great stress on the Washington and Georgetown Railroad Company. I would vote for a bill to-day, and I think the interest of the city demands it, requiring that company to move their tracks from Fifteenth street and go up Fourteenth street and around New York avenue, as I would have this road go; but it is there to-day, and it will require Congressional legislation to make them remove their tracks from Fifteenth street. This bill as amended by the committee would add to that use and create further and greater embarrassment.

I say to the Senator from Virginia that no talk about other corporations who have vested rights here, no intimations that their interests require the defeat of this bill, will prevent me now or at any time from, so far as I can by my vote and my voice, relieving the citizens from the embarrassment which has grown up by loose legislation in the past. The fact that an existing company has a charter which gives it rights that never ought to have been granted is no reason why we should continue to grant additional rights and privileges to other corporations.

These abuses ought to be corrected; and I say to the Senator from Virginia that in my judgment he would best serve this District, he would best serve this new corporation that is coming into existence, by compelling it to do exactly what it asked when it brought this proposition to the Senate. In other words, the amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia is embarrassing and bad, and my suggestion is only to vote down that proposed amendment and let the bill go as it was presented here, in a much better form than the amendment will make it.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. Mr. President, good faith requires that I should state explicitly the reason why the amendment was proposed.

The Senator criticises the corporators. He has stated what was their proposition; but the committee refused to allow it, and they acquiesced in the unanimous judgment of the committee. They have accepted just what the committee proposed.

Mr. GORMAN. Then the committee is wrong.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. Then my friend from Maryland ought to have attacked the committee and not the corporators.

So far as the mere matter of taxation is concerned, this bill provides that this company shall pay 4 per cent. of its gross proceeds to the District of Columbia. Does any other corporation pay that much? Further, it provides that it shall make its returns by the 15th of January of each year of its gross earnings, with the affidavit of its officers. About one-half of 1 per cent. of gross earnings would measure the amount of taxes paid in this city by corporations that have heretofore secured their franchises from Congress.

That is all I desire to say.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question recurs on the amendment proposed by the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. SPOONER. Let the amendment be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be again read.

The SECRETARY. In line 37 of section 1, after the word "company," it is proposed to strike out "along New York avenue to Fourteenth street," and in line 38, after the word "along," to strike out "Fourteenth" and insert "Fifteenth;" so as to read:

Along Fifteenth street to G street.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Did the Chair understand the Senator from Maryland to call for the yeas and nays?

Mr. GORMAN. I withdraw the call for the yeas and nays; it is not necessary now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment. [Putting the question.] The noes appear to have it.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I call for a division.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A division is called for.

The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 13, noes 14.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I ask for the yeas and nays. I fear the Senate is under a misapprehension. The question is on the committee amendment, and not on the amendment of the Senator from Maryland.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. DAWES. I have not heard from the Senator from Virginia or any friend of this measure a single reason given for turning down Fifteenth street instead of Fourteenth street. You reach G street as well by turning down Fourteenth street as you do by turning down Fifteenth street. There is certainly some reason in the suggestion that Fifteenth street at that point is exceedingly crowded. I do not see that the corporation does not get everything it wants by turning down Fourteenth street.

Mr. HOAR. Turning from where?

Mr. DAWES. Turning from G street to Pennsylvania avenue at Seventeenth street and from Pennsylvania avenue to reach G street again. When they reach Fourteenth street and New York avenue they have but to go one block down Fourteenth street, instead of Fifteenth.

I am willing to co-operate with this committee in making this the best bill possible. I would vote for their amendment if I could hear any reason why it would be better for the corporation—why it would be better for the public. I may be mistaken about it. I understand a good deal about monopolies from the speech of the Senator from Virginia, and about the over-reaching of corporations, but I do not see that that applies to this question, though it may. I should like to hear from some other member of the committee, if the Senator from Virginia does not favor us with them, reasons why the public would not be served just as well by the corporation going on New York avenue to Fourteenth street.

Mr. HOAR. I do not understand this question, and have not formed any opinion. I thought I was following the committee, and so voted on the division; but I wish to ask my colleague a question. I have been told that when the Treasury building is closed daily there are some two thousand eight hundred persons in it. Those persons all dwell elsewhere; and twice a day, saying nothing of persons who go there on business, there are in all five thousand six hundred persons who arrive at and leave the Department at that point. Now, is not the convenience of passing by the Treasury a pretty strong reason for the amendment?

Mr. DAWES. The route in the bill passes the Treasury just the same.

Mr. HOAR. Is that so? That is what I wanted to know.

Mr. DAWES. It passes the Treasury along one front, but at that corner it is not so near one Treasury door, quite, as it is to another Treasury door on Fifteenth street; but it is so near the Treasury door opposite G street it seems to me to make no real difference in convenience.

Mr. FARWELL. I desire to explain what this amendment is. The original route of the road near to the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Fourteenth street was to go from there on New York avenue to Fourteenth street, and then down Fourteenth street to G. The amendment is to turn it at Fifteenth street towards the Riggs House at G street. The amendment is to run the line from the junction where Fifteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue come together, along Fifteenth street south to G street at the Riggs House. That is the amendment of the committee.

Mr. DAWES. The Treasury building faces the road on the north; and when it gets to the corner of the Treasury building, where the road turns down Fifteenth street, it turns a short corner. By the original bill it goes right along to Fourteenth street. The difference is between its going on two sides of the Treasury building and going on one side. That is all.

Mr. CHANDLER. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. DAWES] asks why it is not just as well to go around New York avenue and down Fourteenth street to G street as it is to strike directly from the corner of the Treasury lot across to G street and then on. The answer is that it makes a crooked road out of a road which will be comparatively a straight one.

I am not clear as to the necessity of this road to the District of Columbia; but if Congress proposes to authorize a new road to pass in front of the White House, south of the present tracks, then I am clear that when it reaches the Treasury lot corner and must get across these other tracks, the best way is to send it almost directly across by a line slightly diagonal, and get it into G street, and get it out of the way, and then let it go on G street to Massachusetts avenue; whereas if this amendment is rejected the track, having reached the corner of the Treasury building, as the Senator from Massachusetts says, but really the corner of the Treasury lot, has then to cross these same tracks and go to the north a little up New York avenue until it reaches Fourteenth street, going away from G street, and then turning quite a distance, probably several hundred feet, down Fourteenth street to G, and then making the turn.

It seems to me that that is all unnecessary, and that it will not relieve the crowding at that point at all; and if this road is to be allowed to go from Georgetown along G street until it strikes the State Department lot, then to go a few feet up Seventeenth street to Pennsylvania avenue, and along Pennsylvania avenue in front of the White House until it strikes Fifteenth, then the best way for it is to go by a slight, short diagonal into G street, and not to be sent the three-quarters of a circle that is proposed by the bill as originally introduced. This is my idea about it in connection with the bill as it has been reported by the committee.

Mr. DAWES. What is the difference in distance?

Mr. CHANDLER. I should think the extra distance would be a great many rods, and it would make more a divergence to the north than passing directly into G street would make to the south, and then after it had gone to the north up New York avenue you would have to make a very sharp turn around an acute angle down into Fourteenth street, and then when you got to G street you would have to make a direct right angle turn at that point. It seems to me that if this road is to be built at all, it would be the height of folly to send it around in this direction. I do not believe it will relieve the crowd one particle more than it would be relieved upon the line as proposed by the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. DAWES. I do not understand mathematics very much, but I think there is about as much distance the one way as the other. The only difference is the difference of space between where New York avenue strikes Fifteenth street and G street. That is a mathematical certainty, inasmuch as two sides of a parallelogram we always understood were equal to the two opposite sides. There is a difference of distance between the point where New York avenue strikes Fourteenth street and G street. That distance is added to the corner, and there are precisely as many angles to be turned in the one case as in the other. I have no choice, and do not know which is the best. I only state the reasons against the change as they strike me.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays have been ordered, and the Secretary will call the roll.

The yeas and nays were taken.

Mr. HAMPTON. My colleague [Mr. BUTLER] is paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON].

Mr. TELLER. I am paired with the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY] on all political questions. I do not suppose this is a political question, but I notice that the other side of the Chamber have voted pretty solidly one way. I withhold my vote. If I were at liberty to vote I should vote "yea."

Mr. PUGH (after having voted in the negative). I have a general pair with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. EDMUNDS], so I withdraw my vote.

Mr. GORMAN. The Senator from Vermont is against the amendment; he so informed me.

Mr. PUGH. With that understanding I vote "nay."

Mr. ALDRICH. I am paired with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SABIN.] If present he would vote "yea," and I should vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 23, nays 20; as follows:

YEAS—23.

Bowen,	Farwell,	Paddock,	Spooner,
Chace,	Frye,	Palmer,	Stanford,
Chandler,	Hoar,	Plumb,	Stewart,
Cullom,	Manderson,	Riddleberger,	Stockbridge,
Davis,	Mitchell,	Sawyer,	Wilson of Iowa.
Evarts,	Morrill,	Sherman,

NAYS—20.

Bate,	Coke,	Gorman,	Payne,
Beck,	Colquitt,	Hampton,	Pugh,
Blackburn,	Dawes,	Harris,	Vance,
Call,	Eustis,	Hearst,	Vest,
Cockrell,	George,	Pasco,	Walthall.

ABSENT—33.

Aldrich,	Dolph,	Jones of Arkansas,	Sabin,
Allison,	Edmunds,	Jones of Nevada,	Saulsbury,
Berry,	Faulkner,	Kenna,	Teller,
Blair,	Gibson,	McPherson,	Turpie,
Blodgett,	Gray,	Morgan,	Voorhees,
Brown,	Hale,	Platt,	Wilson of Md.
Butler,	Hawley,	Quay,
Cameron,	Hiscock,	Ransom,
Daniel,	Ingalls,	Reagan,

So the amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia was, in section 1, after the words "Potomac River," at the end of line 47, to strike out—

Also commencing at the corner of Twenty-first street and Boundary northwest, with a double track, along Twenty-first street to G street northwest, there to connect with the main line east and west; also commencing at the corner of Twenty-first and S streets northwest, with a single track, along S street to Sixth street northwest, along Sixth street to T street northwest, along T street to Boundary, and along Boundary to place of beginning.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

Also commencing at the corner of T street and Boundary, along T street to Boundary, along Boundary to Twenty-first street, along Twenty-first street to G street, connecting with main line, along main line to Twentieth street, along Twentieth street to S street to Sixth, along Sixth street to Boundary, along Boundary to T street, with single track.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 1, line 66, after the words "judgment of the," to strike out "engineer commissioner" and insert "commissioners;" in line 67, after the word "District," to insert "of Columbia;" in the same line, after the word "by," to strike out "him" and insert "them;" and in line 73, after the words "by the," to strike out "engineer commissioner" and insert "commissioners;" so as to read:

Provided, That when said lines coincide with the duly authorized lines of any other duly incorporated street railway of the District of Columbia, said Washington Cable Electric Railway shall lay separate and independent tracks in the original construction of the said lines whenever in the judgment of the commissioners of the District of Columbia it shall be deemed by them possible and practicable so to do. Whenever the foregoing route or routes may coincide with the duly authorized route or routes of any other duly incorporated street-railway company in the District of Columbia, either or both companies may use the same tracks, when, on account of the width of the streets, or for other sufficient reasons, it shall be deemed by the commissioners of the District to be necessary.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. VANCE. Are any but the amendments of the committee in order now?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Not at this time, unless an amendment to an amendment proposed by the committee. The next committee amendment will be stated.

The next amendment was, in section 1, after the word "charged," at the end of line 97, to strike out the following words:

Said road shall be deemed real estate and its franchise and property be liable to taxation as other real estate and personal property in the District of Columbia.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I should like to ask the Senator in charge of this bill, on the subject of taxation, whether there is any provision for the taxation of the stock as personal property? I suppose the stock is made personal property. The provision just agreed to provides merely as to the plant being taxed as real estate. Is there anything on the subject of taxing the stock?

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. The amendment just acted on relates to the realty. The stations, etc., are taxed as realty. All other taxation is covered by the one general provision of 4 per cent. upon gross receipts. I believe it is the general expression of the press as well as the view of the committee that we can not tax the track and rolling-stock as realty, and therefore we reach all by the process of taxing 4 per cent. on gross receipts, and besides, all their realty, which is described in the bill, is taxed as other realty in the District of Columbia. That is the bill as I understand it.

Mr. EDMUNDS. But I see that the amendment just agreed to on page 5 strikes out the statement in the original bill that the road shall be deemed real estate, and its franchise and property be liable to taxation as other real estate in the District of Columbia; and in the amendment of the committee on page 14 it is provided that there shall be a payment of 4 per cent. of the gross earnings for the preceding year, and that that—shall be in lieu of all other assessments of taxes of whatsoever character upon its personal property, including its cars and motive power, but the real estate of the company may be taxed as other real estate in the District: Provided, That the tracks of the company shall not be taxed as real estate.

That is, the whole of their line and rails "shall not be taxed as real estate," so that all that would be left for taxation outside of the 4 per cent. of gross earnings would be their offices and stables and things of that sort that had nothing to do with the operating of the line of the railway, incidental to it and necessary to it of course, but entirely outside of the property. How much the people of this District and of the United States are to get out of a scheme of that kind remains to be seen.

Mr. HOAR. Will the Chair direct the amendment just adopted to be reported again?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. After the word "charged," at the end of line 97 of section 1, the amendment was to strike out the following words:

Said road shall be deemed real estate, and its franchise and property be liable to taxation as other real estate and personal property in the District of Columbia.

Mr. HOAR. I desire the attention of the Senator from Virginia. The doctrine of that amendment leaves the bill to enact that the property and franchise of the road shall not be called upon to contribute to taxation and yet shall be liable to sale for non-payment of taxes. Undoubtedly the committee meant to have the amendment extend a little further.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The latter words ought to come out as a matter of course if the other amendment is adopted.

Mr. HOAR. There is a mistake in the extent of the amendment.

Mr. SPOONER. The words "and its property and franchise shall be liable to sale for non-payment of the same" should also be stricken out.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Let that be done now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to striking out the words mentioned, which will be read by the Secretary, so that there may be no misunderstanding?

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to strike out the words "and its franchise and property shall be liable to sale for non-payment of the same."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are those the words which are to be stricken out?

Mr. SPOONER. Those are the words.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to striking out the words just read? The Chair hears none. It is so ordered.

Mr. HOAR. I should like to be informed by the committee whether a 4 per cent. tax on gross earnings is in their judgment a sufficient contribution to be required of this road, including its shares, for all public purposes. I do not know what the experience of other roads is.

Mr. SPOONER. The committee was of the opinion that the best mode of taxing such properties was the exaction of a tax upon the gross earnings or gross receipts of the company, rather than by way of assessment or attempted assessment upon the tracks. That system of taxation which has been applied to street railways in this District has been very near a failure. We fixed this rate of taxation at 4 per cent. for the reason that this is an experiment; the road is to be constructed through portions of the city not extensively settled; and the power at any time to increase the rate is reserved to Congress. It is the opinion of the committee that the result of that will probably be large enough.

The Senator from Massachusetts asks a question, whether this is in lieu of taxation upon stockholders. It was not so intended. This tax is simply a tax upon the company. It is a tax which is exacted from the corporation; it has no relation whatever to the private property of the stockholders. When one purchases stock in a corporation, or takes it by subscription, it is his personal property, and he deals with the matter as he does with other property, and he has to pay his taxes upon it I suppose; but the bill simply proposes a rate of taxation upon the company, the corporation itself.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, it seems to me, with great deference to the committee, that the proper method of dealing with this company and with all like companies is analogous to that which we use in dealing with national banks, that the proper mode is that pursued in principle in dealing with the national banks. That is to say, the visible real estate should be taxed as a separate subject of taxation. I do not speak now of the franchise, or tracks or the mere right of way, but I speak of offices and such like things, and then they being taxed to the company, should include the rolling-stock, which is a distinct article and which goes with the realty in almost all railroad jurisprudence. Then having taxed that at its value, as we tax a counting-room or as we tax a factory with the machinery fixed in it, there should be in lieu of any attempt to reach the franchise a reasonable tax on the gross earnings just as you have the bank tax on circulation and deposits, and then the share, which is the personal property of the shareholder, should be taxed with his personal property where he dwells. If he dwells in another State he can be taxed there; if he dwells in the District he pays his tax as on other personal property in the District.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The States tax national-bank shareholders by permission of Congress.

Mr. HOAR. The national-bank act is dealing with a national institution performing some of the functions of Government, but which so far as it is a property owner has a location in a particular State. It is very inconvenient to make the shares of national banks taxable where the shareholder happens to reside. The principle which I stated in the main would not apply to national banks, and in the main would not, I suppose, apply to steam railroads in the various States, with some exceptions in different States, and I should hope the committee would consent to have this bill based on that principle.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Mr. President, this bill apparently, as far as I have been able to run it over, does not contain any provision subjecting the shares in the corporation to any taxation anywhere, but with the amendment of the committee and the provision stricken out that has already been stricken out in the text of the bill, it provides that 4 per cent. of the gross earnings shall be paid as a tax in lieu of all other taxes of every kind. That is the short of it.

In the national-bank act where it was provided that the corporation itself should pay certain taxes, and that that should cover everything, it was thought necessary, and it was done, to insert a particular and special provision that the shares of stock should be deemed personal property, and should be liable to taxation at the same rate that other moneyed capital was in the hands of the holders of that stock in the community or place where the bank was located.

Now, therefore, if it is the desire of the Senate to tax the shareholders of this corporation for the value of their personal interest in it, separate from the corporate interest, according to the course of legislation, it will be necessary to say so in this bill, or you will be met in the courts by the circumstance and the fact that in all other similar legislation it had been thought necessary to insert a special provision that the stock should be liable to taxation, and it will be argued, and I suspect with some success, that this sweeping provision which now stands here was intended to exclude by the omission of the other provision existing in other laws the idea of taxing the stockholders at all; and then you have got a concern of this great magnitude that is only to pay all around, corporate or personal or anything else, 4 per cent. of the gross earnings of the concern into the Treasury, which is altogether wrong, as I believe.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The next amendment of the committee will be stated.

Mr. HOAR. What amendment is now before the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate adopted the amendment striking out lines 98, 99, and 100. The next amendment is the insertion of new words in line 103, which will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. In section 1, line 103, after the word "rails" it is proposed to insert:

Of American manufacture and——

Mr. VANCE. I trust the Senate will not concur in that amendment. It has frequently happened that in our legislation concerning ships or some institutions which the Government established or engaged in the construction of, the character of the material has been dictated in the law; but I have never known an instance where Congress has dictated to a private corporation where it should buy its materials. It seems to me that the public interest is sufficiently subserved when we enact that the rails shall be of the best material, without adding that they shall be of American manufacture, for it does not always follow that they are of the best material because they are of American manufacture. But at all events, it seems to me, it is an unusual stretch of power for us to take upon ourselves, and that with equal propriety we might prescribe that every particle of their machinery and apparatus used in the operation of this road should be likewise of American material; that the harness that was used in connection with their establishment should be of American manufacture; that their conductors should be dressed in American clothing, and so on to the end of the chapter. I think this is altogether absurd, and I hope the Senate will not concur in the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the committee.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. STEWART (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Texas [Mr. REAGAN].

Mr. TELLER (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY]. The understanding was that whenever I thought he would vote differently from myself I should be paired with him. If he was here I presume he would vote "nay," and I should certainly vote "yea."

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. CULLOM (after having voted in the affirmative). I cast my vote awhile ago, forgetting that I had paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY]. I ask, therefore, to withdraw it. I would vote "yea" if I had the opportunity.

Mr. EVARTS (after having voted in the affirmative). I voted "yea," but I must withdraw my vote, as I am paired with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN], who, I presume, would vote "nay."

Mr. FRYE. My colleague [Mr. HALE] is necessarily detained from the Senate, and is paired with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BECK]. My colleague, if here, would vote "yea."

Mr. PUGH. My colleague [Mr. MORGAN] is paired with the Senator from New York [Mr. EVARTS].

The result was announced—yeas 25, nays 17, as follows:

YEAS—25.

Blair,	Edmunds,	Mitchell,	Spooner,
Bowen,	Farwell,	Morrill,	Stanford,
Brown,	Frye,	Paddock,	Stewart,
Chace,	Gorman,	Palmer,	Stockbridge.
Chandler,	Hiscock,	Platt,
Davis,	Hoar,	Plumb,
Dawes,	Manderson,	Riddleberger,

NAYS—17.

Bate,	Eustis,	Hearst,	Walthall,
Blackburn,	George,	Pugh,	Wilson of Md.
Call,	Gibson,	Reagan,
Coke,	Hampton,	Vance,
Daniel,	Harris,	Vest,

ABSENT—34.

Aldrich,	Cullom,	Jones of Nevada,	Saulsbury,
Allison,	Dolph,	Kenna,	Sawyer,
Beck,	Evarts,	McPherson,	Sherman,
Berry,	Faulkner,	Morgan,	Teller,
Blodgett,	Gray,	Pasco,	Turpie,
Butler,	Hale,	Payne,	Voorhees,
Cameron,	Hawley,	Quay,	Wilson of Iowa.
Cockrell,	Ingalls,	Ransom,
Colquitt,	Jones of Arkansas,	Sabin,

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. EDMUNDS. It is desirable that there should be an executive session, and I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. HOAR. If the Senator from Vermont will withhold the motion for a moment, I ask leave to offer an amendment to the pending bill and have it printed.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I withhold the motion for that purpose.

Mr. HOAR. I move, at the end of section 5, on page 14, line 26, to amend the committee amendment by adding:

And that the shares in said corporation shall be included in the valuation of the personal property of the owner for the purposes of taxation as other personal property.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be received and printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 639) to authorize Commander John W. Philip, United States Navy, to accept a silver pitcher from the Government of the United States of Colombia; and

A bill (H. R. 3470) to authorize the construction of bridges over the rivers St. Mary's, Satilla, Little Satilla, and Crooked, in the States of Georgia and Florida.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I renew my motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After one hour and twenty-five minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 20 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Tuesday, February 21, 1888, at 12 o'clock m.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate the 20th day of February, 1888.

REGISTER OF LAND OFFICE.

William H. Steele, of Colorado, to be register of the land office at Montrose, Colo., vice David S. Hoffman, term expired.

RECEIVERS OF PUBLIC MONEYS.

Henry Charles Fink, of Colorado, to be receiver of public moneys at Montrose, Colo., vice Charles D. Peck, term expired.

Leonard B. Cornell, of New York, to be receiver of public moneys at Spokane Falls, Wash., vice Malcolm G. Barney, removed.

INDIAN AGENTS.

E. P. Briscoe, of Port Gibson, Miss., to be agent for the Indians of the Crow agency in Montana, vice Henry E. Williamson, resigned.

Enos Gheen, of Mount Pleasant, Iowa, to be agent for the Indians of the Sac and Fox agency in Iowa, vice William H. Black, resigned.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS.

Francis E. Pedrick, of Massachusetts, to be collector of customs for the district of Marblehead, in the State of Massachusetts, vice Francis A. Osgood, term expired.

CONFIRMATION.

Executive nomination confirmed by the Senate February 20, 1888.

POSTMASTER.

Daniel D. Woodward, to be postmaster at Mexico, in the county of Audrain and State of Missouri.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, February 20, 1888.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by Rev. Dr. BUTLER, of Washington, D. C.

The Journal of Friday's proceedings was read and approved.

FEES OF WITNESSES.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a letter from the Attorney-General in relation to the discrimination in mileage between witnesses in the United States courts and witnesses before United States commissioners in the district of Colorado; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

STENOGRAPHIC CLERKS FOR JUSTICES OF SUPREME COURT.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting an estimate from the Attorney-General of an appropriation for stenographic clerks for the Chief-Justice and the associate justices of the Supreme Court; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

MILITARY RESERVATION, FORT ROBINSON, NEBR.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting an estimate from the Secretary of War of an appropriation for the extension of the military reservation at Fort Robinson, Nebr.; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

EXPERT TESTIMONY, GOVERNMENT SUITS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting an estimate from the Attorney-General of an appropriation for expenses of experts in suits against defaulting officers; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

EIGHT-HOUR LAW.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Attorney-General, in response to a resolution of the House calling for information relative to claims arising in that Department from the proposed adjustment of accounts of employés under the eight-hour law; which was referred to the Committee on Labor.

CAPTURED FLAGS, ETC.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, with inclosures, in response to a resolution of the House calling for information relative to captured standards, flags, and colors; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. HOOKER, for ten days, on account of important business.

To Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan, for four days, on account of important business.

To Mr. BIGGS, indefinitely, on account of illness.

To Mr. DOUGHERTY, for six days, on account of important business.

To Mr. HOUK, until Tuesday next, on account of important business.

DIRECTORS COLUMBIA INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB.

The SPEAKER announced the appointment of Mr. HEMPHILL and Mr. HITT as directors of the Columbia Institution for the Deaf and Dumb.

COLUMBIA HOSPITAL, ETC.

The SPEAKER also announced the appointment of Mr. COLLINS and Mr. KETCHAM as directors of the Columbia Hospital for the ensuing year.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. FISHER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found duly enrolled a bill of the following title; when the Speaker signed the same, namely:

A bill (H. R. 6439) authorizing the appointment of two additional division superintendents of railway mail service.

BREAKWATER, CLEVELAND, OHIO.

Mr. FORAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution I send to the desk.

The SPEAKER. The resolution will be read, subject to objection.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be, and is hereby, requested to transmit to this House, for the use of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, all papers, maps, tracings, and recommendations on file in the War Department in relation to the breakwater at Cleveland, Ohio, especially all such papers, maps, tracings, and recommendations relative to the extension of said breakwater easterly substantially on the present line without material deflection toward the shore, for the whole length now authorized and an additional length of not less than 2,000 feet.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the resolution was considered, and agreed to.

Mr. FORAN moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

RODERICK M'INTOSH.

Mr. DAVIS. I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole House be discharged from the consideration of the bill (H. R. 393) to provide for the payment of the claim of Capt. Roderick McIntosh, and that it be brought before the House for present consideration.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there be appropriated and paid out of the Treasury of the United States, from moneys not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $166.96, in addition to the sum of $180 heretofore paid, to Capt. Roderick McIntosh, master of the schooner Bucephalus, for services in rescuing, transporting, and subsisting the officers and crew of the schooner Astoria, of Bucksport, Me., in July, 1885.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment to strike out "ninety-six," in line 5, and insert "sixty-six."

Mr. MCMILLIN. Let the report be read.

The report was read.

Mr. MCMILLIN. I ask the gentleman from Massachusetts whether these rescued officers and crew were in the service of the United States Government when wrecked.

Mr. DAVIS. They were not.

Mr. MCMILLIN. Then upon what ground did the liability of the Government accrue?

Mr. DAVIS. On the ground of the loss to the owner of the vessel while performing this act of humanity.

Mr. MCMILLIN. I wish to know on what ground the Government of the United States is liable for this claim. If the persons rescued were in the naval or marine service of the Government, the actual service of the Government of the United States, an equitable claim would be fixed on the Government. But I wish to see how in this case the liability arises.

Mr. DAVIS. The law recognizes a certain liability on the part of the Government and the Government paid $180 on account of that legal liability. The sum provided for in the bill is an amount beyond that, the accounting officers not feeling authorized to go beyond the amount of $180.

Mr. MCMILLIN. That does not answer my question. How does the liability of the Government arise?

Mr. DAVIS. It arises under the statute law. I can not refer to it at this moment, but there is undoubtedly a statute law that covers the case.

Mr. MCMILLIN. And the only question is as to the amount which was paid not complying with the statute?

Mr. DAVIS. The amount paid probably complied with the statute; but it is admitted by the officers of the Treasury Department that the amount paid is not sufficient. There is a certain amount allowed in such cases, but it is hardly ever sufficient, and in this case the amount allowed was clearly insufficient; so there is an equitable claim on the part of these persons, the equity of the claim on their part being conceded.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. OATES. I object.

CONSIDERATION OF TELEGRAPH BILL.

Mr. DOCKERY. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That Saturday, the 3d of March, 1888, immediately after the reading of the Journal be set apart for the further consideration of House bill 1426, with amendments.

Mr. BLAND. What bill is that?

Mr. DOCKERY. The bill requiring the Pacific railroads to construct telegraph lines; a bill which has been already considered by the House.

The SPEAKER. In the absence of objection, the question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was adopted.

Mr. DOCKERY moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

BRIDGES IN GEORGIA AND FLORIDA.

Mr. YODER. I ask unanimous consent to call up from the Private Calendar for present consideration the bill (H. R. 3470) to authorize the construction of bridges over the rivers St. Mary's, Satella, Little Satella, and Crooked, in the States of Georgia and Florida, reported by the Committee on Commerce with amendments.

The bill was read, as follows:

[The amendments of the committee are to strike out the words printed within brackets and to insert the words printed in italics.]

Be it enacted, etc., That the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia Railroad Company be, and are hereby, authorized to construct a bridge over the river Saint Mary's, in the county of Camden and State of Georgia, and in the county of Nassau and State of Florida, at the point where said railroads cross said river.

SEC. 2. That the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia Railroad Company be, and is hereby, authorized to construct a bridge over the river [Satella] Satilla, in the county of Camden, in the State of Georgia, at the point where said railroad crosses said river.

SEC. 3. That said bridges shall be so constructed, either by draw, span, or otherwise, so that a free and unobstructed passage may be secured to all vessels and other water-craft navigating said rivers.

SEC. 4. That the said East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia and Florida Railroad Company be, and is hereby, authorized to construct fixed bridges over the Little [Satella] Satilla River, between the counties of Camden and Glynn, and over Crooked River, in the county of Camden, in said State of Georgia, at the points selected by said company where said railroad crosses said rivers, with one span, and to make said bridges of such height as they may see fit: Provided, That the height be sufficient to permit the passage of timber rafts and other vessels navigating said rivers under said bridges.

SEC. 5. That any bridge built under this act and subject to its limitations shall be a lawful structure, and shall be recognized and known as a post-route, upon which also no higher charge shall be made for the transmission over the same of the mails, the troops, and the munitions of war of the United States, or passengers or freight passing over said bridge, than the rate per mile paid for the transportation over the railroad or public highways leading to the said bridge; and it shall enjoy the rights and privileges of other post-roads in the United States; and equal privileges in the use of said bridge shall be granted to all telegraph companies, and the United States shall have the right of way across said bridge and its approaches for said postal-telegraph purposes.

SEC. 6. That if any of the said bridges authorized to be constructed by this act shall be constructed as a draw-bridge, the draw shall be opened promptly upon reasonable signal for the passage of boats; and said company or corporation shall maintain, at its own expense, from sunset till sunrise, such lights or other signals on said bridge or bridges as the Light-House Board shall prescribe. No bridge shall be erected or maintained under the authority of this act which shall at any time substantially or materially obstruct the free navigation of said river; and if any bridge erected under such authority shall, in the opinion of the Secretary of War, obstruct such navigation, he is hereby authorized to cause such change or alteration of said bridge to be made as will effectually obviate such obstruction; and all such obstructions shall be removed and alterations made at the expense of the owner or owners of said bridge: Provided, That nothing in this act shall be so construed as to repeal or modify any of the provisions of law now existing in reference to the protection of the navigation of rivers, or to exempt the bridge erected under this act from the operation of the same.

SEC. 7. That all railroad companies desiring the use of said bridge shall have and be entitled to equal rights and privileges relative to the passage of railway trains or cars over the same, and over the approaches thereto, upon payment of a reasonable compensation for such use; and in case the owner or owners of said bridge and the several railroad companies, or any one of them, desiring such use shall fail to agree upon the sum or sums to be paid, and upon rules and conditions to which each shall conform in using said bridge, all matters at issue between them shall be decided by the Secretary of War, upon a hearing of the allegations and proofs of the parties.

SEC. 8. That any bridge authorized to be constructed under this act shall be built and located under and subject to such regulations for the security of navigation of said river as the Secretary of War shall prescribe; and to secure that object said company or corporation shall submit to the Secretary of War a design and drawings of said bridge to be erected, for his examination and approval, and a map of its location, and shall furnish such other information as may be required for a full and satisfactory understanding of the subject, and in all things shall be subject to such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War; and until said plan and location of said bridge or bridges are approved by the Secretary of War said bridge or bridges shall not be built; and should any change be made in the plan of any bridge authorized to be constructed by this act, during the progress of the work of construction, such change shall be subject to the approval of the Secretary of War.

SEC. 9. That this act shall be null and void if actual construction of the bridge therein authorized be not commenced within one year and completed within three years from the date thereof.

SEC. [9] 10. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved; and the right to require any changes in said structures, or their entire removal, at the expense of the owners thereof, whenever Congress shall decide that the public interest requires it, is also expressly reserved.

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill to authorize the construction of bridges over the rivers Saint Mary's, Satilla, Little Satilla, and Crooked, in the States of Georgia and Florida."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill? The Chair hears none.

Mr. CRISP. There is still some error about the name of the company. The other amendments submitted by the committee are correct. Instead of the name of the railroad submitted by the committee it should be "The Jacksonville and East Tennessee Railroad Company." That correction has to be made in three places in the bill; in the first section, line 3; in the second section, line 1; and in the fourth section, line 1. The proper name of the road is "The Jacksonville and East Tennessee Railroad."

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendments, including the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP].

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The title of the bill was amended so as to correspond with the amendments made.

COMMANDER JOHN W. PHILIP.

Mr. MORROW. I ask unanimous consent to consider at this time the bill (H. R. 639) to authorize Commander John W. Philip, United States Navy, to accept a silver pitcher from the Government of the United States of Colombia.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Commander John W. Philip, United States Navy, be, and he is hereby, authorized to accept a silver pitcher, tendered him by the Government of the United States of Colombia, for services rendered to that government.

Mr. MORROW. The bill relates to a silver pitcher that has been prepared by the United States of Colombia to be presented to Commander Philip for his services in inspecting a revenue-cutter built for that government at Wilmington, Del.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. MORROW moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

DUTY ON STATUARY AND PAINTINGS.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the petition of the Rembrandt Club of Brooklyn, praying for the repeal of duties upon statuary and paintings.

There was no objection; and it was so ordered.

The petition, which was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means, is as follows:

REMBRANDT CLUB, Brooklyn, N. Y., February 18, 1888.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The Rembrandt Club, of Brooklyn, N. Y., an association of gentlemen interested in art matters, would respectfully offer this their petition to Congress to take measures to repeal the law which authorizes the levying of customs duties on paintings and statuary, believing that such action would receive public approval.

WALTER K. PAGE, Secretary.

INTERNAL-REVENUE TAX ON ALCOHOLIC LIQUORS.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to present the petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Tennessee, comprising nearly 6,000 members, asking the abolishment of the internal-revenue tax on alcoholic liquors. I ask to have the petition printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The petition will be referred to the Committee on Ways and Means, and, in the absence of objection, will be printed in the RECORD.

The petition is as follows:

[National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Department of Legislation and Petitions. Superintendent, Mrs. Ada C. Bittenbender, Lincoln, Nebr.]

To the United States House of Representatives in Congress assembled:

The National Woman's Christian Temperance Union most respectfully and earnestly asks that the internal-revenue tax on all alcoholic liquors be abolished, for the reason that it operates to render more difficult the securing and enforcement of prohibitory laws, and so postpones the day of national deliverance from the evils arising from the liquor crime.

MRS. LIDE MERIWETHER,
President of Tennessee W. C. T. U.; residence, Memphis.
MRS. NAT. BAXTER, SR.,
Corresponding Secretary of Tennessee; residence, Nashville.
MISS SALLIE R. CORNELIUS,
Recording Secretary of Tennessee; residence, Nashville.
MRS. W. S. ABERNETHY,
Treasurer of Tennessee; residence, Memphis.

Representing nearly 6,000 members.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MCMILLIN. Regular order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. MCMILLIN] demands the regular order. This being Monday, the regular order is the call of the States and Territories for the introduction of bills and resolutions.

DUTIES AND COMPENSATION OF UNITED STATES MARSHALS.

Mr. HERBERT introduced a bill (H. R. 7383) relating to the duties and compensation of United States marshals; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed.

DUTIES AND COMPENSATION OF UNITED STATES ATTORNEYS.

Mr. HERBERT also introduced a bill (H. R. 7384) relating to the duties and compensation of United States attorneys; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed.

SECTION 837, REVISED STATUTES.

Mr. SYMES introduced a bill (H. R. 7385) to amend section 837 of the Revised Statutes; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed.

TAMPA COLLECTION DISTRICT.

Mr. DAVIDSON, of Florida, introduced a bill (H. R. 7386) establishing a customs collection district in Florida, to be known as the collection district of Tampa, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

CLAIMS FOR CAPTURED AND ABANDONED PROPERTY.

Mr. STEWART, of Georgia, introduced a bill (H. R. 7387) to authorize certain parties to prosecute their claims in the Court of Claims for captured and abandoned property, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed.

HORSES LOST IN THE MILITARY SERVICE.

Mr. CANDLER introduced a bill (H. R. 7388) to amend the act approved March 3, 1849, which provides for the payment for horses, etc., lost in the military service of the United States; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

POSTMASTERS.

Mr. BLOUNT introduced a bill (H. R. 7389) to regulate the qualification, compensation, and allowances to postmasters, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING, STERLING, ILL.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Illinois, introduced a bill (H. R. 7390) to provide for the construction of a public building at Sterling, Ill.; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

PROTECTION OF SETTLERS ON PUBLIC LANDS.

Mr. PAYSON introduced a bill (H. R. 7391) for the protection of settlers on the public lands; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

FEMALE NURSES IN THE WAR OF THE REBELLION.

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana, introduced a bill (H. R. 7392) to provide compensation for services of female nurses during the war of the rebellion; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING, SOUTH BEND, IND.

Mr. SHIVELY introduced a bill (H. R. 7393) for the erection of a public building at South Bend, Ind.; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

BRIDGING THE OHIO RIVER.

Mr. HOWARD introduced a bill (H. R. 7394) to amend an act approved February 14, 1883, entitled "An act supplementary to an act approved December 17, 1872, entitled 'An act to authorize the construction of bridges across the Ohio River and to prescribe the dimensions of the same;'" which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

LIENS ON JUDGMENTS IN UNITED STATES COURTS.

Mr. LYMAN presented a joint resolution of the General Assembly of the State of Iowa in regard to liens on judgments in United States courts; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

TRANSCRIPTS OF JUDGMENTS, UNITED STATES COURTS.

Mr. FULLER presented a joint resolution of the General Assembly of the State of Iowa, requesting the passage of a bill requiring transcripts of judgments in the United States courts to be filed in the county where lien is sought to be established, and also properly indexed; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed.

REIMBURSEMENT OF STATES.

Mr. KERR introduced a bill (H. R. 7395) to reimburse the several States for interest on moneys expended by them on account of raising troops employed in aiding the United States in suppressing the late rebellion; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT BURLINGTON, IOWA.

Mr. GEAR introduced a bill (H. R. 7396) authorizing the construction of a public building at Burlington, Iowa; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT KEOKUK, IOWA.

Mr. GEAR also introduced a bill (H. R. 7397) making an additional appropriation for the erection of a public building at Keokuk, Iowa; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

CLAIMS OF IOWA POSTMASTERS.

Mr. GEAR also introduced the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads:

Resolved, That the Postmaster-General be requested to transmit to the House of Representatives a tabulated statement of claims of postmasters in the State of Iowa, made under act of March 3, 1883, which have been disallowed in whole or in part, showing by actual computations already made the amount of commissions under act of 1854, the amount of salary paid, and the actual excess of commissions over the amount of salary paid; such statement to include every such claim for each and every period of service within the biennial periods between July 1, 1854, and July 1, 1874, in which by the computation made and entered upon jackets, compared with the amount of salary paid for the same time, it appears that the salary paid is 10 per cent. or more less than the amount of such computed commissions.

EASTERN JUDICIAL DISTRICT OF LOUISIANA.

Mr. ROBERTSON introduced a bill (H. R. 7398) to subdivide the eastern judicial district of Louisiana, and to fix the time and place for holding terms of court therein; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed.

LOUISIANA STATE UNIVERSITY, ETC.

Mr. ROBERTSON also introduced a bill (H. R. 7399) to increase the endowment of the Louisiana State University and Agricultural and Mechanical College; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Agriculture, and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT OPELOUSAS, LA.

Mr. ROBERTSON also introduced a bill (H. R. 7400) for the erection of a public building at Opelousas, La.; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

LIGHT-HOUSE, JOHN'S ISLAND, MAINE.

Mr. DINGLEY introduced a bill (H. R. 7401) providing for the establishment of a light-house upon John's Island, in John's Bay, on the coast of Maine; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING, SACO, ME.

Mr. REED introduced a bill (H. R. 7402) to provide for the construction of a public building at the city of Saco, State of Maine; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

POSTMARKING AND CANCELING MACHINES.

Mr. COLLINS introduced a bill (H. R. 7403) authorizing the Postmaster-General to continue the use of postmarking and canceling machines; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, and ordered to be printed.

COMPENSATION OF THIRD-CLASS POSTMASTERS.

Mr. COLLINS (by request) also introduced a bill (H. R. 7404) to increase the compensation of third-class postmasters; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, and ordered to be printed.

STAFF OFFICERS OF THE NAVY.

Mr. MORSE introduced a bill (H. R. 7405) to equalize the rank and pay of certain staff officers of the Navy; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

POSTAGE UPON SEEDS, PLANTS, ETC.

Mr. MACDONALD introduced a bill (H. R. 7406) to reduce the rate of postage upon seeds, plants, and merchandise; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, and ordered to be printed.

RETIREMENT OF ARMY OFFICERS.

Mr. MACDONALD also introduced a bill (H. R. 7407) to place upon the retired-list of the Army certain officers with rank of major-general; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

FEES AT LOCAL LAND OFFICES.

Mr. CATCHINGS introduced a bill (H. R. 7408) to regulate fees collected by registers and receivers in the local land offices; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

COINAGE OF DOUBLE EAGLES, ETC.

Mr. BLAND introduced a bill (H. R. 7409) limiting the coinage of double eagles and discontinuing the coinage of certain United States coins; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures, and ordered to be printed.

SETTLERS UPON OLD CAMP SHERIDAN MILITARY RESERVATION.

Mr. DORSEY introduced a bill (H. R. 7410) for the relief of settlers upon old Camp Sheridan military reservation; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

FEES OF CLERKS, ETC., WYOMING.

Mr. McSHANE introduced a bill (H. R. 7411) to increase the fees and costs to be allowed clerks, marshals, and attorneys for circuit and district courts in the United States in the Territory of Wyoming; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Territories, and ordered to be printed.

LEAVES OF ABSENCE OF INSPECTORS OF CUSTOMS, ETC.

Mr. MERRIMAN introduced a bill (H. R. 7412) to grant leaves of absence with pay to inspectors of customs and clerks in the customs service; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Expenditures in the Treasury Department, and ordered to be printed.

UNITED STATES POSTAGE-STAMP.

Mr. MERRIMAN also introduced a bill (H. R. 7413) to authorize the Postmaster-General to emboss the United States postage-stamp upon letter sheets; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, and ordered to be printed.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE TO GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE EMPLOYÉS.

Mr. TIMOTHY J. CAMPBELL introduced a bill (H. R. 7414) relating to pay of skilled workmen and leave of absence to all employés in the Government Printing Office; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Printing, and ordered to be printed.

PENSION TO PERSONS TOTALLY INCAPACITATED.

Mr. DE LANO introduced a bill (H. R. 7415) to increase the pension of those totally incapacitated for the performance of any manual labor, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

APPRAISER'S WAREHOUSE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

Mr. MAHONEY introduced a bill (H. R. 7416) for the purchase of a site and the erection thereon of an appraiser's warehouse in the city of Brooklyn, in the State of New York, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

SECTION 3019, REVISED STATUTES.

Mr. FELIX CAMPBELL introduced a bill (H. R. 7417) to amend section 3019 of the Revised Statutes; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed.

AMENDMENT OF ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED MARCH 3, 1883.

Mr. FELIX CAMPBELL also introduced a bill (H. R. 7418) to amend section 6 of an act of Congress approved March 3, 1883; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

DRAWBACK ON EXPORTS OF DOMESTIC MANUFACTURES.

Mr. CUMMINGS (by request) introduced a bill (H. R. 7419) to amend the statutes relating to the allowance of drawback on exports of domestic manufacture; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Ways and Means, and ordered to be printed.

SUPPORT AND MAINTENANCE OF COMMON SCHOOLS.

Mr. SIMMONS introduced a bill (H. R. 7420) to deposit with the States and Territories certain moneys to aid in the support and maintenance of common schools; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Education, and ordered to be printed.

REPEAL OF TAXES ON SPIRITUOUS AND MALT LIQUORS, ETC.

Mr. BROWER submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Rules:

Resolved, That the Committee on Rules be, and they are hereby, requested to report to the House for its action the resolution introduced by J. M. BROWER, instructing the Committee on Ways and Means to report House resolutions 1693, 1694, and 1695, to repeal the internal-revenue taxes on spirituous and malt liquors, tobacco, and brandy made from fruits, and for other purposes, to the House for its action; and said resolution is hereby made special order for 2 o'clock p. m., February 21, 1888.

SUPPORT OF COMMON SCHOOLS.

Mr. BROWER also submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Rules:

Resolved. That the Committee on Education be, and is hereby, directed to report Senate bill 371, being the bill to aid in the establishment and temporary support of common schools, to the House for its action on or before March 20, 1888, and said bill is hereby made a special order for 2 o'clock p. m. on March 20, 1888.

ESTABLISHMENT OF A LIGHT OFF PAMLICO POINT, NORTH CAROLINA.

Mr. LATHAM introduced a bill (H. R. 7421) for establishing a light off Pamlico Point, North Carolina; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

PENSIONS TO INMATES OF CONFEDERATE PRISONS.

Mr. WILKINS submitted a memorial from the Legislature of the State of Ohio, relating to pensions to inmates of Confederate prisons; which was referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PUBLIC BUILDING, CANTON, OHIO.

Mr. MCKINLEY introduced a bill (H. R. 7422) to provide for the erection of a public building in the city of Canton, Ohio; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

PAYMENT OF GREENBACK CERTIFICATES, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. CROUSE introduced a bill (H. R. 7423) to provide for the payment of the 8 per cent. greenback certificates of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia, and ordered to be printed.

COMPENSATION OF EMPLOYÉS OF GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE.

Mr. FORAN introduced a bill (H. R. 7424) to regulate and fix the compensation of employés of the Government Printing Office; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Printing, and ordered to be printed.

TARIFF.

Mr. BOOTHMAN submitted a joint resolution of the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, relating to the tariff; which was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

UNION SOLDIERS WHO WERE PENSIONERS.

Mr. BOOTHMAN also submitted a joint resolution of the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, relating to pensions to Union soldiers who were prisoners of war in the war of 1861–65; which was referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

HOMESTEAD LAWS.

Mr. JACKSON introduced a bill (H. R. 7425) to amend the homestead laws, to prevent aliens acquiring title to public lands, and to secure homes for actual settlers who are citizens of the United States; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Public Lands, and ordered to be printed

ARREARS OF PENSIONS.

Mr. DALZELL introduced a bill (H. R. 7426) to grant arrears of pension in certain cases; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.

A message from the President of the United States, in writing, was communicated to the House by Mr. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries.

The message also announced the approval of the following bills:

A bill (H. R. 1213) to punish robbery, burglary, and larceny in the Indian Territory;

A bill (H. R. 2974) for the relief of John Snoddy;

A bill (H. R. 5352) to grant an American register to the foreign-built bark Nordstjernen;

A bill (H. R. 2578) to authorize the construction of a bridge over the Missouri River at or near the city of Lexington, Mo.; and

A bill (H. R. 5514) to amend section 4883 of the Revised Statutes to enable the Assistant Secretary of the Interior to sign patents.

MONTHLY PAYMENT OF PENSIONS.

Mr. OSBORNE introduced a bill (H. R. 7427) to authorize the payment of pensions to be made monthly; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

POSTAGE ON SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.

Mr. BINGHAM introduced a bill (H. R. 7428) regulating the rate of postage on second-class mail matter at letter-carrier offices; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, and ordered to be printed.

RECOVERY OF GOVERNMENT PROPERTY.

Mr. WISE (by request) introduced a joint resolution (H. Res. 114) making an appropriation for the payment of expenses in gathering information for the recovery of certain property of the United States, and authorizing the appointment of an agent therefor; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

LIGHT-HOUSE, PAGE'S ROCK, VIRGINIA.

Mr. THOMAS H. B. BROWNE introduced a bill (H. R. 7429) for the establishment of a light-house on Page's Rock, Virginia; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

LIGHT-HOUSE, HOG ISLAND, VIRGINIA.

Mr. THOMAS H. B. BROWNE also introduced a bill (H. R. 7430) for the establishment of a first-order light-house on Hog Island, Virginia; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

Mr. HUDD introduced a joint resolution (H. Res. 115) providing an amendment to Article II of the Constitution of the United States of America; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING, SHEBOYGAN, WIS.

Mr. HUDD also introduced a bill (H. R. 7431) for a public building at Sheboygan, Wis.; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING, GREEN BAY, WIS.

Mr. HUDD also introduced a bill (H. R. 7432) for a public building at Green Bay, Wis.; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING, MANITOWOC, WIS.

Mr. HUDD also introduced a bill (H. R. 7433) for a public building at Manitowoc, Wis.; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

APPROPRIATIONS FOR PENSION BUREAU.

Mr. HUDD also introduced a bill (H. R. 7434) to provide for the proper application of money in the Pension Bureau of the Interior Department; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Expenditures in the Interior Department, and ordered to be printed.

ARTIFICIAL LIMBS, SOLDIERS AND SEAMEN.

Mr. THOMAS, of Wisconsin, introduced a bill (H. R. 7435) to amend section 4787 of the Revised Statutes of the United States; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT YANKTON, DAK.

Mr. GIFFORD introduced a bill (H. R. 7436) for the erection of a public building at Yankton, Dak.; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL AT BISMARCK, DAK.

Mr. GIFFORD also introduced a bill (H. R. 7437) for the establishment and maintenance of an industrial school at Bismarck, Dak.; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Education, and ordered to be printed.

ABERDEEN, BISMARCK AND NORTHWESTERN RAILROAD.

Mr. GIFFORD also introduced a bill (H. R. 7438) granting to the Aberdeen, Bismarck and Northwestern Railway Company the right to construct and maintain a bridge across the Missouri River near Winona, Emmons County, Dakota; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

INDIAN RESERVATIONS IN MONTANA.

Mr. TOOLE introduced a bill (H. R. 7439) to extend the laws of the Territory of Montana over portions of certain Indian reservations through which rights of way have been granted to certain railway companies; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER. The call of States and Territories is completed. If there be no objection, the Chair will now recognize gentlemen who were not in their seats when their States were called.

There was no objection.

STEAM ENGINEERING IN THE DISTRICT.

Mr. HEMPHILL introduced a bill (H. R. 7440) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate steam engineering in the District of Columbia," approved February 28, 1887; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia, and ordered to be printed.

ELEVATORS IN THE DISTRICT.

Mr. HEMPHILL also introduced a bill (H. R. 7441) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction and operation of elevators in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1887; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia, and ordered to be printed.

EXTENSION OF VERMONT AVENUE.

Mr. HEMPHILL also (by request) introduced a bill (H. R. 7442) to extend Vermont avenue, in the District of Columbia; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia, and ordered to be printed.

CONTRACT SYSTEM PRISON LABOR.

Mr. MASON (by Mr. YARDLEY) submitted a resolution requesting the Judiciary Committee to present bill in regard to contract system prison labor; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

CHICAGO, KANSAS AND WESTERN RAILROAD.

Mr. TURNER, of Kansas, introduced a bill (H. R. 7443) to authorize the Chicago, Kansas and Western Railroad Company to build its road across the Fort Hays military reservation; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT OBERLIN, KANS.

Mr. TURNER, of Kansas, also introduced a bill (H. R. 7444) for the erection of a public building at Oberlin, in the State of Kansas; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

FORT WALLACE MILITARY RESERVATION, KANSAS.

Mr. TURNER, of Kansas, also introduced a bill (H. R. 7445) to provide for the disposal of the Fort Wallace military reservation, in Kansas; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

UNITED STATES NAVY-YARD EMPLOYÉS.

Mr. COMPTON introduced a bill (H. R. 7446) authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Navy to grant leaves of absence to employés in the United States navy-yards; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

LIFE INSURANCE IN THE DISTRICT.

Mr. GIBSON (by request) introduced a bill (H. R. 7447) to provide for regulating life insurance in the District of Columbia; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia, and ordered to be printed.

TESTIMONY BEFORE PACIFIC RAILWAY COMMISSION.

Mr. OUTHWAITE submitted a concurrent resolution providing for printing 1,900 copies of the testimony taken by the United States Pacific Railway Commission and accompanying papers and maps; which was referred to the Committee on Printing.

BUREAU OF ENGRAVING AND PRINTING.

Mr. WILKINS submitted a resolution calling upon the Secretary of the Treasury for certain information pertaining to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing; which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

ADULTERATED LARD.

Mr. BYNUM submitted the following resolution of the Board of Trade of Indianapolis; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture, and, by unanimous consent, ordered to be printed in the RECORD:

Whereas a bill is now pending in Congress intended to regulate the manufacture and sale of impure lard; and

Whereas, in justice to the manufacturers, jobbers, and retailers of pure lard and for the protection of consumers, the manufacturers of adulterated lard, that is lard mixed with ingredients other than pure hog fats, should be required under penalty to stamp or brand each and every package of such adulterated lard when made or offered for sale, showing its true ingredients: Therefore,

Be it resolved by the Board of Trade of the city of Indianapolis, That the members of Congress be requested to support this and like measures for the enforcement of the proper branding of adulterated lard.

EXPORT OF MEATS, ETC.

Mr. BYNUM also submitted the following resolution of the Board of Trade of Indianapolis relative to exports of meats, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture, and, by unanimous consent, ordered to be printed in the RECORD:

Whereas we understand a bill has been reported favorably to the Senate from the Committee on Foreign Relations at Washington relating to the exportations of provisions, requiring that they shall be in salt sixty days before any vessel carrying them can get its clearance, also providing for the inspection of same by Government officials, and knowing that such restrictions upon the exportation of meats would be detrimental to our trade, as the English, who are the largest foreign consumers of American meats, do not use meats over thirty days in salt; and believing the inspection clause would be impracticable and cause both costly and vexatious delays after arrival of meats on dock: Therefore,

Be it resolved by the Indianapolis Board of Trade, That we are opposed to any legislation that is calculated to embarrass our foreign trade.

GOVERNMENT POST-OFFICE BUILDINGS.

Mr. LIND submitted the following memorial of the authorities of the city of New Ulm, State of Minnesota; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and, by unanimous consent, ordered to be printed in the RECORD:

MEMORIAL.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The authorities of the city of New Ulm, county of Brown, State of Minnesota, would most respectfully petition your honorable bodies to discontinue the practice of passing appropriation bills for Government buildings, and instead thereof to pass a general appropriation bill providing for the erection of Government post-office buildings in every city and village of this Union of 3,000 inhabitants or over, the appropriation to be made upon the basis of inhabitants, say not less than $2,000 for each 1,000 inhabitants, or such other sums as you may deem most expedient.

As reasons for the foregoing, we would respectfully submit the following for your consideration:

First. It is unjust discrimination to make appropriations for public buildings for the larger cities only, because smaller cities are as much entitled to Government favors in proportion to their population and needs as are the larger, and because they have been and are contributing their just and proportionate share of the revenue to the Government.

Second. Special legislation is wrong in principle, is corrupting and demoralizing, and ought to be abolished.

Third. The passage of such a bill would result in the erection, as near as we have been able to determine, of about 1,200 buildings at an aggregate expenditure not exceeding $20,000,000.

Fourth. It would save the Government millions of dollars now directly and indirectly paid for rent for accommodations for postmasters and other Government officials; would give safer and more convenient offices, and would be more in conformity with the dignity of a great nation.

Fifth. It would tend to nationalize public sentiment, and would be hailed with delight by the whole people.

CARL WESCHCK, Mayor.
LOUIS SCHILLING, Clerk.

CITY OF NEW ULM, February 14, 1888.

Mr. MILLS. I call for the regular order.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. FISHER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found duly enrolled a bill (H. R. 6439) authorizing the appointment of eleven division superintendents of railway mail service.

INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION AT BRUSSELS.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President; which was read, and referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith, and commend to your favorable consideration, a report from the Secretary of State in relation to an invitation which this Government has received from the Belgian Government, to participate in an International Exhibition of Sciences and Industry which will open at Brussels in the month of May next.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, February 20, 1888.

INTERNATIONAL GEODETIC ASSOCIATION.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the following message from the President; which was read, and referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith a report from the Secretary of State relative to an invitation from the Imperial German Government to the Government of the United States to become a party to the International Geodetic Association.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, February 20, 1888.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER. This being the third Monday in the month, the regular order is the call of committees for motions to suspend the rules.

Mr. CULBERSON (when the Committee on the Judiciary was called). I move to suspend the rules, so as to take up and put upon its passage the joint resolution (S. R. 13) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein), That the following article be proposed to the Legislatures of the several States as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, as part of the Constitution, namely:

"The term of office of the President and of the Fiftieth Congress shall continue until the 30th day of April, in the year 1889, at noon. The Senators whose existing term would otherwise expire on the 4th day of March in the year 1889, or thereafter, shall continue in office until noon of the 30th day in April succeeding such expiration; and the 30th day of April, at noon, shall thereafter be substituted for the 4th day of March as the commencement and termination of the official term of the President, Vice-President, Senators, and Representatives in Congress."

The twelfth article of the amendments to the Constitution of the United States shall be amended by striking out the words "4th day of March" and substituting instead thereof the words "30th day in April, at noon."

Mr. CULBERSON. I yield the floor to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. COLLINS].

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. CRAIN. I demand a second.

Mr. COLLINS. I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts that a second be considered as ordered?

Mr. CRAIN. It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that fifteen minutes on each side is not enough time for this House to consider an amendment to the Constitution of the United States; but if we can have, by unanimous consent, an extension of the time for debate, I am perfectly willing that a second shall be regarded as ordered.

The SPEAKER. How much time does the gentleman suggest?

Mr. CRAIN. An hour on each side.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. CRAIN], before answering whether he objects or not, asks unanimous consent that the time for debate upon this joint resolution be fixed at one hour on each side.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The SPEAKER. In the absence of objection, a second will be considered as ordered. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. COLLINS] to control the time in support of the joint resolution, and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CRAIN] to control the time in opposition to it.

Mr. COLLINS. Mr. Speaker, this joint resolution passed the Senate in the Forty-ninth Congress, and it passed the Senate again early in the present session, I believe unanimously. Its effect is to change the term of members of Congress from the 4th day of March to the 30th of April, and extend the Presidential term and the inauguration to that day, beginning with the Fifty-first Congress. It fortunately or unfortunately prolongs our own term of office from the 4th of March to the 30th of April, and that is the only personal objection I have to it, and the only one that I can conceive that may be presented. But nevertheless I believe the only wise and practical thing for this House to do is to agree with the Senate in passing it. Mr. Winthrop, in the masterly oration which was delivered here upon the life and character of George Washington, used these words:

Most happy would it be if the 30th of April, on which the first inauguration of Washington took place in 1789, could henceforth be the date of the future inaugurations, as it might be by a slight amendment to the Constitution, giving as it would a much needed extension to the short session of Congress, and letting the second century of our constitutional history begin where the first century practically began.

If we pass the resolution and it be adopted, one hundred years after the inauguration of George Washington the next President of the United States will be inaugurated. But, aside from sentiment, the practical and beneficial effect will be to extend the short session into a long one, and in that much of the needed business of the country can be transacted. Many of the State Legislatures will not be in session a month hence; most of them, I believe, are biennial, and I regard it as highly important that this resolution should be considered at this time and should be promptly submitted to the different State Legislatures. I understand, of course, that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CRAIN], who demanded a "second," and who claims the floor to antagonize this resolution, has a measure of his own that he desires to press. I have very little to say beyond what I have already uttered as to the benefit which this constitutional amendment will confer upon the people of this country, and therefore I reserve the remainder of my time until I hear what may be said, not in favor of some other measure, but in opposition to this one.

Mr. CRAIN. Mr. Speaker, the objects sought to be accomplished by Senate resolution 13, as I understand from the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. COLLINS], are first to carry out a sentimental idea, which is that the successor of the present incumbent of the executive chair should be inaugurated on the same day of the year as that on which George Washington was installed in office; and the second object is to lengthen the short session of each term of Congress. Those are the only two objects which, in the judgment of the gentleman from Massachusetts, will be accomplished if this amendment should be ratified by the States.

Mr. COLLINS. I did not say that.

Mr. CRAIN. Well, I should like to have the gentleman state his proposition again. I so understood him. I do not desire to misrepresent the gentleman, and I hope he will repeat his proposition.

Mr. COLLINS. I simply said that those were two reasons; and that I would reserve the remainder of my time until I found out whether there was any ground of objection to this measure.

Mr. CRAIN. Well, I submit to the House that it must be a weak proposition if the gentleman in charge of the resolution is afraid to give his reasons for its adoption. I submit, Mr. Speaker, that a sentimental reason is a very poor one for an organic change of the law of the land; there ought to be something better.

It is true, as I hear a gentleman suggest, that I have a "scheme" of my own with reference to this question; but that "scheme" does not necessarily antagonize the entire proposition submitted by the gentleman from Massachusetts. I have no objection at all to the change of the day of inauguration; but I do oppose this resolution so far as it affects the term of members of the House of Representatives. I am perfectly willing to amalgamate these two propositions in such a way that the prominent idea embraced in Senate resolution 13 shall be submitted to the States for ratification or rejection; but I do say I do not believe that a sentimental reason is a sufficient one to justify the submission of a constitutional amendment to the States.

In addition, however, to the question of sentiment, there is, I submit to the consideration of the House, another reason for this proposed change, a reason which has not been presented by the gentleman from Massachusetts. It is this: that owing to the inclemency of the weather usual on the 4th of March it would be much better to change inauguration day, because there is extreme danger that the gentleman elected by the people of the United States to fill the Presidential chair may subject himself to an attack of pneumonia, or some other disease, by being inaugurated on the day now fixed. There has been but one President, I believe, who succumbed to the effects of the weather by reason of his being inaugurated on the 4th day of March, and I have to hear of the first gentleman on either the Democratic or the Republican side of the political combinations of this country who has rejected a nomination tendered him, because, forsooth, he would run the chance of losing his life on inauguration day on account of the inclemency of the weather.

But I am willing to pass over all these objections and submit to the gentleman who presents this resolution on the part of the Judiciary Committee that the term of the beginning and close of the official term of the President is not fixed by the Constitution, but by law. There is nothing in the Constitution of the United States which says, even by implication, unless it be in the twelfth amendment of the Constitution of the United States, that the term of office of President shall begin and end on the 4th of March.

The first President of the United States was inagurated on the 30th of April. Why? Because there had to be a Congress in session to count the votes; the electoral college had to meet; it met under a resolution submitted by the Congress of the Confederation in pursuance of authority vested in it by the constitutional convention. After the electoral college met and elected George Washington President and John Adams Vice-President, what further had to be done? The Congress had to meet, and John Adams was installed as Vice-President on the 21st day of April, the very day on which the Republic of Texas achieved its independence; and George Washington was inaugurated as President on the 30th day of April, after the Senate and House of Representatives had arranged for his inauguration. On the 1st day of March, 1792, the President of the United States approved an act of Congress from which I will read a single section:

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That the term of four years for which a President and Vice-President shall be elected shall in all cases commence on the 4th day of March next succeeding the day on which the votes of the electors shall have been given.

While the Constitution fixes the term of the President and Vice-President at four years, it does not fix the day on which that term shall begin; and I submit to this House whether it be actually necessary to consider a constitutional amendment on this subject when the day for beginning the Presidential term is fixed by law, not by the Constitution.

If there be a question of doubt about it, and if it be desirable to make the change from any proper consideration, then I admit a constitutional amendment is the preferable method to adopt. But it is a serious question for consideration, in view of the fact that there is no day fixed by the Constitution for the beginning and end of the Presidential term, and in view of the further fact that the beginning of that term has been fixed by an act of the Second Congress as the 4th day of March, whether it is necessary for us to pass a constitutional amendment on this subject and submit it to the States for their ratification or not. Although, as it is a doubtful question, it might be preferable to determine the question by amendment.

As to the changes proposed by this resolution, so far as the term of members of the House is concerned, I respectfully submit that the real evils of which the country so much complains will not be remedied in any particular by the provisions of this resolution.

Under the present system a member of the House elected in November begins to draw his salary the 4th day of March next succeeding his election. He does not meet at the Capitol and enter upon the active discharge of the duties of his office until the first Monday in December. For nine months this House is without a Speaker. Elections are held between sessions. Before a member has made his record as a Representative of the House of Representatives, he is called upon to choose between the horns of a dilemma—either to remain at his post of duty and have himself undermined at home, or abandon his post of duty and go amongst his people and defend himself against attacks of another who desires to fill his place.

If the amendment at present submitted is adopted how is that changed? It is not changed at all. The elections are the same. A member is elected in November and he comes here when? He comes here in December, thirteen months afterwards.

It is true that the short session is lengthened; and what is the effect of that? The effect is simply to extend the time from the 4th of March until the 30th of April when his salary shall begin.

In this connection let me suggest another evil which every old member of the House must have observed. Let a man be defeated between the sessions, he comes back here to the short session an inefficient member, and so, naturally, the people worship the rising sun; they turn their backs on the setting sun. A defeated member of Congress is only less in the estimation of the people of this city and of the members of the House and of the people in his district—he is only less, I say, than an ex-member of Congress. He comes here repudiated by his people. Another has been chosen to take his place. He feels chagrined, mortified, humiliated; and the uppermost idea in his mind is that the session may close as quickly as possible so that he may go back and attend to his private affairs, which have been neglected.

This state of facts should not exist. While it is true you may change the time for the meeting of Congress by law, yet in order to do that you will necessarily have to curtail the term of some House of Representatives. The election day is fixed by a law of Congress. The experience of the States has demonstrated beyond question that the time fixed is the best for all parts of the Union. There is no immediate prospect of the change of the day of election on that account. How can you have the members of the House come here at any other time unless you interfere with the day of the election? The very fact that a bill would necessarily have to do this by action of Congress, even if this resolution should be adopted, shows that the resolution itself is radically defective.

If the House of Representatives has its term fixed in the Constitution, as seems to be the opinion of leading lawyers, that term would not be curtailed by law and it could only be shortened by a constitutional amendment.

Mr. OATES. Will the gentleman yield to me for a question?

Mr. CRAIN. Certainly.

Mr. OATES. I understand this amendment under consideration is, according to the gentleman, of no practical value?

Mr. CRAIN. I do not say that.

Mr. OATES. Because the beginning of the term is fixed by law to four years. How can you change and extend the term to the 30th day of April or any other day for the inauguration of the incoming President unless you change the Constitution? How can you do it by statute?

Mr. CRAIN. I said it was questionable whether it was necessary to have a constitutional amendment, because the beginning of the term is fixed on the 4th of March. If the time is fixed by law for the beginning of the term, why can not you change the time by law?

Mr. OATES. You provide for the time intervening.

Mr. CRAIN. If what this proposes to do be correct——

Mr. OATES. How can you change the term by law when the Constitution says the term shall be four years?

Mr. CRAIN. The Constitution and law must be construed together. If it is fixed by law it shall begin on a certain day there is no reason why you should not fix it to begin some other day. The President, like every other official, takes his office as fixed by the Constitution and law. The gentleman misunderstands that as a proposition from me, that a constitutional amendment will not be necessary. That is something I pass over and do not propose to discuss, because I am on a different subject, which is the term of the members of the House.

So far as the proposition is concerned, namely, to extend inauguration day to the 30th day of April, I care nothing about it, I will state to the gentleman from Alabama. I am perfectly willing that inauguration day shall be extended, for to that I can see no possible objection; but I am not willing to vote for the amendment which has been suggested here, which changes the term of the members of the House of Representatives. All it does is to extend the session of Congress for sixty days longer.

It does not eliminate a single objection that I have already urged to the present condition of things. You have an election intervening between the sessions just the same as you have now, and there is nothing whatever to commend it. You have a House without a Speaker for seven months.

Mr. OATES. Let me interrupt the gentleman to say that I quite agree with him that the sessions of the House should begin on the 1st day of January.

Mr. CRAIN. Very well; then you ought not to stand by the amendment of the Judiciary Committee. I think an amendment ought to be submitted which would embrace the two propositions. I am not, I repeat, making any contest against that proposition which is embodied in the present amendment to extend the inauguration day, and I wish that to be distinctly understood here and now; but that part of the resolution which we are now considering, that simply extends the term of the members of the House of Representatives for sixty days, is the point of my attack. Its effect is simply to do this—without remedying a single evil now complained of—it pays the members of this House two months' extra salary.

If you vote for this amendment you simply vote in favor of giving to yourselves two months' extra salary, that is, for the time between the 4th day of March, when the term expires, and the 30th day of April, to which you propose to extend it. But so far as it affects the short session of the House it does nothing but extend the time that much, namely, two months.

Now, Mr. Speaker, we all know that when the Speaker's gavel falls at 12 o'clock on the 4th day of March the session of Congress terminates. Under the amendment which I propose there would be no determination of the House until the 31st day of December of the second year after its election, unless both Houses shall otherwise determine. If it were found that a deficiency bill, for instance, was in the hands of a conference committee and there was not time to consider it and the day for adjournment was fixed by both Houses, then the resolution or motion fixing the day of adjournment could be changed to meet the difficulty. As it is now you can not change it. When the hour of 12 o'clock comes what do you do? You have either to set the clock back, as has been done, or afford the President an opportunity of saying that he has not had sufficient time to consider an important bill, because of the adjournment of the House of Representatives before he has had such time. This is precisely what was done in reference to the river and harbor bill in the last Congress. That bill was lost here because the day and the hour for the adjournment of the House being irrevocably fixed, when 12 o'clock came the gavel of the Speaker descended, and all legislation terminated, and the President stated that he could not return the river and harbor bill because he had not had time to consider it.

Why, Mr. Speaker, one of the first bills which we passed at this very session of Congress was a deficiency bill that had passed both Houses of Congress in the last session but had failed to become a law, and why? Because at the hour of 12 o'clock on the 4th day of March the existence of the Forty-ninth Congress terminated. This state of things ought not to continue.

So far as the question of inauguration day is concerned I believe that Congress ought to be in session when the President is inaugurated. It is an anomalous condition of affairs in our system of government to find that at 12 o'clock on the 4th of March, when a new President is inaugurated, Congress dissolves, and I remember well that when Mr. Cleveland was inaugurated, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MILLS], who is now the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means of this House, objected to the House of Representatives going in procession, because, forsooth, it was not given an appropriate place, and for the reason that it was no longer in existence.

If this amendment should prevail—namely, to have Congress begin its term on the 1st day of January, and its term expire on the 31st day of December of the second year following, and to have Congress meet in session on the first Monday in January of each year—I say if that amendment were adopted we would have Congress in session at the inauguration, and the President of the United States, instead of delivering his inaugural message from the steps or front of the Capitol, would send in a written message to the Congress then in existence. In other words, instead of the President delivering an inaugural message he would send to the Congress in actual existence a written message on the condition of the Union.

Another feature of the amendment I propose which should commend it to favorable consideration, is that the House elected in November would count the Presidential vote. The electoral college having met, the report of its action would be forwarded to the capital, and the House elected at the same time with the President would count the electoral vote.

There is yet another feature which commends it, in my humble judgment, to the favorable consideration of the House, and that is, that a man elected in November would be at work here inside of sixty days after his election. He would be legislating upon questions submitted to the people at the time of his election. How is this at present? Issues which agitate the people from Maine to Texas during the canvass may be dead or may have been settled by an adverse Congress before he comes to the capital and begins the actual discharge of his duties.

All these evils which I have suggested, sir, are covered by the resolution which I introduced and which, with one single exception, comes with the unanimous approval of the Committee on the Election of President, Vice-President, and Representatives in Congress. I think the House ought to vote down this resolution, and if it be the will of the House that the inauguration day should be changed, and also the will of the House that the time of the commencement and termination of the official term of the House of Representatives should be changed, then a substitute should be presented—which could not be done, however, under a suspension of the rules—incorporating both provisions and combining them in one proposition which would, no doubt, meet the unanimous approval of the members of the House.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has thirty-five minutes of his hour remaining.

Mr. COLLINS. I yield as much time as he desires to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON].

Mr. CULBERSON. Aside from the patriotic sentiment said to be embraced in this proposition I desire in a very few moments to state what I understand to be its legal effect if it should be ratified by the States.

Under the law as it now exists the term of the President closes on the 4th of March of next year, and the effect of this amendment will be simply to prolong the Executive term to the 30th of April of next year, and also to extend the present terms of the members of this Congress two months.

Now, the benefit or the advantage to be derived from this amendment as I understand it is that it places the inauguration of the President at a better season of the year, and it enables Congress to devote two additional months in the short session to the legislation of the country. The law as it now stands requires Congress to assemble on the first Monday in December of each year.

Our sessions now begin on the first Monday of December of each year, and the short session embraces the months of December, January, and February. If this amendment is ratified there will be two additional months devoted to the legislation of the country in the short session, which instead of closing on the 4th of March will close on the 30th of April.

Mr. CRAIN. Will the gentleman allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. CULBERSON. I prefer not to be interrupted just now. I sympathize with the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CRAIN] in his desire to change the time of the sessions of Congress, and if this proposition came up singly and alone, and in the proper way, I should have no objection to voting for such a proposition. But it is not necessary in order to change the times of the meeting of Congress to alter and change the Constitution of the United States. That has no place whatever in a proposition to amend the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. CRAIN. I would like to have the question stated correctly. My proposition is not simply for changing the time of the meeting of Congress, but it is to cut off the term of Congress on the 31st of December. The proposition before the House is to extend it to the 30th of April.

Mr. CULBERSON. The proposition of the gentleman from Texas is this: He proposes to substitute the 31st of December for the 4th of March as the time for the termination of the term of Congress. He proposes to shorten the term two months instead of prolonging the term two months. And in addition to that he proposes that Congress shall meet on the first Monday of January thereafter instead of on the first Monday of December. Now, I say the latter object of the gentleman can be accomplished by an act of Congress without changing the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. CRAIN. If the first part is adopted there would be no Congress to do it.

Mr. CULBERSON. There may be something in that; but I say Congress can change the time of meeting.

Mr. CRAIN. There is no question about that.

Mr. CULBERSON. If this resolution should be ratified by the States Congress can alter by an act the time of the meeting of Congress; they can allow the law to remain in force as it is now for a session commencing on the first Monday of December in each year, or they may change it to the first Monday of May in each year, or any other time.

I think, therefore, as between these two measures, the one submitted by the gentleman from Texas and the one reported by the Committee on the Judiciary, which is a Senate resolution, the House should, in my opinion, adopt the proposition that is now pending before it.

Mr. SHIVELY. If the gentleman from Texas will permit me, I will say, as I understand it, the proposition substantially is this: That this Congress in connection with the State Legislatures shall increase the terms of the President and of the Senators and Members of this Congress by two months.

Mr. CULBERSON. That is the proposition, while the proposition of the gentleman from Texas shortens the term by two months.

Mr. CRAIN. That is the effect of the pending proposition on the present House. Mine does not affect this House at all.

Mr. CULBERSON. But it affects the next House. It shortens the term of the House it applies to.

Mr. CRAIN. I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE].

Mr. TAULBEE. I send to the desk an amendment, which I ask to have considered by unanimous consent.

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided, That the President, United States Senators, and members of Congress whose terms of office are extended by this joint resolution shall not receive any compensation for the time so extended.

Mr. TAULBEE. I have no argument to offer on the merits of the pending proposition. I simply wish to say that I agree with the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON] in his statement that this proposition to amend the Constitution of the United States is a very patriotic one, especially in its application to the members of the present Congress, the United States Senators whose terms of office are affected by it, and the President of the United States. If there is anything in power or any inducement to seek a position as a member of Congress or as President in the simple fact of the salary received——

Mr. MACDONALD. I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. TAULBEE. I do not consent that this shall be taken out of my time. I have only two minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SPRINGER). The gentleman from Kentucky declines to be interrupted.

Mr. MACDONALD. I think I have a right to make the inquiry.

Mr. TAULBEE. If this is a patriotic proposition, by reason of these considerations, we certainly could claim that an amendment to the Constitution extending our terms of office for two years longer would be still more patriotic.

Mr. MACDONALD. Will the gentleman hear my question, or does he want to have all the speeches made first?

Mr. TAULBEE. I am perfectly willing to answer the gentleman's question. I have no speech to make. I am not a speech-making man. [Laughter.]

Mr. MACDONALD. The question I desired to ask was whether the gentleman's amendment is in order.

Mr. TAULBEE. If the gentleman had listened to what I stated when I sent the resolution to the Clerk's desk, the necessity of his question would have been obviated, because I then said that this amendment would not be in order unless by unanimous consent, in which event I believed it would be.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I quite agree that a change of the date of inauguration and of the date for the meeting of Congress is desirable, but I certainly will not agree, having been elected for a term of two years, to extend my term of power and my compensation as a member of Congress under the guise of patriotic sentiment. I know the extension of power for two months might be considered a little thing, and a salary-grab of $800 might be winked at by the constituents of some gentlemen upon this floor, but I do not want to be a party to either, and if I were in the minority of this House, if I belonged to that party which is adverse in sentiment to the Administration, I should certainly be unwilling to fasten upon the country a tenure of power extending beyond that for which they have been chosen.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. TAULBEE. I am glad of it. [Laughter.] For these reasons, sir, I shall be constrained to vote against this proposition.

Mr. OATES. Would the gentleman accept a modification of his amendment so as to make it apply only to himself? [Laughter.]

Mr. TAULBEE. No. If the balance of you undertake to adopt this amendment, I will draw my pay too. [Renewed laughter.]

Mr. COLLINS. Mr. Speaker, I shall be forced to object to the introduction of the amendment of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE] for quite as patriotic reasons as those which he has undertaken to advance in support of it. An analysis of this proposed amendment to the Constitution will show that if it be adopted members of Congress will be obliged to serve their country two months longer, and, upon the most patriotic and honorable grounds in the world, I believe in paying them for the service thus required of them. I do not believe that the United States of America, any more than a private individual, ought to exact service from me without making reasonable compensation. I need not have said this much with reference to this particular matter because the rule governs the case, and the same objection to unanimous consent would defeat the amendment. The only objection that I have personally to the proposition reported from the committee, an objection which is overshadowed by the public benefit to ensue, is, that it keeps me in Congress two months longer than I want to serve with compensation or without it. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE] speaks of this as a salary-grab. It is nothing of the kind. A salary-grab is voting money that you do not earn and that you never contracted to earn. Such a transaction was the passage of a bill which increased the salaries of members of Congress 50 per cent.

Mr. TAULBEE. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. COLLINS. Certainly.

Mr. TAULBEE. In the election of members to the Fiftieth Congress was there any contract, either express or implied, that those members should earn their salaries during the months of March and April?

Mr. COLLINS. I shall have to ask the gentleman to state his question again.

Mr. TAULBEE. My question was this, Mr. Speaker, brought out by the gentleman's objection to my statement that this was a salary-grab. He said that a salary-grab could only be a claim for a compensation for which the member had never contracted with the people, and my question was whether or not he considered that in the election of members to the Fiftieth Congress there was any contract, either express or implied, in law, equity, or conscience, by which members of this Congress should have compensation for the months of March and April, 1889?

Mr. OATES. If the Legislatures of twenty-seven States agree to it, will not that make it all right?

Mr. COLLINS. Mr. Speaker, since the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE] has amplified his question and made it so comprehensive, I can answer it very clearly, and I will answer it frankly. In order to accomplish the public benefit contemplated it will be necessary not only to extend the terms of the President and Vice-President and of the Senators, but also our own term, and I am willing to submit to that prolongation of my term simply for the purpose of accomplishing a great public benefit. There was no contract with the people, express or implied, when we came here that our term should be extended for two months or that it should not be extended, but what I characterize as a salary-grab is not such a proposition as this, such an act as the people of the United States have already characterized in that way, namely, an act increasing the salaries of members 50 per cent. and making its operation retroactive when the gentlemen voting for that act had contracted to serve the people for $416 a month.

Mr. CRAIN. Does the gentleman say he is not in favor of staying here those extra two months?

Mr. COLLINS. Yes; and I think I am the only member on this floor that can say that truthfully. [Laughter.]

Mr. CRAIN. Then, if that be true, why don't you vote for an amendment which cuts off not only the two months, but the whole of the short session?

Mr. COLLINS. I would if that proposition were here and we could vote upon it, if I merely consulted my own interest and convenience. Moreover, because I am very much more patriotic than to be constantly thinking of my own comfort.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. There is no law against your resigning.

Mr. COLLINS. None at all, sir, and when I get ready to resign I will do so without asking leave of anybody here, and my constituents, who always believe that I do the wise thing at the right time, will believe that I have done right now. What do you think of that constituency?

Mr. CRAIN. The gentleman is the first man I ever saw that was ravished by his constituents.

Mr. COLLINS. The gentleman's experience, no doubt, has been very different from mine. I do not propose to exchange either places or experience with him. But let me say one thing more seriously: we can not pass this constitutional amendment without a two-thirds vote of this House and the concurrence of three-quarters of the States, and if there be any objection raised in the State Legislatures, or outside of them among the people, it will not be to the prolonging of our terms of office and our receiving two additional months' pay; because my experience teaches me that the people of the United States are not a mean people; that they are always willing to pay their bills and to allow just compensation for services rendered to them.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I am not enamored of this bill, but I am sorry to believe that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CRAIN] is more enamored of his own proposition than he is desirous of getting through some remedy for the existing evil.

Mr. CRAIN. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Maine [Mr. REED].

Mr. REED. Mr. Speaker, I do not consider this a very great matter; yet I do think it is a step in the dark which it is worth the while of the House to consider. The life that we lead here, however we may jest about it and listen to the jests of others, is a wearisome life. It is full not only of public business but also of private business. It takes all our time, all our attention, and all our thoughts during the session of Congress. The long session is wearisome indeed; and it is immediately followed for almost all of us by a campaign still more wearisome, which reaches almost until the opening of the next session; so that practically we are occupied continuously from December of one year until March 4 of the second year succeeding. Now to this period of almost continuous work it is proposed to add two months. Is there any justification for it in reason and good sense? Is there any demand for it in the business of the country? I think not; and the reason why I say so will be apparent to men who have had the experience of even one short session.

A short session is crowded with business toward the end, not on account of its brief duration, but on account of its having a fixed terminus. Wherever you put that terminus, there business will be crowded, I do not care whether it is on the 30th of April or the 30th of August. The fact is that the short session is a business session; it is one in which a great deal of business is transacted; and that happens because everybody knows that the time is limited, and everybody sets to work. At a short session we do not dawdle away three months in the way we have been doing at this session, because there are no three months to be wasted.

Why, sir, the last tariff bill was passed at a short session; and I think a great many more of the most important bills of the country have been passed at such sessions. If we were crowded for time, would it not manifest itself in matters which are within our power? When have we ever been so crowded at the short session that we did not take ten days or more of vacation for the Christmas holidays? Are we such children that this vacation must be taken to the absolute neglect of public business? Why, sir, we all know such is not the fact. What, then, are the motives for this transaction—the real motives? The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. COLLINS] has given one of them—that Mr. Winthrop, a Massachusetts statesman of long ago, has written a letter in favor of it; and the other reason is that it will make a much nicer holiday for the city of Washington on the last day of April than on the 4th day of March. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. COLLINS. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE].

Mr. LODGE. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that even if one motive for changing the date of inauguration is to place it at a more agreeable season of the year, that is no objection. The inauguration of a President of the United States is a great event; and if it can be fixed at a season of the year which will be more agreeable on account of the greater likelihood of pleasant weather, so that a larger number of persons may attend and enjoy the exercises, while I do not in the least think that alone a sufficient reason for such a change, I do think it constitutes no objection, but adds weight to the other reasons in favor of the proposition.

Nor do I think that the consideration of mere historical sentiment is a sufficient reason by itself for such a change; but I nevertheless regard it as worthy of consideration that Washington was inaugurated on the 30th of April, and anything which can be done to preserve and perpetuate patriotic associations of that character well deserves the attention of this House.

But the real reason which seems to me to make this change most desirable is the fact that it will add sixty days to the short session of Congress, during which, as the gentleman from Maine [Mr. REED] has just said, some of the most important legislation is passed. The tariff bill of 1883, for example, to which he has referred, was passed at the short session. As every one is aware, it was passed under such pressure that, if I remember rightly, it required a suspension of the rules to get it through. In view of the fact that so much important legislation is passed at the short session the addition of sixty days seems to me very desirable, so that this important legislation may be properly considered.

At the second session Congress comes together with its committees formed, and the members familiar with their work and with each other. They are able to go on and transact business immediately. As a rule, they take hold promptly of the important business which has come over from the last session, and much of it is then transacted.

I believe, further, that if this change be made it will have the effect of taking off the two most disagreeable months of the long session. Members would feel that there would be time in the short session for the consideration of measures which now keep them here during the summer months of the long session. It seems to me much more desirable that members of the House should be relieved of the necessity of spending in Washington those hot months of summer immediately preceding a political campaign than that they should be free from their Congressional duties during the two months immediately following the 4th of March.

Apart from the historical consideration, it seems to me this is a change which promises very considerable practical benefit. The proposition advocated by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CRAIN] for altering the time for beginning the Congressional session does not seem to me to be affected by this question; that is a matter which can be reached by law. But I hope the resolution now under consideration, which promises practical advantage to good legislation, may go through Congress in time for prompt action by the various State Legislatures.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HENDERSON, of Illinois. I do not know who controls the time of the House, Mr. Speaker, but I should like to have about five minutes.

Mr. COLLINS. I will yield to the gentleman from Illinois, with pleasure, five minutes of my time.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Massachusetts for his courtesy. I only desire to say, Mr. Speaker, that I am not inclined to vote for this resolution in its present form. And yet I would vote for it if it went a little farther than it does. I think instead of Congress meeting on the first Monday in December it should meet at an earlier day, say on the first Monday in October, and continue until the 30th of April, whatever may be said as to the season of the year.

We hardly ever do anything for the first five or six weeks of the first session of Congress when we meet on the first Monday in December, and not much at the second session until after the holidays. For this reason, as I have said, I would vote for the proposition if we could change the time of the meeting of Congress, at least of the first session, from the first Monday in December to the first Monday in October. There are no good reasons, it seems to me, for any distinction between the two sessions of Congress as to the length of the session. Why not have both sessions adjourn on the 30th day of April; or, if it would be better, have the first session of the new Congress meet on the first Monday of October, without limit, as now, as to time of the adjournment, and the second session meet on the first Monday in January and adjourn on the 30th of April? That would be, it occurs to me, a wise change. But I am not inclined to vote for this proposition simply to transfer inauguration day from the 4th of March to the 30th of April.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. SHIVELY. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. How much time does the gentleman desire?

Mr. SHIVELY. Only two minutes.

Mr. CRAIN. I yield the gentleman from Indiana two minutes.

Mr. SHIVELY. Mr. Speaker, permit me to observe that I can not fully agree with the gentlemen who regard this proposition as a salary-grab, as it only contemplates a continuance of salary during an extension of service. But aside from the moral aspects of this question, the proposition involves a principle which should not be overlooked. The right of members of this House to their seats was not derived from the Fiftieth Congress, which is asked to adopt this amendment, nor was this right derived from the State Legislatures who are to ratify or reject this amendment.

On the contrary, this right was derived directly from the voters of the respective Congressional districts under a tacit but solemn contract for service for a fixed length of time at a fixed compensation. Now, sir, if we have the right to extend the tenure of our office here from two years to twenty-six months, we certainly have the right to extend the same tenure to forty months, or even four years—a course of action which would be as wrong in principle as vicious in policy. I am in favor of changing inauguration day and the time for the meeting of Congress, but not by a method which steals a march on the people and increases our tenure of office without the consent of those who gave it.

Mr. CRAIN. I now yield for five minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BUCKALEW].

Mr. BUCKALEW. Mr. Speaker, I am in favor of two of the objects proposed by this resolution. First, that the inauguration of the President shall be fixed on the last day of April every fourth year. I am also in favor of abolishing what has long prevailed in this Government, I mean the short sessions of Congress. But, on the other hand, I feel a strong objection to voting for this resolution because it blocks the way and will prevent the adoption of a much more searching and valuable change of our fundamental act.

As it is now the meetings of Congress differ in their arrangement from the meetings of the Legislatures of all our States. It is the law of American political action that a Legislature in any of our thirty-eight States shall meet soon after it is chosen, that members of the Legislature who have been displaced by a popular election shall not afterwards meet to speak with the voice of the people or to enact their laws. The only exception applies to Congress, and the anomalous condition in which we find ourselves in reference to this subject in Congress was owing to accident, to casual and unforeseen and unarranged circumstances when the Government was founded. Now, sir, if we are to reach our hands out to this part of the Constitution and change it for the future, let us change it so we shall assimilate Congress to the Legislatures of the States in reference to the time of meeting and adjournment.

What! Congress displaced by popular election, probably condemned by the people, now meets here, and serves every second year and makes their laws! What! a Congress displaced by a new and fresh one every second year, voted for and chosen along with candidates for President and Vice-President, that Congress is to meet here and count the electoral votes; and if the people have not succeeded in giving an absolute majority to any candidate, that displaced Congress, that moribund and defunct body is to choose the President of the United States! A House of Representatives voted for at some other Presidential election proposes every fourth year to say who shall be the President of the United States for the future! That ought not to be.

We ought, at the very earliest opportunity, to make a change in this respect which will assimilate Congress to the State Legislatures in this particular. I am, therefore, in favor of refusing to pass this amendment in its present shape; but I do favor a compromise between those who favor the proposition now pending and the amendment of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CRAIN], by which we can have this measure in a better form, better matured, and affording a remedy for the difficulties of which complaint is made. If such concession, such a consolidation of the two measures, could be effected and presented to the House I should expect to see a two-thirds majority heartily indorse it; and the Legislatures of the States when it is presented to them would, I have no doubt, discover its merits and gladly determine that it shall be a part of the Constitution of the country.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. COLLINS. I now yield five minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. OATES].

Mr. OATES. Mr. Speaker, it is true that the matter of sentiment—the history of the country disclosing the fact that the 30th of April was the day on which the first President was inaugurated—of itself is not a sufficient reason for a change of the Constitution, yet it does and ought to cut some figure in the consideration of this resolution.

The substantial reason why this amendment ought to be adopted, in addition to those given by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BUCKALEW], who has just resumed his seat, is the necessity for lengthening the second session of Congress. While we do get through with the business in some sort of style, the short length of time now allowed for the consideration of bills and measures of great public importance necessarily results in much hasty and illy considered legislation, which is always deleterious to the best interests of the people and the country. With the annually increasing volume of business it is quite impossible during the short session to do the business which the country demands and has a right to expect of the Congress.

Now, sir, while the law prescribes the date of the beginning and termination of the official term of the President, the Constitution having given him four years, you can not change that term; you can not by law lengthen that term, nor can you shorten it. An amendment of the Constitution is therefore necessary if you make any later date than the 4th of March the expiration of his term and the date for the inauguration of his successor.

The fact that the 4th of March is a disagreeable season of the year, while not of itself a sufficient reason for the change of the Constitution, is certainly entitled to some consideration. The important question, however, is to extend the term of the short session of Congress for two months longer than it can now be held.

Now, the objections raised by the gentleman from Pennsylvania that this proposition does not go far enough because it does not prescribe that Congress shall assemble soon after it is elected to organize and commence its work is, I think, not well founded. While in fact that is an objection, yet it is not a good one as against the measure now under consideration, for the reason that the Constitution declares Congress shall assemble on the first Monday in December or such other time as may be appointed by law. So that the evil of which he complains can be overcome by legislation. While the terms of office prescribed by the Constitution can neither be lengthened nor curtailed by legislation, the time at which Congress shall assemble may be changed and fixed by law. A constitutional amendment is not necessary to accomplish that object.

When this constitutional amendment is adopted and ratified, as I hope it will be, it will then be an easy matter to legislate that the Congress, soon after it is elected and while the Representatives are fresh from the people, shall assemble to transact its business; and in that aspect of the case I think this proposed amendment to the Constitution is very desirable.

Mr. CRISP. I would like to ask the gentleman from Alabama how the proposed change would accomplish the purpose suggested by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BUCKALEW], that is to say, that Congress shall assemble soon after its election, and while it is fresh from the people consider the issues and questions upon which possibly the election of its members may have depended?

Mr. OATES. This amendment provides for the expiration as well as the commencement of the term of Congress. It carries the present Congress along to the 30th day of April. The term of the new or succeeding Congress would begin at that time, and no difficulty would be found in adjusting the law to the change, so as to meet the point suggested. It would be a matter of mere legislation. The Fifty-first Congress, elected next November, might be required to hold their first session beginning on the 30th of April or 1st day of May.

I wish to say also, Mr. Speaker, a word in reply to the suggestion of the gentleman from Indiana who preceded me [Mr. SHIVELY] and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE] that this is legislating the present Congress into office for two months beyond the term for which they were elected. Why, the gentleman from Indiana stated that if we could do that, we could continue our term for two or four years. That is true, even for ten or twenty years; because it is within the power of the States of this Union to so amend the Constitution. But never can this proposed extension have any force or effect until it is ratified by the Legislatures of at least twenty-seven of the thirty-eight States of the Union. The ratification by the Legislatures of three-fourths of the States will make any proposition a part of the Constitution of the United States when it has been proposed and passed by two-thirds of both Houses of Congress.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. COLLINS. I now yield five minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HERBERT].

Mr. HERBERT. Mr. Speaker, I believe all the gentlemen who have thus far spoken upon this subject, with the exception of the gentleman from Maine [Mr. REED], have admitted that it would be well, if there were no reasonable objection against the manner of accomplishing it, to extend the second session of Congress for two months. It is the observation of most of us who have experience here that important bills fail in every Congress for want of sufficient time to consider them. It would be very easy to specify.

In Congress after Congress bills have been introduced here and referred to the committee presided over by the gentleman from Indiana on my left [Mr. HOLMAN] relating to public lands, which ought to be passed upon, bills which, if they could have been reached and considered, would have passed and reverted to the Government millions and millions of acres of land that railroad companies have held up to this day because we had not time here to attend to the people's business. Bills also have been introduced into the last three Congresses proposing to change the mode of paying marshals and district attorneys. There is no manner of doubt that any one of the last three Congresses that could have had time to consider thoroughly and act upon these bills would have passed them—not perhaps precisely as they were when introduced, but some measures of relief, some remedy for existing evils in the administration of justice, would have been found but for want of time.

The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE], who made perhaps the most effective appeal against the passage of this resolution, himself admitted that the second session ought to be longer at least by two months; but his argument in substance was we could not afford to vote for it because of what might be thought of it at home. He admitted it was right, yet confessed here he could not vote for it.

Mr. Speaker, I never made an admission of that kind in my life, and never will. If I believe a measure is right, if in my opinion the good of the country demands it, I propose to cast my vote for it.

In this case two months, it is true, would be added to the term of those who were elected for only two years. But it would not be at the expense of the incoming Congress; it would not be at the expense of the people. The people would be paying precisely the same money, dollar for dollar, during the months of March and April, 1889, whether we passed this bill or not. If it be right that the term ought to be extended for two months, if the public necessities demand it, are you afraid, gentlemen, you who are members of this House, to give the people of the States, without whose ratification this proposition can never become law, the chance to say so? That is the plain question.

Mr. TAULBEE. Will the gentleman allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. HERBERT. Yes, sir.

Mr. TAULBEE. If I caught the words of the gentleman from Alabama correctly when he undertook to repeat what I had said they were about these: that I was in favor of this proposition, but would not support it because I was afraid of the people. Now, if I misunderstood the gentleman I would like to have him say so. If I understood him correctly I would like to have him say so.

Mr. HERBERT. My proposition was that the gentleman from Kentucky admitted that we needed two months longer for the short session. Am I right in that?

Mr. TAULBEE. The gentleman is incorrect.

Mr. HERBERT. I wish to be correct.

Mr. TAULBEE. What I said was this: That as an abstract proposition I was in favor of changing the time of the inauguration of the President and of the term of Congress, but I was opposed to this House legislating itself into power for two months, and by its own action with the concurrence of a sufficient number of the State Legislatures, taking to itself a salary for two months longer than the people had elected its members to serve.

[Here the hammer fell.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Alabama has expired.

Mr. HERBERT. One word more. My reply to what has just been said by the gentleman from Kentucky is simply this: It will not be the members of this Congress extending their own term. But if it be true, and I think it is clearly so, that we ought to have two months added to the second session, then this Congress ought to give the people of the States a chance to say so by presenting an amendment of this kind.

Mr. COLLINS. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. COX].

Mr. COX. Does the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE] represent the democratic-republican sentiment when he suggests that we are by our action here in adopting a constitutional amendment voting ourselves into an extension of our term? Let us see if he is right. I shall not quote from the language of the gentleman from Kentucky. I will say that the highest possible refinement of republican institutions is the right to amend our Constitution by the prescribed mode.

We follow in this bill that mode. We can if we choose lengthen our term of service. We can do anything connected with our organic polity. I stood here, sir, on the floor advocating the power to abolish slavery. I argued the power on the ground that there was no limitation on that power of amendment of the Constitution except the good sense of the people. That common sense is exercised in the last resort here through Congress and State Legislatures. We can by appeal to our constituencies, by our own votes in Congress, and by the three-fourth consenting States, extend the term for two months, or any length, if we pursue the mode fixed.

Certainly any gentleman who has been here for some time—for instance, the gentleman from Maine [Mr. REED], who has been here so long and so worthily—must have found out that two months added to a short session would be of immense importance in the public interest. Why do I say that? Because in the great accumulation of Federal questions and interests since the war that come before Congress we can not do our duty here, or subserve the public interests or the common weal by the short session of three months, or what is virtually a session of about two months.

Therefore, if we can not go now to the full extent of the propositions here, as we might like to go, let us do the best we can. We can not reach the Calendar in this peculiar suspension hour and pass this as an amended bill. Let us do all that we can and vote the addition of two months to the short session. And if we can do no better, we may glorify a historic day and make it one of inauguration, so that the great masses of our people, many of them coming from a distance, may not witness the ceremony in the inclemency of a snow-storm in the month of March. Let us give to the people who come to see the majesty of the Republic in the inauguration of its Chief a chance to do it at a better season of the year, when nature adds her crowning beauty to the scene.

Mr. CRAIN. I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. WHEELER].

Mr. WHEELER. I regret that it has become my duty to express my views upon this measure immediately following the eloquent speech of the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. COX], but, Mr. Speaker, there is one feature in the resolution which I can not support. Not only must I oppose it by my vote, but I feel that I must not remain silent while such a proposition is pending in the Congress of which I have the honor to be a member.

The resolution provides that—

> The term of officers * * * of the Fiftieth Congress shall continue until the 30th day of April, 1889, at noon.

This resolution involves a great principle. It involves the question as to the right of the members of a legislative body by their votes to extend the term of the office to which they were elected.

On November 4, 1886, the good people of the Eighth district of Alabama did me the high honor of selecting me as their Representative in the Fiftieth Congress.

The Constitution of the United States prescribes that the Congress to which I was elected should cease to exist on March 4, 1889. What right have I by my vote to extend that power and authority for a single day, or even a single hour, much less to add two months to the term of service for which I was elected? If we have the power to extend our term of legislation for two months, we might extend it for six months, or even for a longer period, and there is no limit to the danger that might threaten the country from the establishment of such a precedent.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Does this joint resolution give us the power to extend it?

Mr. WHEELER. It gives the Legislatures the power to do it; that is to say, after the Legislatures of three-fourths of the States have ratified the proposed amendment it becomes a part of the Constitution. But we do not get our power from the Legislatures. We hold it from the people. We have no right to extend the powers which were given to us by the people on the 4th day of November, 1886, and I, for one, will not vote to do it. Something has been said here, Mr. Speaker, about being afraid of the people. If "afraid of the people" involves the idea of being unwilling to violate the trust reposed in us by the people by voting for a resolution one of the effects of which is to extend our term of office, then I am proud to say that I am afraid of the people. If refusing to usurp power which has never been intrusted to us is an exhibition of fear of the people, then let us all be endowed with that fear. The underlying principle upon which our Government is founded is that all power belongs to the people, and I, for one, will not set a bad example by usurping any part of that power.

Mr. WISE. Will the gentleman allow a question?

Mr. WHEELER. Yes, if it does not come out of my time.

Mr. WISE. Does not the gentleman know that this is not a proposition that Congress shall alter the term of Representatives in this body, but a proposition that a constitutional amendment shall be submitted to the people?

Mr. WHEELER. No, sir; not to the people, but to the Legislatures. Submit it to the people and the case would be different, because the people elect us. We represent the people and not the Legislatures. This is an important question for us to consider.

The pending resolution proposes that power which belongs to the people shall be assumed by Congress, and it is no sufficient justification to us to say that the purpose is not accomplished until our proposition is ratified by the Legislatures of a certain number of States.

Mr. MILLIKEN. Who elects the Legislatures but the people?

Mr. WHEELER. It is true that Legislatures are elected by the people, but to put it in the best light, is it not a matter of very doubtful propriety for Congress to propose to the Legislatures to ratify an amendment to the Constitution which extends the power of Congress beyond what was contemplated when the Congress was elected?

Mr. WISE. This is a proposition to change the organic law in accordance with the prescribed method.

Mr. WHEELER. I will vote for an amendment which cuts off our power, but not for an amendment which extends it. If we establish the precedent that Congress can extend its own term, there is no telling what use may be made of that precedent at some future period in the history of our Government. There is no telling what injury may ensue hereafter to the liberties of the people.

I can recall many instances in history where, had the law-making power been able to perpetuate itself, or even extend its term for a short period, evils of the greatest magnitude would have resulted.

I therefore feel, Mr. Speaker, that we should hesitate a long time before establishing a precedent of this character.

But, Mr. Speaker, the difficulties which have been alluded to by gentlemen who advocated this resolution can be solved without amending the Constitution of the United States. One embarrassment is the loss of time in the beginning of each Congress. To avoid this I had the honor early this session to introduce a bill which I will read:

A bill to designate the time for the convening of Congress.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Fifty-first Congress shall be convened at 1 o'clock p. m. on the 4th day of March, 1889, at which time the House shall be organized by the swearing in of the members, the election of the Speaker, Clerk, Sergeant-at-Arms, Doorkeeper, Postmaster, and Chaplain.

SEC. 2. That unless the House is requested by the President to continue its sittings, it will then adjourn to the first Monday in December following.

SEC. 3. That all the members who were not members of the preceding Congress will be entitled for their attendance on this session the actual amount paid by them as railroad, steam-boat, or stage fare in traveling from their homes to Washington and returning to their homes.

SEC. 4. That Congresses subsequent to the Fifty-first Congress shall in like manner and for like purposes be convened at 1 o'clock p. m. on the 4th day of March, one hour after the time fixed by law for the final adjournment of the preceding Congress.

If this bill should become a law the Speaker would have from the 4th day of March to the first Monday in the following December to prepare the committees and they could be announced on the first meeting of Congress in December. A month of valuable time would be saved and the business of the country would be attended to with more deliberation. Let us have some such measure as this, but by all means let us vote down the pending proposition, containing as it does an element inconsistent with the spirit of American institutions, and to say the least an encroachment on the rights of the people.

That is all, Mr. Speaker, I desire to say on the subject.

Mr. CRAIN. I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. TAULBEE].

Mr. TAULBEE. Mr. Speaker, it has been claimed by the advocates of this joint resolution that there is nothing in it which proposes to extend the term of this Congress to which we have been elected.

Mr. COLLINS. Who claims that?

Mr. TAULBEE. While that feature of this resolution may not be prominent, it is undeniably the effect of the joint resolution to extend the time of this Congress for sixty days, thus usurping, by the co-operation of a sufficient number of the State Legislatures, powers for the exercise of which we have not been elected, and setting to subsequent Congresses a precedent by the following of which they in turn may usurp to themselves greater powers. I call upon gentlemen who advocate this resolution to answer directly whether or not, following this proposed act of ours, subsequent Congresses may not enact themselves into perpetual power?

Mr. OATES. With the consent of three-fourths of the State Legislatures they could.

Mr. TAULBEE. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. OATES] correctly says that with the consent of three-fourths of the State Legislatures they could. I am glad that he has made that frank admission. We are to-day proposing to set a precedent by which the people of this country are to have wrested from them the right of franchise guarantied to them by the Constitution and the laws, thus thwarting their will by indirection, and I am opposed to it. Complaint has been made that I have attempted to make an ad captandum argument. If gentlemen are prompted by motives so purely patriotic, why is it that the amendment which I have offered, which proposes that the extension of the term of members of this Congress shall be without compensation, is not to be considered in connection with this joint resolution?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. CRAIN. I now yield three minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP].

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, a desirable thing to do, in my opinion, is to so legislate that the Congress elected in any given November can assemble in the succeeding December, thus doing away with the anomalous state of affairs which now exists in this country of a man being elected to Congress and not entering upon his duties, unless called in extra session, until thirteen months after his election.

Under our present system the Congress which meets in December following a Congressional election may have been repudiated at the polls, yet notwithstanding such expression of the people's disapprobation, it can not only legislate, not only inaugurate a President, but, as suggested by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, may elect the President.

Mr. Speaker, the rule which I would like to see adopted could be brought about, perhaps, by shortening the term of this Congress instead of lengthening it. If a provision should be adopted that the term of this Congress shall expire on the first of December of this year, we should thereby accomplish the purpose. Then the Congress which will be elected next November would meet here in December, would inaugurate the President, and could remain in session as long as the business of the country might require.

That same Congress can meet the following December and remain in session till April or May, as the public business may require, can then adjourn, the members can go home, and their acts can be reviewed by the people. Any proposition which will bring about this state of affairs will meet my hearty approval; but any amendment which merely changes the date of the inauguration of the President and leaves us in other respects practically as we are now, should not, it seems to me, receive the support of this House. It occurs to me that every fair-minded man must say that the true rule is to permit the members elected by the people to appear here to represent them at the very first assembling of Congress after such election.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. OATES. I will ask the gentleman whether questions as to the time of electing Representatives and the time for the assembling of Congress are not matters of statutory regulation.

Mr. CRISP. That is true; but unless some Congressional term be shortened by constitutional amendment in the manner I have suggested, the result desired can never be brought about, as I understand, by statutory regulation.

Mr. CRAIN. Mr. Speaker, the amendment which I submitted (which was called a "scheme" by some gentleman on the other side) and which has been reported favorably by the Committee on the Election of President, Vice-President, and Representatives, will carry out exactly the idea contemplated by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP]. And I will say to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. OATES] that unless you change the day of election from the first Tuesday in November to some time before that day it is impossible by legislation to change the time for the meeting of Congress so as to cover the objection raised. If we now pass a law providing that Congress shall meet on the first Monday in January, we should still have coming here every second year a House of Representatives a portion of which had been repudiated by the people. If the amendment now under consideration be adopted, members elected in November would commence their terms on the 30th of April, so that they would not come here until sixteen months after their election.

The amendment which I propose, and which I have asked these gentlemen of the Judiciary Committee to amalgamate with the one which they recommend, would, upon taking effect, cut off two months of the term of one Congress, so that, if it were applicable to the Fiftieth Congress, that Congress would expire on the 31st of December of this year, instead of the 4th of March of next year. The constitutional amendment now under consideration extends the term of the Fiftieth Congress to the 30th of April, 1889, leaving the condition of things of which the country complains just as it is now—an election between the sessions of a Congress; defeated members coming back at the second session to legislate for constituencies which have repudiated them; the short session terminating at a fixed hour without regard to the condition of measures of importance; the House of Representatives nine months without a Speaker; the President just inaugurated coming in at one door of the Capitol as members of the House go out of another. All these things would remain just as they are if the amendment advocated by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. COLLINS] should be adopted.

The gentleman from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON], who honors the position of chairman of the Judiciary Committee as much as he is honored by the position, professes to sympathize with me. I need no sympathy from him or any other member of this House. When I need sympathy I shall ask it from men who are in a condition to give it. I have studied this question pretty thoroughly—a little more thoroughly than some members of the Judiciary Committee, as is evidenced from their ignorance of the questions involved. I understand exactly the position which I assume, and in my opposition to the present measure I am not actuated by any desire to have my amendment adopted, for there is no chance for that to-day under the rules of the House, this being suspension day; but I am animated by the single motive of desiring to remedy the condition of affairs to which I have adverted and which in my judgment should be changed.

If any gentleman on either side of the House has a proposition which carries out this idea better than mine, I am willing to put my measure under my feet and embrace his willingly and gladly. But I do think there ought to be some change which will remedy the evils of the existing system; and the only method by which this can be accomplished, it seems to me, is, not by extending the term of the Fiftieth Congress, but by curtailing the term of some other Congress. The adoption of my resolution might affect this Congress, though I think not, because I believe, and I submit for the consideration of the gentleman from Massachusetts, that any measure of this kind which we may now submit to the State Legislatures would not be ratified in time to be applicable to the Fiftieth Congress, because it could not secure within the required period action at the hands of a sufficient number of the State Legislatures.

In addition to what I have submitted, gentlemen who are familiar with legislative affairs in the various States know that a newly elected governor comes into office simultaneously with a new Legislature, and to that body he submits his message. Nowhere in this country do we see an anomaly corresponding with that presented in our national affairs, whereby the Chief Executive does not communicate with the legislative body which was elected when he was chosen, but waiting thirteen months after his election and sending his first message to a legislative body the terms of one-half of whose members expire at the next election.

So far as the argument of the gentleman from New York [Mr. COX] is concerned, I have the highest admiration for his distinguished ability. At the same time I must say it is unworthy of him that on the floor of the American Congress he should announce himself in favor of a constitutional amendment in order that a President may be inaugurated in sunshine instead of a snow storm.

Mr. KERR. I ask the gentleman to yield to me.

Mr. CRAIN. I will for five minutes.

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, I am of the opinion of the gentleman from Texas we ought not to provide for a sunshiny day for the inauguration of the President. I do not think it adds to the respect for the Government to have ostentatious displays at the inauguration of the President. It should be remembered that in the days of a Democratic administration Thomas Jefferson rode to the Capitol on horseback from the Executive Mansion and hitched his horse to a post while he went in and took the oath of office as President. [Applause.]

I do not think it would hurt the country if the inauguration was made to take place on such a cold day as would put such displays out of the question.

I think while we have the power, perhaps, to do this it would be taking steps which would lead to the extension of our own term; and while it would not be properly a charge against this House, it would give occasion for the charge that we were seeking to extend our own terms if such a course were adopted. I think while it ought to be the rule that the term of the members of Congress should begin on the 1st of January, as is the case of the term of members of the various State Legislatures, that nevertheless such an amendment ought to be provided to the Constitution as would not allow it to take effect until after the Congress had expired, that had submitted it, so that it would not affect vested rights.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. COX. I ask the gentleman from Massachusetts to yield to me.

Mr. COLLINS. With pleasure.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I have only one word to reply to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CRAIN]. It will not do to repeat the talk in different language as to the inauguration ceremonies connected with our Government. They did not start with a Democratic administration. A large and most extensive one came with General Grant. Whatever of simplicity we have in our Administration to-day comes from our side of the House. Whatever of ostentatious display there is comes from gentlemen of another party. But I would not amend the Constitution solely on that ground, as my friend from Texas thinks I would undertake to do. I would amend the Constitution so, if possible, to assert the great days in our history, what has been achieved by our people and our Government.

Nor am I opposed to the proposition of the gentleman from Texas, and had I spoken longer I would have so indicated it. The trouble is just now, we can not amend the proposition of the gentlemen of the Judiciary; we can not propose anything in addition, such as suggested by the gentleman from Texas. We are tied up by our rules to-day. I know there are bills on the Calendar which I think may reach it. No man in this House is so opposed as I am to the duration of that old, miserable, moribund-like condition, going back here thirteen months for the purpose of doing business when the Administration has been set aside; and whenever the opportunity comes I will join with the gentleman——

Mr. CRAIN. If you adopt this you can not; they are antagonistic.

Mr. COX. No, sir. Now, a gentleman awhile ago argued it would shorten the time of the present Congress. How? By having two Congresses, one lapping over another, trying to finish the business of the other? If you have the power to cut off a day of Congress before it is fairly under way, then why not for ten months or for all the time?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. COX. I ask whether the man with that great superfluity of strength in these debates can not make some arrangement with the gentleman from Massachusetts by which we can vote on one harmonious bill?

Mr. CRAIN. That is what I propose.

Mr. COX. Why not get this bill now, when you do not propose to give us a better one?

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. CRAIN. I asked the gentleman from Massachusetts who has charge of this resolution to arrange with the House so as to withdraw it, in order that the two ideas might be connected into one proposition which would meet the approval of both sides of this question. He said that he was powerless to do so.

I wish to say in response to the gentleman from New York [Mr. COX] that it is impossible to pass the amendment I propose if you adopt this pending proposition, because they are antagonistic. This proposes to lengthen the term of Congress from the 4th day of March to the 30th day of April, while mine proposes to cut it off by shortening the term from the 4th day of March to the last day of December preceding. That is just the difference between them.

But while the gentleman from New York is talking of the grand possibilities of the future he is showing by his voice and vote that he is himself doubtful of the facts, for he appears to be afraid that our President will not remain in there unless he puts him in two months longer by a constitutional amendment. [Laughter.]

Mr. COLLINS. Mr. Speaker, I can not assume as much as the gentleman from Texas would have me do; that is, to undertake to guide the course of legislation in this body. If the gentleman from Texas and I constituted the House of Representatives we could make any bargain we pleased. But there are, fortunately or unfortunately, 323 other members who have something to say about it, and any bargain my friend and I might make would of course have to be subject to the approval of our fellow-members.

Now, sir, I wish to say a few words in conclusion of this discussion. There is no reason in the world, whether a man be a great constitutional lawyer and knows all about this subject, as the gentleman from Texas professes to, because, as he says, he has studied it——

Mr. CRAIN. I was talking of my own constitution. [Laughter.]

Mr. COLLINS. There is no reason in the world to lose sight of a plain, practical question. I do not know how much or how little the gentleman from Texas has studied the Constitution of the United States, and I apprehend that he is equally ignorant as to my diligent search and my familiarity with the constitutional foundation upon which our Government rests. But there is another reason for passing this resolution, and it is a pressing one. It is because this is the only resolution looking to relief that is fairly on the way to the Legislatures of the different States, and any delay will hazard its fate.

The fact that there is another scheme pending is no cause for opposing this; in fact I have not heard so much said against this measure as I have heard said in praise of something else. And I must say that I can not, because I do not know, wholly agree with the gentleman from Texas that his scheme is antagonistic to this.

Pass this proposition, which is the only one that has a chance to meet the Legislatures in session before the expiration of the Fiftieth Congress, and you can, by legislation of the House hereafter, carry out substantially all the gentleman from Texas desires, except to embalm in the Constitution an amendment which shall be known to all the ages as the "Crain amendment." [Laughter.]

Mr. CRAIN. Did you not tell me yourself that this could not be done except by a constitutional amendment, though you thought at first it could be done by law?

Mr. COLLINS. I am very sorry if there is any impairment of the gentleman's hearing. I said no such thing. This must be carried out by a constitutional amendment, but the substance of what the gentleman desires need not. A statute will do it.

Mr. CRAIN. You did not tell me a moment ago that you could not curtail the term of a member of Congress except by a constitutional amendment?

Mr. COLLINS. I do not understand the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. CRAIN. Did not you say that you could not curtail the term of a member of Congress by law, and that it could only be done by a constitutional amendment?

Mr. COLLINS. I told the gentleman that I had no power to make any bargain with him, if that is what he means.

Mr. CRAIN. I am not talking of that, but that the proposition curtailing the term of a member of Congress could not be adopted except by a constitutional amendment.

Mr. COLLINS. We will have misunderstandings which may have arisen between the gentleman from Texas and myself.

Mr. CRAIN. But I do not want the gentleman to place me in a wrong position.

Mr. COLLINS. I do no such thing. I repeat, Mr. Speaker, the substance and essence of the scheme of the gentlemen from Texas can be carried out by statute law after the enactment of the proposition now pending. That is what I said.

But we are told, sir, that this House is usurping power extending its term; that we are taking the power from the people to extend our own official life. I deny that proposition. We are doing nothing of the kind. If we have the right to submit this proposition to the Legislatures of the States and they adopt it, it becomes a constitutional provision. This is the only way open to us for the relief required. But I do not want gentlemen to vote in ignorance of the exact effect of this proposition.

If we are going to extend our term, and take the salary for two months more than we were elected for, out of whose pockets is it to come? Is any one wronged, or an additional dollar taken out of the Treasury? We do not receive pay for non-service, but the term of service is extended for two months longer at the same compensation. It makes no difference whether the salary for these two months be paid to the members of the Fiftieth Congress or to the members of the Fifty-first Congress; and, as I have already suggested, the only objection that can possibly be urged to this amendment is that it extends the term of one Congress for two months, and it may be answered in reply that it costs nothing to the people because it postpones the term of the next Congress just that much. There is almost always some inconvenience when you are trying to reach a result, and in order to reach this result—and I regret it—it becomes necessary to extend our own term of service.

Now, I believe the second session of Congress ought not to be limited; that it should expire on a day certain, but it ought to be longer than it is. Hence I think the 30th of April is a better resting point than the 4th of March.

The gentleman from Maine [Mr. REED] undertook to tell the reasons which he supposed I had, and which I never gave and never had, for the passage of this amendment. He said, thoughtlessly, I think, that it was a mere sentiment, based upon a letter written by Mr. Winthrop, of Massachusetts; he said somewhat inconsiderately, at last, that Mr. Winthrop belongs to a past generation.

I think this reflection unworthy of the gentleman from Maine. He was listening to me no more attentively than another gentleman, and I am sorry he does not know that the suggestion came in a masterly oration of Robert C. Winthrop delivered in this hall on a memorable occasion; and I am sorry for the reflection which was made. Robert C. Winthrop is as much a living force in this generation as the gentleman who made the remark ever was, is, or will be. And I prefer to sit at the feet of the sages and learn wisdom from them than to be diverted by the shallow persiflage of some modern politicians.

This proposition accomplishes three things. It prolongs the session of Congress and the term of President and Vice-President. It almost insures good weather for inauguration day. It gives Congress more time to do its business. And it does meet a sentiment, and the world is all the brighter for having a sentiment to guide men: the next President of the United States will, if this passes, be inaugurated precisely one hundred years after the greatest man that ever was President was inaugurated. If there be some better provision than this we have not the same chance of passing it as we can pass this by concurring with the Senate and be certain of its ratification. We do a good thing for our people. I believe there is no citizen of the United States who will find fault with us. There may be some timid members of Congress who may be afraid of their constituents, or unable to explain their votes. I am sorry for them and their relations to their constituents. I wish to commend them to the best constituency of all, the Fourth Massachusetts. That never finds fault with its Representative. [Applause.]

[Here the hammer fell.]

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the joint resolution.

Mr. CRAIN. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, 57 members voting therefor.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 129, nays 128, not voting 66; as follows:

YEAS—129.

Allen, C. H.	Funston,	McAdoo,	Ryan,
Allen, J. M.	Gibson,	McClammy,	Scott,
Atkinson,	Glover,	McComas,	Scull,
Baker, C. S.	Greenman,	McKinley,	Seney,
Barnes,	Guenther,	McKinney,	Shaw,
Bayne,	Hare,	McShane,	Smith,
Bingham,	Haugen,	Milliken,	Snyder,
Boothman,	Hayden,	Mills,	Springer,
Bound,	Hayes,	Morrill,	Stewart, J. W.
Browne, T. M.	Henderson, D. B.	Morrow,	Struble,
Bryce,	Henderson, J. S.	Morse,	Symes,
Butler,	Herbert,	Neal,	Taylor, E. B.
Campbell, T. J.	Hitt,	Nichols,	Taylor, J. D.
Candler,	Hogg,	Nutting,	Thomas, G. M.
Cannon,	Holman,	Oates,	Thomas, O. B.
Caswell,	Hopkins, A. J.	O'Neall, J. H.	Thompson, T. L.
Cheadle,	Hopkins, S. I.	O'Neill, J. J.	Tracey,
Clark,	Hovey,	Osborne,	Wade,
Cogswell,	Howard,	Outhwaite,	Weber,
Collins,	Hudd,	Owen,	Whitthorne,
Cooper,	Hutton,	Patton,	Wickham,
Cox,	Johnston, J. T.	Payson,	Wilkins,
Crouse,	Jones,	Perkins,	Wilkinson,
Culberson,	Kelley,	Phelps,	Williams,
Dalzell,	Kennedy,	Plumb,	Wilson, Thomas
Davis,	Laird,	Rice,	Wilson, W. L.
Dingley,	Lawler,	Robertson,	Wise,
Dunn,	Lee,	Rockwell,	Yardley,
Enloe,	Lehlbach,	Rogers,	Yoder,
Farquhar,	Lodge,	Romeis,	Yost.
Foran,	Lyman,	Rowell,
Ford,	Mansur,	Russell, C. A.
Fuller,	Mason,	Rusk,

NAYS—128.

Abbott,	Crisp,	Ketcham,	Reed,
Anderson, A. R.	Cummings,	Kilgore,	Richardson,
Anderson, G. A.	Dargan,	La Follette,	Rowland,
Baker, Jehu	Darlington,	Lagan,	Sawyer,
Bankhead,	Davidson, A. C.	Laidlaw,	Sayres,
Blanchard,	De Lano,	Lane,	Sherman,
Bland,	Dibble,	Lanham,	Shively,
Bliss,	Dockery,	Latham,	Simmons,
Blount,	Dorsey,	Lind,	Sowden,
Boutelle,	Elliott,	Macdonald,	Spooner,
Bowden,	Felton,	Mahoney,	Stahlnecker,
Bowen,	Finley,	Maish,	Steele,
Breckinridge, C. R.	Fisher,	Matson,	Stephenson,
Brewer,	Forney,	McCormick,	Stewart, Charles
Brower,	French,	McCreary,	Stewart, J. D.
Browne, T. H. B.	Gallinger,	McCullogh,	Stockdale,
Buchanan,	Gear,	McKenna,	Stone of Ky.
Buckalew,	Gest,	McMillin,	Taulbee,
Bunnell,	Granger,	McRae,	Thompson, A. C.
Burnes,	Grimes,	Merriman,	Turner, E. J.
Burrows,	Grout,	Moffitt,	Turner, H. G.
Bynum,	Hall,	Montgomery,	Vance,
Campbell, Felix	Hatch,	Moore,	Vandever,
Campbell, J. E.	Hemphill,	Morgan,	Walker,
Carlton,	Henderson, T. J.	Nelson,	Warner,
Caruth,	Hermann,	Newton,	Washington,
Clardy,	Holmes,	Norwood,	Weaver,
Clements,	Hopkins, S. T.	O'Donnell,	Wheeler,
Cobb,	Jackson,	O'Ferrall,	White, J. B.
Cothran,	Johnston, T. D.	Perry,	White, S. V.
Cowles,	Kean,	Peters,	Whiting, J. R.
Crain,	Kerr,	Pugsley,	Wilber.

NOT VOTING—66.

Adams,	Chipman,	Harmer,	Phelan,
Allen, E. P.	Cockran,	Heard,	Pidcock,
Anderson, C. L.	Compton,	Hiestand,	Post,
Anderson, J. A.	Conger,	Hires,	Randall,
Arnold,	Cutcheon,	Hooker,	Rayner,
Bacon,	Davenport,	Houk,	Russell, J. E.
Barry,	Davidson, R. H. M.	Hunter,	Spinola,
Belden,	Dougherty,	Laffoon,	Stone of Mo.
Belmont,	Dunham,	Landes,	Tarsney,
Biggs,	Ermentrout,	Long,	Thomas, J. R.
Breckinridge, WCP	Fitch,	Lynch,	Tillman,
Brown, C. E.	Flood,	Maffett,	Townshend,
Brown, J. R.	Gaines,	Martin,	West,
Brumm,	Gay,	O'Neill, Charles	Whiting, William
Burnett,	Glass,	Parker,	Woodburn.
Butterworth,	Goff,	Peel,
Catchings,	Grosvenor,	Penington,

So (two-thirds not having voted in the affirmative) the joint resolution was not passed.

Mr. JACKSON. I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the names be dispensed with.

There was no objection.

The following pairs were announced:

Until further notice, on all political questions:

Mr. CHIPMAN with Mr. GAINES.

Mr. DOUGHERTY with Mr. J. R. BROWN.

Mr. BURNETT with Mr. WHITING, of Massachusetts.

Mr. BIGGS with Mr. FELTON.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky, with Mr. HARMER.

Mr. HOOKER with Mr. LONG.

Mr. PIDCOCK with Mr. GROSVENOR.

Mr. TOWNSHEND with Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania.

Mr. BACON with Mr. DAVENPORT.

Mr. PENINGTON with Mr. HIESTAND.

Mr. ERMENTROUT with Mr. BELDEN.

Mr. TILLMAN with Mr. PARKER.

Mr. SPINOLA with Mr. THOMAS, of Illinois.

Mr. TARSNEY with Mr. BRUMM.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri, with Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas.

For this day:

Mr. RANDALL with Mr. GOFF.

Mr. RUSSELL, of Massachusetts, with Mr. HOUK.

Mr. LANDES with Mr. FLOOD.

Mr. HEARD with Mr. ADAMS.

Mr. DAVIDSON, of Florida, with Mr. DUNHAM.

Mr. COCKRAN with Mr. HIRES.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi, with Mr. HUNTER.

Mr. LAFFOON with Mr. GAINES.

Mr. RAYNER with Mr. WEST.

The result of the vote was then announced as above stated.

NEW LIBRARY BUILDING.

The SPEAKER announced the appointment of the Select Committee to Investigate the Construction of the New Library Building, as follows:

Mr. HOLMAN of Indiana, Mr. STAHLNECKER of New York, Mr. RAYNER of Maryland, Mr. STEWART of Vermont, and Mr. CASWELL of Wisconsin.

Mr. WILKINS. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to—ayes 96, noes 58.

And accordingly (at 3 o'clock and 55 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

PRIVATE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED AND REFERRED.

Under the rule private bills and joint resolutions of the following titles were introduced and referred as indicated below:

By Mr. J. A. ANDERSON: A bill (H. R. 7448) for the relief of Robert Pruitt—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. G. A. ANDERSON: A bill (H. R. 7449) granting a pension to Mary S. Bates and Sarah Bates—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BUTLER: A bill (H. R. 7450) for the relief of George Jackson—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. FELIX CAMPBELL: A bill (H. R. 7451) to place Jane Young on the pension-roll—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CANNON: A bill (H. R. 7452) for the relief of the Southern Illinois Normal University—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CARUTH: A bill (H. R. 7453) for the relief of K. P. Thixton—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. COGSWELL: A bill (H. R. 7454) granting a pension to Maria N. Parker—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. COWLES: A bill (H. R. 7455) for the relief of heirs-at-law and personal representatives of James H. Newland, deceased—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CROUSE: A bill (H. R. 7456) for the relief of the heirs of John Hogan—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7457) granting a pension to Eleanor D. Heath—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7458) for the relief of Carl F. Kolbe—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. DE LANO: A bill (H. R. 7459) for the relief of the heirs of Asa O. Gallup—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. FELTON: A bill (H. R. 7460) for the relief of the Oceanic Steamship Company—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. FINLEY: A bill (H. R. 7461) for the relief of W. F. Goggin—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7462) for the relief of G. W. Sternes—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7463) for the relief of the heirs of Jefferson M. Potts—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7464) granting a pension to John D. Smith—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FISHER: A bill (H. R. 7465) granting a pension to Mrs. Janet L. P. Taylor—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GALLINGER: A bill (H. R. 7466) granting a pension to Hannah H. Grant—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GIBSON: A bill (H. R. 7467) granting a pension to Thomas Sinclair—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. GLOVER: A bill (H. R. 7468) for the relief of the officers and crew of the United States steamers Forest Rose and Argosy, late of the Red River expedition—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7469) for the relief of Catharine Mehan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7470) for the relief of Alfred J. Worcester—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. GROUT: A bill (H. R. 7471) granting a pension to Moses L. Chase—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HEARD: A bill (H. R. 7472) granting a pension to C. C. Blanton—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7473) to grant a pension to Benjamin E. Morris—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HOGG: A bill (H. R. 7474) granting a pension to Charles L. Reeder—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HOWARD: A bill (H. R. 7475) granting a pension to Pauline T. Carpenter—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HUNTER: A bill (H. R. 7476) granting a pension to William O. Doyel—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. J. T. JOHNSTON: A bill (H. R. 7477) granting a pension to James E. Barton—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7478) for the relief of Joseph E. Johnson—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7479) for the relief of Thomas W. Wiley—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7480) for the relief of James E. Railsback—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7481) for the relief of Rudolph F. Williamson, Company I, Tenth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7482) granting a pension to Mary Forsythe, widow of John R. B. Forsythe—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7483) granting a pension to Barbra Murphy—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KERR: A bill (H. R. 7484) for the relief of the First National Bank of Marion, Iowa—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. KETCHAM: A bill (H. R. 7485) granting a pension to Mrs. Susan V. Wilcox, mother of Martin V. Wilcox—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LAFFOON: A bill (H. R. 7486) for the relief of Thomas Drake—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7487) for the relief of the heirs of W. L. Jenkins, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. LAGAN: A bill (H. R. 7488) for the relief of the Newark Filtering Company, of Newark, N. J.—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. LAWLER: A bill (H. R. 7489) for the relief of Edward A. Galleher—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. MACDONALD: A bill (H. R. 7490) for the relief of Sidney W. Whitelock—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7491) granting a pension to Lewis Telyea—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McCOMAS: A bill (H. R. 7492) for the relief of Mary A. Porter—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McCULLOGH: A bill (H. R. 7493) granting a pension to Jacob Hicks—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McCREARY: A bill (H. R. 7494) for the relief of John S. Boswell—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7495) to increase the pension of Mrs. Mary L. Scott, of Lincoln County, Kentucky—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7496) for the relief of Abner B. Jackson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7497) for the relief of the administrator of John Engleman, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7498) for the relief of Stephen H. Jackson, of Madison County, Kentucky—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. McSHANE: A bill (H. R. 7499) for the relief of Sarah E Ingham—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MERRIMAN: A bill (H. R. 7500) for the relief of Samuel Schiffer, survivor of J. Schiffer & Co.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MILLIKEN: A bill (H. R. 7501) for the relief of H. Clay Wood—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MORRILL: A bill (H. R. 7502) for the relief of Anna Holborn—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. McRAE: A bill (H. R. 7503) for the relief of Mitchell Trotter—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. NORWOOD: A bill (H. R. 7504) for the relief of Lachlan H. McIntosh—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. OSBORNE: A bill (H. R. 7505) to place the name of E. G. Fleming on the pension-roll—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. OWEN: A bill (H. R. 7506) for the relief of Addison G. Moore—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PETERS: A bill (H. R. 7507) granting a bounty to John D. Rohnstadt—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. PUGSLEY: A bill (H. R. 7508) granting a pension to Julia E. Ambrose—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. REED: A bill (H. R. 7509) granting to the York Harbor and Beach Railroad Company a right of way—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7510) granting a pension to Stephen A. Seavey—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RUSK: A bill (H. R. 7511) for the relief of Samuel Jackson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. H. 7512) granting a pension to Johanna Eckle, widow of Joseph Eckle—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7513) for the relief of Joseph Scholfield and Sarah N. Giese—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. ROWELL: A bill (H. R. 7514) for the relief of James Hounselman—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. STEELE: A bill (H. R. 7515) for the relief of George W. Leipps—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SENEY: A bill (H. R. 7516) to increase the pension of Sylvester Stearns—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7517) granting a pension to Conrad Stephan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. STONE, of Kentucky: A bill (H. R. 7518) granting a pension to Richard Tyler—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7519) for the relief of James Oakley—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7520) for the relief of J. H. Bugg—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7521) for the relief of B. F. Moses—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7522) for the relief of Caldwell County, Kentucky—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7523) for the relief of Joseph Bridges—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7524) for the relief of C. T. Bridges—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7525) for the relief of G. C. Lovelace—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill H. R. 7526) for the relief of W. C. Robbins—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7527) for the relief of Mrs. Mary A. Miller—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7528) for the relief of G. L. Hughes—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7529) granting a pension to the widow of Green Hopper—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7530) for the relief of Charles A. Tart—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7531) for the relief of the legal representatives of William Wallis—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7532) for the relief of the legal representatives of William W. Hildreth, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. E. J. TURNER: A bill (H. R. 7533) granting a pension to Philander Hodgman—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7534) for the relief of W. H. Collards, John A. Elsaser, Peter Johnson, George Shade, M. G. Brown, Jonas F. Reitz, and L. H. Boyd—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WHEELER: A bill (H. R. 7535) for the relief of Aaron Wilhite—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7536) for the relief of Elizabeth Looney—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7537) for the relief of Anderson Wilhite—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7538) to refer the claim against the United States of J. L. Young, of Lawrence County, Alabama, to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7539) to refer the claim against the United States of Caroline Devan, of Lawrence County, Alabama, to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7540) to refer the claim against the United States of James A. Patterson, of Colbert County, Alabama, to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7541) to refer the claim against the United States of John Wyninegean, of Colbert County, Alabama, to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WILBER: A bill (H. R. 7542) granting a pension to Jane A. Dunbar—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7543) granting a pension to Mary H. Casler, widow of Marcus R. Casler—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WOODBURN: A bill (H. R. 7544) for the relief of John S. Luff—to the Select Committee on Indian Depredation Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7545) for the relief of Algernon S. Dorsey—to the Committee on Claims.

Changes in the reference of bills improperly referred were made in the following cases, namely:

A bill (H. R. 3601) granting a pension to William Dorman—from the Committee on Pensions to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6578) for the relief of Margaret S. Jones—from the Committee on Invalid Pensions to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk, under the rule, and referred as follows:

By Mr. A. R. ANDERSON: Petition of W. G. Morrisey and others, citizens of Alaska, against bill providing Territorial form of government for said district—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. G. A. ANDERSON: Petition of citizens of Pike and Calhoun Counties, Illinois, for removal of sand bar in harbor in Mississippi River near Clarksville, Mo.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. ARNOLD (by request): Petition for the more effectual protection of agriculture—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. C. S. BAKER: Resolution of Root Post, No. 151, Grand Army of the Republic, Syracuse, N. Y., in favor of the per diem pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. JEHU BAKER: Memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives, from the authorities of the city of Collinsville, Madison County, Illinois, and of Nashville, Ill., relative to a general law for the erection of post-office buildings—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. BAYNE: Resolution of Pride of the North Council, Junior Order United American Mechanics, of Allegheny, Pa., requesting Congress to declare Washington's birthday a national holiday to the same extent as other national holidays—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, resolution of Hope Council, Junior Order United American Mechanics, of Allegheny, Pa., requesting Congress to declare Washington's birthday a national holiday to the same extent as other national holidays—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, resolution of the commissioners for the improvement of the Ohio River and its tributaries, for the improvement of the Ohio River and the free navigation of the Monongahela and Green and Barren Rivers—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, resolution of Stone Mason's Union, No. 9, of Pittsburgh, Pa., recommending the appointment of John T. Lynch as superintendent of new Library building—to the Joint Committee on the Library.

Also, papers relating to bill for relief of the widow of John Montgomery—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, papers relating to claim of Mary P. Thompson, for a pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BLISS: Petition of Alan Mead, Walter Mead, and Mary Ann Sniffin, for relief—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. T. M. BROWNE: Protest of the Indianapolis Board of Trade against legislation calculated to embarrass our foreign commerce—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, memorial and resolution of the Indianapolis Board of Trade in favor of the passage of an act to prevent the adulteration of foods—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. BOWDEN: Papers in the claim of John C. Neaville, of Portsmouth, Va.—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, memorial of the vestry of Trinity Church, Portsmouth, Va., for relief—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BUCHANAN: Petition of citizens of Ocean County, New Jersey, for increased pay for surfmen—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, petition of citizens of Ocean County, New Jersey, for increased pay to surfmen—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, memorial of Philadelphia Board of Trade and other commercial bodies, in behalf of act authorizing international marine conference—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, protest of Williamsport (Pa.) Lumbermen's Exchange, against putting lumber on the free-list—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of 84 citizens of Hammonton, N. J., in favor of lower postage rates on seeds, etc.—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of 73 citizens of Hammonton, N. J., in favor of reissue of postal currency—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of Quartermaster-General of the United States for increase of pension to Mrs. Annie Gibson Yates—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BUNNELL: Petition of dairymen and citizens of Hopbottom, Susquehanna County, Pennsylvania, asking that salt be put on the free-list—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the people of Alaska, expressing disapproval of the bill providing a Territorial form of government—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. BURROWS: Petition of citizens of Kalamazoo, Mich., for a reduction of letter postage to 1 cent—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. T. J. CAMPBELL: A bill making an appropriation for the removal of a ledge of rocks situated at the foot of Tenth and Eleventh streets, also from the foot of Broome street to the foot of Tenth street, in the city of New York—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. CARUTH: Papers in the case of Kell P. Thixton, for relief—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. CHEADLE: Petition of the authorities of Frankfort, Clinton County, Indiana, for the construction of public buildings—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. CLARDY: Petition of C. Dillon and 20 others, of Jefferson County, and of William J. Kirk, of Moxville, Mo., for the retention of the tariff on plate-glass—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CLARK: Petition of the authorities of Berlin, Green Lake County, Wisconsin, relative to appropriations for public buildings—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. COGSWELL: Petition of Maria N. Parker, for a pension as a nurse—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. COLLINS: Memorial of the Sons of Martha's Vineyard for the improvement of Vineyard Haven—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. COWLES: Petition resisting Territorial form of government for Alaska—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. DALZELL: Petition of the General Putnam, the Laurel, the Wilkinsburg, and the Bunker Hill Councils of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, that February 22d shall be made a national holiday—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DARGAN: Petition of citizens of Florence, S. C., for an appropriation to build a road to the national cemetery near that place—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DARLINGTON (by request): Petition for the removal of the duty on salt—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also (by request), petition to make February 22d a legal holiday—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DE LANO: Petition of soldiers of Kirkwood, Broome County, New York, for the passage of a service-pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DOCKERY: Petition of soldiers of Gentry County, Missouri, for passage of a service-pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DORSEY: Petition of purchasers of the land on Omaha Indian reservation, asking extension—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. DUNN: Petition of the Little Rock (Ark.) Medical Society, relative to tariff on medicines, medical and surgical appliances, etc.—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ERMENTROUT: Memorial of Mount Pleasant Council, No. 37, of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, to make Washington's birthday a holiday—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. FARQUHAR: Petition of 19 manufacturers of painted and stained glass windows, of Buffalo, N. Y., relative to tariff on stained glass—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. FINLEY: Petition of John S. Kendricks, administrator of Amanda Goggin, of Pulaski County, Kentucky, for relief—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. FRENCH (by request): Petition of James H. Patten, first selectman of Portland, Conn., for general appropriation bill for Government post-office buildings in cities and towns of 3,000 inhabitants or over—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. FULLER: Petition of J. M. Wetherber and 72 other citizens of West Union, Iowa, for enactment of schedule agreed upon by the wool-growers and woolen manufacturers—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GEAR (by request): A bill making appropriations for improvement at the Des Moines Rapids Canal—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. GIBSON: Petition for the improvement of the Manokin River, in Somerset County, Maryland—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. GLOVER: Petition for the relief of James Clarkson—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, memorial of the Cigar-Makers' Union of St. Louis, Mo., against any change in tariff on cigars—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, papers in connection with bill for the relief of Frank Backoff—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. GROUT: Petition of Liberty Grange, of Tunbridge, Vt., for better protection of farm products, and for other purposes—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, remonstrance of citizens of Alaska, against the formation of Territorial government for Alaska—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. GUENTHER: Petition of the authorities of Negaunee, Mich., relative to appropriations for public buildings—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. HAUGEN: Petition of citizens of Trempealeau County, Wisconsin, for tariff reform—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, remonstrance of residents of Alaska, against a Territorial form of government for that district—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. HAYES: A bill making an appropriation for the improvement of the channel of the Mississippi River near Beaver Island, at Clinton, Iowa—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition of the city of Clinton, Iowa, for an appropriation for the same, to accompany bill—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. D. B. HENDERSON: Petition of the National Laundrymen's Association, against Chinese immigration—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, paper from William Ryan & Sons, of Dubuque, Iowa, relating to adulterated lard—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, paper from E. S. Ormsby, of Emmetsburgh, Iowa, relating to legislation touching public lands—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, letter of General O. O. Howard and other papers relating to pay of Army chaplains—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, resolutions of a mass meeting in San Francisco, Cal., protesting against Chinese immigration, and asking for more stringent legislation—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. HITT: Petition of Hon. W. H. Griffith, mayor, and authorities of Savanna, Ill., and of mayor and authorities of Freeport, Ill., for a general appropriation for public buildings in towns of 3,000 inhabitants or over—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, petition of 622 people of Alaska, for land laws, public buildings, and against a Territorial form of government—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. A. J. HOPKINS: Petition of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, relative to work on the Library building—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, memorial against Territorial government for Alaska—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. S. I. HOPKINS (by request): Petition of citizens of Alaska, against a Territorial form of government for that district, etc.—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. HUDD: Petition of 3,000 citizens, tax-payers, and electors of Sheboygan, Wis., for a public building at Sheboygan, Wis.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, petition of Capt. J. Kane and others, and of Thomas D. McBudge and others, of Sheboygan, Wis., for increased pay of life-saving crews—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. J. T. JOHNSTON: Petition of Mary Forsythe, widow of John R. B. Forsyth, for a bill granting her a pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. JOSEPH: Petition of the city officials of Santa Fé, N. Mex., in reference to appropriations for public buildings—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. KERR: Memorial of city authorities of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, for a general appropriation for Government post-office buildings—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. KETCHAM: Petition of soldiers of Columbia County, and of Hudson, N. Y., for the passage of the per diem rated service-pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Elias Brown, late postmaster at Wappinger's Falls, Dutchess County, New York, for relief—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, remonstrance of the Farmers' Club, of Columbia County, New York, against the repeal or modification of the oleomargarine law—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. LAFFOON: Petition of John Anderson, of Nathaniel M. Clark, of James Davis, of Patton Alexander, of Sarah J. Bishop, of C. B. Baker, of Hopkins County; of N. H. Boyd, of Underwood R. Payne, of Peter Ryan, of Christian County; of William A. Erastus and of Rachael Rouse, of Henderson County, and of J. A. Barr, of Daviess County, Kentucky—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, of papers in claim of Thomas Drake; of claim of W. A. Easten, and of W. L. Jenkins, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of Jackson McClain and others, citizens of Henderson, Ky.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. LEE: Petition of William H. Taylor, of Fairfax County, Virginia, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. LYMAN: Petition of 27 citizens of Arbor Hill, Iowa, for reduced rates of postage, etc.—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. McCOMAS: Papers in the claims of Mary A. Jones and others, of DeFord & Co., of William Dadds, of James M. Andrews, of Joseph C. Hill, of George Hoking, of Daniel S. Loy, of Lloyd A. Kessler, of David Kailor, of Joseph H. J. Rutter, of heirs of Jonathan Tobey, of T. W. Stonestreet, of Joseph H. Maddox, of Christian Shuff, of Charles R. Gregory, of Ezra M. Thomas, of David Kailer, and of M. Culler, of Maryland—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition and resolutions of miners and others of Frostburgh, Md., against free bituminous coal—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of C. M. Keedy, of Robert K. Thrasher, of John H. Garrett, of Jacob Friend, executor, of Robert W. Grove, of Isaac Gruber and others, of Jacob Grim, of George D. Herman, of Mary E. Holtzman, of George Hering, of Frisby Hildebrand, of David L. Martin, of James W. Pearre, trustee, of B. P. Rench, of Samuel Nigh, of Henry Rouzer, of William Rouzer, of Thomas H. Rabbitt, of W. S. Offutt, jr., of Samuel T. Magruder, of William T. Lewis, executor, of John H. Lewis, of Stephen M. Lyddane; of Tobias Johnson, executor, of Jasper M. Jackson, of Samuel Gantz, of Louisa G. Beall, of Sarah Ellen Cady, of Charles A. Duvall, of William F. Unger, of Benjamin F. Ball, of Columbus W. Thompson, of George Thomas, of George I. Adams, executor, of Jacob D. Eavery, of Charles Barton, of Eli Bowman, of William H. Chipley, of Sallie Carroll, executrix, of Michael J. Brown, of George Dentler, of H. K. Douglas, of J. P. Fleming, of Sarah E. Williams, of William S. Wilson, and of Osborn S. Wilson, of Maryland, for relief—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of John Ward and 40 other soldiers for relief—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of Anna Verneuil for a pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Eliza S. Jones and others, for relief—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, petition of Daniel Killigan, for increase of pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McCORMICK: Petition of D. D. Heffner and over 1,000 others, citizens of the Sixteenth district of Pennsylvania, for a service-pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McCREARY: Petition of W. J. Landram and Charles Gallagher, of Garrard County, Kentucky, for relief—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. McCULLOGH: Memorial of the borough of Connellsville, Pa., in regard to public buildings in smaller cities—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, memorial of the Junior Order of American Mechanics, asking that February 22 be declared a legal holiday—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MACDONALD: Memorial of the authorities of Faribault, of Red Wing, of Northfield, and of Hastings, Minn., in relation to appropriations for public buildings—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, memorial of the Farmers' Alliance of Carver County, Minnesota—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, protest of the Minneapolis (Minn.) Board of Trade, against the passage of certain resolutions restraining commerce by railways between the United States and Canada—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. MAISH: Petition of Mrs. Bridget Brown, for a pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, memorial of the borough of Hanover, Pa., against appropriations for public buildings—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, memorial of the war damage commissioners of Pennsylvania, on House bill No. 1777—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, memorial of Emeline Matcher, widow of William Matcher—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MANSUR: Memorial of city officers of Carrollton, Mo., and of Chillicothe, Mo., against special acts to build public buildings—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. MILLIKEN: Petition of D. J. Sawyer and others, for the passage of the bill to prevent towing rafts from Nova Scotia into the United States—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. MORROW: Petition of ex-soldiers of the late war who enlisted prior to that war, for legislation granting them a bounty—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. NEAL: Petition of Ed. H. Seymour, heir of H. C. Seymour, of Tennessee, for reference of his case to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. NELSON: Petition of citizens of Minnesota, for a pension for Pierre Bottineau—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, memorial of the Produce Exchange of Duluth, Minn., relative to bridge across ship-canal at that place—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, resolutions of the Board of Trade of Minneapolis, Minn., against certain amendments of the interstate-commerce law—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, resolutions of the same, in favor of a naval reserve—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. O'DONNELL: Two petitions of citizens of Alaska, protesting against a Territorial form of government—to the Committee on the Territories.

Also, memorial of the city officers of Hastings, and of Albion, Mich., for legislation to erect public buildings by the Government at cities of 3,000 inhabitants and over—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. OSBORNE: Memorial of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, against immigration embodying elements detrimental to the institutions of our country—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, resolutions of the National Butter, Cheese, and Egg Association, relative to the oleomargarine law—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, resolutions of the Merchants' and Cotton Exchanges of Memphis, Tenn., against taxing cotton-seed oil—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, memorial of Laundrymen's National Association, for the passage of the Mitchell anti-Chinese bill—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. PATTON: Petition of Dr. A. P. Herghold and Col. J. R. Lawrence, of Pennsylvania, in favor of a pension to Mrs. General Logan, etc.—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PETERS: Papers relating to the claim for bounty of John D. Rohnstadt, of Ellinwood, Kans.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. RICE: Resolutions of Cigar-Makers' Union, No. 98, of St. Paul, Minn., protesting against bill to remove the tax on cigars and tobacco—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, resolution of the Board of Trade of Minneapolis, Minn., protesting against certain proposed legislation in regard to commerce between the United States and Canada, and amendment of the interstate-commerce law—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, resolutions of the Board of Trade of Minneapolis, Minn., indorsing bill providing for the enrollment of a naval militia and organization of a naval reserve force—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. RICHARDSON: Petition of J. G. Willis, administrator of J. T. Crockett, for reference of claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. ROMEIS: Petition of J. A. James and 25 others, citizens of Erie County, Ohio, for the restoration of the tariff on wool to the rate in 1883—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ROWLAND: A bill to improve and deepen the channel of Lumber River, in North Carolina—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, a bill to improve and deepen the channel of Lockwood's Folly River, in North Carolina—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. RUSK: Petition of Joseph Scholfield and Sarah N. Giese, children of Revolutionary soldier, for relief—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. RYAN: Memorial of the authorities of Burlington, Kans., relative to appropriations for public buildings—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. SCULL: Memorial of the Fork Council and of the Good Will Council of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, to make February 22 a national holiday—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SHAW: Petition of heirs of Samuel Reel, of Washington County, Maryland, for reference of their claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also (by request), petition of people of Alaska against a Territorial form of government, and for other relief—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. SHIVELY: Memorial of the authorities of Goshen, Ind., for a general law authorizing the construction of public buildings in all towns and cities of 3,000 inhabitants and over—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. SIMMONS: Petition of O. H. Perry, administrator of George W. Perry, of Craven County, North Carolina, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims.

Also, petition of A. T. Hill, mayor of Kinston, N. C., and W. A. Aldridge, for public buildings at towns of 3,000 inhabitants and over—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. STAHLNECKER: Petition of members of Tammany Hall general committee, for a bill for the relief of the employés in the post-office in New York City—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. STEELE: Petition of officers of the Fourteenth Infantry and First Artillery at Vancouver Barracks, Washington Territory, asking for a pension for Mary Ellen Fitzgerald—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. J. W. STEWART: Petition of George W. Austin and 5 other letter-carriers of Burlington, Vt., for increased compensation to letter-carriers—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. E. B. TAYLOR: Memorial of the Legislature of Ohio, in favor of pension for prisoners of war—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, memorials of the city authorities of Warren, Ohio, upon the subject of public buildings—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, memorial of soldiers and sailors of Geauga County, Ohio, in favor of Senate bill 1537—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of citizens of Ashtabula County, Ohio, in favor of one-cent letter post stamp—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. T. L. THOMPSON: Petition of citizens of Alaska for relief—to the Committee on the Territories.

Also, memorial of the Board of Forestry of California relative to timber lands—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. E. J. TURNER: Petition of George Crilley for legislation affecting the Des Moines River land grant—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. VANDEVER: A bill for a survey and estimate for the establishment of a harbor of refuge at San Buenaventura, Cal.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. WALKER: Petition of 500 citizens of Butler and other counties in Missouri, asking an appropriation of $25,000 for the improvement of the navigation of Black River, in Missouri—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. WASHINGTON: Petition of administrator of Eleazer Hamilton, of Davidson County, Tennessee, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WHEELER: Petition of T. L. Daily and others, for a bill to aid national education—to the Committee on Education.

Also, petition of Joseph Bohannon, of Jackson County, Alabama, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. S. V. WHITE: Petition of citizens of Brooklyn, N. Y., asking that a pension be granted to Maria N. Abbey—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. J. R. WHITING: Memorial of the common council of Mount Clement, Mich., for a general appropriation bill for the erection of Government post-office buildings—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. WICKHAM: Petition of citizens of Huron County, Ohio, for speedy action to protect the wool-growing and woolen manufacturing industries of this country—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WILBER: Memorial of the Society of Friends, for international arbitration—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of 52 ladies of Poland, N. Y., for the protection of young girls—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. WILKINS: Petition of John Horming and 300 others, citizens of Ohio, for an appropriation and governmental control of the Muskingum River, from Zanesville, Ohio, to Dresden, Ohio, the head of navigation on the said river—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition of J. M. Given and 100 citizens of Chandlersville, Ohio, protesting against the reduction of the duty on wool—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. THOMAS WILSON: Memorial in favor of the erection of public buildings in cities and villages of 3,000 inhabitants and over—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, petition in favor of per diem rated pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. W. L. WILSON: Petition of Joseph F. Strider; of John Melvin; of Abel L. Kile; of David W. Swisher; of A. R. Staley; of I. W. Williams; of J. Van Rhoderick; of Thomas Rutherford; of George H. Flagg; of Garrett J. Long; of Garrett J. Long, agent for James Long; of William Coffinbarger, and of Susan Engle's heirs, of West Virginia—to the Committee on War Claims.

The following petitions for an increase of compensation of fourth-class postmasters were severally referred to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads:

By Mr. BUTLER: Of Sundry citizens of Broylesville, Washington County, Tennessee.

By Mr. COWLES: Of citizens of Glade Creek, Alleghany County, North Carolina.

By Mr. HERMANN: Of citizens of Paynesville, and of Laurel, Oregon.

By Mr. HOGG: Of N. B. Davis and 83 others, of Wirt County, West Virginia.

By Mr. LEE: Of citizens of Louisa County, Virginia.

By Mr. H. G. TURNER: Of William Marshall and others, of Lowndes County, Georgia.

By Mr. WASHINGTON: Of J. R. Dunn and 20 others, of Turnersville, Robertson County, Tennessee.

The following petitions, praying for the enactment of a law providing temporary aid for common schools, to be disbursed on the basis of illiteracy, were severally referred to the Committee on Education:

By Mr. E. P. ALLEN: Of J. K. Fisher and 585 others, citizens of Hillsdale County, and of 381 citizens of Lenawee County, Michigan.

By Mr. ARNOLD: Of 280 citizens of Providence County, and of 147 citizens of Kent County, Rhode Island.

By Mr. CHEADLE: Of 364 citizens of Hamilton County, Indiana.

By Mr. JACKSON: Of 338 citizens of Beaver County, Pennsylvania.

By Mr. LAIDLAW: Of 252 citizens of Allegany County, New York.

By Mr. TRACEY: Of 147 citizens of Albany County, New York.

By Mr. WHEELER: The following petitions, heretofore referred in the Forty-eighth and Forty-ninth Congresses, and severally withdrawn from the files of the House:

Of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, South; of sundry citizens of Alabama; of Knights of Labor of Alabama; of American Local Science Association; of sundry citizens of Arkansas; of sundry citizens of California; of sundry citizens of Colorado; of sundry citizens of Connecticut; of sundry citizens of Delaware; of Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Delaware; of sundry citizens of District of Columbia; of Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the District of Columbia; of sundry citizens of Florida; of sundry citizens of Georgia; of sundry citizens of Illinois; of sundry citizens of Indiana; of Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Indiana; of State Teachers' Association of Iowa; of sundry citizens of Iowa; of Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Iowa; of Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Kansas; of sundry citizens of Kansas; of sundry citizens of Kentucky; of sundry citizens of Louisiana; of Ministerial Association of Louisiana; of Educational Society of Louisiana; of Legislature of the State of Louisiana; of sundry citizens of Maine; of sundry citizens of Maryland; of Baltimore Society of Friends, Maryland; of Baltimore Educational Society, Maryland; of sundry citizens of Massachusetts; of Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Massachusetts; of Moral Educational Society of Massachusetts; of Methodist Episcopal Church Conference of Massachusetts; of Methodist Women's Home of Foreign Missions of Massachusetts; of sundry citizens of Michigan; of sundry citizens of Minnesota; of Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Minnesota; of sundry citizens of Mississippi; of sundry citizens of Missouri; of St. Louis School Board, of Missouri; of sundry citizens of Montana; of sundry citizens of Nebraska; of Teachers' Institute of Hall County, Nebraska; of Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Nebraska; of sundry citizens of Nevada; of sundry citizens of New Hampshire; of Woman's Christian Temperance Union of New Hampshire; of sundry citizens of New Jersey; of sundry citizens of New Mexico; of M. A. Newell; of sundry citizens of New York; of Brooklyn Library Union, New York; of Woman's Christian Temperance Union of New York; of sundry citizens of North Carolina; of Rapides Educational Society of North Carolina; of Woman's Christian Temperance Union of North Carolina; of Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Ohio; of sundry citizens of Ohio; of sundry citizens of Oregon; of sundry citizens of Pennsylvania; of Pennsylvania Club, Pennsylvania; of school superintendents of Pennsylvania; of sundry citizens of Rhode Island; of sundry citizens of South Carolina; of Teachers' Institute of South Carolina; of sundry citizens of Tennessee; of Nashville Colored Institute, Tennessee; of Educational Society of Tennessee; of State Teachers' Association of Tennessee; of sundry citizens of Texas; of Teachers' Association of Texas; of Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Texas; of United Labor League of America; of sundry citizens of United States; of sundry citizens of Vermont; of sundry citizens of Virginia; of Legislature of the State of Virginia; of sundry citizens of West Virginia; of sundry citizens of Wisconsin; of State Teachers' Association of Wisconsin; of Henry A. Wise.

By Mr. WILKINS: Of 147 citizens of Licking County, Ohio.

The following petitions, asking for the passage of the bill prohibiting the manufacture, sale, and importation of all alcoholic beverages in the District of Columbia, were severally referred to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic:

By Mr. FARQUHAR (by request): Of 132 citizens of the Thirty-second district of New York.

By Mr. FRENCH (by request): Of 103 citizens of the Second district of Connecticut.

By Mr. GEST: Of 114 citizens of the Eleventh district of Illinois.

By Mr. HALL: Of citizens of the Twenty-sixth district of Pennsylvania.

By Mr. McCREARY: Of 100 citizens of the Eighth district of Kentucky.

By Mr. PETERS: Of 207 citizens of the Seventh district of Kansas.

By Mr. J. W. STEWART: Of M. R. Headle and others, citizens of the First Congressional district of Vermont.

By Mr. TOOLE: Of citizens of Helena and of Miles City, Mont.

By Mr. WEBER (by request): Of 144 citizens of the Thirty-third district of New York.

By Mr. WILBER (by request): Of 184 citizens of the Twenty-fourth district of New York.

SENATE.

TUESDAY, February 21, 1888.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. J. G. BUTLER, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

INTERNATIONAL GEODETIC ASSOCIATION.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith a report from the Secretary of State relative to an invitation from the Imperial German Government to the Government of the United States to become a party to the International Geodetic Association.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, February 20, 1888.

INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION OF SCIENCES AND INDUSTRY.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith, and commend to your favorable consideration, a report from the Secretary of State in relation to an invitation which this Government has received from the Belgian Government to participate in an International Exhibition of Sciences and Industry which will open at Brussels in the month of May next.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, February 20, 1888.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, transmitting, in response to a resolution of February 6, 1888, an estimate of the expense necessary to make the present channel from Grosse Point, in Lake St. Clair, to the entrance of the Detroit River, Michigan, navigable; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, transmitting, in answer to a resolution of January 9, 1888, certain information in reference to a bridge over the Missouri River between the cities of Omaha, Nebr., and Council Bluffs, Iowa, authorized by act of March 3, 1887; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting reports of chiefs of divisions and correspondence with the Speaker of the House of Representatives, requesting an additional appropriation of $60,000 for pay of assistant custodians and janitors; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

MILITARY CEMETERY AT MOUND CITY, KANS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, in response to a resolution of February 9, 1888, in relation to a military cemetery at Mound City, Kans.; which was read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. This communication, being in answer to a resolution submitted by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PLUMB], will lie on the table until he comes in.

Mr. PLUMB subsequently said: I should like to call attention to the report of the Secretary of War, in response to a resolution passed by the Senate some time since, concerning a military cemetery at Mound City, Kans. I ask the Secretary to read the letter of the Secretary of War.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The letter of the Secretary of War will be again read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington City, February 16, 1888.

The Secretary of War has the honor to report to the United States Senate, in response to the resolution of the 9th instant, asking whether the military cemetery at Mound City, Kans., is under the charge of this Department, and, if so, whether adequate means have been taken for its care and protection, that there is no national cemetery at Mound City, Kans., the one nearest that point being at Fort Scott. There is, however, a national cemetery at Mound City, Ill., under the care of this Department.

WILLIAM C. ENDICOTT,
Secretary of War.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore, United States Senate.

Mr. PLUMB. It will be noted that the Secretary of War misses the point of the resolution, apparently, and undoubtedly unconsciously. The inquiry, as he states in his reply, was as to "the military cemetery" at Mound City, and not as to a national cemetery there or elsewhere. I shall undertake to call his attention specially to this matter, and in the mean time ask that his reply lie on the table. There will be no necessity for printing it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The communication will lie on the table. The Chair lays before the Senate bills from the House of Representatives for reference.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 639) to authorize Commander John W. Philip, United States Navy, to accept a silver pitcher from the Government of the United States of Colombia was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The bill (H. R. 3470) to authorize the construction of bridges over the rivers St. Mary's, Satilla, Little Satilla, and Crooked, in the States of Georgia and Florida, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, presented a memorial of the General Assembly of the State of Iowa, relating to the election of United States Senators; which was referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Memorial and concurrent resolution relating to the election of United States Senators.

Whereas the proper time for the election of United States Senators is uncertain by reason of the ambiguity in the language of section 14, United States Statutes at Large, in providing that such election shall be held "on the second Tuesday after the meeting and organization of the State Legislature," leaving it uncertain which is intended, the temporary or permanent organization: Therefore,

Be it resolved by the senate (the house concurring), That our Senators and Representatives in Congress be, and they are hereby, requested to introduce and urge the adoption of an amendment to said section 14, so that the election of United States Senators shall occur on the second Tuesday after the permanent organization of the two houses of the Legislature.

Resolved, That the secretary of state be, and he is hereby, instructed to forward duly certified copies of the foregoing preamble and concurrent resolution to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

I hereby certify that the foregoing memorial and concurrent resolution has passed the senate and house of representatives of the Twenty-second General Assembly of the State of Iowa.

[SEAL.] FRANK D. JACKSON,
Secretary of State.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, presented a petition of 25 dairymen and dealers in and consumers of dairy products, citizens of Noble, Washington County, Iowa, praying that the import duty on salt be removed; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, praying for the suppression of the sale of alcoholic liquors in military and naval institutions of the United States; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented the petition of P. F. Milligan, of Washington, D. C., praying for legislation tending to prevent railroad accidents; which was referred to the Committee on Railroads.

Mr. DAVIS presented a petition of the Board of Trade of Minneapolis, Minn., praying that more land be secured for the post-office site at that place, and that $80,000 be appropriated therefor; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. PLATT presented a petition of 1,669 citizens of the District of Columbia, praying for prohibition in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. PADDOCK presented a petition of dairymen, citizens of Roca, Nebr., praying for the removal of the duty on salt; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of the United States Maimed Soldiers' League, praying for the passage of a substitute for Senate bill 1127, to increase the pensions of those who, having lost eyes, limbs, or the use of them, are totally helpless, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. SHERMAN presented a petition of the Northwestern Laundry Union, of Minneapolis, Minn., and a petition of the Northwestern Ohio Laundry Association, of Toledo, Ohio, praying for the passage of Senator MITCHELL'S bill to prohibit Chinese immigration; which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. MANDERSON. I present a petition signed, I think, by all the purchasers of the lands of the Omaha Indians placed in market some years ago. The petition attached to the signatures shows the value of the improvements made by these purchasers of the land. They set forth their condition as to their ability to pay for the lands under the existing law, and pray that the time allowed them for further payments may be extended by proper legislation. I hope the Committee on Indian Affairs, as the first payment will be due in June, 1888, will take speedy action upon this matter, and that they may see their way to granting the prayer of the petition. I move its reference to that committee.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. TELLER presented a petition of the authorities of the city of Colorado Springs, Colo., signed by the mayor and clerk, praying for the passage of a general appropriation bill providing for the erection of Government post-office buildings in towns of 3,000 inhabitants and upwards; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. CAMERON presented a petition of the commissioners for the improvement of the Ohio River and its tributaries, praying for the improvement of the Monongahela River; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented certain papers to accompany the bill (S. 2071) granting a pension to Mary S. Wells, heretofore introduced by him; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. McPHERSON presented a petition of 106 citizens of the First and Sixth Congressional districts of New Jersey, praying for prohibition in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. HISCOCK presented a petition of 43 surviving soldiers and sailors of the Union Army and Navy, citizens of the State of New York, praying for the passage of the per diem service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a petition of 114 citizens of the United States in behalf of the wool growing and manufacturing industries, praying the passage of a joint resolution correcting the erroneous classification of worsteds; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. SAWYER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 897) for the relief of Rev. Corydon Millard;
A bill (S. 1343) granting a pension to Cordelia Emery;
A bill (S. 900) for the relief of Mrs. Alice Croarkin;
A bill (S. 896) for the relief of Mrs. Louise Silvers;
A bill (S. 898) for the relief of Frank Oredsnick;
A bill (S. 1325) for the relief of John McKernan; and
A bill (S. 767) granting a pension to Robert H. Sturgess.

Mr. SAWYER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 884) granting a pension to Mary Morford, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. HAMPTON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1804) to authorize the Cheyenne Street Railroad Company to build its road on and across the Fort D. A. Russell military reservation, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the petition of Catharine K. Bailey, praying to be allowed a pension, submitted an adverse report thereon, which was agreed to; and the committee were discharged from the further consideration of the petition.

Mr. TURPIE, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the petition of Joseph Lewis, praying for restoration to the invalid-pension roll, submitted a report thereon, accompanied by a bill (S. 2084) to restore to the pension-roll the name of Joseph Lewis; which was read twice by its title.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 781) granting a pension to John Fagan, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1048) granting a pension to Francis Knapp, submitted an adverse report thereon, which was agreed to; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. SHERMAN, from the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (S. 251) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to overrule and reverse the decisions of all inferior officers of the Treasury Department in respect to all matters of account, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was agreed to, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. HAMPTON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1423) authorizing the President to appoint William English an officer in the regular Army of the United States, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was agreed to, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1302) granting the right of way to the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad Company across the United States military reservation for the cantonment on the Uncompahgre River, in the State of Colorado, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PADDOCK, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1016) granting a pension to Lieut. Adolph Henning, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was agreed to, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 470) granting a pension to Amanda F. Deck;
A bill (S. 468) granting a pension to Broadus G. Roberts;
A bill (S. 646) granting a pension to Robert Gray;
A bill (S. 1015) granting a pension to Margaret M. Collins; and
A bill (S. 625) granting a pension to George W. Schell.

Mr. STANFORD, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1646) to increase the appropriation for a public building at Troy, N. Y., reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 132) for the erection of a public building at New Orleans, La., reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1931) to increase the appropriation for the purchase of a site for a building for a post-office, court-house, and other offices, in San Francisco, Cal., reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1549) for the erection of a public building at Hudson, N. Y., reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4359) for the purchase of a site, including the building thereon, also for the erection of the necessary store-houses for the use of the office of the Chief Signal Officer of the Army, at the city of Washington, D. C., reported it with amendments.

Mr. DAVIS, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, submitted adverse reports thereon; which were agreed to, and the bills were severally postponed indefinitely:

A bill (S. 990) granting a pension to Frank Casart;
A bill (S. 991) granting a pension to Sarah E. Beeman;
A bill (S. 1555) granting a pension to Charles W. Gore; and
A bill (S. 469) for the relief of Patrick H. Estes, a veteran invalid soldier of the Mexican war.

Mr. DAVIS, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the petition of Maria Smith, widow of Cyrus T. Smith, private in Company I, Fourth Regiment Vermont Infantry Volunteers, praying for the passage of a special act of Congress granting her a supplemental pension from October 1, 1881, to November 7, 1885, submitted an adverse report thereon, which was agreed to, and the committee were discharged from the further consideration of the petition.

He also, from the same committee, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 1827) granting a pension to Philomelia L. Dark;
A bill (S. 1004) granting a pension to Anna Verneuil;
A bill (S. 1173) to increase the pension of Jeptha A. Jones;
A bill (S. 981) granting a pension to Elizabeth Bauer;
A bill (S. 1629) granting a pension to Erastus B. Burnham; and
A bill (S. 1556) granting a pension to Martin N. Kellogg.

SARAH C. MORRISON.

Mr. CAMERON. I am instructed by the Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5550) for the relief of Sarah C. Morrison, to report it favorably without amendment; and I ask for its immediate consideration.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Let the bill be read at length for information.

The Chief Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Sarah C. Morrison, during her lifetime, all pay and allowances due and to become due to George F. Morrison, lieutenant-commander United States Navy (retired), now in the Government Hospital for the Insane, as long as he may live; excepting therefrom the sum of $100 per annum, heretofore directed by the Secretary of the Navy to be paid to the superintendent of said hospital.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Is there a report?

Mr. CAMERON. I will state for the benefit of the Senator from Vermont that there is a report made by the House committee, which the Senate committee have adopted.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Let us hear it read.

Mr. CAMERON. I can state briefly what is in the report; but if the Senator prefers that it shall be read, I have no objection.

Mr. EDMUNDS. If the report is at the desk, let it be read.

Mr. SHERMAN. Let the report be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the following report, submitted by Mr. BOUTELLE, from the Committee on Naval Affairs of the House of Representatives:

The Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred bill H. R. 5550, for the relief of Sarah C. Morrison, having considered the subject, make the following report:

The committee find by the evidence submitted that Lieut. Commander George F. Morrison, United States Navy (retired), was admitted to the Government Hospital for the Insane January 26, 1880, when about twenty-eight years of age, at which time he was suffering from chronic mania, which had then existed for two years. Under date of January 13, 1883, W. W. Godding, Superintendent of the Government Hospital for the Insane, states that—

"The history of his mental disease has been that of gradually increasing dementia, which has progressed to that degree that his conversation is altogether incoherent, and his mind forms no intelligent conception of incidents transpiring around him. In my opinion the mental disability is permanent, and his restoration to a normal state of mind can not be looked for. His physical health has been in general very good during his entire residence at the hospital, and continues so at this time.

"The Navy Department has set aside the sum of $100 per annum out of Lieutenant-Commander Morrison's retired pay, which is paid in quarterly installments to the hospital for the purchase of clothing, etc., for him. The remainder of his pay is drawn, as I am informed, by his mother, Mrs. Sarah C. Morrison, of Dayton, Ohio, who is also his guardian.

"Very respectfully,

"W. W. GODDING, Superintendent."

The evidence submitted shows that the officer was never married, and that his mother is his nearest living relative. She is at present unable to use any of the pay for other purposes than for the son's maintenance, which requires but a small sum, and the committee recommend the passage of the bill H. R. 5550 with an amendment striking out the word "Treasury" and inserting the word "Navy," in line 3.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. EDMUNDS. I should like to inquire, if I may, reserving the right to object, whether this gentleman has any brothers or sisters who, by the laws of Ohio, where I infer his home is, would, in case of his death, be entitled to inherit in common with his mother, as is usual in most State laws.

Mr. SHERMAN. I know something about this case, because it is a matter of public notoriety. This officer was the only child of this lady, a lady very respectably connected in every way, but very poor, and she has by being appointed guardian been able to draw the whole salary, and pay a certain amount for his support, and the balance she has kept.

Mr. EDMUNDS. There is no person to inherit but the son?

Mr. SHERMAN. None at all. The report states that.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I have no objection to the bill.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is informed that there is no amendment reported by the committee.

Mr. CAMERON. There is no amendment. There was an amendment to the bill as introduced in the other House, substituting the Secretary of the Navy for the Secretary of the Treasury, but that was agreed to in the House.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ALLEGED OUTRAGE IN TEXAS.

Mr. HOAR, from the Committee on Privileges and Elections, reported the following resolutions; which were referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Privileges and Elections and any subcommittee thereof be authorized to complete the investigation into the circumstances of and connected with certain events alleged to have taken place in the State of Texas, and set forth in the petition of Stephen Hackworth and others, and for that purpose have power to employ a stenographer, to send for persons and papers, and have leave to sit during the sessions of the Senate; and that said subcommittee, for the purposes of such investigation, be a committee of the Senate to all intents and purposes.

Resolved, That the necessary expenses of said committee for said investigation be paid out of the appropriation for miscellaneous items of the contingent fund of the Senate upon vouchers to be approved by the chairman thereof and by the chairman of the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. CULLOM introduced a bill (S. 2085) to provide for protecting the navigation of the Illinois River by extending the system of beacon lights to said river; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. VOORHEES. I was under the impression yesterday morning that I had already introduced a bill for the erection of a public building at Madison, Ind., and I then presented a paper to accompany that bill. I find that I was under a mistake, and I now ask leave to introduce the bill, and that it be referred, with the accompanying papers, to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

A bill (S. 2086) to provide for the erection of a public building for the use of the post-office and Government offices at the city of Madison, in the State of Indiana; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. SHERMAN introduced a bill (S. 2087) granting a pension to Julia B. McComb; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2088) granting a pension to Mattie V. Boothe and Mary M. Boothe; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. ALLISON introduced a bill (S. 2089) for the relief of Mrs. Elizabeth White; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2090) for the relief of Hiram W. Love; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers and the papers on file relative to the case, referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. DAWES (by request) introduced a bill (S. 2091) granting a pension to Frances H. Plummer; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. TURPIE introduced a bill (S. 2092) granting a pension to William H. Daly; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. MANDERSON introduced a bill (S. 2093) to create a port of delivery at Lincoln, Nebr., in the district of New Orleans, La.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. CAMERON introduced a bill (S. 2094) to remove the charge of desertion from the record of Isaac W. Rhawn; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. CHANDLER introduced a bill (S. 2095) regulating the appointment of assistant naval constructors; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. PLATT introduced a bill (S. 2096) to provide for the establishment of an experimental grass and forage-plant farm, and for the conducting of experiments relating to grasses and forage plants; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. PLATT. I move the reference of the bill to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, and on the question of reference I should like to say a few words. I see that the chairman of the committee is not present, but I suppose he may read in the RECORD the few remarks which I shall make. I should like to call the attention of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry to the importance of this bill. It seems to me of very much more importance than upon first thought will appear.

The grass crop of this country is its most valuable crop and amounts to over a thousand million dollars a year, to say the least. The grass crop is really the foundation of all our animal food. The Scripture says that "all flesh is grass," and it is so in its most literal sense. The quality and quantity of our meats, our wool, our butter, our cheese, and our milk very largely depend upon the kind and quality of grass which is cultivated throughout the United States. To put it tersely, good grass means good beef, and good mutton, and good pork, and good butter, and good cheese, and good milk.

Very little attention has been paid to the subject of grasses in the past by our Agricultural Department or by our agriculturists. The cereals have had their share of scientific investigation and of practical investigation to determine how the best wheat, and the best corn, and the best oats, and the best barley might be grown in the United States; and yet there has been a very general neglect of this matter of the cultivation and development of the best qualities of grass and the qualities of grass best adapted to the soil and conditions of climate in the different sections of our country.

My attention was called to this matter and my interest was excited in it by the very interesting experiments made at our agricultural experiment station in Connecticut, and ever since my attention was first called to it the importance of the subject has grown upon me.

I first thought that I would introduce a bill for the establishment of an experimental grass and forage-plant farm near Washington; but when I came to talk with other Senators I was convinced that the place for it is in the West; that the comparatively arid regions of the West are those which need most the investigation and experimentation of the Agricultural Department upon the subject. So my bill provides for the purchase of a farm in the vicinity of the one hundredth meridian, where extended experiments are to be carried on; and it also authorizes the Commissioner of Agriculture, without the purchase of land or going into it to the extent which a farm would involve, to carry on experimentation in relation to the matter of grasses near the city of Washington, and to communicate the result of his experiments to the different agricultural colleges and to agriculturists throughout the land.

I think that the more the Committee on Agriculture and all Senators think of this they will see the importance of it. We have been spending about a hundred thousand dollars a year on vegetable and garden seeds, but this transcends in importance, as it seems to me, all the present operations of the Agricultural Department.

I move that the bill be referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. PLUMB. Before that reference is made, I wish to state, for the benefit of the Senator and of the Senate, that this subject was presented to the Appropriations Committee last year very intelligently by Mr. Vasey, the botanist of the Agricultural Department. We looked up the record of his experiments that he had already made and were so much impressed by it that we inserted an item in the agricultural appropriation bill for this purpose, having special reference, however, to the question as it related to the extreme western portion of the country. But in the conference which resulted upon the bill the House conferees declined to yield upon it, and the appropriation was therefore lost.

The committee, I think, was quite thoroughly impressed with the belief that the experiments which had been already made should be supplemented by others, and that the field of experimentation should be enlarged, having reference to the great value of this product and the fact that it had not heretofore received the attention which it seemed to require, either in reference to the plains country, as it may be called, or to any portion of the country, perhaps.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. HISCOCK introduced a bill (S. 2097) to erect a public building at Yonkers, N. Y.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2098) for the erection and completion of a monument to the memory of the victims of the prison-ships, at Fort Greene, Brooklyn; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. MCPHERSON (by request) introduced a bill (S. 2099) for the relief of Wilbur F. Cogswell; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. BLAIR introduced a bill (S. 2100) granting a pension to Charles Tidmarsh; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 2101) granting a pension to Daniel K. Smith; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. BUTLER introduced a bill (S. 2102) for the relief of the heirs of Hamilton Slawson, jr.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

AMENDMENT TO A BILL.

Mr. SHERMAN submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him as a substitute for the bill (S. 1217) to establish in the Department of the Treasury a bureau on adulteration, and to provide for the maintenance thereof, and to regulate or prohibit the importation, manufacture, and sale of adulterated articles of food and drugs; which was referred to the Committee on Finance, and ordered to be printed.

NAVAL EMPLOYÉS OF FISH COMMISSION.

Mr. CHANDLER submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Navy be directed to inform the Senate what officers and men of the Navy are now engaged in performing work for the Fish Commission, and what annual expense is thereby occasioned to the Government; also, what has ordinarily heretofore been the force so employed and its cost to the Government since the establishment of the commission.

EXPENDITURES OF FISH COMMISSION.

Mr. CHANDLER submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries be directed to report to the Senate the expenditures of the Fish Commission for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1887, and from that date to February 1, 1888; the number of persons employed and the salaries paid; the property held by the commission, its cost, value, and location; the stations occupied by the commission; and also a statement of the appropriations which have been made annually for the work of the commission since its establishment.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had yesterday signed the act (S. 1022) to relinquish the interest of the United States in certain lands in Kansas.

THE VIRGINIUS INDEMNITY FUND.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed:

To the Senate of the United States:

I transmit herewith a report furnished by the Secretary of State, in response to a resolution of the Senate of the 2d instant, making inquiry respecting the present condition of the Virginius indemnity fund.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, February 21, 1888.

TREATMENT OF PETITIONS.

Mr. HARRIS. I give notice that I will to-morrow move to amend Rule VII by striking out of the first clause the words—

The presentation of petitions and memorials.

And amend clauses 3 and 4, making them one clause, to read as follows:

Before any petition or memorial shall be received it shall be signed by the petitioner or memorialist, and a brief statement of its contents indorsed thereon by the Senator presenting it. It shall then be filed with the Secretary, who shall journalize and note its reference to the proper committee; it shall also be noted in the RECORD, but it shall be in order at any time during the call for "concurrent and other resolutions" to move to change any such reference.

But no petition or memorial or other paper signed by citizens or subjects of a foreign power shall be received unless the same be transmitted to the Senate by the President.

I send to the desk the notice required by the rule of an intended change of rules and ask that it be printed and referred to the Committee on Rules.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be printed and referred to the Committee on Rules.

DISTRIBUTION OF SURPLUS DOCUMENTS.

Mr. VEST submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved, That the Secretary and the Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to deliver to the Department of the Interior such surplus public documents now in the folding-rooms, document-rooms, committee-rooms, the library, and other offices under their care as are not appropriated under the rules and regulations of the Senate to the use of Senators in the Fiftieth Congress, and as are not required for the use of the library, the committee-rooms, and other offices of the Senate; and the Secretary of the Interior shall distribute such documents to public, university, college, and school libraries in the several States and Territories, for the purpose of supplying deficiencies in the same, or shall sell them to parties desiring to purchase, under the provisions of joint resolution of March 3, 1887, providing for the sale of public documents.

THE WASHINGTON CABLE ELECTRIC RAILWAY.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I move now that the Senate proceed to continue the consideration of Senate bill 931.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Are there further resolutions, concurrent or other?

Mr. SHERMAN. The bill referred to by the Senator from Virginia will come up at 2 o'clock as the regular order, it being the unfinished business. I trust he will allow us to have one hour to go over the Calendar. There are two or three cases early on the Calendar that ought to be disposed of at once.

Mr. MANDERSON. The general pension bill is the special order at 2 o'clock.

Mr. SHERMAN. I think the unfinished business may as well go over to such time as the Senator from Virginia may suggest, and let us go on with the Calendar.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I do not propose to lose the time allotted to this bill by debating the order of business. Does the Senator from Ohio, having been Presiding Officer of the Senate, say that the bill comes up at 2 o'clock?

Mr. SHERMAN. There is no doubt about it. It comes up as unfinished business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill alluded to will come up at 2 o'clock as the unfinished business, notwithstanding the special order.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. My position is that at 2 o'clock there is a special order, and I do not want to appear as antagonizing a pension bill. I can not see, therefore, why the Senator from Ohio should not allow this bill to come up now and be disposed of so that we can pension those who should receive pensions.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senate agree to the motion of the Senator from Virginia?

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 931) to incorporate the Washington Cable Electric Railway of the District of Columbia, the pending question being on the amendment reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia, in section 1, line 107, to strike out the words "engineer commissioner" and insert "commissioners;" and in line 108, after the word "District," to insert "of Columbia;" so as to read:

Said railway shall be constructed of good materials and in a substantial manner, with the rails of American manufacture and of the most approved patterns, laid upon an even surface with the pavement of the street, with the gauge to correspond with that of other city railroads, all to be approved by the commissioners of the District of Columbia.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia was, in section 1, line 111, to strike out the word "order" and insert "repair;" and in line 113, before the word "aforesaid," to strike out "engineer commissioner" and insert "commissioners;" so as to read:

The tracks of said railway, the space between the tracks, and two feet beyond the outer rails thereof, which this franchise is intended to cover, shall be at all times kept by said corporation well paved and in good repair at its own expense, and subject to the approval of the commissioners aforesaid.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 1, line 113, after the word "aforesaid," to insert:

And if the corporation shall fail to make the necessary repairs within ten days after notice by the commissioners, the repairs shall be made by the commissioners, and the cost of such repairs be recovered by the commissioners before any court of competent jurisdiction.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 1, line 127, to strike out "engineer commissioner" and insert "commissioners aforesaid;" so as to read:

And said sewer connections shall have such traps or other devices as may be required by the commissioners aforesaid.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 1, line 132, to strike out "engineer commissioner" and insert "commissioners;" in line 134, after the words "boiler house," to insert "or houses;" and in line 135, before the word "operation," to strke out "successful;" so as to read:

It shall also be lawful for said corporation, its successors or assigns, to erect and maintain, at such convenient and suitable points along its lines as may seem most desirable to the board of directors of said corporation, and subject to the approval of the commissioners of the District, an engine house or houses, boiler house or houses, and all other buildings necessary for the operation of a cable or electric-motor railroad.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in section 2, line 2, after the word "exceed," to strike out "three million" and insert "two million five hundred thousand;" so as to read:

SEC. 2. That the capital stock of said company shall not exceed $2,500,000, and be not less than $1,000,000, in shares of $50 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, line 19, after the word "and," to strike out "the highest bidder shall be taken to be;" in line 21, after the word "due," to insert "shall be taken as the highest bidder), and the sale shall be conducted according to;" and in line 23, before the word "such," to strike out "under;" so as to read:

And if any stockholder shall refuse or neglect to pay any installment as aforesaid, or as required by a resolution of the board of directors, after reasonable notice of the same, the said board of directors may sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, so many shares of his stock as shall pay said installment (and the person who offers to purchase the least number of shares for the assessment due shall be taken as the highest bidder), and the sale shall be conducted according to such general regulations as may be adopted in the by-laws of said company.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, line 36, to strike out "engineer commissioner" and insert "commissioners," and in line 39, after the word "bonds" to insert:

Or stock over and above the minimum hereinbefore mentioned, provided the total bonds and stock of the company shall not exceed at any time in amount $2,500,000, the bonds to be.

So as to read:

The said company shall buy, lease, construct, and maintain passenger-rooms, ticket-offices, workshops, depots, lands, and buildings as they may deem necessary, at such points along its line as may be approved by the commissioners of the District, and as the business of the railway and the convenience of the public may require; and the said corporation shall have the right to issue bonds or stock over and above the minimum hereinbefore mentioned, provided the total bonds and stock of the company shall not exceed at any time in amount $2,500,000, the bonds to be secured by mortgage of its franchise and property, real and personal.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, line 44, after the word "personal" to strike out "and the said bonds to be issued shall not exceed $40,000 for each mile of construction of single track."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in section 2, line 46, after the word "provided," to strike out "within" and insert "that within;" so as to read:

Provided, That within thirty days after the passage of this act the corporators named in the first section, their associates, successors, or assigns, or a majority of them, or if any refuse or neglect to act, then a majority of the remainder, shall cause books of subscription to the capital stock of said company to be opened.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in section 2, line 66, after the word "subscribing," to insert "and the additional installments hereinbefore provided for;" in line 68, before the word "national," to strike out "established;" and in the same line, after the word "national," to strike out "banking house" and insert "bank;" so as to read:

Provided further, That nothing shall be received in payment of the 10 per cent. at the time of subscribing and the additional installments hereinbefore provided for except lawful money or certified checks from any national bank.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in section 2, line 77, before the word "newspapers," to strike out "public" and insert "daily;" so as to read:

And when the books of subscription to the capital stock of said company shall be closed, the corporators named in the first section, their associates, successors, or assigns, or a majority of them, and in case any of them refuse or neglect to act, then a majority of the remainder, shall, within twenty days thereafter, call the first meeting of the stockholders of said company, to meet within ten days thereafter, for the choice of directors, of which public notice shall be given for five days in two daily newspapers published in the city of Washington; and in all meetings of the stockholders each share shall entitle the holder to one vote, to be given in person or by proxy.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to add to section 2 the following additional proviso:

Provided, however, That no bonds shall be issued hereunder until at least $500,000 shall have been actually paid into the treasury of the company upon stock subscriptions.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in section 3, line 4, after the words "year, and," to strike out "till others" and insert "until their successors;" and in line 5, after the word "qualified," to strike out "to take their places as directors;" so as to read:

SEC. 3. That the government and direction of the affairs of the company shall be vested in the board of directors, nine in number, who shall be stockholders of record, and who shall hold their office for one year, and until their successors are duly elected and qualified; and the said directors (a majority of whom shall be a quorum) shall elect one of their number to be president of the board, who shall be president of the company.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in section 3, after the word "stockholders," at the end of line 25, to strike out "said company shall have at all times the free and uninterrupted use of the roadway, and if" and insert "if;" and in line 28, after the word "mischieveously," to strike out "and" and insert "or;" and in line 35, after the word "dollars," to strike out "to said company;" so as to read:

If any person or persons shall willfully, mischievously, or unnecessarily obstruct or impede the passage of the cars of said railway with a vehicle or vehicles, or otherwise, or in any manner molest or interfere with passengers or operatives while in transit, or destroy or injure the tracks or cars of said railway, depots, stations, or other property belonging to said railway, the person or persons so offending shall forfeit and pay for each offense not less than $25 nor more than $100, to be recovered as other fines and penalties of said District, and shall remain liable, in addition to said penalty, for any loss or damage occasioned by his or her or their acts as aforesaid.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in section 3, after the word "aforesaid," at the end of line 38, to strike out the following clause:

No person shall be prohibited the right to travel on the cars of said road or ejected therefrom by the company's employés for any other cause than that of being drunk, disorderly, unclean, or contagiously diseased, for the use of obscene or profane language, or refusing to pay the legal fare, or to comply with the lawful regulations of the company.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 3, line 50, before the word "interrupt," to insert "unnecessarily," and in line 51, after the word "construction," to insert "or operation;" so as to read:

Provided, That it shall not unnecessarily interrupt the travel of such other railways in such construction or operation.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out section 4, in the following words:

SEC. 4. That this act may at any time be altered, amended, or repealed by the Congress of the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out section 5, as follows:

SEC. 5. That the president and secretary of said company shall report to Congress at the commencement of each session the names of all the stockholders therein and the amount of stock held by each, together with a detailed statement of receipts and expenditures of the company, and such reports shall be verified by the affidavits of said officers.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

SEC. 5. The said Washington Cable Electric Railway shall, on or before the 15th day of January of each year, make a report to Congress of the names of all the stockholders therein, and the amount of stock held by each, together with a detailed statement of the receipts and expenditures, from whatever source, and on whatever account, for the preceding year ending December 31, which report shall be verified by the affidavit of the president and secretary of said company, and if said report is not made at the time specified, or within ten days thereafter, it shall be the duty of the commissioners to cause proceedings to be instituted to forfeit this charter; and said company shall pay to the District of Columbia, as taxes for each year, 4 per cent. of its gross earnings for the preceding year, as shown by said verified statement, which amount shall be payable to the collector of taxes at the times and in the manner that other taxes are now due and payable, and subject to the same penalties on arrears; and the franchise and property of said company, both real and personal, to a sufficient amount, may be seized and sold in satisfaction thereof, as now provided by law for the sale of other property for taxes; and said per cent. of its gross earnings shall be in lieu of all other assessments of taxes of whatsoever character upon its personal property, including its cars and motive power, but the real estate of the company may be taxed as other real estate in the District: Provided, That the tracks of the company shall not be taxed as real estate.

Mr. HOAR. I move to amend the amendment by adding:

And that the shares in said corporation shall be included in the valuation of the personal property of the owner for purposes of taxation, as other personal property.

Mr. SPOONER. I suggest to the Senator from Massachusetts whether it would not be better to insert the word "may" in lieu of the word "shall," so as to let the law of the domicile control.

Mr. HOAR. That is the purpose of the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, the word "may" will be substituted for "shall," and the amendment as modified will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to add to the amendment of the committee the following:

And that the shares in said corporation may be included in the valuation of the personal property of the owner for purposes of taxation, as other personal property.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the committee as amended.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I move to amend, in section 5, line 4, after the word "each," by inserting "at the cash value thereof."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion of the Senator from Delaware is to amend the amendment of the committee.

Mr. SAULSBURY. It is provided here that the stock shall be assessed as personal property. There is nothing, so far as I can see, to determine what the actual valuation of the stock shall be. It ought to be assessed at its cash value; so I propose to insert in line 4 the words "at the cash value thereof."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GORMAN. I move to strike out "four" and insert "ten" as the per cent. of gross receipts to be paid.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 13 of the proposed amendment, before the words "per cent.," it is proposed to strike out "four" and insert "ten;" so as to read:

And said company shall pay to the District of Columbia, as taxes for each year, 10 per cent. of its gross earnings for the preceding year, as shown by said verified statement, which amount shall be payable to the collector of taxes at the times and in the manner that other taxes are now due and payable, and subject to the same penalties on arrears.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. The animus of that amendment is apparent. I beg pardon for saying a word before I address the Chair. Mr. President, 10 per cent. for the privilege, if it be a wrong privilege, will not make it good. If it be a right one, then do not make the grantees pay 10 per cent. for the purpose of exercising this privilege.

Mr. GORMAN. I offer this amendment because I think it is a proposition which commends itself to the tax-payers of this city. It is one-half the amount that other cities have taxed such companies for a like privilege, and a privilege not so valuable as this. The city of Baltimore, for the great privilege of the roads using the streets of that city, taxed them 20 per cent. of the gross receipts, and the result was that from the gross receipts of one line of street railroad we built a magnificent park.

Mr. SPOONER. Allow me to ask a question.

Mr. GORMAN. Certainly.

Mr. SPOONER. Was that rate of taxation imposed at the time the franchise was granted or afterwards?

Mr. GORMAN. At the time the franchise was granted, and from that day to this there is not a street railroad in the city running across the town in the sparsely settled sections that will fill up on which there is a tax of less than 9 per cent. of the gross receipts. These are the taxes upon our street railroads in Baltimore.

In the city of Philadelphia, if I am not mistaken, 6 per cent. of the gross receipts of the street railroad companies has been exacted for the purpose of purifying the streets and keeping up the parks of the city.

The history of New York in relation to such enterprises in the last few years has convinced everybody that for the great privilege of using the highways, the almost exclusive use of them, a monopoly of them, a rate of tax of 10 per cent. on the gross receipts is moderate, is less upon the corporations than the ordinary tax of a cent on the hundred dollars' worth of property owned by the citizen. I understand, and I believe it to be true, that in every city of the Union where these privileges are now being granted a much more onerous tax than is proposed by my amendment is considered just in the interest of the people. Why is it that in Washington, running through the very center and heart of the city, a cable road (which is a little more expensive to inaugurate but more valuable when once introduced), passing over streets that it has cost millions of dollars to grade and improve, can not be required to pay a fair tax? It is contrary, as I have said, to the experience of every other city on the Atlantic coast that has legislated on these matters of late years.

Mr. SPOONER. The Committee on the District of Columbia was entirely willing, and not only willing but anxious that an adequate tax should be imposed upon this corporation; and in view of the fact that such a railway is at best somewhat experimental, that the cost of construction is ten times the cost of constructing the ordinary street railway, the committee was inclined to think that 4 per cent. tax on the gross receipts at the outset would be an adequate tax. There is no reason to expect that for some years to come, taking into account the line of route of this railroad, that its earnings will be extraordinary. I think the expenses ordinarily of operating such railroads would be about 50 per cent., so that a tax of 4 per cent. upon the gross earnings would be equivalent to a tax of 8 per cent. on the net receipts of the corporation; and this rate was fixed in view of the fact that the bill reserved to Congress the right, which it may exercise of course at any time, and which it ought to exercise whenever the earnings of this company make it appear that it was not paying a proper tax, to increase this rate.

Mr. GORMAN. Will the Senator from Wisconsin permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. SPOONER. Certainly.

Mr. GORMAN. I make the statement that there is not a city with a population of 200,000 where such a charter is granted where, if it were put up for sale at auction, as is being done now with the railroads in the city of New York, you would not receive for this charter at least a half million dollars bonus besides agreeing to pay the rate of 10 per cent. on the gross proceeds. Let me say to the Senator from Wisconsin that I would stake my reputation as a business man that if this act were passed authorizing the District commissioners to offer the franchise at public sale it would bring a bonus of half a million dollars with the condition that the corporators should pay 10 per cent. tax on the gross receipts.

I have no disposition to interfere with the enterprise of the gentlemen who are getting up this scheme; but my amendment is simply to make them pay, after they have received this valuable franchise, a fair equivalent for it to the city, for one half the money expended by the District is raised by taxation, the Government paying one half and the other half being paid by the citizens of Washington.

Mr. SPOONER. I am not in a position to accurately judge whether the Senator from Maryland would be in danger of losing his reputation if he staked it as he proposes to do or not. His statement, so far as relates to the street horse-railway companies in the city of New York, and perhaps Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, and the larger cities, may be true, based upon experience. As to cable railroad companies I think it can not be true, for there are comparatively few such railroads in operation in the United States.

The committee desires that this company shall be thoroughly taxed, that it shall pay a fair tax, a just tax. We have provided in this bill that it shall pay a tax on all its real estate, except that which is necessarily used in connection with the operation of the road. This tax of 4 per cent. on gross earnings is only in lieu of other taxes on personal property.

The Senator from Maryland can not tell what the earnings of this corporation will be, or what its financial status will be, nor can I, nor could the committee. Knowing that the expenditure per mile of construction was very great, nearly $100,000, and guarding in every possible way, as the committee did, against the franchise being used for any purpose other than the construction and operation of the road, we thought that we had better put this tax at 4 per cent. at the outset, considering it reasonable to assume that Congress would increase it if the result should demonstrate that it ought to be increased.

I do not know what this franchise would sell for at auction. We did not suppose it would be extremely safe for the Government of the United States to be selling at auction, as horses and watches are sold, this franchise, and therefore did not resort to that as a basis of calculating this tax. I know that in the State in which I reside our tax upon the gross earnings of the steam railroad companies of the State is 4 per cent., and we have found it to be abundant and to have given a larger revenue each year than the tax levied upon an ad valorem basis in other States.

Mr. COCKRELL. I would suggest to the Senator that it would be a mere matter of justice, it seems to me, in adjusting this tax, that for the first year or two years the rate of taxation should not be as high as it should be afterwards. For the first two or three years there will probably be a very small profit off the investment, and therefore a smaller tax would be more onerous then than a much larger tax would be after the road was completed and in good running business condition.

Mr. SPOONER. Certainly.

Mr. COCKRELL. And therefore there ought to be for the first and second years a certain percentage of tax, and after that it ought to be decidedly larger.

Mr. SPOONER. That assumes, what the Senator can not know, that the growth of the business will be in two years such as to warrant the imposition of a larger tax. We can tell nothing about the future. The right is reserved to Congress, as it shall be advised from time to time and as the necessity shall exist, to increase this tax; and it is reasonable, I think, to suppose that, if the earnings of this corporation should be found to be such as to warrant it, Congress would be found ready to increase the tax and require the corporation to bear its fair proportion of the public burdens. It is because we thought the tax at the outset should be comparatively low that the power is reserved to Congress to increase the rate from time to time whenever the situation demands it; that we fixed the rate at 4 per cent. instead of 8 or 10.

Mr. COCKRELL. Does the Senator think Congress would be likely to increase this tax after having fixed it once at 4 per cent.? Would the company not come in and claim that it had a vested right which could not be disturbed, and that to raise the tax would be an infringement of their rights? Has the legislation of Congress in regard to corporations in the District of Columbia been such as to induce the Senator to believe that Congress would turn around and impose an additional tax over and above what is fixed in this charter?

Mr. SPOONER. It is due to my estimate of the intelligence of Congress to say that I can not for a moment entertain the thought that Congress would be deterred from imposing an additional tax by the claim that there was a vested right, when the act itself expressly reserved the right to Congress to impose an additional tax whenever it saw fit. I do not know that Congress has in the past done what it should have done as to the taxation of corporations. I think it has not. I think in this District the taxation has been upon a false and erroneous basis; but this bill contains a new departure in that respect. Instead of an attempt to assess by miles the tracks of this corporation, we propose a tax on its gross earnings, and I think we may safely leave Congress to take care of this matter in the future.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. GORMAN. I accept the suggestion of the Senator from Missouri, that after two years the tax shall be 10 per cent.

Mr. SPOONER. I desire while the Senator is drawing his amendment to call attention to a manifest verbal error in the first line of section 5. The section reads:

> The said Washington Cable Electric Railway shall, on or before the 15th day of January of each year, make a report to Congress.

I ask that the word "company" be inserted after the word "railway."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That modification will be made if there be no objection.

Mr. GORMAN. I move to insert after the word "taxes," in line 13 of the amendment of the committee, the words:

> For the first two years after the completion of the railroad 4 per cent., and each year thereafter 10 per cent.

Mr. HOAR. I had proposed to move, in order to cover the suggestion made by the Senator from Missouri, to add after the word "arrears," in the seventeenth line—

> Said rate of taxation may be hereafter increased or reduced in the discretion of Congress—

So as to expressly reserve the power to change the rate of taxation. It would be rather a harsh proceeding to impose a tax of 10 per cent. of the gross earnings as a tax four years ahead to be absolutely paid. I think that would leave the matter to be dealt with. If 4 per cent. should be insufficient it would show the persons who accept the act that the Government contemplates making a change hereafter.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Massachusetts propose an amendment?

Mr. HOAR. I understand another amendment is now pending, proposed by the Senator from Maryland. If that be rejected, I shall propose this.

Mr. SPOONER. There will be no objection to that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment of the Senator from Maryland will be reported.

The SECRETARY. In line 13, after the word "taxes," it is proposed to strike out "for each year 4 per cent.," and insert—

> For the first two years after the completion of the road, 4 per cent., and for each year thereafter 10 per cent.

Mr. BLAIR. I understand that this is a charter which covers the whole city, and the completion of the road is likely to occupy a long time; and in that view I ask when the amendment will become operative?

Mr. SPOONER. I was about to say that while I do not wish to take the time of the Senate in discussing this amendment, I hope it will not be adopted for two or three reasons; among others that suggested by the Senator from New Hampshire. A fixed time is allowed by the bill for the completion of this railway. So this amendment is not adapted to the general provisions of the bill.

Another thing; it is manifestly impossible for Congress with any accuracy to assume that the earnings of this corporation in three years will render 10 per cent. a fair rate of taxation in contradistinction to 4 the first year and the second year; and it is expected that from time to time the rate of taxation will be changed, and that is one theory on which the right to alter and amend is reserved. If this is found to be a success, from time to time the corporation will be authorized and perhaps required to extend its lines beyond the limits of the city in order to afford facilities in that direction; and I think altogether, while we all desire that the company should be properly taxed, this matter had better be left as the committee has left it, 4 per cent. for the present, with the right of Congress to increase it.

Mr. MCPHERSON. Mr. President, the Congress of the United States have full charge and jurisdiction over the affairs of the city of Washington. Any municipal government that we have here is simply a creature of Congress, and therefore there is no power in the world lodged in the people of the District of Columbia to protect their own rights and interests. They are tax-payers; they pay into the public Treasury every year a large amount of money to keep the streets of Washington in good repair and condition. Here is a corporation asking the privilege of occupying the streets, of tearing them up, of subjecting the people of the District to a great deal of inconvenience, and the streets themselves to a great deal of expense to repair them and replace them.

Mr. SPOONER. The Senator will allow me to say that the bill requires the corporation to make those repairs and keep the streets in repair at its own expense.

Mr. MCPHERSON. I understand that; but unless all experience is at fault there never was a street railroad company in any city at any time that ever conformed to the ordinances of the city made in respect to such matters.

Mr. SPOONER. Anticipating that possibly that might be so elsewhere, in this case this bill provides that on complaint being made against this corporation, within so many days they must make the repairs required by the commissioners of the District, and if not, that they shall be made by and under the supervision of the commissioners at the expense of the corporation.

Mr. MCPHERSON. So much the better for that. I hope that is well guarded.

Here is a corporation that takes possession of the streets of the city of Washington, running tracks from one end of the city to the other, passing through a densely populated part of the city, and with the power hereafter to extend the lines ad libitum. They may go out to any part of the city where the population goes, for the purpose of making profit to themselves, and at the same time benefiting, as I know such roads do, the people.

I would not be strenuous for compelling these corporations to pay large taxes provided that the rates of fare over their railroads were made so low that the people could receive benefit by reason of low fares on the roads; but you propose in this bill to grant this company the power to charge 5 cents for each passenger. From every passenger that boards a car they can exact 5 cents fare. In the city of New York you may start from the Battery and you can go 8 miles away up into the northern part of the city, into the country, indeed, for a single fare of 5 cents. The fare is 5 cents upon all the surface street-car lines in the city of New York. The fare has been reduced in the city of Philadelphia; the same is true in the city of Chicago; but here we propose to-day to grant a corporation the power to occupy practically the best part of the city of Washington and charge 5 cents for all passengers, qualifying them to issue stock and bonds to the amount of $5,000,000—$2,500,000 of bonds and $2,500,000 of stock—when the railroad will certainly never cost one-third of that amount, and then it is proposed to tax them only 4 per cent. on their gross receipts.

If they really have $5,000,000 invested in this property, they certainly ought to be compelled to pay taxes on that money invested in the stock and bonds of the road in the same manner and to the same extent that I am compelled to pay on my real estate in this District. If I or any other citizen of this District—for I claim to be a citizen here in a certain sense—forego the right to use these public streets and suffer the inconvenience this railroad will cause to the people of Washington, then I submit that with this great franchise, with these privileges, with this profitable enterprise that they engage in, they ought to be compelled to pay taxes the same as any individual in the city pays.

To-day if the street railroads of the city of New York, including the elevated lines, were a subject of competition by persons desiring to invest their money in those enterprises—for they are practically a monopoly, and so would also this railroad become a monopoly—those franchises would sell for 20 per cent. annually of the gross receipts of the roads. Now, we propose in the city of Washington to grant a corporation the power to occupy the streets, to go anywhere over the city, because that is the meaning of it ultimately, and the citizens have not even the poor remuneration of low fare.

Mr. SPOONER. I do not suppose the Senator means to be understood that this bill authorizes the corporation to go anywhere over the city?

Mr. MCPHERSON. It proposes to go over a variety of lines, as the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] yesterday showed me on the map, so that there is but really little left in the city of Washington that it would be desirable to occupy except the lines occupied by the proposed cable railroad.

The policy to-day pursued by all the cities of this country is to compel these companies that occupy the public streets for improvements of this character to pay for them and to contribute a fair share to the annual taxes of the city. I think the Senator from Maryland is exceedingly liberal to the company when he asks them to only pay 4 per cent. for the first two years and then 10 per cent. afterwards. He ought to have asked that they pay 20 per cent. instead of 10, and they would willingly pay it if we insisted on it; or if they would not do that rather than suffer the loss of their charter, there are other people who would like to have the opportunity of paying 20 per cent. of their gross receipts and take this valuable franchise which it is proposed to give to this corporation.

Mr. GIBSON. Mr. President, there is no time within which this railway must be completed, and I would therefore suggest to the Senator from Maryland that his amendment apply to the road as it is completed by sections.

Mr. SPOONER. If the Senator will allow me to have his attention I think I can show him that he is mistaken. Line 136 of section 1 provides:

> The main line of said road shall be completed within two and its branches within four years from the passage of this act.

Mr. GIBSON. The time is specified?

Mr. SPOONER. Yes, sir.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask permission to modify my amendment to cover the objection made by the Senator from New Hampshire. I will make it read:

> For the first four years 4 per cent. per annum, and thereafter 10 per cent.

Mr. SPOONER. It was impossible to hear what the Senator said in this part of the Chamber.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The proposed modification will be reported from the desk.

The SECRETARY. In line 13 of the committee's amendment, after the word "taxes," it is proposed to strike out "for each year 4 per cent." and insert:

> For the first four years 4 per cent. of its gross receipts per annum, and thereafter 10 per cent.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Mr. President, by reason of service upon the Committee on the District of Columbia in the last Congress, by which this bill was very elaborately considered, as the President knows, I am not altogether ignorant of the provisions of the bill under consideration, nor of the objects sought to be effected and attained by its passage.

We had as well be frank about this matter. The city of Washington to-day, so far as its facilities for travel by street railway are concerned, is in the hands of as grasping and grinding a monopoly as ever afflicted any community on earth. They have made as heavy dividends and they have extorted as much money from a public to whom they have given as indecent facilities as were ever known in this or in any other country.

That this proposed road, if this bill pass, may become a monopoly, I think altogether probable; but these people will be the victims of what they have long endured, and it will at any rate be an improvement in the matter of travel and the mode that is furnished to the people depending upon these lines. I am not opposing the amendment offered by the Senator from Maryland. If it be possible to find the figures, I am in favor of putting the rate of taxation in this bill at the very highest under which it is possible to secure the investment of capital to build an electric railway in the city of Washington. I do not believe that 4 per cent. permanently as proposed by this bill is enough. I mean to support the amendment offered by the Senator from Maryland fixing it at 4 per cent. for the first four years and 10 per cent. upon the gross earnings after that time. I would support an amendment to this bill that looked to the putting of this franchise up at public auction and selling it to the highest responsible bidder.

There is not a city with the population of Washington to-day upon this continent that has as indecent and as inconvenient methods of street travel as the capital of this country. You may go West and in towns of ten or fifteen thousand population you find cable railways, but you find none here, because, under the protection that Congress has afforded, the monopoly that so long has fattened and fattened upon this outraged people are unwilling to furnish any accommodations better than the towns of the West twenty-five years ago were accustomed to enjoy.

This District is in the hands of Congress. It has no municipal authority; it has no common council; it can pass no city ordinance; it is the creature of the Federal Congress. You control it as you please. Whether it be its street railways, its gas companies, or what not, you regulate the price, you name the conditions. Your power is absolute, and it is arbitrary; and the monopoly that has so long existed and the inconveniences to which this people have so long been subjected ought to terminate, and this bill ought to pass, but in my judgment it ought to pass with the severest restrictions put upon it possible and the lowest charge to the people and the highest rate of taxation that will induce capital to invest for the purpose of accomplishing its object.

I believe that the amendment offered by the Senator from Maryland will not prevent the construction of a cable railway. I believe that the Senator from New Jersey stated the truth when he said that pretty much every valuable street and avenue in this city on which a cable railway company would want to construct a road is embraced in the bill that is now under consideration. It is impossible that any counter or antagonistic system could endure here in opposition to this one if you pass this bill and grant this franchise. The one contemplated in the bill now pending covers pretty much all the valuable avenues and streets of the city of Washington. I am in favor of giving it to them, but I want to give it to them under such conditions as will protect the traveling public as far as possible, and extort from them the last dollar of taxation to which the city of Washington and the District of Columbia are fairly entitled. I do not believe that the permanent rate of 4 per cent. on gross earnings is enough, and I believe that the amendment offered by the Senator from Maryland ought to be adopted. Tax them 4 per cent. on gross earnings for four years, and tax them 10 per cent. for the rest of their time, and I am satisfied that they will make profits beyond the conception of those who are supporting this bill, even under the operation of that amendment.

Mr. MCPHERSON. Can the Senator inform me how much tax the existing companies pay?

Mr. BLACKBURN. I can not. I am no longer a member of the District committee. I have not the data before me as we had in the last Congress. I doubt not that the Senator from Wisconsin has the data before him.

Mr. SPOONER. I can not inform the Senator. Not long since the Senate adopted a resolution instructing the Committee on the District of Columbia to investigate that matter and report whether the existing railway companies were bearing their proportion in the way of taxes and public burdens, and whether the present system, which is an ad valorem tax, should not be changed; and that committee is making the investigation.

Mr. MCPHERSON. If there is any power remaining in Congress to increase the tax upon the existing horse-car lines, to make it equal to the amount we propose to compel this company to pay, I am in favor of exercising it. If there is no power by reason of a contract express or implied existing between the authorities and the companies, I am in favor of reducing the rates of fare to a point that will give the people of the city of Washington a corresponding benefit.

I make no invidious distinctions as between the company that now asks this privilege and the companies that now have possession of the streets; but I do say that we ought to compel these railway companies to pay largely into the city treasury for the benefits they receive.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. Mr. President, as a matter of course we understand that when an amendment is offered to a bill it is offered for the purpose of correcting the bill. When I see the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal I know it. There is no 10 per cent. assessed upon any corporation in the District of Columbia, and though I shall shut my eyes here from month to month and from year to year, and swear I won't see, it is only as a matter of charity that I do so.

This amendment means just what it imports to every sensible man who is capable of occupying a place on this floor as a Senator. It means to intermingle that which we have had in committee, and over which committee you have had the honor, sir, to preside. This means Rock Creek Railway, and it means nothing else. Ten per cent. means the death of this road to give a chance to the Rock Creek road. I understand now, as I did not understand before, that it means a political thing. If it shall be so, let it be so. Put forward the chairman of the Congressional committee of the national Democratic party to make this a contest that shall compel or impel Senators here on this floor to pair one with the other. Yes, smile and smile, but I will risk the truth of my assertion. Ten per cent. is not a fair tax; the object is to repel any investment of capital in the District of Columbia in this enterprise. Baltimore, the Jew store of the country, is to conserve all the purposes of the national capital.

I am sorry I have said it, but it has gone, and let it go for all it is worth. Ten per cent. tax is to repel the investment of capital in this railway. If the chairman of the Congressional committee of the Democratic party shall conceive it essential to the purposes which he has in view to use a railway scheme to affect a candidacy for the Presidential nomination, be it so.

Does he want to make this an outlying province of Baltimore? It means that and nothing more, that Washington shall be a suburb of Baltimore; and then there comes the suggestion, which appropriately comes from Baltimore, that this franchise shall be put up at public auction. Does the Congress of the United States intend to say that it will pass a bill to give exclusive privileges to corporations and put them up at public auction? If so, it is a fit time that I shall go out of it and remain at home. It becomes the auctioneers of this country to sell franchises and not to represent sixty millions of people. Pass a bill here that it is said will involve the investment of capital, as the Senator from Maryland has said to-day, and put it up at public auction, and who is to be the responsible bidder? It is not for representatives of the Government of the United States to do such a thing. It makes a man wonder whether he is the representative of a constituency or not, to hear such a proposition advanced. Sell a franchise! A franchise is that which belongs to the Government. Let him only who is capable of selling a franchise do it; but I never will.

This bill, coming back to it, amounts to nothing but a street railway on streets that are not traversed by any other railway in this city; but Baltimore, within the short period that I shall remain here, shall not infold the District of Columbia. Rock Creek is one thing, as the President of the Senate well understands, and coming around over T and S streets, and around Twenty-first and Twenty-fourth and Twenty-sixth streets, is another.

Every statement the Senator from Maryland has made is controverted by reading the names of the streets where this road is to pass. There is not one fact remaining, not a fact. It is the same with the steam-railway fight made here each year, along with the District street-railway fight. The Senator from Maryland had just as well develop himself, for if he does not I will develop him. [Laughter.]

I will venture the assertion now that he does not know where T street is. I will venture the further assertion that he does not know whether S street is this side of T street, or whether there is an avenue which passes between them. I will venture the further assertion that he does not know whether this proposed road comes down Sixth street from T street to the Potomac River. I will venture the further assertion that he does not know whether it comes down G street by Twenty-sixth. I will venture the further assertion that he does not know anything about this matter except that he does not want this bill to pass.

Mr. President, having said that much as to the suggestion to tax capital to the extent of 10 per cent. a year and the challenge to the Congress of the United States to put up a franchise that is salable by an auctioneer, I leave the whole question with the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] to the amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. GORMAN called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered.

Mr. FRYE. Will the Chair have the amendment reported?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be again stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 13 of the amendment of the committee it is proposed to strike out the words:

For each year 4 per cent.

And to insert in lieu thereof the words:

For the first four years 4 per cent. of its gross receipts per annum, and thereafter 10 per cent.

Mr. BUTLER. I simply desire to state that I shall vote for this amendment; but I trust the Senator from Maryland will offer an amendment similar to this to the charter of the other railroads in the District. I think they all ought to be put upon the same footing.

Mr. CHACE. We can not hear the Senator, as we are anxious to do.

Mr. BUTLER. I simply stated that I would vote for this amendment to this bill, and that I trusted somebody would offer an amendment to the charters of the other street railroads in this District imposing the same conditions upon them. I think they all ought to be upon an equality.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WALTHALL (when Mr. GEORGE'S name was called). My colleague is paired with the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BLAIR].

Mr. BECK (when Mr. HALE'S name was called). The Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE] is necessarily absent. I am paired with him on all questions. Not knowing how he would vote on this amendment, I announce the pair.

Mr. DAWES (when Mr. HARRIS'S name was called). The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS] was obliged to leave the Senate for a few moments, and I agreed to pair with him on any question on which I thought we ought to be paired. I have voted against this amendment. The Senator from Tennessee is upon the committee, and I assume by my vote that the Senator would vote against this amendment; but if any Senator knows that I am mistaken, I shall withdraw my vote.

Mr. SAULSBURY (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON]. Not seeing him in his seat and not knowing how he would vote on this question if present, I do not vote. I would vote "yea" if he were present.

Mr. TELLER (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY], who is detained from the Senate on account of sickness in his family. I do not know how he would vote if present, and therefore I refrain from voting.

Mr. VANCE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Michigan [Mr. PALMER]. Not knowing how he would vote, as he is not present, I decline to vote.

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. CULLOM (after having voted in the negative). I am paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY], and I therefore ask leave to withdraw my vote; and while I am on my feet I desire to announce that the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY] is paired with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. FAULKNER]; that the Senator from Michigan [Mr. STOCKBRIDGE] is paired with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. RANSOM]; that the Senator from Michigan [Mr. PALMER] is paired with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE]; that the Senator from New York [Mr. EVARTS] is paired with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN]; and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BLAIR]—I do not know whether he announced it or not—is paired with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE]. I make these announcements now so that they may be noted.

Mr. BUTLER. I should be glad if the Senator from Illinois [Mr. CULLOM] would arrange a pair for the Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL]. I saw him just on the eve of taking his departure this morning, and he had not arranged a pair, and he requested the Senator from New York [Mr. HISCOCK] to pair with him.

Mr. HISCOCK (after having voted in the negative). I will pair with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL], and withdraw my vote.

Mr. PASCO. My colleague [Mr. CALL] is paired with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT].

Mr. EDMUNDS. I am paired with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. PUGH].

Mr. HISCOCK. Am I to understand the Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL] is in favor of the amendment?

Mr. BUTLER. I am not able to say.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. He voted for the bill in committee.

Mr. BUTLER. I have no idea of getting into a controversy with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. RIDDLEBERGER] on that subject.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. Then let the Senator not do it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Debate is not in order during the taking of the vote.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I am paired generally with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. PUGH], but understanding from his friends that if present he would vote the same way that I should on this amendment, I shall record my vote.

Mr. COKE. My colleague [Mr. REAGAN] is absent, but he is paired with the Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART]. My colleague would vote "yea" if present.

Mr. DAWES. I am informed by the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BATE] that his colleague [Mr. HARRIS] would vote for this amendment if present. I therefore withdraw my vote, and announce that if he were present I should vote against it.

Mr. COCKRELL (after having voted in the affirmative). I am paired with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY]. His colleague [Mr. PLATT] is not here, and I do not know how either of them would vote if present. I withdraw my vote.

Mr. HISCOCK. Did I understand the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BUTLER] to say that the Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL] requested him to procure a pair with me?

Mr. BUTLER. Yes, sir. He requested me to speak to the Senator from New York to pair with him, as he had neglected to secure a pair. I have no idea how he would vote on this amendment if he were present.

Mr. HISCOCK. Then I withdraw my vote.

Mr. FARWELL. Does the Senator from South Carolina know how the Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL] would vote on this question?

Mr. BUTLER. I have stated twice that I did not know.

Mr. FARWELL. My impression is that the Senator from Virginia would vote "nay" on this proposition.

Mr. BUTLER. I have no information on the subject. He simply asked me to speak to the Senator from New York to pair with him. I have discharged my duty.

Mr. HISCOCK. I withdraw my vote.

Mr. MITCHELL. I am paired generally with the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES]. If he were here I should vote "nay" on this question.

Mr. PAYNE (after having voted in the affirmative). I am a little uncertain whether I am not paired on this question with my colleague [Mr. SHERMAN]. If so, I withdraw my vote.

Mr. SABIN (after having voted in the negative). My attention has just been called to the absence of the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. KENNA], with whom I am paired. I am advised that if here he would vote "yea" on this question, and as I voted "nay" I withdraw my vote.

The result was announced—yeas 17, nays 17; as follows:

YEAS—17.

Bate,	Coke,	Hampton,	Walthall,
Blackburn,	Edmunds,	McPherson,	Wilson of Md.
Blodgett,	Eustis,	Pasco,
Brown,	Gibson,	Turpie,
Butler,	Gorman,	Vest,

NAYS—17.

Bowen,	Farwell,	Morrill,	Spooner,
Chace,	Frye,	Paddock,	Wilson of Iowa.
Chandler,	Hoar,	Plumb,
Davis,	Ingalls,	Riddleberger,
Dolph,	Manderson,	Sawyer,

ABSENT—42.

Aldrich,	Dawes,	Jones of Nevada,	Sabin,
Allison,	Evarts,	Kenna,	Saulsbury,
Beck,	Faulkner,	Mitchell,	Sherman,
Berry,	George,	Morgan,	Stanford,
Blair,	Gray,	Palmer,	Stewart,
Call,	Hale,	Payne,	Stockbridge,
Cameron,	Harris,	Platt,	Teller,
Cockrell,	Hawley,	Pugh,	Vance,
Colquitt,	Hearst,	Quay,	Voorhees.
Cullom,	Hiscock,	Ransom,
Daniel,	Jones of Arkansas,	Reagan,

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is not a quorum voting; the roll will be called.

The roll was called and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aldrich,	Coke,	Ingalls,	Sawyer,
Allison,	Cullom,	McPherson,	Sherman,
Bate,	Davis,	Manderson,	Spooner,
Beck,	Dawes,	Mitchell,	Stanford,
Blackburn,	Dolph,	Morrill,	Teller,
Blair,	Farwell,	Paddock,	Turpie,
Blodgett,	Frye,	Pasco,	Vance,
Bowen,	Gibson,	Payne,	Vest,
Brown,	Gorman,	Platt,	Voorhees,
Butler,	Hampton,	Plumb,	Walthall,
Chace,	Hearst,	Riddleberger,	Wilson, of Iowa,
Chandler,	Hiscock,	Sabin,	Wilson, of Md.
Cockrell,	Hoar,	Saulsbury,

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Fifty-one Senators have answered to their names. The roll will be again called on the amendment of the Senator from Maryland to the amendment of the committee.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BECK (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE]. Not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote. I should vote "yea" if he were present.

Mr. BLAIR (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. HISCOCK (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL], and therefore refrain from voting.

Mr. MITCHELL (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES]. If he were here, I should vote "nay."

Mr. TELLER (when his name was called). I again announce that I am paired with the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY].

Mr. VANCE (when his name was called). My pair with the Senator from Michigan [Mr. PALMER] has been transferred, and I vote "yea."

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. PLATT. I am paired with the Senator from Florida [Mr. CALL], and because I do not know how he would vote on this question, I do not vote. My colleague [Mr. HAWLEY] is paired with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL].

Mr. COCKRELL. I would suggest, if it meets the approbation of the Senator, that he transfer the pair of his colleague to the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. KENNA].

Mr. BLACKBURN. The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. KENNA] is paired with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SABIN], and that pair has already been announced. I know nothing except that the Senator from Minnesota stated that he was paired generally with the Senator from West Virginia who is absent. No pair was stated for him on the first call of the roll, and the Senator from Minnesota himself stated the pair afterward.

Mr. SABIN. I stated that I was paired on the other vote; but as the pair is now transferred to the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. RANSOM], I shall vote "nay" on this question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair can not undertake to adjust pairs between Senators. The name of any Senator will be called if he desires.

Mr. COCKRELL. I will let my pair remain, and let the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SABIN] and the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. KENNA] remain paired.

Mr. VANCE. I am informed that my colleague [Mr. RANSOM] is paired with the Senator from Michigan [Mr. STOCKBRIDGE].

Mr. DAWES. I wish to make the same announcement I made on the first vote, that I am considered paired. Has the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS] voted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Tennessee is not recorded.

Mr. DAWES. Then I consider myself as paired with him. I should vote "nay," and he would vote "yea" if present.

The result was announced—yeas 21, nays 21; as follows:

YEAS—21.

Bate,	Eustis,	Pasco,	Voorhees,
Blackburn,	Gibson,	Payne,	Walthall,
Blodgett,	Gorman,	Saulsbury,	Wilson of Md.
Brown,	Hampton,	Turpie,
Butler,	Hearst,	Vance,
Coke,	McPherson,	Vest,

NAYS—21.

Allison,	Dolph,	Morrill,	Spooner,
Bowen,	Farwell,	Paddock,	Stanford,
Chace,	Frye,	Plumb,	Wilson of Iowa.
Chandler,	Hoar,	Riddleberger,
Cullom,	Ingalls,	Sawyer,
Davis,	Manderson,	Sherman,

ABSENT—34.

Aldrich,	Dawes,	Hiscock,	Quay,
Beck,	Edmunds,	Jones of Arkansas,	Ransom,
Berry,	Evarts,	Jones of Nevada,	Reagan,
Blair,	Faulkner,	Kenna,	Sabin,
Call,	George,	Mitchell,	Stewart,
Cameron,	Gray,	Morgan,	Stockbridge,
Cockrell,	Hale,	Palmer,	Teller.
Colquitt,	Harris,	Platt,
Daniel,	Hawley,	Pugh,

So the amendment to the amendment was not agreed to.

Mr. MORRILL. In section 1, line 15, on page 2, I move to strike out all after the word "streets"——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair would suggest to the Senator from Vermont that the amendment of the committee has not yet been acted upon.

Mr. SAULSBURY. Is it in order to offer an amendment to the committee's amendment?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is in order.

Mr. SAULSBURY. On looking at the language in reference to taxes on this property, I am not certain how it would be construed. Certainly it would be claimed by any railroad company to be a contract in relation to the amount of taxes to be paid. The language is:

And said per cent. of its gross earnings shall be in lieu of all other assessments of taxes of whatsoever character upon its personal property.

I am sure the committee did not intend it to have that effect, and I am not sure that it would properly have it on a correct legal interpretation; but to exclude any idea that it was the intention of Congress to make any contract in reference to taxation I offer the following amendment, to come in at the end of the amendment of the committee:

Provided further, That nothing in this section shall be construed as a contract with the company as to the amount of taxes it shall be required to pay at any time hereafter, or the manner in which they shall be imposed.

Mr. HOAR. I had prepared an amendment in the same direction which I like a little better than that of my honorable friend from Delaware, although I am not aware that there is much substantial difference between them. I will suggest it for his consideration. It is to add, after the word "arrears," in the seventeenth line of section 5:

Said rate of taxation may be hereafter increased or reduced or the manner thereof changed in the discretion of Congress.

Mr. SAULSBURY. Both answer the same purpose. The object is to exclude any idea of a contract with the company. I have had some experience in such matters, and the question of the liability to increased taxation by the legislation of a State has been contested by railroad companies. I am sure they would put the construction that the language was intended as a limitation of the power of Congress to tax them. It is to exclude that idea that I want the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Delaware [Mr. SAULSBURY] to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I ask to have that amendment read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment of the Senator from Delaware will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to add to the amendment of the committee the following:

Provided further, That nothing in this section shall be construed as a contract with the company as to the amount of taxes it shall be required to pay at any time hereafter, or the manner in which they shall be imposed.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. It seems to me that one of the amendments proposed by the committee covers this ground completely, and that is the last section, section 6, which provides—

That this act may at any time be altered, amended, or repealed by the Congress of the United States.

It does not seem to me that it is necessary to include in each section a reservation of the power to amend, alter, or repeal the act with regard to the subject embraced in the particular section, but that this general reservation of power covers the entire ground and reaches the question of taxation as well as any other question involved in the bill.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I was fully aware of that provision in the sixth section, and I am not certain but that the construction put upon that section would be to affect any agreement as to the amount of tax. You might alter the franchise in a great many respects, and yet when you have a special provision in the fifth section which might be construed as a limitation of the power of Congress to impose taxation, though you might alter the act in many other respects, you could not alter that contract into which they had entered. You might repeal the charter, you might alter the charter in a great many respects, but I apprehend that if you take the language of the fifth section and consider it as a contract in reference to the amount of taxation the company shall pay, then Congress would have no power to alter that particular feature of it if it was a contract existing with the company. I am not sure but that would be the construction put upon the language of the fifth section, and hence I seek to avoid it by my amendment.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. It seems to me that the statement made by the Senator from Delaware concedes the whole case. He says that Congress may, under this reservation of power, repeal the entire act. It seems to me that the greater includes the less, and if so that it could amend the provision in respect to taxation as well as any other provision of the law, and as well as repeal the entire act. Then the decisions of the courts with reference to this reservation of power cover the entire ground. This is a reservation of an entire control over the provisions of this act; and I should regret exceedingly to have the action of the Senate by implication put a different construction upon the effect of language of this kind in a law passed by Congress.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, the answer to the Senator from Iowa is, I think, that we have had before both Houses of Congress—certainly I listened when I was a member of the Judiciary Committee in the other House to arguments from very able counsel at great length and weight that the general clause for the alteration, amendment, or repeal of an act did not involve the power of Congress to modify. They might repeal the whole charter, but it was contended that while they left the charter unrepealed as a burden on the corporation, anything in the act which could be considered a contract could not be touched. There are in many States of this country judicial decisions limiting very much what was apparently the comprehensive effect of this general clause. It has been held that you can not so amend a charter as to put on a corporation burdens not within the general scope of its charter, and so on, and that you can not affect special and particular contracts with the company. There was a case argued before our supreme court by very able counsel, now upon the bench, in which I was on the other side, during the last vacation, where that ground was taken in behalf of a railroad company. Our Legislature undertook to regulate the matter of fares and freights, and it was claimed on the part of the company with great earnestness that the power to alter, amend, or repeal that charter did not affect a special contract which the Legislature had made in it that the Legislature would not meddle with its affairs until its earnings exceeded a certain percentage of its capital. The court did not decide the point, but it is certainly much better, as the Senator from Delaware proposes, to make it clear beyond question.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. There are many cases to which the rule suggested by the Senator from Massachusetts would apply; as for instance, take the act of Congress chartering the Pacific railroad companies, especially that with reference to the Central Pacific; in fact, the power reserved in those acts to amend, alter, or repeal was limited by a phrase somewhat in this language: "Having due regard to the interests of the companies;" and on that a question has been raised in the courts as to whether there could be an entire repeal or an entire change in any of the provisions of the act out of which there seemed to spring a definite contract between the Government and the companies. But on this general reservation of power it does seem to me that where it is declared in advance, notice given to the company in the very act which gives them the charter, that at any time the act may be altered—that means in any respect; it may be amended—that means any part of it; that it may be repealed—that means the whole of it; and you can not have a stronger reservation of power.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I know that, notwithstanding a provision of that kind, questions have been raised as to the power to alter the taxation when it assumed any form of contract. I remember a case arose in my own State where the general power of revocation was reserved in the constitution, where the Legislature can not pass an act of incorporation without reserving the power to the State to repeal, alter, or amend the charter; and yet a case arose where a tax was imposed on a railroad company, and the company did raise the question and claimed that they had the benefit of a contract existing, and not only contested it in the district court of the United States, but brought it to the Supreme Court of the United States and fought it there on the same principle.

I apprehend that the language of this amendment (unless there is something to exclude the idea that there is anything like a contract) will be considered by the company a contract, and that whenever there is any attempt on the part of Congress to increase the taxation imposed in this bill they will claim that there is a contract under this language and fight it in the courts sooner than pay it.

At any rate the amendment which I offer, which excludes the idea of any contract with the company in that regard, can do no harm. If the power is still reserved under the general clause in the sixth section my amendment can do no harm, and it may be, and I apprehend it will be, valuable in any contest with the company in reference to the limitation of its taxes. I hope, therefore, the amendment will be agreed to.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I should like to have the amendment read again.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be again read.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to add at the end of section 5 the following proviso:

Provided further, That nothing in this section shall be construed as a contract with the company as to the amount of taxes it shall be required to pay at any time hereafter, or the manner in which they shall be imposed.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. Speaking as what we would call here, I suppose, the manager of the bill, as the organ of the committee, I do not think that there could be any rational objection to the amendment except the fact that the amendment is not right in itself, Congress by it trying to give judgment to a court that the act shall not relate back or shall not have a prospective view. Everything is relegated to Congress. After the passage of this bill Congress will have even the regulation of the passenger tariff of this railway.

The argument which has been adduced by the Senator from Iowa is sufficient, and I hope that my friend from Delaware will not insist upon intruding any more of his law upon us.

Mr. SPOONER. I am perfectly satisfied myself that the contention of the Senator from Iowa as to the legal effect of section 6 is correct as a proposition of law. I think the Supreme Court of the United States has abundantly settled it; but this debate demonstrates the fact that there may be in the minds of sensible men a question about it. There is no reason why this legislation should leave open any question upon the subject, and I therefore hope that the amendment, or an equivalent amendment, will be adopted. It certainly can do no harm. If I were in charge of the bill I should accept it, and if the Senator in charge of the bill had not already stated his objection I should express the wish that he would accept the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment to the amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MCPHERSON. I desire to offer an amendment to the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair would suggest to the Senator from New Jersey that the question now under consideration is the amendment proposed by the committee to section 5.

Mr. MCPHERSON. Have all the amendments of the committee been read through?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. They have all been agreed to except sections 5 and 6.

Mr. MCPHERSON. I will withhold my amendment, if the Chair desires, until the amendments of the committee have been acted upon.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The order of the Senate was that the bill should be read for committee amendments, and when those are concluded the bill will still be open to amendments from the beginning. Are there further amendments to the amendment proposed by the committee known as section 5? If there are none the question is, will the Senate agree to the amendment as amended?

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The next amendment of the committee will be stated.

The SECRETARY. The committee report to insert as an additional section the following:

SEC. 6. That this act may at any time be altered, amended, or repealed by the Congress of the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MORRILL. I desire to offer an amendment. On page 2, beginning after the word "streets," in line 15 of section 1, I move to strike out all down to and including the word "prescribed," in line 18, as follows:

With the privilege of entering the Capitol grounds under such restrictions as the Architect of the Capitol and the commissioners of the District may prescribe.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL].

Mr. MORRILL. This road is to go up North Capitol street and then east on B street. I do not think that we ought to consent that the public grounds should be entered until we know exactly what the company want and whether it would be any detriment to the public grounds. We had better wait.

Mr. SPOONER. The Senator from Virginia is in charge of the bill, but he does not seem to be in the Chamber now. I can only say about the amendment that I do not know that it would interfere with the exercise of the franchise.

Mr. MORRILL. Not in the least.

Mr. SPOONER. The committee thought if it were left to the Architect of the Capitol and the commissioners to restrict the exercise of this privilege, it would perhaps sufficiently protect the Capitol grounds from any unnecessary or improper invasion. I can only say that much about it.

Mr. BUTLER. I offer the following as an additional section——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question has not yet been taken on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Vermont.

Mr. BUTLER. I beg pardon.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MORRILL. I have another amendment to offer. On page 3, beginning at line 46 of section 1, I move to strike out the following words:

Also commencing at Sixth street and Boundary northwest, with a double track, along Sixth street to the Potomac River.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL].

Mr. MORRILL. It will be noticed that this provides for a line parallel to and only one square away from Seventh street the whole length of the city, beginning at Boundary street and going to the Potomac River. I am quite ready to adopt the idea of a cable railroad, but I do not want when this road is completed that we shall have any unnecessary railroads running through the city. If there is to be a cable railroad at all in that vicinity, most assuredly it ought to be on Seventh street.

It strikes me that this is imposing a burden upon the city of having a track laid where it is not needed. If there is to be a cable railroad, it would strike me as more proper that the committee should report a bill giving the opportunity to the railroad on Seventh street to change to a cable road.

I hope, therefore, that these words will be stricken out. The road would come down Sixth street and pass by the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad depot on Sixth street. It strikes me that there would be some inconvenience about it. Certainly there is no call for a road at this time on that line. I call the attention of the Senator from Virginia to what I say.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL].

Mr. SPOONER. I ask that the amendment may be read for the benefit of the Senator from Virginia, who is in charge of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be again read.

The SECRETARY. On page 3 it is proposed to strike out lines 46 and 47 of section 1, as follows:

Also commencing at Sixth street and Boundary northwest, with a double track, along Sixth street to the Potomac River.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I may misapprehend the Senator from Vermont, but it certainly appears to me that if those words are stricken out there is no connection at all between the lines from T and S streets down to the avenue and to the principal market-places of Washington. I ask the Senator from Vermont to consider that there is nothing in the way of accommodation along that street until you get down to Pennsylvania avenue, at the very point at which the Senator from Vermont wants to remove the Sixth street depot. If you shall remove the Sixth street depot, would it not be an important consideration that the people of Washington, even as far remote from the center of the city as T street, should come down to that part of the town on a street-railway car? I beg the Senator to consider that point. The road can come down there without molesting any one. In the event of the removal of the Sixth street depot there would still be a line of cars going out to that part of the town, but in the event that that depot shall never be removed there would still be a line of travel from T street or the boundary down to the Sixth street depot.

I know that the Senator from Vermont is not an enemy of the bill; I know he thinks kindly of these bills; and I believe if he will look at the map he will see that he is doing an act of unkindliness to strike out this provision and let the bill pass without it. If you look at the map you will see that the road comes from T street down through Sixth street and goes to the Potomac River, and there is no line in connection with it or in competition with it.

Mr. MORRILL. I have pretty thoroughly studied this matter. It is obvious to all Senators that this is a parallel road to that on Seventh street, almost entirely independent of the entire scheme of the bill. I doubt not the Committee on the District of Columbia have bestowed an infinite amount of labor on this bill, but it is very clear to me at all events that if there is to be a cable railroad, as I hope there will be, it should be established on Seventh street instead of on Sixth street; it would accommodate a far greater amount of business.

I hope, therefore, that the committee will not object to striking out these words. If they see fit they can bring in another bill or make a provision by which the railroad on Seventh street shall become a cable railroad.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. Will the Senator from Vermont allow me, before he takes his seat, to state to him that last year the proposition was made and it met with opposition? This bill changes the route so as to meet the opposition in the last Congress, so far as we can understand it. It is proposed to take Sixth street, to leave Seventh street entire, to go right across the Sixth street mall park of the city, if I may so express it. It is not proposed to touch the Seventh street line, because the very moment that is touched then comes the opposition of a competing line. I think the Senator from Vermont is mistaken in this matter. The line goes straight through Sixth street and does not touch Seventh street at all. It does not even go down the avenue there that makes the point we had in the bill of last year on Seventh street. It leaves all that off and goes right straight down Sixth street to the Potomac River.

I beg the Senator to look at the map and see if he is not mistaken.

Mr. MORRILL. But the Senator must see that these roads are to be built for the accommodation of the people of this District, and that they do not require two roads through the whole length of the city on Sixth and Seventh streets. I am for obviating the difficulty which may arise from having so many railroads. If this was on a fresh, open space, where a road was required, I would make no objection to it, but I could not support a bill proposing a road to run two or three miles through the city where it is not required. It strikes me that the amendment is pertinent and one that ought to be adopted.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL].

Mr. COCKRELL. Let it be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be again read.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 3 it is proposed to strike out lines 46 and 47 of section 1 in the following words:

Also commencing at Sixth street and Boundary northwest, with a double track, along Sixth street to the Potomac River.

The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 9, noes 14; no quorum voting.

Mr. MORRILL. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I dislike to detain the Senate with the consideration of a matter of purely local interest here. I have made a study of this subject, but without any personal interest in it beyond that which you could acquire with a canceled postage-stamp. My venerable friend from Vermont would, with one single stroke, destroy this whole proposition. I do not like to call a Senator a crank, and neither will I; but he has stood in his committee-room and has looked across the Mall to the Potomac River until it seems to me it is like setting water before a mad dog to talk to him about running a railway car on Sixth street.

This is a proposition consonant with his own ideas, for he has advocated here the relegation of that railway system out beyond Virginia and Maryland avenues, on the theory that people could be brought in from the north, the east, the west, the northwest, and the northeast, at a five-cents fare; and yet if his proposition shall obtain here to-day, and you strike out this clause, you stop the street railway at Sixth street and you remove the steam railway to what point soever the Senator from Vermont shall ask you to take it.

Now, sir, we are not considering any matter of that sort. A cable railway would be an improvement to that portion of the city. It would tear up the cobble-stones on the south side of the avenue, and it would give some sort of cheap access into the city, if we are to have the steam railway removed from the central part.

Here is a bill which says in so many words that Congress may alter, amend, or repeal it, and it opens the way for carrying out the projected scheme of the Senator from Vermont. How do you propose to get people into this city? Shall there be before arriving passengers a Hudson River without a tow-boat, even, to take them across? Shall there be a

Hudson River between Virginia and the District of Columbia, or an omnibus run along the route? That is what this amounts to.

Nobody complains of this provision. Tell me of a Senator who objects to it. Tell me his constituency and from what State he comes, and I will narrow you down at last to the Senator from Vermont. There is nothing behind this amendment but Senatorial age and that dignity and that lovable character which commends itself to everybody. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Vermont would draw a Hudson River, if it were possible to do it, between Washington and the rest of the world, without a tow-boat to give access to this city.

I am not advocating this bill as one who has any personal interest in it, and there I propose to draw the line between myself and the gentlemen on the other side of this Chamber, who have made it a party question and have announced their pairs. It is well for Senators on this side to understand at once that the District of Columbia is to be, if I may so express it, circumnavigated by a cable railway, and the only question is as to who is to be its president. I see that this morning for the first time. I am sorry to have seen my friend from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN] making a political question of the cable railway. I am not surprised now that the other Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BECK] should have announced himself so positively as he did yesterday.

It has come to this, Mr. President, not as to which company shall be incorporated, but as to whether the company which has been asking the privilege of the franchise for three years shall be defeated. That is what it amounts to.

The Senator from Delaware [Mr. SAULSBURY] brought in his objections, and they were just as good as the objections which were brought in against secession in 1860 and 1861. One of the Senators from Kentucky wants a taxation amounting to 10 per cent. That amounts to what? It amounts to killing the enterprise. If I did not know that Senator as I do, I might be cruel enough to apply to him a strong term, but I shall not do so.

I ask the Senate to vote down the pending amendment, and pass the bill as it came from the committee.

I wish to make one other further suggestion. When anything comes here from the Committee on Foreign Relations we are almost bound to accept it. When anything comes here from the Committee on Appropriations we are almost bound to accept it. It seems to me that the Senator from Vermont considers it a sacrilege for the Senate to touch a report which emanates from his committee. Yet there is not an amendment proposed to this bill that does not emanate from a committee which, I think, has four of the members of his own lordly committee on it. I ask the Senate to pass the bill as it was reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, in the chair). The pending question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL], on which the yeas and nays have been ordered.

Mr. HARRIS. Let the amendment be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be again read.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to strike out lines 46 and 47 of section 1, in the following words:

> Also commencing at Sixth street and Boundary northwest, with a double track, along Sixth street to the Potomac River.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the roll on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Vermont.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BECK (when his name was called). I have announced before that I am paired with the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE], who is necessarily absent from the city. Not knowing how he would vote on the bill or any of the amendments, I shall withhold my vote. I make this announcement once for all during the pendency of the bill.

Mr. EDMUNDS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. PUGH]. As I do not know how he would vote on this question, I beg leave to withhold my vote.

Mr. SABIN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. KENNA].

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. BLAIR. I am paired with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. COCKRELL. I am paired with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY]. I do not know how he would vote. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. MORGAN. I wish to announce my pair with the Senator from New York [Mr. EVARTS]. I do not know how he would vote. If he were here, I should vote "yea."

Mr. COKE. I wish to announce the pair of my colleague [Mr. REAGAN], who is absent, with the Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART].

The result was announced—yeas 22, nays 15; as follows:

YEAS—22.

Bate,	Butler,	Eustis,	Hampton,
Blackburn,	Coke,	Gibson,	Harris,
Blodgett,	Dolph,	Gorman,	Hearst,
McPherson,	Payne,	Vance,	Walthall.
Morrill,	Saulsbury,	Vest,
Pasco,	Turpie,	Voorhees,

NAYS—15.

Allison,	Dawes,	Paddock,	Spooner,
Bowen,	Farwell,	Plumb,	Stanford,
Chace,	Hoar,	Riddleberger,	Wilson of Iowa.
Chandler,	Manderson,	Sawyer,

ABSENT—39.

Aldrich,	Daniel,	Hiscock,	Quay,
Beck,	Davis,	Ingalls,	Ransom,
Berry,	Edmunds,	Jones of Arkansas,	Reagan,
Blair,	Evarts,	Jones of Nevada,	Sabin,
Brown,	Faulkner,	Kenna,	Sherman,
Call,	Frye,	Mitchell,	Stewart,
Cameron,	George,	Morgan,	Stockbridge,
Cockrell,	Gray,	Palmer,	Teller,
Colquitt,	Hale,	Platt,	Wilson of Md.
Cullom,	Hawley,	Pugh,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No quorum having voted, the Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aldrich,	Coke,	Hearst,	Riddleberger,
Allison,	Cullom,	Hoar,	Sabin,
Bate,	Davis,	Ingalls,	Saulsbury,
Beck,	Dawes,	McPherson,	Sawyer,
Blackburn,	Dolph,	Manderson,	Spooner,
Blair,	Edmunds,	Mitchell,	Stanford,
Blodgett,	Eustis,	Morgan,	Teller,
Bowen,	Farwell,	Morrill,	Turpie,
Brown,	Frye,	Paddock,	Vance,
Butler,	Gibson,	Pasco,	Vest,
Chace,	Gorman,	Payne,	Voorhees,
Chandler,	Hampton,	Platt,	Walthall,
Cockrell,	Harris,	Plumb,	Wilson of Iowa.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-two Senators having answered to their names, and a quorum being present, the yeas and nays will be again called on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL].

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MITCHELL (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES]. I do not know how he would vote, and I therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. MORGAN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from New York [Mr. EVARTS].

Mr. TELLER (when his name was called). On all questions connected with this bill I am paired with the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY].

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. CULLOM. The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT] is paired with the Senator from Florida [Mr. CALL]. The other pairs I have announced before, and it is not necessary to repeat them.

Mr. BLAIR. I am paired with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE]. I should vote "nay" if he were here.

The result was announced—yeas 23, nays 18; as follows:

YEAS—23.

Bate,	Eustis,	McPherson,	Vance,
Blackburn,	Gibson,	Morrill,	Vest,
Blodgett,	Gorman,	Pasco,	Voorhees,
Brown,	Hampton,	Payne,	Walthall,
Butler,	Harris,	Saulsbury,	Wilson of Md.
Coke,	Hearst,	Turpie,

NAYS—18.

Aldrich,	Davis,	Ingalls,	Spooner,
Allison,	Dawes,	Manderson,	Stanford,
Bowen,	Farwell,	Paddock,	Wilson of Iowa.
Chandler,	Frye,	Riddleberger,
Cullom,	Hoar,	Sawyer,

ABSENT—35.

Beck,	Dolph,	Jones of Arkansas,	Quay,
Berry,	Edmunds,	Jones of Nevada,	Ransom,
Blair,	Evarts,	Kenna,	Reagan,
Call,	Faulkner,	Mitchell,	Sabin,
Cameron,	George,	Morgan,	Sherman,
Chace,	Gray,	Palmer,	Stewart,
Cockrell,	Hale,	Platt,	Stockbridge,
Colquitt,	Hawley,	Plumb,	Teller.
Daniel,	Hiscock,	Pugh,

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MCPHERSON. I now desire to have my amendment considered. On page 9, line 44 of section 2, after the word "personal," I move to insert the following additional proviso:

> And provided further, That the entire issue of stock and bonds by said company shall not exceed the cost of construction and equipment of said road.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MCPHERSON].

Mr. MCPHERSON. Mr. President, I feel this morning very much like congratulating the people of the whole country. I certainly congratulate the Democratic party. I feel very much like congratulating also the Republican convention, which is soon to meet in the city of Chicago, on the fact that the list of non-eligibles in that convention has been somewhat increased. I congratulate my own party upon the fact that hereafter in political strifes before the people of this country there can be no longer any controversy as to which of the great political parties in this country is in favor of the rights and interests of the people as against the interests of corporations. All that will be required for us to do in the way of campaign literature is to take a copy of the RECORD containing to-day's proceedings and give it circulation all over the country. It will save us a vast amount of money certainly for campaign literature, which has troubled us very much in the past, for surely there never was an issue so directly and distinctly drawn, or so finally and decisively determined.

We are sitting here practically as a municipal government, legislating for the people of the District of Columbia, and that municipal government boldly and openly avows that it will grant a corporation the privilege of charging the highest possible amount of fares, and will compel them in no sense to pay any part of the public taxes. If you were to present that proposition before the Legislature of any State in the Union, from Maine to Louisiana, from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean, they would sit down on it at once. Here are two great political parties arrayed on each side of this Chamber, representing, as we suppose, the highest intelligence of the people, supposed to legislate for the rights and interests of the people as against corporations wherever the rights of the two clash. One side of this Chamber, with perhaps one exception, votes deliberately to give this great franchise to a corporation without taxation, and the other side votes to compel them to pay only a small measure of tax, because they had not the courage to ask for more.

Now, I have offered another little amendment. I find that since my service in this body we have been importuned time after time with petitions asking and entreating Congress, and petitions have come before the State Legislatures requiring that when corporate power was given privileges and franchises they be permitted not to capitalize their establishment for more money than it absolutely cost to build it; in other words, that no fictitious capital, that no water, so to speak, be put in the stock and bonds of the company.

There is a double reason why in this bill and at this time the proviso which I offer should be adopted. You propose hereafter, as you say, denying it to-day, to reserve the right to compel this railroad company to pay taxes, and I hope that Congress will rise up some time to the dignity of compelling them to pay the same amount of tax upon the money they have invested in a profitable railroad enterprise that every poor resident of this city has to pay upon his house and lot; but to-day you refuse to do it. However, you do say, "We will reserve the power hereafter to compel them to pay taxes."

I want the capital stock of this company to represent what? Nothing but the property itself; so that hereafter when we come to them and ask them to pay taxes they can not reply to us, "We can not pay you any more taxes, for we earn but 2 per cent. upon our capital." What is the capital? The capital by this bill is fixed at $5,000,000. The probable cost of the establishment will be $1,000,000. In other words, they have four parts water and one part of stock actually paid for and represented, and hereafter when an attempt is made to require them to exhibit their earnings by certifying the amount of earnings of the preceding year——

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I should like the Senator, if I——

Mr. MCPHERSON. Not at present. I shall be through in a moment.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. If the Senator——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey declines to yield.

Mr. MCPHERSON. So that there shall be no reason whatever existing why they shall not pay taxes when taxes are demanded of them. Now, I will yield to the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. The Senator has taken his seat and therefore has yielded the floor. His information, I suppose, is measured by the last statement he made, that the capital stock of the company is $5,000,000. I should like to ask the Senator from New Jersey where he got that information.

Mr. MCPHERSON. On page 9 of the bill, if the Senator will permit me——

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. He has just multiplied it by two, and has possibly looked through a pair of broken spectacles, like mine, for there is no such thing in the bill.

Mr. MCPHERSON. I find that the bonds are for $2,500,000——

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I decline to yield, as the Senator did.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia declines to yield.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I will take it for granted that he is looking through the same spectacles he had on his nose when he wanted to bring free ores from Spain to the United States. He has undertaken to do what I endeavored to call the attention of the Senate to a while ago, to make this a question of protection. I am ready to meet him on that basis and on that issue, and nothing gives me more pleasure. I never knew a common-school teacher, even when I was a school-teacher, to undertake to elucidate more facts when he had no facts behind him than the Senator from New Jersey has done to-day. He has not made one single statement that is correct; and it is not because he lacks veracity, but because he lacks information.

There is no company in the District of Columbia, no corporation, and no private property that is taxed as we propose to tax this company, the charter of which emanates from the Committee on the District of Columbia. But I do not want to appear here as the mere handler of a bill that is to be assailed by the Senator from New Jersey, who does not know anything about it. My business here is to show that he is in error.

I say that the capital stock of this company is not $5,000,000. I ask the Senator from New Jersey to make good his declaration or else to withdraw it. I say his statement that they have an unlimited right to issue bonds is not in the charter, and I ask the Senator from New Jersey to make good his statement. I am not called upon to prove a negative, but I am here to deny an affirmative.

When you make it a party issue, I say that that statement is not correct. Now, then, make it good, and let me have the opportunity of proving the negative if it be necessary, or at any rate to deny the affirmative by proof.

What I said before is made good now, that it is proposed to make a party issue of a railway track in the District of Columbia. There are two propositions pending before Congress relative to the District of Columbia. There is no use to conceal it any more. Two years ago I brought this bill forward in the Senate, without owning a piece of property in the District or expecting to own it. This amounts to a contest between the two parties as to which shall have the ownership of the District of Columbia. I am close enough to the District to recognize that which a Northwestern man possibly does not, and which a Northeastern man possibly does not; but the fact is staring me in the face, and I will not yield one jot or tittle to any man North, South, East, or West. The question is as to whether there shall be a cable railway with Dudley as president on one side or Corcoran on the other, and these desks draw the line. If I must be relegated to it, I know on which side I am going to remain.

I thought there was more charity, that there was more kindly feeling; I thought that even I could implead with the Senator from Vermont to withdraw that amendment of his. I have done everything I could do as a member of the committee to get this bill in the shape in which I thought it ought to be sent to the other House. My friend from Vermont has had his amendment adopted. I know how hard it is for a Senator to vote against any proposition that the Senator from Vermont may suggest; but still I hope the time will come when my friend will be put upon a conference committee to decide the differences between the two Houses, and when he sends the Sixth street depot out he will let the Sixth street cable railway go on.

But, Mr. President, that remark was parenthetical. We have here to-day in the District of Columbia nothing but a political contest, and deaf is he who does not hear it. I know it and I see it. I heard it voiced for the first time by the Senator from Maryland this morning. It is a political contest as to who shall control the affairs of the District of Columbia, where people live without the franchise.

I am not standing here to advocate any one bill as against another, but I ask Senators to come up and say whether they have objections to this route and whether they have objections to this railway. I challenge these gentlemen now to come to the front and say what objections they have to this bill, and not by slow approaches and parallels, by details, to kill it off. That is what it means, and without making an application to any one, I say that means cowardice.

This railroad touches nobody who has not an interest. It touches no Senator who has not a weak point or a weak spot. It touches nothing but the Washington and Georgetown Railroad from Seventeenth to Fifteenth streets. Yet these amendments come piling in here one after the other, without a man to stand behind them and say that he is opposed to this whole system. But Senators are simply opposed to it in the way that they can approach it by amendments.

Mr. President, I am sorry that the Republicans and Democrats of the Senate should have thought that it was nearly approximating a political question, and that they should cut off Sixth street; but still there are reserved brains behind the Senate which will bring it all back to the consideration of this body.

Look at the proposition now pending before the Senate. I ask the Senator from Maryland, without any apprehension that he will answer the question, whether he is not in favor of a bill that takes its entire route on Sixth street and goes up to Madison place?

Mr. President, leaving that subject just where it is and dealing with that of protection, I will ask the Senator from New Jersey if he did not advocate two years ago a proposition to deliver the Spanish ores on the Atlantic coast, where he perhaps has an interest in his own manufactures? That is his protection doctrine. He was for free Spanish ores; he would have them brought here without duty; and yet he takes this opportunity to make that a part of his speech on the question of building a cable railway in the city of Washington.

Mr. MCPHERSON. Does the Senator want an answer?

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I would rather have it, except that it would come in more properly after I have concluded.

Mr. MCPHERSON. I did not vote for the admission of any ores to the coast or anywhere free, for the benefit of any manufacture.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. The Senator did not vote, and I never accused him of voting. There was one other Senator in this Chamber who said that he was paired with his colleague, and if his colleague were here he would vote the other way. I know what the Senator's position was. He did not vote; he was not here to vote, but he was in favor of free raw material. He has introduced that on this question. He is not as anxious to answer that as he was to interrupt me to interlard his statement that he did not vote for free ore. He has put this into these modern improvements, and he must stand whatever shall come of it. I say that New Jersey as represented by that Senator is in favor of free ore, and I will challenge him now to deny that. Mr. President, they say that silence sometimes gives consent.

Now I ask that the Senate will proceed with the consideration of the pending bill, leaving the Senator from New Jersey and his protection theories undisturbed, because they are only protection for the manufactured article. I ask the Senate to proceed with the consideration of the bill, and not to the consideration of the suggestions made by the Senator from New Jersey.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. SPOONER. I ask that the amendment be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be again read.

The CHIEF CLERK. In section 2, line 44, after the word "personal," it is proposed to insert:

And provided further, That the entire issue of stock and bonds by said company shall not exceed the cost of construction and equipment of said road.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BUTLER. I offer the following amendment, to come in as section 6 of the bill:

That this and all street railways in the District of Columbia be hereafter subject to a tax of 10 per cent. per annum on their gross earnings, and all acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. That is simply nonsense. How can you change the charter of other companies by a proposition inserted in this bill? How can you do it? I have no objection to it except that it looks like nonsense, and I do not propose to vote for nonsense.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Carolina calls for the yeas and nays on the amendment proposed by him.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. SPOONER. I perhaps ought to say to the Senator from South Carolina and to the Senate that the Committee on the District of Columbia is already charged by resolution passed by the Senate at this session with the duty of investigating the question as to the street railway companies as to whether they are paying sufficient taxes, and reporting to the Senate whether the method should not be changed and a different rate of tax imposed. The committee is engaged under that resolution in making that investigation.

Mr. BUTLER. I hope that committee will finally come to a conclusion. I think perhaps, if the Senate should adopt the amendment I have had the honor to offer, it would simplify their labors very much. I shall therefore insist on the amendment.

Mr. HARRIS. I should like to ask my friend from South Carolina if it does not do a little more than simplify it, if it does not make the investigation entirely unnecessary? It seems to put the action before the investigation, to decide the question and leave a committee to investigate it later. That is not, in my opinion, the best method of dealing with a question of general taxation. I think it would be better to investigate first and then determine what is the proper method and proper amount of taxation to be imposed.

Mr. BUTLER. Well, Mr. President, I was thoroughly satisfied that that investigation should terminate at some time. I do not know but that the observation of my friend from Tennessee might have some force. ordinarily, but I fear it will be like some other investigations. We might as well have a vote on the amendment.

Mr. EUSTIS. There seems to be a great difference of opinion in reference to some features of this bill and the amendment offered by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BUTLER]; therefore I move to recommit the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Louisiana moves to recommit the bill to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. EUSTIS. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. EDMUNDS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. PUGH].

Mr. MORGAN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from New York [Mr. EVARTS].

Mr. SABIN (when his name was called). My pair with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. KENNA] is transferred with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. RANSOM].

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. CULLOM. I am paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY].

Mr. PLATT. I am paired with the Senator from Florida [Mr. CALL], except as to those matters in which I am advised that we should both vote alike. Not knowing how he would vote on this motion, I do not vote. My colleague [Mr. HAWLEY] is paired with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL].

Mr. COCKRELL. I am paired with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY]. If he were present I should vote "yea," and I presume he would vote "nay."

Mr. ALLISON. I am paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. SAULSBURY]. If he has not voted, I desire to withdraw my vote.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is informed that the Senator from Delaware has voted.

Mr. ALLISON. Then I allow my vote to stand.

Mr. BLAIR. I am paired with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE]. I would vote "nay" if he were present.

Mr. RANSOM. The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SABIN] stated that he and myself were paired on this bill. I wish to vote, as he is here. I vote "yea."

Mr. ALDRICH. I am paired with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. KENNA].

The result was announced—yeas 21, nays 22; as follows:

YEAS—21.

Bate,	Eustis,	Pasco,	Voorhees,
Blackburn,	Gibson,	Payne,	Walthall,
Blodgett,	Gorman,	Ransom,	Wilson of Md.
Brown,	Hampton,	Saulsbury,
Butler,	Hearst,	Turpie,
Coke,	McPherson,	Vest,

NAYS—22.

Allison,	Farwell,	Morrill,	Spooner,
Bowen,	Frye,	Paddock,	Stanford,
Chace,	Harris,	Riddleberger,	Vance,
Chandler,	Hoar,	Sabin,	Wilson of Iowa.
Davis,	Ingalls,	Sawyer,
Dawes,	Manderson,	Sherman,

ABSENT—33.

Aldrich,	Daniel,	Hiscock,	Pugh,
Beck,	Dolph,	Jones of Arkansas,	Quay,
Berry,	Edmunds,	Jones of Nevada,	Reagan,
Blair,	Evarts,	Kenna,	Stewart,
Call,	Faulkner,	Mitchell,	Stockbridge,
Cameron,	George,	Morgan,	Teller.
Cockrell,	Gray,	Palmer,
Colquitt,	Hale,	Platt,
Cullom,	Hawley,	Plumb,

So the motion to recommit was not agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question recurs on the amendment offered by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BUTLER], on which the yeas and nays have been ordered.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. PADDOCK. I ask the Senator to give way that I may make a motion to reconsider.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I withdraw the motion.

THE MAIL SERVICE.

Mr. PADDOCK. I move to reconsider the vote by which the Senate adopted the resolution submitted by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PLUMB] in relation to the mail service.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nebraska moves to reconsider the vote by which the Senate agreed to the resolution offered by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PLUMB] concerning the mail service.

Mr. PADDOCK. I do this for the purpose of obtaining the opportunity to submit a few remarks.

Mr. EDMUNDS. You merely wish to enter the motion now?

Mr. PADDOCK. That is all.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion will be entered.

PROPOSED ADJOURNMENT TO THURSDAY.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I move what is considered a privileged motion, that when the Senate adjourn this evening it be to convene on Thursday next.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Virginia is entitled to make the motion.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I make that motion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Virginia moves that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet on Thursday next.

Mr. HOAR. I call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. VOORHEES. There was an order for to-morrow made on the motion of the Senator from Massachusetts, and a duty pointed out.

Mr. CULLOM. I hope the vote will be taken without the formal call of the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair would suggest that this motion is not debatable. The question is on the motion submitted by the Senator from Virginia, that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet on Thursday next.

The motion was not agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 1495) granting to Edwin Libby Post, Grand Army of the Republic, permission to erect a soldiers' monument on vacant land adjoining the custom-house at Rockland, Me.;

A bill (H. R. 2528) authorizing the construction of a railroad bridge across the Red River of the North by the North Dakota and Pacific Railway Company; and

A bill (H. R. 6153) to authorize condemnation of land for sites of public buildings.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 388) for the relief of L. B. Townsend, Louis S. Lovel, W. C. Page, Alonzo Sessions, Hampton Rich, Harvey Harter, Benjamin Harter, and Peter Hackett.

PAPERS WITHDRAWN.

On motion of Mr. BECK, it was Ordered, That leave be given to withdraw from the files of the Senate the papers in the case of R. H. Crump et al., no adverse report having been made thereon.

WASHINGTON FOUNDLING ASYLUM.

Mr. HOAR submitted the following resolution; which was considered, by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Committee on Appropriations be directed to inquire and inform the Senate whether or not there is or has been in the management of the Washington Asylum for Foundlings discrimination between white and colored children.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I renew my motion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Vermont moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After one hour and twenty-four minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, February 22, at 12 o'clock m.

NOMINATION.

Executive nomination received by the Senate the 21st day of February, 1888.

ASSISTANT SURGEON IN THE NAVY.

James Finley Keeney, a resident of Illinois, to be an assistant surgeon in the Navy, to fill a vacancy.

THE FISHERIES TREATY.

The Senate has removed the injunction of secrecy from, and directed the publication in the RECORD of, the following:

Message from the President of the United States, transmitting a treaty between the United States and Great Britain concerning the interpretation of the convention of October 20, 1818, signed at Washington February 15, 1888.

FEBRUARY 20, 1888.—Read; treaty read the first time, referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and, together with the message and the accompanying documents, ordered to be printed in confidence for the use of the Senate.

To the Senate of the United States:

In my annual message transmitted to the Congress in December, 1886, it was stated that negotiations were then pending for the settlement of the questions growing out of the rights claimed by American fishermen in British North American waters.

As a result of such negotiations a treaty has been agreed upon between Her Britannic Majesty and the United States, concluded and signed in this capital, under my direction and authority, on the 15th of February instant, and which I now have the honor to submit to the Senate, with the recommendation that it shall receive the consent of that body, as provided in the Constitution, in order that the ratifications thereof may be duly exchanged and the treaty be carried into effect.

Shortly after Congress had adjourned in March last, and in continuation of my efforts to arrive at such an agreement between the Governments of Great Britain and the United States would secure to the citizens of the respective countries the unmolested enjoyment of their just rights under existing treaties and international comity in the territorial waters of Canada and Newfoundland, I availed myself of opportune occurrences indicative of a desire to make without delay an amicable and final setttement of a long-standing controversy—productive of much irritation and misunderstanding between the two nations—to send through our minister in London proposals that a conference should take place on the subject at this capital.

The experience of the past two years had demonstrated the dilatory and unsatisfactory consequences of our indirect transaction of business through the foreign office in London, in which the views and wishes of the Government of the Dominion of Canada were practically predominant, but were only to find expression at second hand.

To obviate this inconvenience and obstruction to prompt and well-defined settlement, it was considered advisable that the negotiations should be conducted in this city, and that the interests of Canada and Newfoundland should be directly represented therein.

The terms of reference having been duly agreed upon between the two Governments, and the conference arranged to be held here, by virtue of the power in me vested by the Constitution, I duly authorized Thomas F. Bayard, the Secretary of State of the United States, William L. Putnam, a citizen of the State of Maine, and James B. Angell, a citizen of the State of Michigan, for and in the name of the United States, to meet and confer with the plenipotentiaries representing the Government of Her Britannic Majesty, for the purpose of considering and adjusting in a friendly spirit all or any questions relating to rights of fishery in the seas adjacent to British North America and Newfoundland which were in dispute between the Governments of the United States and that of Her Britannic Majesty, and jointly and severally to conclude and sign any treaty or treaties touching the premises; and I herewith transmit for your information full copies of the power so given by me.

In execution of the powers so conveyed, the said Thomas F. Bayard, William L. Putnam, and James B. Angell, in the month of November last, met in this city the plenipotentiaries of Her Britannic Majesty, and proceeded in the negotiation of a treaty as above authorized. After many conferences and protracted efforts an agreement has at length been arrived at, which is embodied in the treaty which I now lay before you.

The treaty meets my approval, because I believe that it supplies a satisfactory, practical, and final adjustment, upon a basis honorable and just to both parties, of the difficult and vexed question to which it relates.

A review of the history of this question will show that all former attempts to arrive at a common interpretation, satisfactory to both parties, of the first article of the treaty of October 20, 1818, have been unsuccessful; and with the lapse of time the difficulty and obscurity have only increased.

The negotiations in 1854, and again in 1871, ended in both cases in temporary reciprocal arrangements of the tariffs of Canada and Newfoundland and of the United States, and the payment of a money award by the United States, under which the real questions in difference remained unsettled, in abeyance, and ready to present themselves anew just so soon as the conventional arrangements were abrogated.

The situation, therefore, remained unimproved by the results of the treaty of 1871, and a grave condition of affairs, presenting almost identically the same features and causes of complaint by the United States against Canadian action and British default in its correction, confronted us in May, 1886, and has continued until the present time.

The greater part of the correspondence which has taken place between the two Governments has heretofore been communicated to Congress, and at as early a day as possible I shall transmit the remaining portion to this date, accompanying it with the joint protocols of the conferences which resulted in the conclusion of the treaty now submitted to you.

You will thus be fully possessed of the record and history of the case since the termination, on June 30, 1885, of the fishery articles of the treaty of Washington of 1871, whereby we were relegated to the provisions of the treaty of October 20, 1818.

As the documents and papers referred to will supply full information of the positions taken under my administration by the representatives of the United States, as well as those occupied by the representatives of the Government of Great Britain, it is not considered necessary or expedient to repeat them in this message. But I believe the treaty will be found to contain a just, honorable, and therefore satisfactory solution of the difficulties which have clouded our relations with our neighbors on our northern border.

Especially satisfactory do I believe the proposed arrangement will be found by those of our citizens who are engaged in the open-sea fisheries adjacent to the Canadian coast, and resorting to those ports and harbors under treaty provisions and rules of international law.

The proposed delimitation of the lines of the exclusive fisheries from the common fisheries will give certainty and security as to the area of their legitimate field; the headland theory of imaginary lines is abandoned by Great Britain, and the specification in the treaty of certain named bays especially provided for gives satisfaction to the inhabitants of the shores without subtracting materially from the value or convenience of the fishery rights of Americans.

The uninterrupted navigation of the Strait of Canso is expressly and for the first time affirmed, and the four purposes for which our fishermen under the treaty of 1818 were allowed to enter the bays and harbors of Canada and Newfoundland within the belt of 3 marine miles are placed under a fair and liberal construction, and their enjoyment secured without such conditions and restrictions as in the past have embarrassed and obstructed them so seriously.

The enforcement of penalties for unlawfully fishing or preparing to fish within the inshore and exclusive waters of Canada and Newfoundland is to be accomplished under safeguards against oppressive or arbitrary action, thus protecting the defendant fishermen from punishment in advance of trial, delays and inconvenience, and unnecessary expense.

The history of events in the last two years shows that no feature of Canadian administration was more harassing and injurious than the compulsion upon our fishing vessels to make formal entry and clearance on every occasion of temporarily seeking shelter in Canadian ports and harbors.

Such inconvenience is provided against in the proposed treaty, and this most frequent and just cause of complaint is removed.

The articles permitting our fishermen to obtain provisions and the ordinary supplies of trading vessels on their homeward voyages, and under which they are accorded the further and even more important privilege on all occasions of purchasing such casual or needful provisions and supplies as are ordinarily granted to trading vessels, are of great importance and value.

The licenses which are to be granted without charge and on application, in order to enable our fishermen to enjoy these privileges, are reasonable and proper checks in the hands of the local authorities to identify the recipients and prevent abuse, and can form no impediment to those who intend to use them fairly.

The hospitality secured for our vessels in all cases of actual distress, with liberty to unload and sell and transship their cargoes, is full and liberal.

These provisions will secure the substantial enjoyment of the treaty rights for our fishermen under the treaty of 1818 for which contention has been steadily made in the correspondence of the Department of State and our minister at London, and by the American negotiators of the present treaty.

The right of our fishermen under the treaty of 1818 did not extend to the procurement of distinctive fishery supplies in Canadian ports and harbors; and one item supposed to be essential, to wit, bait, was plainly denied them by the explicit and definite words of the treaty of 1818, emphasized by the course of the negotiation and express decisions which preceded the conclusion of that treaty.

The treaty now submitted contains no provision affecting tariff duties, and, independently of the position assumed upon the part of the United States that no alteration in our tariff or other domestic legislation could be made as the price or consideration of obtaining the rights of our citizens secured by treaty, it was considered more expedient to allow any change in the revenue laws of the United States to be made by the ordinary exercise of legislative will and in promotion of the public interests. Therefore, the addition to the free-list of fish, fish-oil, whale and seal oil, etc., recited in the last article of the treaty, is wholly left to the action of Congress; and in connection therewith the Canadian and Newfoundland right to regulate sales of bait and other fishing supplies within their own jurisdiction is recognized, and the right of our fishermen to freely purchase these things is made contingent, by this treaty, upon the action of Congress in the modification of our tariff laws.

Our social and commercial intercourse with those populations who have been placed upon our borders and made forever our neighbors is made apparent by a list of United States common carriers, marine and inland, connecting their lines with Canada, which was returned by the Secretary of the Treasury to the Senate on the 7th day of February, 1888, in answer to a resolution of that body; and this is instructive as to the great volume of mutually profitable interchanges which has come into existence during the last half century.

This intercourse is still but partially developed, and if the amicable enterprise and wholesome rivalry between the two populations be not obstructed, the promise of the future is full of the fruits of an unbounded prosperity on both sides of the border.

The treaty now submitted to you has been framed in a spirit of liberal equity and reciprocal benefits, in the conviction that mutual advantage and convenience are the only permanent foundation of peace and friendship between states, and that with the adoption of the agreement now placed before the Senate a beneficial and satisfactory intercourse between the two countries will be established so as to secure perpetual peace and harmony.

In connection with the treaty herewith submitted I deem it also my duty to transmit to the Senate a written offer or arrangement, in the nature of a modus vivendi, tendered after the conclusion of the treaty on the part of the British plenipotentiaries, to secure kindly and peaceful relations during the period that may be required for the consideration of the treaty by the respective Governments and for the enactment of the necessary legislation to carry its provisions into effect if approved.

This paper, freely and on their own motion, signed by the British conference, not only extends advantages to our fishermen pending the ratification of the treaty, but appears to have been dictated by a friendly and amicable spirit.

I am given to understand that the other governments concerned in this treaty will, within a few days, in accordance with their methods of conducting public business, submit said treaty to their respective legislatures, when it will be at once published to the world. In view of such action it appears to be advisable that, by publication here, early and full knowledge of all that has been done in the premises should be afforded to our people.

It would also seem to be useful to inform the popular mind concerning the history of the long-continued disputes growing out of the subject embraced in the treaty and to satisfy the public interests touching the same, as well as to acquaint our people with the present status of the questions involved, and to give them the exact terms of the proposed adjustment, in place of the exaggerated and imaginative statements which will otherwise reach them.

I therefore beg leave respectfully to suggest that said treaty and all such correspondence, messages, and documents relating to the same as may be deemed important to accomplish these purposes be at once made public by the order of your honorable body.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
February 20, 1888.

Whereas differences have arisen concerning the interpretation of Article I of the convention of October 20, 1818, the United States of America and Her Majesty, the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, being mutually desirous of removing all causes of misunderstanding in relation thereto and of promoting friendly intercourse and good neighborhood between the United States and the possessions of Her Majesty in North America, have resolved to conclude a treaty to that end, and have named as their plenipotentiaries—that is to say:

The President of the United States, Thomas F. Bayard, Secretary of State; William L. Putnam, of Maine; and James B. Angell, of Michigan;

And Her Majesty the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, the Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, M. P.; the Hon. Sir Lionel Sackville Sackville West, K. C. M. G., Her Britannic Majesty's envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to the United States of America; and Sir Charles Tupper, G. C. M. G., C. B., minister of finance of the Dominion of Canada;

Who, having communicated to each other their respective full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed upon the following articles:

ARTICLE I.

The high contracting parties agree to appoint a mixed commission to delimit, in the manner provided in this treaty, the British waters, bays, creeks, and harbors of the coasts of Canada and of Newfoundland, as to which the United States, by Article I of the convention of October 20, 1818, between the United States and Great Britain, renounced forever any liberty to take, dry, or cure fish.

ARTICLE II.

The commission shall consist of two commissioners to be named by Her Britannic Majesty and of two commissioners to be named by the President of the United States, without delay, after the exchange of ratifications of this treaty.

The commission shall meet and complete the delimitation as soon as possible thereafter.

In case of the death, absence, or incapacity of any commissioner, or in the event of any commissioner omitting or ceasing to act as such, the President of the United States or Her Britannic Majesty, respectively, shall forthwith name another person to act as commissioner instead of the commissioner originally named.

ARTICLE III.

The delimitation referred to in Article I of this treaty shall be marked upon British admiralty charts by a series of lines regularly numbered and duly described. The charts so marked shall, on the termination of the work of the commission, be signed by the commissioners in quadruplicate, one copy whereof shall be delivered to the Secretary of State of the United States and three copies to Her Majesty's Government. The delimitation shall be made in the following manner, and shall be accepted by both the high contracting parties as applicable for all purposes under Article I of the convention of October 20, 1818, between the United States and Great Britain.

The 3 marine miles mentioned in Article I of the convention of October 20, 1818, shall be measured seaward from low-water mark; but at every bay, creek, or harbor, not otherwise specially provided for in this treaty, such 3 marine miles shall be measured seaward from a straight line drawn across the bay, creek, or harbor, in the part nearest the entrance at the first point where the width does not exceed 10 marine miles.

ARTICLE IV.

At or near the following bays the limits of exclusion under Article I of the convention of October 20, 1818, at points more than 3 marine miles from low-water mark, shall be established by the following lines, namely:

At the Baie des Chaleurs the line from the light at Birch Point, on Miscou Island, to Macquereau Point light; at the Bay of Miramichi, the line from the light at Point Escuminac to the light on the eastern point of Tabisintac Gully; at Egmont Bay, in Prince Edward Island, the line from the light at Cape Egmont to the light at West Point; and off St. Ann's Bay, in the Province of Nova Scotia, the line from Cape Smoke to the light at Point Aconi.

At Fortune Bay, in Newfoundland, the line from Connaigre Head to the light on the southeasterly end of Brunet Island, thence to Fortune Head; at Sir Charles Hamilton Sound, the line from the southeast point of Cape Fogo to White Island, thence to the north end of Peckford Island, and from the south end of Peckford Island to the east headland of Ragged Harbor.

At or near the following bays the limits of exclusion shall be 3 marine miles seaward from the following lines, namely:

At or near Barrington Bay, in Nova Scotia, the line from the light on Stoddard Island to the light on the south point of Cape Sable, thence to the light at Baccaro Point; at Chedabucto and St. Peter's Bays, the line from Cranberry Island light to Green Island light, thence to Point Rouge; at Mira Bay, the line from the light on the east point of Scatari Island to the northeasterly point of Cape Morien; and at Placentia Bay, in Newfoundland, the line from Latine Point, on the eastern mainland shore, to the most southerly point of Red Island, thence by the most southerly point of Merasheen Island to the mainland.

Long Island and Bryer Island, at St. Mary's Bay, in Nova Scotia, shall, for the purpose of delimitation, be taken as the coasts of such bay.

ARTICLE V.

Nothing in this treaty shall be construed to include within the common waters any such interior portions of any bays, creeks, or harbors as can not be reached from the sea without passing within the 3 marine miles mentioned in Article I of the convention of October 20, 1818.

ARTICLE VI.

The commissioners shall from time to time report to each of the high contracting parties, such lines as they may have agreed upon, numbered, described, and marked as herein provided, with quadruplicate charts thereof; which lines so reported shall forthwith from time to time be simultaneously proclaimed by the high contracting parties, and be binding after two months from such proclamation.

ARTICLE VII.

Any disagreement of the commissioners shall forthwith be referred to an umpire selected by the Secretary of State of the United States and Her Britannic Majesty's minister at Washington; and his decision shall be final.

ARTICLE VIII.

Each of the high contracting parties shall pay its own commissioners and officers. All other expenses jointly incurred in connection with the performance of the work, including compensation to the umpire, shall be paid by the high contracting parties in equal moieties.

ARTICLE IX.

Nothing in this treaty shall interrupt or affect the free navigation of the Strait of Canso by fishing vessels of the United States.

ARTICLE X.

United States fishing vessels entering the bays or harbors referred to in Article I of this treaty shall conform to harbor regulations common to them and to fishing vessels of Canada or of Newfoundland.

They need not report, enter, or clear, when putting into such bays or harbors for shelter or repairing damages, nor when putting into the same, outside the limits of established ports of entry, for the purpose of purchasing wood or of obtaining water; except that any such vessel remaining more than twenty-four hours, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, within any such port, or communicating with the shore therein, may be required to report, enter, or clear; and no vessel shall be excused hereby from giving due information to boarding officers.

They shall not be liable in any such bays or harbors for compulsory pilotage; nor, when therein for the purpose of shelter, of repairing damages, of purchasing wood, or of obtaining water, shall they be liable for harbor dues, tonnage dues, buoy dues, light dues, or other similar dues; but this enumeration shall not permit other charges inconsistent with the enjoyment of the liberties reserved or secured by the convention of October 20, 1818.

ARTICLE XI.

United States fishing vessels entering the ports, bays, and harbors of the eastern or northeastern coasts of Canada or of the coasts of Newfoundland under stress of weather or other casualty may unload, reload, transship, or sell, subject to customs laws and regulations, all fish on board, when such unloading, transshipment, or sale is made necessary as incidental to repairs, and may replenish outfits, provisions and supplies damaged or lost by disaster; and in case of death or sickness shall be allowed all needful facilities, including the shipping of crews.

Licenses to purchase in established ports of entry of the aforesaid coasts of Canada or of Newfoundland, for the homeward voyage, such provisions and supplies as are ordinarily sold to trading vessels, shall be granted to United States fishing vessels in such ports, promptly upon application and without charge; and such vessels, having obtained licenses in the manner aforesaid, shall also be accorded upon all occasions such facilities for the purchase of casual or needful provisions and supplies as are ordinarily granted to the trading vessels; but such provisions or supplies shall not be obtained by barter, nor purchased for resale or traffic.

ARTICLE XII.

Fishing vessels of Canada and Newfoundland shall have on the Atlantic coast of the United States all the privileges reserved and secured by this treaty to United States fishing vessels in the aforesaid waters of Canada and Newfoundland.

ARTICLE XIII.

The Secretary of the Treasury of the United States shall make regulations providing for the conspicuous exhibition by every United States fishing vessel, of its official number on each bow; and any vessel, required by law to have an official number, and failing to comply with such regulations, shall not be entitled to the licenses provided for in this treaty.

Such regulations shall be communicated to Her Majesty's Government previously to their taking effect.

ARTICLE XIV.

The penalties for unlawfully fishing in the waters, bays, creeks, and harbors, referred to in Article I of this treaty, may extend to forfeiture of the boat or vessel and appurtenances, and also of the supplies and cargo aboard when the offense was committed; and for preparing in such waters to unlawfully fish therein penalties shall be fixed by the court, not to exceed those for unlawfully fishing; and for any other violation of the laws of Great Britain, Canada, or Newfoundland relating to the right of fishery in such waters, bays, creeks, or harbors, penalties shall be fixed by the court, not exceeding in all $3 for every ton of the boat or vessel concerned. The boat or vessel may be holden for such penalties and forfeitures.

The proceedings shall be summary and as inexpensive as practicable. The trial (except on appeal) shall be at the place of detention, unless the judge shall, on request of the defense, order it to be held at some other place adjudged by him more convenient. Security for costs shall not be required of the defense, except when bail is offered. Reasonable bail shall be accepted. There shall be proper appeals available to the defense only; and the evidence at the trial may be used on appeal.

Judgments of forfeiture shall be reviewed by the governor-general of Canada in council, or the governor in council of Newfoundland, before the same are executed.

ARTICLE XV.

Whenever the United States shall remove the duty from fish-oil, whale-oil, seal-oil, and fish of all kinds (except fish preserved in oil), being the produce of fisheries carried on by the fishermen of Canada and Newfoundland, including Labrador, as well as from the usual and necessary casks, barrels, kegs, cans, and other usual and necessary coverings containing the products above mentioned, the like products, being the produce of fisheries carried on by the fishermen of the United States, as well as the usual and necessary coverings of the same, as above described, shall be admitted free of duty into the Dominion of Canada and Newfoundland.

And upon such removal of duties, and while the aforesaid articles are allowed to be brought into the United States by British subjects, without duty being reimposed thereon, the privilege of entering the ports, bays, and harbors of the aforesaid coasts of Canada and Newfoundland shall be accorded to United States fishing vessels, by annual licenses, free of charge, for the following purposes, namely:

1. The purchase of provisions, bait, ice, seines, lines, and all other supplies and outfits;
2. Transshipment of catch, for transport by any means of conveyance;
3. Shipping of crews.

Supplies shall not be obtained by barter, but bait may be so obtained.

The like privileges shall be continued or given to fishing vessels of Canada and of Newfoundland on the Atlantic coasts of the United States.

ARTICLE XVI.

This treaty shall be ratified by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate; and by Her Britannic Majesty, having received the assent of the Parliament of Canada and of the Legislature of Newfoundland; and the ratifications shall be exchanged at Washington as soon as possible.

In faith whereof we, the respective plenipotentiaries, have signed this treaty, and have hereunto affixed our seals.

Done in duplicate at Washington this 15th day of February, in the year of our Lord 1888.

T. F. BAYARD.	[SEAL.]
WILLIAM L. PUTNAM.	[SEAL.]
JAMES B. ANGELL.	[SEAL.]
J. CHAMBERLAIN.	[SEAL.]
L. S. SACKVILLE WEST.	[SEAL.]
CHARLES TUPPER.	[SEAL.]

I.

PROTOCOL OF FISHERIES CONFERENCE.

WASHINGTON, November 22, 1887.

The fisheries conference having formally met, the full powers of the plenipotentiaries were exhibited and found to be in good and due form, as follows:

Grover Cleveland, President of the United States of America, to all to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

Know ye that, reposing special trust and confidence in the integrity and ability of Thomas F. Bayard, Secretary of State, William L. Putnam, of Maine, and James B. Angell, of Michigan, I hereby invest them with full power, jointly and severally, for and in the name of the United States, to meet and confer with plenipotentiaries representing the Government of Her Britannic Majesty, for the purpose of considering and adjusting in a friendly spirit all or any questions relating to rights of fishery in the seas adjacent to British North America and Newfoundland which are in dispute between the Government of the United States and that of Her Britannic Majesty, and any other questions which may arise and which they may be authorized by their respective Governments to consider and adjust; and I also fully empower and authorize the said Thomas F. Bayard, William L. Putnam, and James B. Angell, jointly and severally, to conclude and sign any treaty or treaties touching the premises, for the final ratification of the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, if such advice and consent be given.

In testimony whereof I have caused the seal of the United States to be hereunto affixed.

Given under my hand at the city of Washington this 18th day of November, in the year of our Lord 1887, and of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and twelfth.

[SEAL.]

GROVER CLEVELAND.

By the President:

T. F. BAYARD,
Secretary of State.

VICTORIA R. and I. Victoria, by the grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith, Empress of India, etc., etc., etc., to all and singular to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

Whereas for the purpose of considering and adjusting in a friendly spirit with plenipotentiaries to be appointed on the part of our good friends the United States of America all or any questions relating to rights of fishery in the seas adjacent to British North America and Newfoundland which are in dispute between our Government and that of our said good friends, and any other questions which may arise which the respective plenipotentiaries may be authorized by their Governments to consider and adjust, we have judged it expedient to invest fit persons with full power to conduct on our part the discussions in this behalf. Know ye therefore that we, reposing especial trust and confidence in the wisdom, loyalty, diligence, and circumspection of our right trusty and well beloved Councilor Joseph Chamberlain, a member of our most honorable Privy Council, and a member of Parliament, etc., etc.; of our trusty and well beloved the honorable Sir Lionel Sackville Sackville West, Knight Commander of our most distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George, our envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to our said good friends the United States of America, etc., etc., and of our trusty and well beloved Sir Charles Tupper, Knight Grand Cross of our most distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George, Companion of our most honorable Order of the Bath, minister of finance of the Dominion of Canada, etc., etc., have named, made, constituted, and appointed, as we do by these presents name, make, constitute, and appoint them our undoubted plenipotentiaries: Giving to them, or to any two of them, all manner of power and authority to treat, adjust, and conclude, with such plenipotentiaries as may be vested with similar power and authority on the part of our good friends the United States of America, any treaties, conventions, or agreements that may tend to the attainment of the above-mentioned end, and to sign for us and in our name, everything so agreed upon and concluded, and to do and transact all such other matters as may appertain to the finishing of the aforesaid work in as ample manner and form, and with equal force and efficiency as we ourselves could do if personally present: Engaging and promising upon our royal word that whatever things shall be so transacted and concluded by our said plenipotentiaries shall be agreed to, acknowledged, and accepted by us in the fullest manner, and that we will never suffer, either in the whole or in part, any person whatsoever to infringe the same, or act contrary thereto, as far as it lies in our power. In witness whereof we have caused the great seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland to be affixed to these presents which we have signed with our royal hand. Given at our Court at Balmoral the twenty-fourth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven, and in the fifty-first year of our reign.

The British plenipotentiaries proposed that Mr. Bayard, Secretary of State of the United States, should preside.

Mr. Bayard, while expressing appreciation of the proposal, stated the opinion, in which the other United States plenipotentiaries concurred, that it was not necessary that any one should preside; and the proposal was permitted to rest.

Mr. John B. Moore, Third Assistant Secretary of State of the United States, acting as secretary to the United States plenipotentiaries, and Mr. J. H. G. Bergne, C. M. G., superintendent of the treaty department of the British foreign office, acting as secretary to the British plenipotentiaries, were requested to make the protocols of the conference.

After some discussion of questions before the conference, it was adjourned to 12 o'clock m. of the 28th of November.

PROTOCOL.

The treaty having been signed by the British plenipotentiaries desire to state that they have been considering the position which will be created by the immediate commencement of the fishing season before the treaty can possibly be ratified by the Senate of the United States, by the Parliament of Canada, and the Legislature of Newfoundland.

In the absence of such ratification the old conditions which have given rise to so much friction and irritation might be revived, and might interfere with the unprejudiced consideration of the treaty by the legislative bodies concerned.

Under these circumstances, and with the further object of affording evidence of their anxious desire to promote good feeling and to remove all possible subjects of controversy, the British plenipotentiaries are ready to make the following temporary arrangement for a period not exceeding two years, in order to afford a modus vivendi pending the ratification of the treaty.

1. For a period not exceeding two years from the present date, the privilege of entering the bays and harbors of the Atlantic coasts of Canada and Newfoundland shall be granted to United States fishing vessels by annual licenses at a fee of $1.50 per ton—for the following purposes:

The purchase of bait, ice, seines, lines, and all other supplies and outfits.

Transshipment of catch and shipping of crews.

2. If, during the continuance of this arrangement, the United States should remove the duties on fish, fish-oil, whale and seal oil (and their coverings, packages, etc.), the said licenses shall be issued free of charge.

3. United States fishing-vessels entering the bays and harbors of the Atlantic coasts of Canada or of Newfoundland for any of the four purposes mentioned in Article I of the convention of October 20, 1818, and not remaining therein more than twenty-four hours, shall not be required to enter or clear at the custom-house, providing that they do not communicate with the shore.

4. Forfeiture to be exacted only for the offenses of fishing or preparing to fish in territorial waters.

5. This arrangement to take effect as soon as the necessary measures can be completed by the colonial authorities.

J. CHAMBERLAIN.
L. S. SACKVILLE WEST.
CHARLES TUPPER.

WASHINGTON, February 15, 1888.

PROTOCOL.

The American plenipotentiaries having received the communication of the British plenipotentiaries of this date conveying their plan for the administration to be observed by the Governments of Canada and Newfoundland in respect of the fisheries during the period which may be requisite for the consideration by the Senate of the treaty this day signed, and the enactment of the legislation by the respective Governments therein proposed, desire to express their satisfaction with this manifestation of an intention on the part of the British plenipotentiaries, by the means referred to, to maintain the relations of good neighborhood between the British possessions in North America and the United States; and they will convey the communication of the British plenipotentiaries to the President of the United States, with a recommendation that the same may be by him made known to the Senate for its information, together with the treaty, when the latter is submitted to that body for ratification.

T. F. BAYARD.
JAMES B. ANGELL.
WILLIAM L. PUTNAM.

WASHINGTON, February 15, 1888.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, February 21, 1888.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by Rev. Dr. BRUSH, president of Dakota University.

The Clerk proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings, when, on motion of Mr. PAYSON, the reading of so much of it as related to the introduction and reference of bills and joint resolutions was dispensed with. The remainder of the Journal was read and approved.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. BREWER, for three days, on account of important business.

To Mr. LAFFOON, for this day, on account of sickness.

THE POTOMAC FLATS, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, a report upon the probabilities of damage to the improvements and the necessity for immediate work on the flats above the Long Bridge, in front of Washington, D. C.; which was referred to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

THE EIGHT-HOUR LAW IN THE NAVY DEPARTMENT.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Navy, in response to a resolution of the House calling for information relative to claims arising under the bill for the adjustment of accounts of employés under the eight-hour law; which was referred to the Committee on Labor, and ordered to be printed.

LIGHT-HOUSE, GULL SHOAL, NORTH CAROLINA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting an estimate from the Light-House Board of Appropriations for a light-house and fog-signal at Gull Shoal, Pamlico Sound, North Carolina; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House Senate bills of the following titles; which were severally referred as follows:

The bill (S. 147) for the relief of S. T. Barclay, G. D. Adams, and William H. Kimbrew—to the Committee on Claims.

The bill (S. 1283) making an appropriation for the erection of a light-house on or near Diamond Shoal, off Cape Hatteras, North Carolina—to the Committee on Commerce.

The SPEAKER. The Senate has also transmitted to the House a large number of private pension bills, which, if there be no objection, the Chair will present in bulk and have them entered upon the Journal with the proper references.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE RED RIVER OF THE NORTH.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to discharge the Committee of the Whole from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 2528) authorizing the construction of a railroad bridge across the Red River of the North by the North Dakota and Pacific Railway Company, and that the same be put upon its passage.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, after which the Chair will ask for objections.

The bill was read.

The following amendments were recommended by the Committee on Commerce:

Section 2, lines 7, 8, 9, and 10, strike out the words "and provision shall be made in the height of the bridge, and in the location and construction of abutments and approaches, to allow the free passage of flood water," and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"And the bottom chord of the bridge shall not be of less elevation than 1 foot above the plane of the highest flood known at the locality, and provision shall also be made in the location and construction of abutments and approaches to allow the free passage of flood water."

Section 4, after the word "bridge," in line 8, insert "and equal privileges in the use of said bridge shall be granted to all telegraph companies."

Section 5, after the word "be," in line 8, insert "commenced in one year and be." Line 9, strike out "two" and insert "three."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

There was no objection.

The amendments reported by the committee were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. NELSON moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

L. B. TOWNSEND AND OTHERS.

Mr. FORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Private Calendar the bill (S. 388) for the relief of L. B. Townsend and others, and to put it upon its passage.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, after which the Chair will ask for objections.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That L. B. Townsend, Louis S. Lovell, W. C. Page, Alonzo Sessions, Hampton Rich, Harvey Harter, Benjamin Harter, and Peter Hackett, of Ionia, Mich., sureties upon the several bonds of the late J. C. Dexter, given as security for the faithful performance by said J. C. Dexter of his duties as receiver of public moneys and disbursing agent of the United States land office at Ionia, Mich., from 1861 to 1867, be, and they are hereby, released and discharged of and from all and every obligation and liability whatsoever on account of said bond.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, I hope that before we are asked to consider the bill there will be some explanation given of it, either by reading the report or otherwise.

Mr. FORD. Mr. Speaker, the report is quite long, and I think I can save time by stating the gist of it. In 1867 one John C. Dexter was receiver of public moneys at Ionia, Mich. When he went out of office he and his sureties supposed that he owed nothing to the Government. In 1880 he died. He was a man of considerable wealth; and in 1881 his wife died, and his estate has been distributed to his heirs.

In 1887 the Government brought suit against the sureties for an alleged deficiency, amounting with interest to about $10,000. Since Mr. Dexter's death three of the sureties have died; and now, twenty-two years after he went out of office, this suit is brought.

This bill was introduced in the last Congress, was passed by the Senate, and favorably reported by a committee of this House, but it reached the Calendar too late to be acted upon during that Congress. At this session the bill has again passed the Senate, and is favorably reported by the Committee on Claims of this House.

Mr. HOLMAN. I wish to make one further inquiry. How long is it since the fact was ascertained that there was a defalcation?

Mr. FORD. About sixteen months. Of course the statute of limitations can not run against the Government, but it seems to me there ought to be some period of time within which suits of this character must be brought. If it had been known prior to the death of Mr. Dexter that he was indebted at all to the Government the amount might easily have been collected. But as I before remarked, both he and his wife are now dead, and their estate has been distributed. Of the seven sureties three are dead, and their estates have been distributed. And now, after the lapse of over twenty years, the Government brings suit.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill; which was ordered to a third reading, was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. FORD moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. DIBBLE. I call for the regular order.

PRINTING FOR COMMITTEE ON PRIVATE LAND CLAIMS.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I rise to make a privileged report from the Committee on Printing. I am directed to report back with a favorable recommendation the resolution which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, February 13, 1888.

Mr. MCCREARY submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

"Resolved, That the Committee on Private Land Claims be authorized to have printed and bound such papers and documents, for the use of said committee, as it may find necessary, connected with subjects considered by said committee during the present Congress: Provided, The amount to be printed by said committee shall not exceed the sum of $100."

Mr. RICHARDSON. I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered, and under the operation thereof the resolution was adopted.

Mr. RICHARDSON moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

UNDISTRIBUTED COPIES OF REBELLION RECORDS, ETC.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I have another report which I desire to present; it is a privileged report, I think. The committee has directed me to report back the Senate resolution which I send to the desk, with a recommendation that it pass.

The joint resolution was read, as follows:

Joint resolution (S. R. 4) providing for the disposition of undistributed copies of the Rebellion Records and other public documents.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all copies of the Records of the War of the Rebellion, reports of the Tenth Census, and reports of the Public Lands Commission remaining undistributed of the quota of ex-members of Congress shall be put to the credit and distributed upon the orders of their successors, respectively, in the Fiftieth Congress, in accordance with existing provisions of law: Provided, That copies of the above-named documents standing to the credit of ex-members who, in consequence of changes in the boundaries of Congressional districts, have no direct successors in the present Congress shall be sold at cost or distributed to libraries yet unsupplied: And provided further, That this resolution shall not be construed as withholding from parties already named to receive complete sets of said documents the volumes yet to be issued.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I ask that the report of the committee be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The committee have considered the joint resolution (S. R. 4), and report the same back with the recommendation that it do pass. The committee agree fully with the Senate Committee on Printing as to the necessity for the passage of this resolution, and beg to submit the report of that committee on said resolution, which they adopt as their own:

"The committee, to whom was referred the resolution providing for the disposition of undistributed copies of the Rebellion Records and other public documents, report as follows:

"In the opinion of the committee, documents put to the credit of members of Congress that are not distributed within two years, except where sets are to be completed, should be turned over to their successors, or otherwise distributed by order of Congress.

"A letter from John G. Ames, superintendent of documents in the Interior Department, is herewith submitted.

"The committee recommends the passage of the resolution.

"'DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
"'Washington, January 30, 1888.

"'SIR: Referring to your communication of the 26th instant, requesting an expression of my opinion as to the propriety of the provisions of Senate joint resolution No. 4, relative to the disposition of the undistributed copies of the Rebellion Records, reports of the Tenth Census, and report of the Public Lands Commission standing to the credit of ex-members of Congress, and also information as to the number of copies of the same on hand, I have to say that I have been surprised that the action contemplated by said resolution was not some time since taken by Congress. It would seem entirely proper that if documents put to the credit of members of Congress in any Department of the Government were not within a reasonable time distributed they should be turned over to their successors for this purpose. Certainly documents that have been held for four or even two years, awaiting the order of ex-members of Congress for their distribution, can with all propriety be now made subject to distribution upon the order of their successors.

"'The publications of the Government should, in my judgment, be put into the hands of libraries and of the public as soon as possible after they are issued, and I have no doubt that the adoption of this joint resolution will hasten the distribution of volumes that have been so long awaiting the order of members of Congress to whom they were originally assigned.

"'Regarding the documents specified in the resolution, I have to say that the Records of the War of the Rebellion are delivered to and distributed by the honorable the Secretary of War, so that this office has no information regarding the number still on hand. Of the reports of the Tenth Census it is only that portion which still stands to the credit of ex-Representatives in the Forty-seventh Congress that would be affected by the provisions of the resolution, as it was only the quota of the House of Representatives which was made distributable in perpetuity upon the order of Representatives in the Forty-seventh Congress. The Senate never took corresponding action regarding its quota.

"'This Department has always construed the law relative to the Senatorial quota of Census reports and the entire edition of report of the Public Lands Commission printed for the use of Congress as subjecting these documents to the order of actual members of Congress, so that the undistributed portion belonging to members of the Forty-seventh Congress was put to the credit of those of the Forty-eighth Congress, and if any still remained undistributed by the Forty-eighth Congress they were put to the credit of members of the Forty-ninth Congress, etc. It follows, therefore, that only the undistributed copies of the reports of the Tenth Census standing to the credit of ex-Representatives in the Forty-seventh Congress would be affected by the provisions of this resolution.

"'Without taking the time at present to determine the precise number of these reports, I may say that upon an approximate estimate there remain 325 complete sets and also about 175 broken sets of the final volumes, these broken sets being deficient in from one to ten volumes each. Additional to these are about 8,000 copies of the Compendium, 1,600 copies of Statistics of Population, 500 copies of Statistics of Manufactures, and 1,800 copies of Statistics of Agriculture. There remain also about 300 sets of the report of the Public Land Commission, which, as I say above, are being distributed upon the order of members of the Fiftieth Congress, successors to members of the Forty-eighth and Forty-ninth Congresses who failed to distribute their respective quotas.

"'Very respectfully,

"'JOHN G. AMES,
'"Superintendent of Documents.

"'Mr. W. H. MICHAEL,
"'Clerk of Printing Records, United States Senate.'"

Mr. RICHARDSON. The Senate report just read sets forth very fully the purposes of this joint resolution. I do not care to indulge in any debate upon it; and if no gentleman desires to make any inquiry, I will move the previous question.

